For printing and advertising in Canada in connection with immigration the huge sum of $81,667 was expended upon, or rather presented to, a few favored Tory newspapers for political services. The following are the favoured journals which gathered in the chief share of the spoil. The others being of less political influence received comparatively little. Here is a list of the fattest:

Montreal Gazette	$9,211 15
London Free Press	6,075 60
Toronto Mail	9,393 92
Hamilton Spectator	6,595 26
Montreal Herald	2,767 20
Montreal Industrial World	2,500 00
Quebec Chronicle	3,780 46
Prescott Messenger	6,141 95

Besides this, the paper was furnished for the "printing" of the immigration pamphlets at a further cost of $27,660. Is it any wonder that newspapers which are thus bribed can fail to see anything to condemn in so liberal a Government, and are ever ready to sing its praises and gloss over the most villainous wrong-doing and corruption?

Sir Charles Tupper, our knightly High Commissioner, absorbed in himself and his official relations $41,000 of the Government money last year. That is to say; salary as Minister of Railways, $6,226; as High Commissioner, $1,045; on account of removal expenses from Ottawa to London, $836; as travelling expenses, $359; indemnity, $1,000; contingencies, $3,997; stationery, $250; amount of cheques drawn in England on Bank of Montreal, $4,643; travelling expenses charged to immigration contingencies, $814; miscellaneous, $115. It must be inferred that our High Commissioner is a very expensive ornament in London. The creation of the office was urged on the score of economy—that he would be on hand to attend to the payment of interest on our loans, negotiate new loans, treaties, etc., and keep a general watch over Canadian interests on the other side of the water. When a loan was to be arranged the Finance Minister had to go to England as usual, and there does not seem to have been the least excuse for his cost of $41,000 to the country last year. His brilliant management of immigration has added $138,000 to the annual cost of that department. All that Sir Charles accomplished by being in England could as well have been done without him and his cost of $41,000 per year.

The expense in connection with concocting statistics to bolster up the N. P. and to reward political under-strappers, though a smaller item, is useful as showing one of the "ways and means." The "Commissioners" are Messrs. A. H. Blakeby, of Galt, and Hon. A. H. Willis, of St. John, New Brunswick. These gentlemen have presented a report, which, of counse, proves that the N. P. has been the salvation of the country. It is natural they should present such, and they have perumably earned their money, that is, to the satisfaction of their easily satisfied employers. Mr. Blakeby is to be set down as the more valuable wire-puller, for he gets the lion's share of the spoil. He draws, or is to draw, the sum of $2,400 for nine months work, and Mr. Willis, $1,185. With the sums already paid and the amounts to be paid, these two patriots have, for nine months' work, cost the country almost $6,000. Or, in other words, the Government has squandered this large amount of the people's hard-earned money to show them what a boon high taxation is. Or, in other words, this sum has been expended to manufacture political capital for the Government, to have its effect now and to be used as electioneering material at the next elections. The Tory party is more shameless day by day. In 1878 and 1882 they simply deluded the people into paying high taxes by specious and delusive promises. Now, they go a step further and use the people's money to pay political hirelings to try to prove that high taxes are a blessing, that the country is prosperous, and that the rotten political Government at Ottawa are the people's friends and the benefactors of the race.

A Reform Measure.

The tendency of the legislation brought about by the Mowat Government has always been of a popular character—to improve the position of the people at large, to legislate for the masses, not for classes. The bill of Hon. Mr. Mowat, introduced last Friday, to simplify the transfer of real estate is another case in point. The operation of the cumbrous and complete system now in operation, tends to handicap the small dealer in real estate, and make the expenses of the transfer of small parcels of property very large in proportion to the expense of much larger transactions. Thus the bill at once proves to be in the interest of the poor man as well as the rich. The new system proposed makes the transfer of landed property and real estate as simple as the transfer of bank stock or other securities, and gives the holder as secure a title. The ownership of the party in possession is guaranteed, and the buyer of a property or a mortgagee, has to make no further search than the certificate in the owner's possession, which is registered. The change will effect a great saving to the people at large. But it is to be expected that the lawyers and conveyancers will not favor the change. So long, however, as it is for the interest of the public generally, no other consideration should have sufficient weight to delay its becoming the law of the land. Hon. Mr. Mowat in his explanation before the House showed that the change was so great that it would amount to almost a revolution, and that the Government felt warranted in proceeding cautiously until it was seen how the measure would work in actual practice. Though the system had been in use and has worked well in the Australian colonies, he proposed that the adoption of the measure should be optional for the present, and that its operation should be confined to the city of Toronto and the county of York. The provisions of the bill contemplate the creation of a guarantee fund to secure those availing themselves of the new system against loss. The result of this tentative legislation on a subject of universal interest, will be looked for with anxiety and, the nature of that result, judged by the success of the system where it has been applied, can be easily inferred.

The Rosebuds, Tulips, Carnations and May Flowers on Turnbull's Spring Cretonnes, are so natural you would think they were growing. Admirers of Pretty Cretonnes should call and see them.

The Wrong and its Result.

Wrong doing, whether in private or political life, usually involves the perpetrators in trouble. The Dominion Government did a palpably wrong thing when they usurped control of local provincial railways. Trouble will ensue. Now, there has been granted to these railways in Ontario eight millions by the Ontario Government and seven millions by the municipalities. The Local Legislature has already taken the first steps to demand from the Dominion Government repayment of the amount advanced by the Local Legislature to aid railways, or payment of interest at 5 per cent; and there is a general demand for the re-payment by the Centralization machine at Ottawa of the sums granted by the municipalities to aid local railways, which the Dominion Government impudently declared to be works for the general advantage of Canada. Tory representatives from municipalities interested are between two fires. Last session they endorsed and made possible by their support the action of the Dominion poachers. Now they find that their constituents decidedly object to the high handed procedure and demand recompense, to which on every principle of justice and equity they are amply entitled. Sir John and his confederates have made great endeavours to centralize power at Ottawa, and for some time with unhindered success, but recently Sir John has suffered serious defeats on this policy, and he will find in the usurpation of Provincial railways the elements of a vast deal of trouble, and will discover that the time honored maxim, "Honesty is the best policy," has force even when applied to political methods.

The Chieftain's Cowardice.

Sir John's mental powers are evidently not up to the old standard. He used to undertake risky political enterprises, trusting to his own resources of ingenuity for avoiding or evading the consequences of failure. But he is not now so sure of himself. Last session he felt that he was doing a risky thing in interfering with the liquor license question. He knew, in his own heart, that what he proposed was an act of usurpation, and he did not feel equal to the responsibility. He, therefore, referred the matter to a special committee of Parliament, so that he might escape the odium of the iniquitous interferences with Provincial rights and divert from himself the disgrace of possible failure. But Hon. Mr. Blake saw the trap and refused to serve on the committee, and was denounced therefor by his enemies as an enemy to temperance. This session the Premier is trying a similar dodge. He dares not assume the responsibility of passing insolvency legislation and has referred the matter to a special committee, to shoulder the blame—if blame there be. For a man whose admirers, hail him as the statesman par excellence, such shifts are a pitiable exhibition of weakness—mental as well as moral.

We hear from the Tories sometimes the astonishing statement that the N. P. has cheapened the price of sugar to the consumer, while others, not so blinded by party zeal, assert that the price of sugar is not raised by the tax. To show how erroneous both contentions are, the Kingston Whig points out that Kingston merchants have bought sugar in Liverpool for $1.80 and $1.85 per cwt., who paid a duty upon it of $1.60 per cwt. Still it has been imported in large quantities and sold cheaper than the sugar which passes the hands of Canadian refiners.

The Trent Valley Canal.

The people along the route of this very important work are being very badly duped by the Dominion Government. Deputation after deputation have waited upon them. They have been dined and wined at Ottawa, yet there is no sign of the Canal being early constructed than there is that jobbery and corruption will ever cease with Sir John A. Macdonald and his government.

Early in October, the Beckhorn works were completed, but up to this date the final estimate has not been made by the engineer in charge. Why is there this delay? When will the electors wake up and look upon this work as being used only for political effect? The government apparently have no more intention of completing the Canal than they have of building a railway to the moon.

A Piteous Appeal.

In a recent issue the Review makes a whining appeal ad misericordiam. It complains that the Globe is unduly persecuting its editor, the member for West Peterboro'. The Globe has indeed committed a heinous offence. It has indulged in a few good-natured jocularities which should not much disturb the soul of Mr. Carnegie, for all who know him, know that he is by no means thin-skinned. The brazen effrontery of his making the complaint alluded to is shown by comparison with the tone which the editor of the Review adopts towards his political opponents. No journal in Canada except the Mail perhaps, in its worst moods, is to be compared to the Review, for insulting and coarse language towards political opponents. Every member of the local Government has been reviled in its columns, and every Government supporter of prominence has had the mud of the editor of the Review flung at him. And yet the moment the Globe uses a little good-natured banter towards the member for West Peterborough, Mr. Carnegie, the editor, flies to the rescue of Mr. Carnegie, the politician, and insinuates that the lofty patriotism that does its duty by delving into public matters and nosing out astonishing facts, which show that the base Grit Government squandered fifty cents in buying tea for a colonization road party—this patriotism is on too high a plan to be the target of Globe ire fer tur. Mr. Carnegie is not the only member of Parliament that does his duty to his constituents, nor the only member that newspapers have the assurance to poke fun at. He should be above whining through the columns of his paper over so trifling a matter.

The Late R. D. Rogers, Esq.

In the death of R. D. Rogers, Esq., of Ashburnham, there was removed one of the veritable landmarks of this town and county. He has been associated with the history and progress of the town and county for the past half century. He was a native of Haldimand Township, Northumberland County, born of U. E., Loyalist parentage. His ancestors served in the Queen's Rangers in the Revolutionary war. In 1834 Mr. Rogers settled in Otonabee, and in 1842 he became a resident of Ashburnham. He built extensive flouring and saw mills, and conducted business in connection therewith for forty years. He served his country in the troublous times of 1837, and was one of the "forlorn hope" detailed to capture the "Caroline" at Navy Island. He organized in 1862, the Ashburnham Company of the 57th Battalion, and had command till 1866, when he was succeeded by his son Col. J. Z. Rogers. He was one of the first Justices of the peace in the Newcastle District. Mr. Rogers was also a member of the County Council, and, in 1871 was elected Warder for the County, a position he filled for some years. In politics he was a Conservative, and in religion a staunch member of the Church of England. He was one of our most enterprising and energetic citizens, and the present and many years to come will feel the effect of the impulse, these qualities gave to important public improvements and business enterprises. In life he had the genuine respect of the public, and in death his memory will be held revered.

The Government management of the Intercolonial Railway has resulted in a deficit of $340,000 for the last six months.

Mr. Roddy Pringle is a prominent member of the Muskoka Tory bribery brigade, is now in the employ of the Dominion Government collecting samples of Canadian minerals for exhibition at the International Exhibition at Antwerp next May. For a sample of brass Mr. P. need only appear in propria persona.

In these blizzardous days, when the despondent theremometer droops way down below zero, the beauty of the tax on coal, which adds a cent to the cost of every two or three scuttlesful is appreciated. The colder the weather the hotter the N.P. make it for the pockets.

The Ottawa Government is considering the advisability of establishing an Experimental Farm. Can the fact that the Dominion Government is following the good example of Ontario be the reason why Mr. Carnegie's attack on the Ontario Agricultural College and Experimental Farm, of which due notice was given, hangs fire? Mr. Carnegie, the editor, says that Mr. Carnegie the member, is exceedingly anxious to do his duty towards his constituents, but his eagerness evaporates when he is likely to run counter to the calculations of his Ottawa masters.

The Tory journals claim great credit for Sir John in appointing Mr. Killam, a Reformer, of Winnipeg, to a judgeship. It is little credit he deserves. The appointment was part of his little game for keeping the Government of Manitoba under his thumb. Mr. Killam was the Liberal member for Winnipeg South. By elevating him to a judgeship the riding is vacant, and trust Sir John, with the means at hand, to see that it is filled by a good Tory member, who will support his Manitoba Government and thus help to retain the power over Manitoba he has long indirectly exercised through obsequious politicians.

Henry Clement, Almonte, writes: "For a long time I was troubled with chronic rheumatism, at times wholly disabled; I tried anything and everything recommended, but failed to get any benefit until a gentleman who was cured of rheumatism by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, told me about it. I began using it both internally and externally, and before two bottles were used I was radically cured. We find it a household medicine, and for croup, burns, cuts and bruises, it has no equal."

THE EGYPTIAN EMBROGLIO.

ANOTHER BRITISH VICTORY.

General Earle killed at the head of His Troop—An Arab Force almost Annihilated. The Battle of Korti.

LONDON, Feb. 11th.—The Standard's correspondent with General Earle's column sends the following despatch, dated Dulka Island: "The British Troops advanced to attack the enemy, who held the strong position on the hills. After some fighting the enemy was completely surrounded. Finding it impossible to dislodge the rebels from their fortified position, General Earle ordered the troops to charge. General Earle was killed while leading the attack. The Black Watch Regiment captured the position at the point of the bayonet, the calvary taking possession of the enemy's camp. General Brackenbury assumed command and ordered the remaining positions of enemy to be stormed. The troops acted promptly and made gallant attack and soon captured all the enemy's positions. The fighting lasted five hours. There was great slaughter among the enemy. Those who survived escaped by swimming the river. Up to midnight the Government has received no official advices confirming the report of Gordon's death. European newspapers deplore the death of Gordon as an international calamity.

THE BRITISH FORCE

consisted of the Black Watch and South Stafford regiments, a squadron of Hussars, two guns of the Egyptian artillery, Egyptian camel corps. The troops at once set to work to form a zereba. In the meantime the enemy fired several shots from the high hills. Our pickets advanced and drove back the Arabs who had descended the hills to make an attack. Night ensued and the guards were posted. Everything passed quietly during the night. On Tuesday morning the troops formed and advanced to the enemy's position, marching in two parallel columns. Two companies of the South Stafford regiment and two guns occupied the ground directly in front of the enemy to attract their attention. At 8 o'clock our guns opened the attack, and for sometime a desultory fire was maintained. In the meantime the main body of our troops was advancing steadily over almost impracticable ground.

PUSHING THE ENEMY

before them and seizing each successive hill by short determined attacks. The forward movement was continued until the advanced troops reached the right rear of the enemy, which rested on the river. This completed the movement whereby the rebels were surrounded. The enemy's position was a very strong one. It was on rocky broken ground, and was strengthened by loopholed walls, from which they maintained a heavy and well directed fire.

BRITISH LOSSES AT BERTI.

Another account of the death of Gen. Earle, from Korti, says: General Earle was killed in the action yesterday. The fight occurred near the Nile a few miles above Dulka Island. The Arabs had fortified a pass and had built a small fort on the left hand of the river. When General Earle's forces reached the pass they were subjected to a heavy fire from field guns which the Arabs had placed in a commanding position. Earle had no artillery, and commanded his troops to charge. It was more of a scramble than a charge, but the Arabs were driven from the heights at the point of the bayonet and fell back slowly towards the river. All that then remained to be captured was the fort on the river bank. As the British column advanced it was met by a steady and well directed fire from behind band and wallings which composed the Arab fort, and many of the attacking party were killed. Earle again ordered his men to charge and put himself at the head of the column. He was killed during this charge. The fort was ultimately captured but at a terrible cost. In addition to Earle, three officers and eight men were killed and thirty-five wounded.

FULLER PARTICULARS.

General Wolseley telegraphs from Korti as follows: General Brackenbury, who took the command of the forces advancing up the Nile when Earle fell, has sent from Dulka Island, about seventy miles above Merawi, the following report of the recent engagement: The attack was well planned and gallantly executed. Our expectation is that the effect of the battle will be to open the way to Berber without further fighting. The rebels held the high ridge of the razor-backed hills with some advanced koppies in the front, close to the river. Six companies of the Black Watch Regiment and six companies of the South Sataffordshire Regiment marched around the high ridge of the hills, entirely turning the enemy's position, which was attacked from the rear. The number of the enemy was not great, but their position was extremely strong and difficult of access and they fought with most determined bravery. The Black Watch advanced over the rocks and broken ground upon the kopjes. They answered the fire in the coolest manner possible, and, after they had driven off the enemy's charge, they stormed the potition under a heavy fire. Earle was among the foremost in this attack, and, to the deep sorrow of every officer and man in the force, he was killed just as the summit of the first koppie was reached. At the same time six companies of the Staffordshire Regiment went to the attack of the high ridge, the way to which lay over the most difficult ground possible. In this attack the gallant commanding officer Lieut-Col. Eyre, was killed. Meanwhile, the 19th Hussars had captured the enemy's camp and our success was complete. Ten of the enemy's standards fell into our hands. The enemy's losses were great, and their dead lie thick among the rocks and in the open space where they tried to rush through our advancing force when they found themselves surrounded. Scarcely any of the enemy can have escaped. Besides General Earle, who was killed by a bullet fired from a small hut, and Lieut-Colonel Eyre, the British slain numbered Lieut-Colonel Coveney and nine men of the rank and file. Four officers and 42 men were wounded. These have been brought to Dulka Island. I shall continue the advance by river at daylight on February 11th, and endeavor to carry out your instructions to Earle, with which I am fully acquainted.

THE PORTE AND THE MAHDI.

Constantinople, Feb. 11.—The population is exultant over the fall of Khartoum. The Government express great anxiety over the disaster, fearing the Mahdi's success will lead to a serious movement in El Heljaz, Arabia, where he has many followers.

DIGNA'S SUMMONS.

Suakim, 11th.—Osman Digna has issued a summons for all tribes to rally at Tamaieb.

SUAKIM AND BERBER RAILWAY.

The project of building a narrow gauge railway between Suakim and Berber has been revived since the fall of Khartoum has made it imperative that reinforcements should be sent by that route. Several firms of railway engineers and contractors have offered to construct the road and ask no payment until it is completed. Some of them promise to build a single-track road, with sidings and water tanks and stations, at an average speed of 20 miles per day.

AN OFFICIAL DOCUMENT.

London, Feb. 12.—A despatch dated "In the field, Feb. 12th," states that 600 Arabs were killed in Tuesday's fight about Dulka Island.

General Brackenbury telegraphs under date of Kerbekan, Feb. 11:—The translation of the Arabic document found near the camp deserted by the rebels on Tuesday shows it is from the Governor of Berber to his faithful in which he says Khartoum was taken on Monday 9th Rabi. 1302, on the Elbaneur in the following manner;—El Mahdi prayed and blessed the troops, who then advanced against fortifications. They entered Khartoum in a quarter of an hour, killed the traitor Gordon and captured his steamer and boats. God has made him glorious. Be grateful, thank and praise God for His unspeakable mercy. I announce it to you.' ("Ninth Rabi" corresponds to January 26th) European style.) The foregoing confirms the previous report that Gordon was killed.

HISTORY OF EL MAHDI.

The city of Khartoum, which is reported as being now in the hands of the Mahdi, is situated a mile south of the junction of the Blue Nile and the White Nile, about 1,000 miles in a direct line from Cario. Time out of mind it has been of considerable importance as an exchange and trading centre, and since the domination of Egypt in the Soudan Khartoum has been the seat of the government. It is said to have about 3,000 houses, built mostly of mud and stone, and its population it variously computed at from 30,000 to 60,000, always a strange mixture of Europeans, Arabs, Turks, and Jews.

Mohammed Achmet, the Mahdi, or war prophet, whose last victory is setting the civilised world to talking about him, was born at Khaung, in Dongola, about three hundred miles north of Khartoum, in the year 1842, and he knows all the ins and outs of the country and its inhabitants for five hundred miles about Khartoum. In early manhood he manifested unusual business force as a slave-trader at El Obeid, and later devoted himself to contemplation and life of a Mohammedan religious enthusiast. In the year 1868 he was at Khartoum, and received special religious consecration, and swore to consecrate his body and soul to the uses of his people.

Early in July, 1881, about two years after the deposition of Ismail Pasha, the Mahdi gave the first signs of military revolt, and the authorities of Khartoum having ordered him to come to that city he treated the order with contempt. When a battalion of black troops were sent to enforce the order he railled his forces and cut the black soldiers to pieces. The next year, 1882, a force of 6,000 Egyptains were sent against him and he either captured or annihilated them. Arabia was now in rebellion in Egypt, all English interests were menaced there and finally, on July 11, 1882, the British began bombarding Alexandria and so entered on the work that has led to puny successes and fearful disasters from that time to the present.

In January, 1883, the Mahdi captured El Obeid, about two hundred miles south of Khartoum, and has ever since made it his headquarters. In March, 1883, Colonel Hicks, a British officer, arrived at Khartoum and undertook to organize a force for the recapture of El Obeid. In April he defeated a rebel force 5,000 strong and killed 500 of the enemy, including the Mahdi's Grand Vizier. In September Hicks Pasha marched out of Khartoum with 7,000 fighting men, encountered the Mahdi's army near El Obeid engaged in a three days' fight lost his own life, and he and his force has never since been heard from. Meanwhile Osman Digna rose into prominence as the Mahdi's chief ally in the region of country about Suakim, on the coast of the Red Sea, where the English landed small forces and met with various successes and defeats.

WHY AND HOW GORDON GOT TO KHARTOUM.

A little more than a year ago, when the situation at Khartoum looked hopeless for the garrison and European settlers there, General Gordon was selected as a forlorn hope and started alone for the fatal city. Before going he said distinctly: "I go to Khartoum to make peace. We can come to an agreement." He believed simply that the Mahdi was disaffected towards the Egyptian government, and that liberal English proposals would settle all the trouble. He soon found that the Mahdi represented a larger uprising than was supposed, and then was bent on smashing him. This plan the Gladstone government never yielded to, but a plan to relieve Gordon was formed. And in August of last year Gen. Wolseley left England in charge of what has been known as the Nile relief expedition, consisting of 9,000 picked soldiers of the British army. A part of the instructions of the War Office said: "The primary object of the expedition up the valley of the Nile is bring away Gen. Gordon and Col. Stewart from Khartoum. When that object has been secured no further offensive operations of any kind are to be undertaken."

Nothing of any serious moment happened to this force until the 17th and 19th of last month, when Gen. Stewart, with the advance army of the expedition, met about 10,000 rebel Arabs in the Bahuda desert, between Korti, the headquarters of Gen. Wolseley, and Metamneh, where the rebels had gathered in force to meet the English invaders. Gen. Stewart's two battles turned the whole design of the expedition out of the line of a relief force into that of an invading army, and the result was that the Mahdi seized the opportunity long delayed and fell on Khartoum with such overwhelming numbers as led to its overthrow.

In London, Ontario, on Saturday, sentence of withdrawal of license and removal from religious office was passed upon the Rev. Timothy O'Connell. The charge was drunkenness, and the judge was the representative of the Bishop of Huron.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a meeting of the Council of the

will be held on Monday, the Sixth day of April 1885, at the hour of half past seven o'clock in the evening, for the purpose of passing a By-law for stopping up the road allowance established by By-law No. 55, passed by the said Council on the twenty-sixth day of December 1879, which said road allowance is particularly described as follows:—Commencing at the intersection of the west rail of the Midland Railway track, with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, at a distance of sixty links more or less Westerly from the West side of the said original allowance for road, thence Northerly along the said rail three chains and sixty links more or less to the intersection of said rail with the West side of said allowance for road, thence Northerly along the West side of said original allowance for road, three chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonabee, the described line to be the East side of said new road, and the new road to be sixty-six feet wide. And for opening in lieu of the said road so stopped up, the original road allowance which was stopped up by the said By-law No. 55, and so stopped up and now [illegible] road, being described as follows:—Commencing on the West side of the said Midland Railway track at its intersection with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, thence Northerly along the West side of said six chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonabee, thence Easterly along the said river road, one chain and thirty links more or less to the East side of said Midland Railway track, thence Southerly along the East side of said Railway track, about six chains and seventy links more or less to the North side of Church street, to the place of beginning.

All persons claiming that any lands may be prejudicially affected by the passing of the said By-law are required to attend at the said meeting, when and where the Council will hear such persons as desire to be heard in person or by counsel on the said matter, and all persons interested are required to govern themselves accordingly.

Dated at Lakefield this 10th day of February, 1885.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th.

Mr. Meredith's attempt to get a certified copy of the judgment of the Court of Appeal in the East Simcoe election case before the House, created considerable debate. Mr. Meredith persisted in spite of the fact that he was out of order, for it is allowable only to a member of the Executive Council to present such a report. The House, besides, had no official knowledge of a vacancy in East Simcoe, a fact which Mr. Meredith showed he was aware of by attempting to smuggle the document into the House. Hon. Mr. Mowat showed that the House had no official notice of a vacancy in East Simcoe, and he moved that the matter be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Upon this motion the first division in the House took place, the motion being carried by a majority of 13. This is discouraging to the Opposition and the bribery conspirators. In spite of their hard work the Government majority is increasing. It was 12 on the first division last session, and if Dr. Dowling had not been absent the majority this time would have been fourteen, and if all the members had been present the majority would have been sixteen.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 11th.

The reports of the Inspector of Prisons and Asylums, Charitable Institutions and Reformatories were laid before the House today by Hon. Mr. Hardy.

Hon. Mr. Ross, Minister of Education, introduced his bill to amend the Act relating to High Schools. He explained that the first twelve clauses related to the manner of constituting High Schools. The bill provided for statutory standing to the Collegiate Institute on the basis of a resolution of last session relating thereto. It provided that the average attendance to constitute a Collegiate Institute shall be 100 for the first half year and 80 for the second half year. The new bill provides also that the chairman of a High School board shall have only one vote instead of two, as formerly. The treasurer of High a School board is to be the treasurer of the municipality, and trustees have the power to suspend insubordinate pupils. High School masters who act as examiners shall be remunerated. High Schools shall close for the holidays at the same time as Public Schools. The Government grant shall be paid directly to the treasurer. The grant is to be made dependent not only on average attendance but also upon proficiency.

Hon. Mr. Ross, in reply to Mr. French, stated it was not the intention of the Government to introduce a text book on temperance into the Public Schools.

Mr. Merrick moved for a return of persons who have applied for, and had permits as Public School teachers from inspectors.

Mr. Young moved for a return of copies of all correspondence, Orders-in-Council or other documents touching any action taken by the Government since the decision of the Privy Council on the Boundary question, to protect our timber and minerals in the so-called disputed territory, and if in possession of the Government, the names and residences of the persons to whom the Dominion Government has granted lands, licenses or permits to take timber or take minerals in that part of Ontario, with the area of territory involved in each case and the price and terms stipulated for. Mr. Young also alluded to the fact that John Shields had been favored with large grants.

Hon. Mr. Mowat explained that the Dominion Government had refused to supply these returns to the local Government. He stated, however, that the Dominion Government had not only made these grants since the award, but had even had the assurance to do so after the decision of the Privy Council.

Mr. Meredith was apparently anxious for his political friends when he asked Mr. Mowat if he intended to recognize the rights of these parties.

Mr. Mowat answered, no; but steps had been taken to restrain them.

Mr. Meredith and Mr. Carnegie tried to show that the winning of the boundary case for Ontario was due to the Opposition. The former, while recognizing the right of the Province to the land, still loyally claimed the minerals and timber on behalf of his masters at Ottawa.

Hon. Mr. Fraser showed how Ontario had been robbed by the Tory Government to reward and enrich political partizans. He instanced the granting of limits of 100 square miles for $20,000, and a part only of this limit had been placed on the Chicago market for $700,000.

But the Dominion Government will have to refund all the unrighteous gains from these illegal grants, and ultimately the public money will have to go for the reward of members of the bribery brigade, such as John Shields.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th.

To-day Hon. Mr. Ross introduced his bill to amend the Separate School Act. One clause provides for the appointment of a ratepayer, not a member of the Separate School board, a member of the High School board, such member to take no part in Public School matters. The High School Act was to be amended in conformity.

Hon. Mr. Hardy presented the Public Accounts for 1884, and Hon. Mr. Mowat presented a message from the Lieut.-Governor, transmitting the Estimates for 1885, and the latter were referred to the Committee of Supply.

Mr. Badgerow moved for a return of the text book authorized in geography, grammar and English history, and Mr. Harcourt inquired if it were the intention of the Government to provide a suitable history of Canada, asserting that those at present in use were too dry and uninteresting to secure the attention of children.

Hon. Mr. Ross said in the matter of authorization the readers only were dealt with, and that no immediate changes were proposed, but he hoped the country would always be liberal enough to uphold a minister in his efforts to keep abreast with the educational wants of the times.

Mr. Waters has given notice of a motion calling on the Dominion Government to assume, as a debt due to Ontario, the amount of money paid and the amount of scrip issued on account of railways appropriated by the Dominion, and that interest be paid thereon at the rate of five per cent. till such amount be paid.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th.

To-day Hon. Mr. Mowat introduced his bill to amend the Act relating to the transfer of land—virtually a tentative introduction of the Torrens system of land transfer.

Hon. Mr. Ross made his financial statement, and was received with great cordality by the House.

[The estimates for the year and the statement of revenue and expenditure will be found on our third page.

Mr. Creighton, the financial colossus of the Opposition, made a short speech in reply—that is, he made the same annual speech, with the trifling variations the circumstances required. It was full of doleful croak, but the direct taxation he has been predicting for years seems to be no nearer realization than when he began to foretell it.

One member of the Legislature is compelled to lie by on account of illness. Mr. McCraney, of Halton, is seriously ill at his brother's residence, Oakville.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th.

Hon. A. M. Ross, Provincial Treasurer, in his bill respecting the Municipal Loan Fund indebtedness of certain corporations, gave evidence of the invariable friendliness which the Mowat Administration exercises toward municipalities. He stated that only Cobourg and St. Catharine's were still indebted to this fund, and the Government, thinking it should not embarrass them by urging payment, the bill provided for an extension of time for two years.

Hon. Mr. Hardy is again in his place in the House, but not yet in full health.

Mr. Dryden brought up the discussion of the Provincial Exhibition question by his motion declaring it inadvisable to continue the $10,000 annual grant. There was a wide divergence of opinion on the subject, the western members generally supporting the motion and the eastern members speaking in favor of the grant, and some favored the division of the grant among district societies. Hon. A. M. Ross, Minister of Agriculture, said that the diversity of opinion on the question was so great that public feeling should be consulted. At any rate the Government felt inclined, if the grant should be discontinued, it should still be devoted to agricultural purposes. At his request, since nothing could be done this session, Mr. Dryden withdrew his motion. This was one of the few debates in which party lines were not followed.

The House willingly assented to Mr. Meredith's motion for a return of the moneys paid to Mr. Geo. R. Patullo, who was active in assisting to assert and maintain the rights of the Province in the Disputed Territory since 1883.

Mr. Wood still manifests, with Mr. Carnegie, a special interest in Mr. Cox. The former asks for a return of the lands granted to Mr. Cox in 1883. It seems that Mr. Cox has done so much to develop the resources of Hastings that he is likely to prove a dangerous opponent to Hon. Mr. Bowell, and hence the underlings in the party are to do all that can be done to annoy him.

Mr. Dill, of Muskoka, won his oratorical spurs to-day, making his maiden speech.

A deputation from Port Arthur interviewed the Government to-day with reference to making a grant to the Thunder Bay Colonization Railway. The deputation was informed that while the Government looked with favor on the project, yet the action of the Federal Government in seizing local railways rendered the local Government powerless to act till that policy was reversed.

Turnbull's Dress-makers have been looking for a slack time to take holidays, but the Choice Stock of Material and the way they get them up has brought a steady flow of customers all the slack season.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

In and Around Our Legislative Halls.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10th.

This afternoon's session was chiefly devoted to a lively tilt between Sir John and Hon. Mr. Blake,—the "tilt," however, being altogether on Mr. Blake's part—in reference to the appointment of a deputy speaker, by resolution. Hon. Mr. Blake argued that the matter should have been referred to a special committee, as there was no hurry. He thought that if a deputy speaker were appointed he should be one that could speak both languages. The chief idea was to create a salaried office. Of course the motion was carried when Mr. Blake pointed out that a motion to make the resolution a standing order was illegal as it conflicted with the confederation act. The only proper way the matter could be done was by a bill.

This statement staggered Sir John considerably, and it was some time before he had the "gumption" to say that he intended to bring in a bill.

Hon Mr. Blake further pushed his advantage by showing that a special act relating to the Speaker, covered the ground of Sir John's resolution, which was therefore "waste paper." Sir John "caved" as gracefully as possible, and stated that as his resolution had been shown to be unconstitutional he would drop it. While the House was convulsed with laughter, Sir John seized a scrap of "waste paper," and pretended it was a bill. But Mr. Blake was merciful, and allowed the Premier to pretend that it was a bill, and did not press for reading it.

Mr. Blackeby is a Tory organizer in Waterloo county, and the Government have rewarded him by employing him and another Tory to make a report upon the state of industries in Canada. The cost is of course extravagant, and the report is of the most extreme partizan character, bearing absurdity on the face of it. The Tory Government don't hesitate to spend the people's money to reward their favorites, and to make political points for themselves.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 11th.

The Scott Act supporters are pouring in petitions against any relaxation in the terms of the Act.

Mr. Charlton introduced his bill for the second time to make seduction a criminal offence. He also extracted from Sir Leonard Tilley the cheering information that the net debt of Canada is only some 254 millions, as against some 175 millions in 1878.

Under Government management the Intercolonial Railway shows a deficit of $237,000 for the past six months.

The Bleus were more blue than ever to-day over Sir John's appointment of Daly as Deputy-Speaker. When the Premier moved the motion for his appointment some of the French Bleu members were furious, they claiming that a French Canadian should be appointed. And they were pacified, but we don't know yet how much the pacification will cost the country. No wonder they were anxious, for the Deputy-Speaker gets a modest salary of $2,500 for occupying the chair—perhaps two or three times a session—when the speaker may be absent.

The relations of Speaker Kirkpatrick to the Syndicate has been gravely condemned, and his entertaining some of the members of that cormorant corporation at a dinner is at least of bad taste. The idea of the Speaker of the House of Commons, who is supposed to be in a neutral position, thus recognizing favors received from the Syndicate is simply shameful.

Sir John informed Mr. Casey that the Government did not intend to establish a Divorce Court.

A motion to declare the expediency of providing for inspection and supervision of banks was voted down, the Government apparently fearing that such supervision would interfere with their lending the people's money to bolster up rotten banking institutions.

The liquor interest is pressing its demands for relaxation of the Scott Act. Sir John is trying to shut them off, but the liquor dealers have been duped too much by Sir John to be restrained any longer, and the demands will be urged no matter how greatly the Government may be embarrassed.

Senator Alexander raised his promised breeze in the Senate to-day over the Government's loss of money to the country by its neglect in the Bank of Upper Canada matter. The Government hope to obtain only $150,000 out of their claim of $1,100,000.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12th.

Petitions continue to be presented to the House of Commons against the relaxation of the provisions of the Scott Act.

Sir John Macdonald said the Government had received a copy of the decision of Judge Matthiew dismissing the preferential claim of the Government on the Exchange Bank, and that this judgment was in appeal.

The committees are getting to work, and there was a lively scene in the Immigration Committee to-day. Mr. Farrow, of East Huron, although a supporter of the Government, made a speech to the effect that the Land Settlement policy of the Government in the North-West was a failure. Canada, he asserted, was spending large sums of money yearly upon immigrants, who could not be retained in the country. He laid the blame on the want of branch railways chiefly. The state of things must be bad indeed, when a good Tory thus "speaks out in meeting."

Hon. Mr. Blake to-day made a considerable commotion in moving for a return respecting Pacific Railway matters. Sir John was disposed to "let sleeping dogs lie," but during the Chieftain's absence from the House, Mr. Blake alluded to the concession to the Syndicate last session and connected therewith the coercion exercised on the Government by the French Tory members. Mr. Chapleau took it upon himself to defend the Government, and did so by boasting of the victory won over himself and his colleagues in the Government. Sir John was greatly disgusted at Messrs. Chapleau and Ouimet for their injudicious zeal.

Mr. Mitchell promulgated the murder when he urged that the Government should buy back the railway lands at $2 per acre. This shows that the Syndicate is hard up, and is feeling around for relief. The purchase of the lands by the Government will be a most disastrous thing for the North-West. The Syndicate will then have no motive for settling the country, and will be at liberty to grind down the settler to its heart's content.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th

The opening of the House to-day witnessed the usual flood of petitions against relaxing the provisions of the Scott Act.

The petitions and memorials presented in regard to bankruptcy were followed by a motion to refer them to the special committee. Mr. Blake protested against the act on principle, and requested that the enlargement of the powers of the committee be carried on division, which was done.

A debate of an interesting nature was provoked by Mr. Edgar's motion for a return of the temporary and permanent trestle work on the Nepigon branch of the C. P. R. The fact is notorious that the work covered by the return is of a disgracefully flimsy and insufficient character, so much so that the Government is ashamed or afraid to have the return made. The facts show that the Government is willing to do anything to make it easy for the Syndicate at the expense of the country. Witness the concessions which permitted the increase of the stock from $25,000,000 to $100,000,000; allowed the watering of the stock, the giving of enormous loans, the guaranteeing of dividends, and now, in the presence of further demands and probable grants, members are refused information which the public should possess. The resources of the company have been shamefully wasted, as illustrated by the building of the Algoma branch. The contract was to build the road through to the Pacific, but the money given for the purpose had been used to purchase roads in the United States and Canada. When the last loan was obtained a return showed that, although the company had obtained $54,000,000 in Government subsidy and bonds sold, only $29,249,240 had been expended on the main line. It is no wonder that the Government is so anxious to keep the country in the dark, nor any wonder that the amendment of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to prevent the facts being brought to light was carried by the subservient majority the Government has at its beck and command though a good many of them had shame enough left to shirk the vote.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16th.

The working men are still stirring up the Government to hasten their factory legislation, and protesting against assisted and Chinese immigration.

Since the first of February the Government has borrowed two millions of dollars from the Bank of Montreal.

The tone of Sir John's reply to Hon. Mr. Mills respecting the "Disputed Territory," shows that the former is still bent on plundering Ontario. He is also disinclined to deal with the matter of the Northern Boundary of the Province.

Mr Casey has undertaken the investigation of the Section "B" scandal, and is doing his work pretty thoroughly. To-day he forced Mr. Pope to deny the statement of Mr. Alex. Manning that Mr. Jennings had been removed from Section "B" and sent to British Columbia at the request of the contractors, because he was too honest in his measurements. Mr. Pope also assigned a different reason for sending Jennings away from that given by Sir Charles Tupper a year ago. The fact is the more the Section "B" scandal is ventilated the more outrageous it appears. Mr. Casey has a number of motions respecting the matter, and will discuss each phase of the job.

SHAKER BLOOD SYRUP

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty willingly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Shaker Blood Syrup. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy.

My friend, you need not take our word. Ask your neighbor, who has just taken one bottle. He will tell you that "It's the best dollar I ever invested."

Shaker Syrup Company: Dear Sirs—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Blood Syrup, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,
O. F. Twitchell,
Gorham, N.H.

The Greatest Horse Breeding Establishment of America.

One of the many wonderful enterprises the the great West is noted for, and one which none favored with opportunity should miss seeing, is the great breeding establishment of "Oaklawn," owned by M. W. Dunham, at Wayne, Ill., 35 miles from Chicago. His importations of Percheron horses from France to date, have aggregated the immense sum of $3,000,000, and at the present time at "Oaklawn," 500 head of the choicest specimens of that race, nearly all recorded with their pedigrees in the Percheron Stud Book of France, can be seen, while on their Colorado ranges are 2,000 mares and 32 imported Percheron stallions in breeding.

The appintment of a successor to Cardinal McCabe as Archbishop of Dublin is a question of great delicacy at the present time. As a special cablegram points out, the election of Archbishop Croke, a sympathizer with the League, would alienate the Conservative element and an Irish prelate brought up like the late Cardinal Cullen, under Italian influences, would estrange the Parnellities.

Captain Greville Harston, of the Royal Grenadiers, has invented a new rifle, which he claims is quite as effective as the Martini-Henry rifle, while being more simple in construction and much cheaper. He exhibited his weapon to the Minister of Militia and Major-General Middleton yesterday at the capital, both of whom were favorably impressed by it. The Minister has ordered a thorough test to be made of Captain Harston's invention.

The Republic of Colombia, South America, is in a state of compete anarchy, all communication with the interior being entirely cut off. Reports of severe fighting have been received at Panama, with heavy losses on both sides.

It is reported that the Pope intends to proclaim shortly the canonization of Sir Thomas Moore and Bishop Fisher, two faithful sons of the Church during the troublous times of Henry VIII.

It is reported that a treaty has been concluded between France and Burmah, which cedes to France the Shan States and Mogoung ruby mines, France promising to protect Burmah against the encroachments of Great Britain.

Mrs. Dudley was arraigned yesterday for her attempt to shoot Rossa. Rossa was not called to testify, and the prisoner's counsel declining to offer any evidence for the present, she was held in default of bail to appear before the grand jury.

There is a growing feeling in Austria in favour of protecting wheat, flour, and petroleum, and it is not improbable that Canada and States before long may find the doors of France, Germany, and Austria closed against their wheat.

Railway traffic in the Dominion has been generally interfered with by the snowstorm of Sunday night, trains on nearly all lines being some hours late in reaching their destinations. In western Ontario the trouble is greatest, many trains being cancelled, and others snowbound.

Use promptly Dr. Pierce,s Extract of Smart-Weed for diarrhœa, cholera morbus, dysentery or bloody-flux, and colic or cramps in stomach or bowels.

Mr. John Magwood, Victoria Road, writes: "Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure is a splendid medicine. My customers say they never used anything so effectual. Good results immediately follow its use. I know its value from personal experience having been troubled for 9 or 10 years with Dyspepsia, and since using it digestion goes on without that depressing feeling so well known to dyspeptics. I have no hesitation in recommending it in any case of Indigestion, Constipation, Heartburn, or troubles arising from a disordered stomach."

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 37th and 38th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

THE RED FLAG.

BY

M. E. BRADDON.

Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc. etc. etc.

No help from the French army. All yesterday they had been held at bay by the Federal artillery at Montrouge, and were only able to cross the ravines of La Bievre on the morning of the 25th.

The prisoners were hurried along, almost at a run, to the gaol in the Avenue d'Italie. Embarrassed by the voluminous folds of their robes they did not always walk fast enough, whereupon the soldiers struck them with the butt-end of their guns, calling out, "Quick, magpie!" in mockery of their black and white raiment; and so to the prison, which was already full to the brim, containing ninety-seven prisoners arrested in that district, and detained at Citoyen Serizier's good pleasure. Bobeche, the gaoler, fatigued by having to write such a list of names, had gone out to refresh himself with a drink. While he was away the Communards came to the prison to ask the Dominicans to help in making the barricades; but the deputy-gaoler having some respect for the religious character sent fourteen National Guards, imprisoned for some military irregularity, instead of the priests. Bobeche, returning immediately after, was furious with his subordinate, and accused him of shedding the blood of patriots in order to spare the monks. He had a detachment of the 101st battalion at his heels and he ordered those tonsured scoundrels to be brought out.

Bertrand, the subordinate, yielded after some opposition, and opened the door of the gaol.

"Come, magpies," cried Bobeche, "off with you to the barricade!"

The Dominicans came out into the avenue, where they saw the detachment of the 101st, with Serizier at their head. This time they believed that all was over; but they were deceived, for their agony was to last a little longer.

Father Cotrault, the purveyor, stopped on the threshold of the prison.

"We will go no further," he said; "we are men of peace. Our religion forbids us to shed blood; we cannot fight, and we will not go to the barricade; but even under fire we will search for your wounded, and succor them."

This compromise would not have been accepted by Serizier, but the Communist soldiers were wavering, they were crying out that it would soon be impossible to hold the barricade against the hail of bullets from the Versaillais.

"Enough," said Serizier to Father Cotrault; "promise to look after our wounded."

"Yes, we promise," answered the monk; "and you know it is what we have always done."

Serizier made a sign to Bobeche, and the prisoners were bundled back into the gaol. But they no longer deceived themselves with false hopes. They knew the respite was but brief. They prayed together, and made confession to each other. They might have been spared, perhaps; but the news brought to Serizier was exasperating and alarming. Some men flying from the Quartier Latin to fight again in the Avenue d'Italie told how the Pantheon, the great citadel of the insurrection, had been taken by the Versaillais before there had been time to fire the mine which would have shattered dome and walls, arches and columns, in one vast heap of ruin. They told how Milliere, the chief of the insurgents in this quarter, had been shot, and that the French troops occupied the prison of La Sante. The circle which was soon to enclose the Communards of the 13th arrondissement was growing narrower and narrower.

What should they do? Fly, or stand their ground to the death?

A great many of the National Guard made off.

Serizier gathered himself together for a final effort.

"Burn!" he gasped; "we must burn everything!"

He rushed into a wine-shop and drank glass after glass of brandy. His wolfish soul, excited by alcohol, by fighting, by defeat, by the sight of the blood which reddened the road and the pavement, appeared in all its hideousness.

"Ah, has the end come so soon!" he cried, striking his clenched fist upon the pewter counter. "So be it! Everybody must die!"

He ran back to the avenue.

"Come, come," he roared, "men of the right metal, to smash the skulls of those magpies!"

A little crowd of Communards answered to his call, and, in advance of the band, two women presented themselves.

They were both furies—both had streaming locks of tangled hair, which were hideously suggestive of Medusa's snaky tresses; but one of the furies was young, and would have been handsome if her face had not been smeared and spattered with blood, and blackened by gunpowder. She wore the costume of a vivandiere, and had once been smart; but the gold-lace on her jacket hung in shreds, the blue cloth was stained with blood and mire. She carried a gun, which, in her exhaustion, she handed to Serizier, signing to him to reload it for her. She had hardly breath enough left for speech.

"The priests," she murmured hoarsely, as Serizier gave her back the loaded gun; "are they to be finished—at once?"

"At once," he answered: "there is no time for ceremony with those scoundrels. They have had their day, and have made fools of you all long enough, with their mummeries—men, women, and children."

"They have never fooled me," answered the woman; "I am a Voltairian."

"Ah, ce bon Voltaire; if he had lasted till our time we should have shown him some pretty farces," said Serizier, turning away from her to give his orders.

While he ranged his men along the avenue, and talked apart with Bobeche the gaoler, the woman in the vivandiere dress stood leaning on her gun, looking along the road, through dim smoke-clouds and dust and fire.

It was four o'clock in the warm May afternoon—May on the edge of June. The western horizon of Paris was hidden behind the smoke of incendiary fires; the ground trembled with the feet of the cannonade. The woman wiped the sweat and mire from her face with the sleeve of her jacket, and looked across the scene of ruin and desolation with fiery eyes. She looked yonder towards the towers of Notre Dame, towards the Quai des Augustines, and the labyrinth of little streets behind those old roofs.

"Not much chance of wedded bliss for those two now," she said to herself. "Their honeymoon was short; but her misery shall be long. She and her sister are shut in their lodgings, expecting to be burnt alive every hour; and he is in prison—what prison, I wonder?"

The woman was Suzon Michel, and the man of whom she was thinking as she stood at ease by her gun, waiting to do her part, as a strong-minded woman and a patriot, in the slaughter of the priests, was Gaston Mortemar.

Since his arrest she had been able to learn nothing about him. She had been told by her friends the Communards that he had been arrested on account of something he had written in his paper. More than this they would not or could not tell her. There were so many prisons in Paris, all teeming with life, like beehives; there were such innumerable arrests. People hardly cared to inquire why their neighbors were carried off, or whither. Human feelings, friendship, brotherly love were apt to become deadened in that pandemonium.

Since the week of fighting and fires began, Suzon had been in the thick of all the strife. She had carried her can of petroleum as bravely as any of those bearded ruffians who pretended to make light of her service. She had helped in the fires, she had helped in the carnage, like the very spirit of evil. It was not arson, it was not murder. It was only justice, an eye for an eye.

"They are killing our brothers and friends yonder," said the assassins, as they shot down new victims.

Mercy at such a time would be cowardice. Only a craven would hold his hand when there was such a grand chance of avenging the wrongs of nobody in particular.

Suzon was drunk with blood, half-blinded by fire. Those flashing eyes of hers, bright as they were, saw all things dimly, through a fiery haze.

The priests—yes, she would help to slaughter them; not because she knew anything about this particular brood of calotins, but because she hated all priests. They had done her no wrong; but her pious neighbors had despised her for keeping away from church; they had thrown their religion in her face; they had scorned her for her infidelity.

"Beware of that woman!" said an old man whom she had offended. "The woman who never crosses the threshold of a church belongs to a venomous species."

Yes, she would help in the good work. How the earth shivered under that awful cannonade! The enemy was at the door; nearer and nearer came the thunder of the guns. The deadly rain from the mitrailleuses came fast as the heavy drops of a thunder shower. The afternoon sun looked red as blood yonder, as its lurid rays pierced the smoke. The circle was narrowing, narrowing, narrowing, closing in upon them like a ring of fire. Whom would they spare, those Versaillais devils? Not one. Universal carnage would change the streets of Paris to rivers of blood lit by a city in flames. Not a life, not a house would be spared.

"Let us begin!" shrieked Suzon, beside herself; "let us work with such a good will that there shall be nothing left for those others to do."

"Are you ready?" asked Serizier, facing the door of the prison, with his assassins ranged on either side of him.

"No one of them shall escape, my general," answered Suzon, grasping her gun.

Her voice was hoarse and rough, like his own. From head to heel, mind, soul, body, the creature had unsexed herself; and these men-women were even more savage than the devil-men of those days, for they thought their infamy heroism and their cruelty courage. Not one of these furies, waving her petroleum-can, shouldering her chassepot, but fancied herself a modern Maid of Orleans.

And now the victims were driven into the street, like sheep to the slaughter-house.

"Pass, one by one," cried Bobeche the gaoler, who held his six-year-old son by the hand.

Was it not well for the boys to see the tonsured heads laid low? It is thus France rears her patriots—young Romans suckled by the wolf Revolution.

The Dominicans, the school-servants, the journalist crossed the fatal threshold. The first to pass was Father Cotrault, and, at the third step, he fell, struck by a bullet.

The Prior turned to his companions.

"Come, my friends, for the love of God," he said, in his mild voice; and he and his little train rushed into the open, and ran athwart the rain of bullets.

Suzon flung herself into the midst of the road, at the risk of being shot down in the meles. She loaded and reloaded her chassepot, crying, "Cowards, cowards! they are running away!"

It was not a butchery, but a battue. The poor human game tried to flee, hid itself behind the trees, slipped along under the lee of the houses. Women at open windows clapped their hands and shrieked with joy as they watched the sport; in the street men shook their fists at the victims; the scene was alive with insult and laughter, voices that sounded like the howling of furious beasts. It was a new carnival of flowers and sugar-plums; only the flowers were insult and outrage, the sugar-plums were bullets.

Some of the more active gained the side streets, and escaped the leaden shower. Five of the priests, seven of the school-servants, were shot down in a heap before the Chapelle Brea.

"Fire, fire upon them!" cried Serizier, when a convulsive movement showed that life still throbbed amidst this mass of death, and one poor bleeding form that had faintly stirred received thirty-one bullets.

"See," cried Suzon, as Mortemar, slender, active, lithe, with youth and vigor on his side, sped lightly along the boulevard and vanished at a distant turning, "there goes one that will cheat us!"

She rushed off in pursuit of him, breathless, panting, mad with rage. Two of Serizier's lambs ran with her, pleasantly excited by the chase. The hunters reached the turning, and there, a few paces down the narrow street, leaning against a lamp-post, exhausted by the rapidity of his flight, stood their quarry.

The men fired instantly. Suzon lifted her gun to her shoulder, and then suddenly let it fall to her side. She dashed her hand across her eyes. Was it a dream? Was she for ever haunted, waking as well as sleeping, by that one face? Through the haze of blood and fire she saw the face of the man she loved—loved and hated, and hated and loved. She scarce knew which feeling was dominant in a breast where both fires burned so fiercely. She saw him, pale as ashes, his livid lips parted, his eyes staring wildly, as men look into the face of sudden violent death; hunted humanity at bay, the hounds closing round, the huntsman ready with his knife. A thin stream of blood trickled down the pale face. One of the bullets had grazed his temple.

"Hold, hold!" shrieked Suzon, throwing aside her gun, and stretching her arms wide in passionate entreaty; "do not fire!"

Too late; another volley whistled past her, as she sank on her knees, screaming, pleading, blaspheming. She did not know how to pray.

Gaston Mortemar fell without a groan.

Suzon sprang to her feet, picked up her gun, and struck at the Communards with the butt-end, flinging about her like a devil.

Serizier's lambs burst out laughing. They thought she was drunk. In those days, when the atmosphere breathed cognac and absinthe, it was only natural that a woman should be drunk. They laughed, and left her, having done all there was to do here; left her grovelling on the ground by the lamp-post, alone with her dead, the warm May sun shining on her through the smoke of the battle, the air smelling of blood and burning.

While she hung over the prostrate figure, lying face downwards on the bloody dust, the rhythmical trot of the cavalry sounded in the distance, and the French troops were entering the Avenue d'Italie. Serizier had retired into the prison when the carnage was over, and was occupied in revising a list of victims who were to be despatched with something more of formality than he had deemed necessary in the case of the Dominicans; but at the moment when he was about to order out the first prisoners upon his list, his lieutenant rushed in, and whispered in his ear.

All was over. The column of cavalry was seen advancing. The colonel of the 13th legion flung aside his papers, dashed into the avenue, threw himself into one of the houses communicating with the Avenue de Choisy, and disappeared.

When the French troops arrived they found nothing but mutilated corpses.

CHAPTER IX.

THE NIGHT WATCH OF DEATH.

Fearful was the night that followed that hideous day. Burning, burning, burning; burning and bloodshed everywhere. The battle had become a massacre, the conflagration a sea of fire. Never had been seen such destruction. The public granaries on the quay, the vast storehouses of Villette, eight hundred burning houses, and as many more newly set on fire, the D'Orsay barracks, the Tuileries, the Palais Royal, the Palace of the Legion of Honor, the Court of Archives, the Hotel de Ville, theatres, manufactories, libraries, the Rue de Lille, the Rue du Bac, blazing and falling into ruin, made Paris seem one mighty brazier, through which wound the Seine, like a river of molten brass.

During the earlier part of the struggle the regular troops had obeyed the orders of their leaders with calm submission, doing their duty bravely in that worst of all combats—street warfare. But as the conflict went on, the sight of those flaming ruins, the savagery of the insurgents, exasperated them, and it was no longer possible to restrain their fury. Their hearts were hardened by many a bitter memory of past sufferings—of wasted heroism, of captivity, sickness, hunger, long stages upon inhospitable roads, the shame of undeserved defeat—sufferings for which their sole recompense had been injury and insult. And these, who had fired the most glorious monuments of France, assassinated her bravest and best, what had they done during the war? They had drunk and swaggered, and held forth in wine shops; they had strengthened the hands of the foe by their squabbles and revolts, and had garnered their strength for the work of bloodshed and universal destruction.

The soldiers, who had been accused of cowardice, who had been hooted as "capitulards," felt that striking a terrible blow they were not only obeying the law, but avenging their country. The revolt had been pitiless; the punishment was untempered by mercy. The sanguinary laws which the Commune had promulgated recoiled upon herself. She, who had murdered her priests and soldiers, her justices and senators, perished in her turn by slaughter as merciless as her own.

All through that night of horror Philip Durand watched by the bedside of his wife and her new-born infant in the Rue Git le Cœur. The little street was safe in its obscurity, safe from the malice of the incendiaries, who had bigger game for their sport; but the conflagration was terribly near. All the sky was lurid with reflected fire, and the thunder of the cannonade and the rush and roar of the flames were heard in every gust of wind which blew this way, while every now and then came the sharp sudden sound of an explosion—another roof blown up, another wall falling.

The atmosphere was poisoned by the odors of petroleum, and the thick rank smoke from the Granaries of Abundance, where the stores of wine, oil, and dried fish fed the fierceness of the flames and intensified the stench of burning. Everywhere the work of destruction was being hurried on. The Commune was at the last gasp; these explosions and burnings were the death-rattle.

The little courtyard below Durand's windows was alive with people, going out and coming in, restless, anxious, alarmed, talking to each other in doorways or at open windows, bringing in the last news, which was likely to be false as true.

Durand opened a window of the little salon softly, while Rose slept, and looked out.

"They are burning Notre Dame," said a man in the court, seeing him at the window, and eager to impart his information. "They have piled barrels of petroleum all the length of the nave, half-way to the roof, and they are going to set it on fire. The grand old roof will fly into the air presently, like a pack of cards. It will be a sight worth seeing," he added, hurrying out as if to a play.

"St. Eustache is on fire," said another man, "and they are going to burn the Prefecture of Police. Rigault and his chums have been having a great supper there—seas of wine, mountains of provision—and now they know their day is over, and they are going to blow up the building."

Durand shut the window. A palace more or less, a church more or less! What did it matter amidst this universal ruin?—the Prussians at the door; the government weak, vacillating, the sport of circumstances; France in tatters, unable to save her bishops, her generals, her counsellors, her soldiers; given over as a prey to a sanguinary populace.

This strong clear-headed man sat down crushed by the weight of his country's desolation. He whose brain was usually quick to plan, cool to execute his plans, now felt powerless to look beyond the horror of the hour; but the ruin which overwhelmed him was not the destruction that reigned without his dwelling. It was the blank within, that empty home up-stairs, which filled him with horror, which was ever in his mind as a haunting fear.

It was three days since Gaston had disappeared, and now Kathleen was gone. She had slipped out unseen by the porter or by any of the neighbors. She had vanished like a ghost at break of day. When he went up to her rooms this morning to carry her the last news of her sister, to cheer and comfort her, and buoy up her sinking hopes, as he had done all through the two previous days of her trouble, he found the nest deserted.

There was no doubt as to her flight, or its purpose. The inner room was locked, and the key taken away; the outer room was neatly swept and garnished; everything was in its place. Gaston's bureau was locked; the glazed cabinet in which he kept his cherished collection of books—not large, but so carefully chosen: chosen as poverty chooses its treasures, one by one, deliberately, anxiously—this, too, was locked, and every book on its shelf; and on the table lay a letter addressed to Durand:

"Dear Philip, dear Brother,—I am going to look for my husband. Have no fear for me. Heaven will pity and protect my wretchedness. I shall be about all day and every day seeking for my beloved; but I shall come back here at night for shelter and rest, if possible. If I do not come back after dark you may know that my wanderings have taken me too far afield. But you need have no fear. Of one thing you may be sure—while my reason remains I will not destroy myself. I will be true to the teaching of my childhood, and God will give me grace to bear my troubles.

"Do not let one thought of me distract you from your duty of protecting Rose and her baby. If she asks about me, tell her that I am safe, in good hands, well cared for and protected. Is not that the truth, when I am in the keeping of the Holy Mother and her blessed angels?—Ever lovingly, your sister, KATHLEEN."

It was midnight; the long dreary day was over, and she had not returned. Philip had crept up-stairs, and looked into the empty room several times in the course of the day; but there had been no sign of Kathleen's return. He had questioned the landlord, who kept the hall-door locked and bolted in this time of panic; but the man had seen nothing of Kathleen.

It had been altogether a trying day. R— was weak and somewhat feverish, and quired anxiously every hour about K leen. Why did not her sister come to her? Where was Gaston? Philip was sorely perplexed how to reply. Gaston was at the newspaper office, he faltered on one occasion.

"But the newspaper was suppressed six weeks ago," said Rose.

"Yes, but they are beginning again, now that times are better; and the government will be restored. That's what makes Gaston so busy."

"But Kathleen—why does she desert me?"

"She is not very well, dear. It is only a cold; but it is better for her to keep her room."

"Yes, yes, let her nurse herself. O, I wish that I were well, and could go to her," said Rose with a troubled look.

She was devoured by anxiety about Kathleen; and in spite of her husband's tenderness, in spite of fussy Maman Schubert's kindness, in spite even of that new and wonderful love, the maternal instinct, awakened in her mind by the infant that nestled at her side, like a bird under the parent wing, she could not overcome that feeling of fear and restlessness caused by her sister's absence.

"Are you sure that she is not seriously ill?" she asked Philip, looking at him with fever-bright eyes. "It is so unlike Kathleen to make much of a slight illness. And she must know that I am pining for her."

"Shall I go and fetch her?" asked Philip, making a movement towards the door. "It is better for her health that she should stay in bed; but if you want her so badly—"

"No, no, not for the world. Give her my fondest love. Tell her to nurse herself. Give her baby's love, too, Philip; I know this little creature is all love, though he was born in an evil time."

"Poor little storm-bird!" murmured Philip, bending over the bed to kiss the little pink face, so soft, like something very sweet and lovable, but not quite human.

He was ashamed of himself for the lies he told so glibly. Yet he knew that it would be dangerous to tell his wife the truth—dangerous while her cheeks were flushed and her eyes glassy with fever. Maman Schubert had warned him that he must wade chin-deep in falsehood rather than allow his wife's mind to become troubled. He must do anything in the world to soothe and comfort her. La Schubert herself was glib and inventive, and her presence had always a soothing effect. She brought Rose imaginary messages from her sister; and pretended to convey Rose's replies. She dandled the baby, and cooked Philip's dinner, and made the invalid's broth, all with the liveliest air, and made light of conflagration and ruin, although with every hour the roar of cannon, the hiss of mitrailleuse, grew louder, fort answering to fort with sullen thunder, the sound of musketry close at hand.

At midday a hideous noise resounded throughout the quarter. The houses rocked; fragments of plaster fell from the ceiling.

What was that? The explosion was too loud for any shell, however formidable. It was only the powder magazine at the Luxembourg, which had just been blown up. The Pantheon was expected momentarily.

And still Maman Schubert, with nods and friendly smiles, assured her dearest Madame Durand, "cette pauvre cherie," that the Versailles troops were carrying everything before them. The Commune was surrendering without a blow. Order would be restored, Paris at peace, by Sunday morning.

"And we shall hear all the church-bells ringing for mass, and see the people in their Sunday clothes," concluded Maman Schubert cheerily.

So the long day and the evening wore through, and it was midnight, and there was no sign of Kathleen.

She whose return was so eagerly awaited in the Rue Git le Cœur was not very far afield when the clocks chimed midnight. She had wandered about Paris all day, haunting the gates of the prisons, inquiring for her missing husband of every one who seemed in the least likely to be able to answer. Had there been any new arrests made within the last three days, and amongst the new arrests was there a young man, tall, slim, with dark-gray eyes and marked brows, handsome, a journalist? At the gates of Mazas, at the Great and the Little Roquette, at Sainte Pelagie, at La Sante, the patient pilgrim appeared, weary, with garments whitened by the chalky dust of the hard dry roads which scorched her tired feet, drooping in body, yet brave of soul, questioning, seeking, watching, imploring, but finding no trace of the lost one.

Night was falling before she turned away from the gates of La Sante, the model prison of Paris, where General Chanzy had been imprisoned for seven weary days at the beginning of the Commune—night had fallen as she walked slowly and wearily back to that part of the city which she knew best, where the Pont Neuf spans the Seine, and the dark towers of Notre Dame stand out strong and stern against the sky-line. Night had come, but not darkness. The crescent moon shed her pale silvery light in the east, and the stars were golden in the deep calm azure of a cloudless sky. But all at once that azure vault grew dark, and the stars vanished. Gigantic clouds of black smoke mounted to the sky, and then descended earthward, covering the city with an impenetrable dome. Beneath this inky vault all was lurid. An awful light glared and glowed on the quays, on the bridges in the broad space in front of the Hotel de Ville. Left bank and right bank blazed and glared; here some stately public office, there a millionaire's mansion, sent up its tribute of flame to swell the funeral pyre of the doomed city. "Chassepot and torch, shoot and burn!" was the order of the night. Yonder in the Rue de Rivoli they were fighting desperately. Kathleen ran across the street amidst a rain of bullets, stumbling over scattered corpses, deafened by the roar of the cannonade. Slowly, despairingly, she wandered up and down those dreadful streets, perpetually in danger, yet passing scathless through every peril. Now and then a savage scowling face looked at her interrogatively, and then passed by. Sentinels questioned, and let her pass. There was no harm in her. She had a distracted look—a petroleuse who had proved of too weak a mind for that patriotic work, perhaps. Women are feeble creatures. This one's head had been turned. Only an inmate the more for the Maison des Fous.

Amidst blood and fire she wandered to and fro, pausing whenever there was a knot of idlers at a corner to listen to their talk, or repeat her old inquiries. Had there been any new arrests within the last three days?

Arrests? There were arrests every hour, a man told her. The gentlemen in power were getting rabid. Shoot and burn, that was the word. Murder and fire were their only notion for taking their revenge upon Versailles. Arrests, forsooth! What was the use of talking about arrests? The prisons were teeming with hostages, there was neither space nor provision for the herd of unfortunates; and now the word had gone forth to shoot them down in the prison-yards, or to roast them alive in their cells. Rigault and Ferre, Serizier, Megy, these were not men to surrender tamely. If these fiery stars were to be quenched, they would go down in a sea of blood.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1883. 48-52t

VARIETIES.

It is more important to discover a new source of happiness on earth than a new planet in the sky.

For Deep Seated Colds and Coughs, Allen's Lung Balsam cures when all other remedies fail.

It is estimated that 1,000,000 of the cattle in Texas are owned by men who live outside the State.

National Pills act promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels, and as a purgative are mild and thorough. 8-26.

A ring around the moon is a sign of rain. A ring around a girl's finger is also a sign of reign.

Freeman's Worm Powders require no other purgative. They are safe and sure in removing all varieties of Worms. 8-26.

Another peninsular and Waterloo veteran, George Burnet, is reported dead at Macduff, Scotland, aged 95 years.

Pimf. Low's Sulphur Soap is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped hands, Pimples, Tan, etc. 8-26.

Why is a horse the most curious feeder in the world? Because he eats best when he has not a bit in his mouth.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup has removed tape worm from 15 to 30 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm. 8-26.

A school mistress at Yankee Springs, Michigan, was dismissed because she would not eat fat pork. "Too much style," the people said.

The disfiguring eruptions on the face, the sunken eye, the pallid complexion, indicate that there is something wrong going on within. Expel the lurking foe to health. Ayer's Sarsaparilla was devised for that purpose; and does it.

An entomologist says that the eyes of bees contain 1,000 mirrors. That's the reason the busy little rascals can sting without looking round.

An Excellent Report.

Hon. Jos. G. Goodridge, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I cannot express myself in sufficiently praiseworthy terms of Burdock Blood Bitters which I have used for the past two years with great benefit." 8-2t.

There is a farmer in Yorkshire who has a mile of children. His name is Furlong, and he has four boys and four girls. Eight furlongs make one mile.

Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion is particularly adapted to delicate females, in those low states of the system that manifest themselves in so many of the ailments peculiar to their sex. Always ask for Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion, and be ye sure you get it. 7-26.

A little girl said to her mother one day: "Mother, I feel nervous." "Nervous!" said the mother. "what is nervous?" "Why, it's being in a hurry all over."

Danger in the Air,

In the chilling winds, the damp atmosphere and suddenly checked perspiration, colds are lurking. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam cures colds, coughs, asthma and bronchitis, and all complaints tending towards consumption. 8-2t.

An Irish magistrate asked a prisoner if he was married. "No," replied the man. "Then," replied his worship, "it's a good thing for your wife."

Jacob Loockman, Buffalo, N. Y., says he has been using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for rheumatism; he had such a lame back he could not do anything, but one bottle has, to use his own expression, "cured him up." He thinks it is the best thing in the market.

The travelling showmen are exhibiting three skeletons of Guiteau—his skeleton when he was a boy, his skeleton before he shot Garfield, and his skeleton after he was hanged.

Useful to Know.

Everyone should know that Hagyard's Yellow Oil will give prompt relief; applied externally will stop any pain; and taken internally cures colds, asthma, croup, sore throat and most inflammatory complaints. 8-2t.

Roller skating has been called by a crank the "sister vice of intemperance," "it must have fallen harder on the smooth floor than he ever did into the gutter.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES, IS STRUMOUS CHILDREN AND DELICATE INFANTUM.

Dr. W. F. Ransom, Hartford, Ind., says: "I find your Emulsion to be an excellent remedy in lung troubles, and especially in Strumous children, and a most valuable remedy in chronic cases of Cholera Infantum."

Shakespeare says sleep is "the death of each day's life." Building kitchen fires with the thermometer 20 degrees below zero the next morning is the wake over the corpse, probably.

To Our Readers.

If you suffer from headache, dizziness, back ache, biliousness or humors of the blood, try Burdock Blood Bitters. It is a guaranteed cure for all irregularities of the blood, liver and kidneys. 8-2t.

Queen Victoria will go the Continent on the 20th of March in the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, which has been repaired at a cost of $200,000.

That "Tocsin of the soul, the dinner bell," as Byron calls it, suggests no pleasing reflections to the dyspeptic, bilious sufferer. He partakes, of course, but the subsequent torment is egregiously out of proportion to the quantity of food he eats, which lies undigested, a weight like lead in his unhappy stomach. There is a remedy, however, and its name is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. No case is entirely hopeless.

The American Iron and Steel Association reports the total production of pig-iron in the United States last year was 4,580,000 tons, against 5,147,000 in 1883.

A Boston doctor, who has just retired with a big fortune, says he drew remedies for corns and consumption from the same keg, and most of his patients got well.

A Good Record.

Among the many thousand bottles of Hagyard's Yellow Oil sold annually in Canada, not one has ever failed to give satisfaction. It cures rheumatism, colds, and all painful complaints and injuries. 8-2t.

Dr. Bryce, of the Provincial Board of Health, writes to the Brantford Local Board regarding the prevention of the sale of canal ice: "The Board of Health has implied power under section 12, Schedule A, to regulate ice supply."

The sparrow is the toughest and pluckiest bird of its size in the world. One half of his time he devotes to courting and love, while the other half is consumed in hunting up a living for his little wife and still smaller children. Many a man can learn wisdom from the sparrow.

Well as Ever.

Lottie Howard writes from Buffalo, N. Y.: "My system became greatly debilitated through arduous professional duties; suffered from nausea, sick headache and billiousness. Tried Burdock Blood Bitters with the most beneficial effect. Am well as ever. 8-2t.

A HEROIC BAPTISM.

Monday morning of last week fifteen persons, men, women and children, were baptised in the Talbot Creek, south of Iona, near St. Thomas, and became members of the Hallelujah Band, a sort of Salvation Army that seems to have established a footing in that neighborhood. A hole was cut in the ice and the converts immersed.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

The loss of power to digest and assimilate food in any one who has a weak spot, whose weakness renders perfect nutrition a necessity, requires immediate attention; the lungs impaired by inflammation the heart by rheumatism, and the liver or kidney by over-stimulation, will soon cry out from starvation when the blood is insufficiently fed and the tissues ill-nourished. Failure of nerve power and a weak stomach are the chief factors in these troubles, and the elements of nerve nutrition and essential agents of the gastric juice in WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALMATA the best remedy.

THE CANADIAN CONTINGENT.

[Lines congratulating our Peterborough voyageurs on the prospect of their speedy return from Egypt.]

From England came a call for help, not for their rank or file,
But men well skilled to boat and oar, to guide Gakon up the Nile,
Canadians' love to Britian's throne is neither cold nor small,
Promptly the number they required, responded to the call;
Each town and city on the front sent forth their little band,
We find them from the far Northwest, Ekowins from Newfoundland.
Hopes of assisting British arms, dispelled their doubts and fears,
To Egypt sailed our skillful, bold Canadian voyageurs.

Despising dangers in the course they purposed to pursue,
Caves, mummies, altars, pyramids, these they desired to view,
Egyptian customs, manners and race, our boys longed to behold,
The ancient Nile, the garden soil, by travellers' pen extolled;
Free trip to Egypt seemed to them a two-fold chance combined,
To pilot up the British troops, and please their curious mind.
These fine inducements made them feel as high as grenadiers,
Loyal ardour fired the souls of our Canadian voyageurs.

Although not born in the old lands of Shamrock, Rose or Fleud,
Through their young veins still courses free the old ancestral blood,
As smouldering embers burst to flames, when fanning breezes blow,
So to that call Canadians shout "All ready! we will go!"
Friends, comforts, pleasures, home's sweet joy, they freely cast aside, Heroic ardour filled their hearts with high magnanimous pride.
No fond wifey pleading, father's words, the loving mother's tears,
Nor lover's sighs, had power to hold our Canadian voyageurs.

They will not all return again that sailed to Pharoah's land,
Death has made breaches in the ranks of our brave little band.
With some to run those cataracts, their bravery seemed futile,
Their skill and strength did much succour to save the brave Shropshire Nine;
By carrying hands the rope from land was played out rather slack,
Allowing the boat's bow diverge and take a sideward tack;
The roaring current struck broadside; around the frail boat veers,
Defying skill and courage of our Canadian voyageurs.

Their comrades watched them drifting down, their hopeless fate espied,
Alas, the wild, swift whirling Nile, rescue or aid defied,
Helpless they watched John Faulkner's fate, they heard his piteous cries,
The scene unnerved the bravest heart, and tears bedimmed their eyes;
The frail boat lurched from side to side, then swamped, and all was over.
The husband and the father sank, in life to rise no more,
True more than him found watery graves, five other names appear,
Six sleep their last sleep in the Nile—Canadian voyageurs.

When our small wearied band returns to home, and friends and rest,
Such happy smiles, such plan of love, the hands that will be pressed;
Dear friends will hail their safe return, fond hearts will beat with joy,
The wife will press her husband's lips, the mother embrace her boy;
But there is one, no joy for her, in grief her heart doth mourn,
Looks for her husband but in vain, he never shall return.
Her helpless infant may be spared, to say in future years,
My father perished in the Nile, one of the voyageurs.

WILLIAM TELFORD,
Smith.

February 16th, 1885.

After finishing the above lines I could not erase from my memory the impression made upon my mind when I heard the sad intelligence referred to in the following stanza:

Reverse the scene, one went from here a mother's pride and joy,
She prayed, she pleaded, pressed and wept in vain to hold her boy;
Perhaps he little thought it was his mother's last embrace,
Or the last time that he on earth would look upon her face.
In Egypt out a few short weeks, sad news to him revealed,
That mother's eyes he left in tears, death had forever sealed.
No mother, but a mother's grave, waits his returning tears,
She may meet him when he embarks with death-bound voyageurs.

W. T.

CONGEALED CATTLE.

The extreme cold of the last 48 hours has been very trying, especially in the Western States, where whole train loads of cattle have been left to starve to death. It is fortunate, however, that these violent storms never last long.

A BONANZA BRIDE.

Miss Eva Mackay, daughter of Mr. J. W. Mackay, the American millionaire, was married at the Chapel of the Annunciation, Paris, to the Prince of Colonna. The chapel was crowded to overflowing with people of note. Mr. Minister Morton and the Duc de Cases were the sponsers for the bride, and Prince Doria was present for the bridegroom. Over five hundred presents, many of them of immense value, were received by the bride.

To Cure Pain.

The means which may be readily and successfully employed to relieve pain are important and should be known by all. We give you the name of the best remedy in the world for pain, and the information that a 10 cent sample bottle can be purchased at any drug store. Polson's NERVILINE, the new and sure pop pain cure, will never fail you in time of need. Nerviline is a safe and prompt cure of all kinds of pain, neuralgia, cramps, toothache, headache. Sure always. Ten and 25 cent bottles at drug stores.

HELPING THE CAUSE.

They were trying to raise money to pay off the indebtedness of the church.

Deacon—Have you called on old Mr. Moneybags yet?

Minister—No. He is very sick, and I thought I would wait until he gets better.

Deacon (earnestly)—Don't you wait a minute. Strike him when he is very sick. It will be too late when he gets better.

Thousand Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to any one. Numbers daily give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers" Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

GYPSY SUPERSTITION.

Gypsies are particularly superstitious regarding portraits, and it is a rarity to find the photograph of any true Bohemian decorating any art gallery or store window. They consider it most unlucky to be photographed, and will only submit to have their profiles taken in consideration of receiving, without asking for it, an old shoestring with which they can bind the spirit of ill-luck certain to pursue the person whose likeness has been reproduced.

St. John, N.B.,

falls into line, as Mr. Hawker, one of its leading druggists, writing regarding the corn cure, states:—"I don't think I ever sold a bottle but that I received a good report in return and consumers recommend afflicted friends to try it. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is sure, safe and painless—and therefore the opinion expressed by Mr. Hawker above, is the opinion of all druggists in the Dominion. Beware of substitutes. Use only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, sure pop cure every time. N. C. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

THE PRINCIPLE IS THE SAME.

The policy of protection sometimes brings about queer results. A farmer from the Quebec side of the river was brought before the Police Magistrate in Ottawa the other day for selling meat not raised by himself. It appears as between the capital and adjoining places in the other Province such a law prevails. Protection as applied to inter-Provincial trade looks like carrying the joke a little too far.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsville, Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking Skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in flesh of 40 lbs." Call at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all Lung Diseases. Large bottles $1.00.

A Boy's Ambitions.

Nearly everybody who is now a man, says the Through Mail, was once a boy. All these grown-up boys remember how they felt the first time they saw a brass band. They felt that the president of the United States was not to be compared to the editor of the bass drum, and that the drum-major was at least six inches above George Washington in the temple of fame. Oh! how they did yearn to belong to a brass band, until a circus came along, and then they longed to be the fearless equestrian or the man in the lion's cage. Congress had no charms for most of its present members when they were boys. To be a bare-back rider or drum-major was infinitely better than to be a member of congress in their youthful eyes.

Then came a time when their hearts were set on becoming a brakeman on a railway train, and when the vision of a promotion to the conductorship of a train floated across their dreamy optics they were in the fifth heaven of delight. Time wore on, only to rub the glitter of the railway service off, and supply its place with grand aspirations for the position of umpire of a base-ball game, which was rapidly succeeded by an inordinate ambition to be the victor of a prize-ring. After being knocked out in one round by nearly every boy in the community, ambition again underwent a metamorphosis, and the one thing of all things desired was to be the reigning monarch of a barber-shop, or the untrammeled commander of a volunteer fire brigade.

In due time all the tinsel of these high callings was but dross to them, and to die on the battle-field, breathing some patriotic sentiment as the sands of life ran away, was the one high aim of existence. After one encampment with the home militia, with beans and hard-tack for menu, and a finger accidentally shot off for fun, no further anxiety to spill blood by the gallon for their country was manifested, and they longed for more agreeable pursuits incident to the tranquil surroundings of peace.

At about this point their desires took a different turn. Their hearts glowed with a nobler impulse, and there was a trifle more determination to do in their composition. One determined to teach school, and did so. To be sure he was surprised that life was not one continual round of uninterrupted joy in his new calling, but he worries along and the n xs spring enters a law office and becomes a disciple of Blackstone. The next autumn he reverts to school-teaching, and school-teaching is sandwiched into his life in various ways and at numerous periods afterwards, until he becomes an editor, and the prize-ring experiences of his youth are repeated again. Some years later he is elected to congre s, and then all the old ambitions are forgotten, and give place to designs on the senate. Only a few of them ever get there, and they at once feel the humming of the presidential bee in their bonnets, and eventually become candidates before the national conventions of the great parties, and all but two get—left; and when the election is over one of these two is also left.

Danish Amusement.

It is called in Danish rutschban, and may as well be dubbed in English rush railway. A tower stands at either end of a railway, which is perhaps 180 feet in length, 40 feet high at one extremity, and half as high at the other. I climbed the rude staircase of the higher tower, and found myself in a room crowded with people waiting their opportunity for a ride. At the entrance stood a phaeton-like car on four small iron wheels, the car being very stout and holding two people with comfort. The wheels were in grooves, and the course extended over the descending and ascending slopes. The people would get into a car and be strapped in by a leathern boot; the car would be started down the inclined plane by an attendant, and away it would go down the first slope, and by its impetus rise to the next height, go over and down and up again, at each rise pitching a little lower, at each pitch rising to a lesser height, until the last slope, when it rushed up the hill, bumped against a buffer, and the two travelers got out. The car would then be seized, dragged aside, put upon a lift, hauled up to a height above, and sent back, with other passengers or empty, down a corresponding road parallel to the first, and terminating in a similar low tower by the side of the one I was in, where it would be hoisted again into place, and be ready to make the round of the rush railway again.

I stood by the entrance where the car started down, watching the couple get into the vehicle and then go thundering down the slope. I saw sedate men who might have been bank presidents get in, and children, and ardent youths and maidens, two by two. They held each other in; they almost lost their hats; they bowed, and fell back upon the huge "thank-you-ma'ams"; they looked frightened, and they looked bold; they smiled, and they almost cried; but I heard no one scream. At length, when I had politely given way to those more eager, I was driven by shame and an inextinguishable curiosity to try this reckless "coast." I paid the fare—about two and a half cents—and took my seat. I jammed my hat down over my brow, grasped the back of the car with one hand, and no doubt turned pale as the push was given and we began that awful descent. I felt that thrilling sensation of vibration in the pit of my stomach which one has in a swing when descending, and then we shot up the slope, saw a new abyss, and plunged into it. A delicious reprieve was followed by another fearful descent; four times we dashed in the face of fate, and then, with one triumphant rush, flew up the last incline. I got ont of the car with my wits standing on end, and tumbled down the staircase in a bewildered, groggy way, anxious to get my legs upon the immovable earth again.

There was no mistaking the thorough enjoyment which everybody took in this amusing place, and the decorum and good feeling seemed to come by nature.—Harper's Magazine.

In East Africa nearly every woman wears the pelele. When she is a little girl a small hole is pierced through the middle of her upper lip, and into this is pressed a wooden pin to prevent the puncture from closing up. After a time this is changed for a larger pin, and so on till the hole is big enough to admit a ring. In proportion as the pelele is made gradually larger, so the lip enlarges and comes to look like a snout. An average specimen measures one and one-fourth inches in diameter and almost an inch in length. When she becomes a widow fashion compels her to take out her pelele, the lip falls, and the great round hole, called luperie, shows the teeth and jaw quite plainly, making her hideous.

The Art of Soup-Making.

There is a constant controversy going on as to the economy, digestibility, and necessity of soup at the commencement of dinner; some maintain that a dinner without it cannot literally be called a dinner; others, prejudiced against "slops," discarding it from their tables altogether; while a few who would gladly, perhaps, take advantage of an opportunity to reduce the meat bills, have only the will, being ignorant of the way. The average middle-class wife or mother may have sighed over the items of ribs and sirloins of beef, and legs and shoulders of mutton, and said to herself, "Ah! we must take to having a little soup." With praiseworthy promptitude and zeal, she has perchance opened her cookery-book, of the old extravagant style, and closed it sorrowfully, a sadder, if not a wiser woman, the brain all dizzy from the string of ingredients, and the long line of knuckles of veal, shins of beef, "old fowls," and slices of ham, which she is commanded to "throw into the stock pot" if she would insure success.

Now, with soup-making, as with all else, once master the theory and the practice is comparatively easy; while, on the other hand, years of practice without a perfect knowledge of the why and the wherefore will prove of no avail. Let me illustrate my meaning clearly: The would-be soup-maker, in scanning a recipe, discards it as impracticable because she lacks one or more of the ingredients mentioned, while she who grasps the modus operandi, owing to her theoretical knowledge, at once substitutes others, or perhaps dispenses with them altogether.

No doubt, in many families, the prejudice against soup has arisen from the fact tha. it is usually prepared and served in large quantities, instead of, as at the tables of the rich, in small portions, though many of the kinds which I hope to enumerate would furnish in themselves a substantial meal for a growing child. At any rate, the advantages of commencing dinner with soup are manifest in the saving of the meat bills, and economy practiced in using scraps of all kinds for the making of the soups, and the comfortable sensation experienced after a little has been taken; for let any person who feels, as the saying goes, "too hungry to eat," swallow a few spoonfuls of soup, and the feeling of exhaustion will quickly pass away. Indeed, a well-known authority has said that nothing tends more to restore the tone of the stomach, and make easier of digestion that which is to follow, than a little soup.—Cassell's Family Magazine.

Diplomatic Secretary Fish.

Governor Hamilton Fish was noted for his deportment, and he took great pride in sending to the courts of Europe in a diplomatic capacity gentlemen whose dress and manners would not excite comment. He was much concerned, however, when it became his duty to commission Horace Maynard, of Tennessee, as Minister to Turkey, and Godlove S. Orth, of Indiana, as Minister to Austria. Neither one was remarkable for his observance of the social proprieties, and it was some time before Governor Fish could devise to give them a lesson in dress. At last, so the story goes, an idea struck him, and sending for Orth he said something like this to the Indiana statesman:

"Mr. Orth, I have a favor to ask you."

"Anything I can do for you, Mr. Secretary, I'll be glad to."

"Thank you, Mr. Orth, thank you, sir, you are very good. Mr. Maynard, you know, is an excellent gentleman, but he is not accustomed to the ways of society as you or I are," and the Secretary smiled pleasantly at the guileless Orth, who had on a sky-blue necktie and unblackened boots. After having clinched his point he continued: "I am afraid he will invent some startling innovation on the costume usual among gentlemen when they are out in society. He may startle the foreign courts with a red necktie and a sack coat, and now what I want to ask you, Mr. Orth, is to give him a hint, as you are both going over on the same steamer, about what you or I should wear on social occasions—the dress coat, black trousers and waist coat, and the simple white tie. You will know precisely how to do it, and you will oblige me greatly by attending to the matter of so much importance, as you, as a member of polite society, know."

The hint was taken, and Mr. Orth was noted among the diplomatists at Vienna for his faultless attire. Mr. Maynard, with his long black hair and Indian features, was not so apt a scholar.—Ben: Perley Poore in Boston Budget.

How to Split a Sheet of Paper.

It is one of the most remarkable properties of that wonderful product, paper, that it can be split into two or even three parts, however thin the sheet. We have seen a sheet of the Illustrated News thus divided into three parts, or three thin leaves. One consisted of the surface on which the engravings are printed; another was the side containing the letter-press, and a perfectly blank piece on each side was the paper that lay between. Many people who have not seen this done might think it impossible; yet it is not only possible but extremely easy, as we shall show Get a piece of plate-glass, and place on it a sheet of paper; then let the latter be thoroughly soaked. With care and a little dexterity the sheet can be split by the top surface being removed. But the best plan is to paste a piece of cloth or strong paper to each side of the sheet to be split. When dry, violently and without hesitation pull the two pieces asunder, when part of the sheet will be found to have adhered to one and part to the other. Soften the paste in water and the pieces can be easily removed from the cloth. The process is generally demonstrated as a matter of curiosity, yet it can be utalized in various ways. If we want to paste in a scrap-book a newspaper article printed on both sides of the paper, and possess only one copy it is very convenient to know how to detach the one side from the other. The paper when split, as may be imagined, is more transparent than when it was before being subjected to the operation, and the printing-ink is somewhat duller; otherwise the two pieces present the appearance of the original if again brought together. Some time ago the information of how to do this splitting was advertised to be sold for a considerable sum. We now impart it to all our readers gratuitously—British and Colonial Printer and Stationer.

These surgeons have no connection with any Yankee institutions. 7

The Nichols Hospital.

Our northern cotem, the Bobcaygeon Independent, thus refers to this institution: "It is to be free to all sufferers, and has been accepted by the corporations with all proper and grateful expressions of thanks. This is a noble gift, a fine example of Christian charity, and one that will be a source of happiness to the donor as long as she lives."

Lecture by Rev. W. C. Bradshaw.

The Rev. W. C. Bradshaw will give a lecture in the Y.M.C.A. Hall this (Thursday) evening, at 8 o'clock, on the "Life and Times of Wickliffe," the great English Reformer of 500 years ago. Every Protestant should hear the lecture, and so learn something more about how our great liberties were secured for us. Ten cents is the price of admission.

Life and Times of Wickliffe.

The above is the subject on which Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, of St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, will lecture at the Y.M.C.A. Hall, this (Thursday) evening. The topic is very a propos, as the Protestant world is celebrating the 500th anniversary of the death of the great reformer, who first translated the Bible into the Anglo-Saxon tongue. All are invited to attend the lecture, which will commence at 8 o'clock. The admission fee is ten cents.

A Millbrook Maiden's Success.

A despatch from Ottawa to the Toronto Mail has the following in reference to Miss Annie Howden, of Millbrook, who has so often delighted Peterborough audiences:—"Miss Annie Howden of Millbrook, Ontario, who during last autumn made her debut as a concert vocalist, has been staying at the capital for a few days, and your correspondent had the pleasure of hearing her at Lady Tilley's soiree musicale both on Friday and on this evening. Every one was charmed with her rendering of her songs, as well as with her voice, which is a rich mezzo soprano. She exhibits high culture and does credit to her Toronto training. The general opinion was that she is one of Canada's most promising vocalists."

A Melancholy Event.

We record with deep regret the death of Mr. Ormiston B. Dixon, son of the late Principal Dixon, of the Collegiate Institute. The deceased young gentleman fell a victim to consumption, aggravated by a severe cold contracted in Chicago. His physicians had advised him to spend the winter in the south, and he has the past winter been filling an engagement in the Southern States, but on its termination he went to Chicago, where he caught a severe cold. He came home a few days since, and though surrounded by all that loving care and the best treatment medical skill could provide, he breathed his last on Sunday. The deceased was one of the best ventriloquists on the continent, taking the lead after only five years professional practice of the art. He was a great favorite amongst all who knew him, being a jovial, genial, sunny-natured young gentleman. We offer his bereaved relatives our sincerest sympathy in their deep affliction.

St. John's Church.

An entertainment in behalf of the Woman's Friendly Aid Society, and the St. John's C. E. T. S. was held in the school room, St. John's church on Wednesday night. It was quite successful very many being present from Lakefield. Mr. J. E. Belcher occupied the chair. The programme opened by a piano solo by Miss Spillabury which was well rendered. Then followed several songs and readings, very acceptably presented, a recitation by Mr. Salisbury, "The Gladiator" being especially excellent, and given by special request. The chief attraction of the evening was Mrs. Jarley's wax works, the figures of which were eloquently dressed and well "got up." The descriptive part of the "figgers" was performed by Mr. Wright of Lakefield, as Mrs. Jarley, aided by her two sons, George and Peter; (Mr. Hammond and Mr. Brown). The part of Mrs. Jarley could not have been better sustained. We are glad to know that the entertainment was a remarkable success, both in the way of amusement and financial results.

We shall publish in our next issue a communication from Mr. T. N. Willan of South Monaghan in reference to the proposed removal of Wallace Point Bridge.

Sale of Clothing

at the Auction Mart, opposite the Review office. A large consignment of Clothing, in Men's and Boys Suits, with instructions to sell by private sale at half price. Call and see them.

Parlor Social.

A parlor social in aid of the funds of the Baptist Church will be held in the residence of Mr. John McKee, London street, on (this) Thursday evening, Feb. 19th. The committee is arranging an excellent programme. Refreshments will be served. Admission, 25 cents.

A Scrub Bath.

A few days ago Mr. Frank White descended into his father's cistern to remove the ice that had frozen over the water. The ice gave way and he was plunged into very cold water, five or six feet in depth. He was rescued from his perilous and chilly position by considerable efforts.

St. Valentine Day.

The present is the dullest St. Valentine's season that has ever struck the town. The interest in it seems to be dying out. The N. P. tax on "Valentines" probably has something to do with the decadence of the custom of burdening the mails with those amatory articles.

Money.

Mr. John A Bennett, of Otonabee, is prepared to make loans on real estate and to purchase mortgages. Loans will be made at the lowest rates of interest, payable when the borrower deems the most convenient time, the principal, being payable at such times as may be agreed upon. Expenses are very light. 12-tf

The Scott Act Campaign.

Preliminary skirmishes are now being held with a view of entering upon a battle for the adoption of the Act in this county. On Sunday Rev. Mr. Keefer, agent of the Dominion Alliance, preached in St. Paul's church and on Sunday afternoon addressed a largely attended meeting in the Murray street Baptist church.

Mechanics' Institute.

The quarterly meeting was held on Monday night, the president, Mr. A. McFarlane and a fair number of members being present. After routine, a resolution was adopted making members' subscriptions terminable on April 30th and declaring that for new members, only half yearly subscriptions will be taken. Mr. G. Gladman and Mr. Pearse were appointed auditors. The sale of periodicals—yearly numbers, about twenty kinds—brought about $50.

A Correction.

The Orillia Packet thus corrects us:—"The statement of the Examiner that Mr. J. B. Thompson, Deputy-Reeve of Orillia, was formerly a resident of Peterborough is incorrect. Mr. Thompson says he was in Peterborough but once, and if all the people are equal to those he then met, he thinks it next to Orillia as a place of residence, as well as nearly equal to this town in business enterprise." We cheerfully acknowledge the justice of the correction. The mistake we made was in not knowing that any man who had ever lived in Peterborough, could not content himself in Orillia—unless he had some lucrative government position or a financial bonanzo like an Orillia newspaper.

St. Valentine's Festival.

A delightfully successful entertainment was held at "Hazel Brae" on Thursday evening last. There was a large assemblage of invited guests present to witness the presentation of a very fine programme. The entertainment opened in the school room, the first number being an instrumental selection by Messrs. Hartley, Tate, Geale, Errett and Thomas. Mr. Cooper recited in good style a selection from "The Lady of the Lake." Mrs. Chambers sang "At the Ferry," in her usual admirable manner. Miss Annie Howden's "It was a Dream" was well received, as was also Mr. Geale's solo, "Thou Wilt Return No More." Miss Stephenson, of Guelph, who is at present visiting in town with her sister, Mrs. C. McGill, sang in excellent voice, "The Three Old Maids of Lea." The tableaux representing our national game—lacrosse—were well presented. The "face" showed the ball being faced by Mr. George Stevenson. In the "checking" tableaux and the "game" Messrs. Brown, Ritchie, Mason and Montgomery posed with excellent effect. At the close of the first part of the programme delicious refreshments were served. These, contained in baskets provided by the young ladies, were "auctioned off" by Mr. J. C. T. Lacey. Each basket contained a name, and the young gentleman who secured a name was supposed to lunch with the fair owner. Unfortunately the young gentlemen did not bid very spiritedly, and several benedicts in starting the baskets, had the tempting prizes "knocked down" to them, which they could only appreciate by the grace of their better halves. After half an hour enjoyed in this pleasant manner the second part of the programme was opened by a pianoforte duet the overture to Fra Diavolo—by Mrs. and Miss Duff—the latter only nine years of age, and she performed her part in a very creditable manner indeed. Miss Stephenson contributed the "Cuckoo Song." The tableaux, "A Peep at the Celestial"—a Chinese laundry scene—was effectively presented by Messrs. Ritchie, Brown and Montgomery. Mrs. Chambers' solo, "The Children's Home," followed by "God Save the Queen," closed the programme of a most delightful entertainment, which was a great credit to those who had the management of it. Owing to the illness of his brother, Mr. Orm. Dixon, who has since died, Mr. W. A. Dixon, who was to have taken charge of the programme, was unable to be present. Mr. Hutchinson, of Montreal, was also unable to appear, owing to the illness of his father, who has also since died. The general accompaniments were played by Mrs. Duff; and Miss McNabb accompanied Mr. Geale in his numbers. The management have to regret the want of care on the part of the boy who had charge of the red lights used in the tableaux, who, instead of placing the chemicals so that the fumes escaped up the chimney, allowed them to enter the room. In spite, however, of this little drawback, the entertainment was highly successful, and no small part of the credit of such a result is due to the committee of management, Mrs H.S. Macdonald, Miss L. Sanderson and Mr. W. A. Dixon.

New Songs.

"Trust the Boy who's Motto, is my Mother," "Climbing up de Golden Stairs," "Speak for Father one Kind Word," "when my ship comes in," and about seventy-five of the newest and most popular songs of the day are on sale at the Bell organ office.

Saved Army Jubilee.

The first Anniversary, Banquet and Jubilee under the auspices of the Saved Army of Peterborough, will be held in Bradburn's Opera House, on Thursday the 5th of March. Further particulars will be given in our next issue.

Self Binders.

We desire to call the attention of the Agriculturalists of the surrounding district to the advertisement of Mr. Peter Hamilton in another column. Mr. Hamilton is manufacturing a splended Self Binder, and we would advise our readers to see it before placing their orders elsewhere.

The Scott Act.

As will be seen by an advertisement in another column, the committee appointed on Monday evening to make arrangements for a convention, to take steps with a view to having the Scott Act submitted to a vote of the electors, announce Wednesday, the 4th of March as the date. The convention will meet in Bradburn's Opera House at 2 o'clock p.m.

Look out for It.

The question is being asked daily; "When will the new roller rink be ready for use? I am very anxious to try a skate." To all those enquiring in this manner we can answer that in a very short time the announcement will be made of the opening. Look out for it, and do not fail to be on hand, for roller skating is going to be very popular.

Anniversary Services.

The anniversary services in connection with the Charlotte Street Methodist church will be held on Sunday next, 22nd inst. Sermons will be preached by Rev. Dr. Williams, one of the general superintendents, morning and evening. In place of the usual tea-meeting, addresses only will be delivered on Monday evening by Dr. Williams and Rev. A. H. Munro. The financial statement of the church will be presented, and a silver collection taken up in aid of the church funds.

Look out for the small block pattern on a plain ground, in Mantle Cloths, Silks, Satins, Cashmeres, Delaines Prints and Ribbons. All who wish to see the Latest Spring Styles will find them at Turnbull's.

PERSONAL.

Hon. Senator Vidal of Sarnia was in town this week, the guest of his son-in-law Mr. D. B. Gardener.

We are pleased to notice that Mr. Alex Elliott the popular ticket agent of the G. & Q. is recovered from his late illness sufficiently to be at his post.

Mr. A. White Traffic Manager of the Midland Divison of the Grand Trunk Railway, was present at the meeting of the railway Freight Agents in Toronto on Thursday last.

We learn from the Packet that Mr. Owen and Miss Sanderson, of the Barnardo Home, Hazel Brae, were in Orillia last week, visiting those children sent from the Home to Orillia and vicinity.

Rev. Mr. Keefer is the guest of Dr. Fife. Mr. D. D. Galletly, P. M. W., is representing Peterborough Lodge at the annual session of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in Toronto.

Mr. George Mitchell, of Winnipeg, formerly of this town, left for home on Wednesday. Mr. Mitchell has been visiting friends here for the past month. It is reported he has left his heart behind him, but that he will shortly return for it.

On Saturday morning Mr. Wm. Loch, furmerchant started for his annual trip to the Vaterland. He will visit East Prussia in the interests of his extensive fur business in this town. We wish our respected and enterprising townsman a safe return and hope that his trip to Europe will be full of both pleasure and profit.

On Thursday morning last Messrs. H. Le Brun, James Dolan, D. J. Lundy and John Laplante, armed with tickets provided by Mr. T. Menzies started for New Orleans, to do the World's Exposition, now being held there. A post card received from St. Louis from one of the party states that on the arrival at St. Louis, summer clothing had to be donned. The bantam cock is all right, crows at every station, and arouses the whole car at daylight.

The Hayes Valley Advertiser, of San Francisco, of a late date contains the following:—Tue Installation Ball of the Caledonian Club, which took place at the Mechanics' Pavilion ou Friday evening, January 30th, was a grand affair. Upwards of 7,000 persons attended. Handsome presents were made to the retiring Chief Kennedy and to the retiring Secretary, John Reid, Mr. John Elder was installed as First Chieftain, and delivered an able oration concerning Scotland and Scotish people.

THE SOUTH MONAGHAN BRIDGE.

(COMMUNICATED.)

A meeting of a number of those opposed o the removal or doing away with the Wallace Point bridge was held on Tuesday evening in Faucher's Hotel at the Point, Mr. John Hunter occupied the chair and Mr. Wm. Smithson acted as secretary. After the question had been thoroughly discussed it was moved by Wm. Greer, seconded by F.A. Erskine that this meeting views with alarm the communication in the local papers regarding the doing away with the Wallace Point bridge as recommended by the county council of Peterborough, and take this opportunity of protesting against such proceedings, on the ground that it would be detrimental to a large portion of the two townships. Carried unanimously.

THE COL. CONTRADICTS THE "MAIL."

Col. Williams, M.P., is desirous of contradicting the Toronto Mail, when it says that the offer of a Canadian regiment to go on active service to the Soudan was refused, but that they would be accepted for garrison duty in England. This, he thinks is an aspersion on Canadians, and especially on the active militia of the Dominion, which ought not to go unchallenged. He has not yet received any word from the Home authorities. Applications however, are being received daily by himself and the Militia Departments, to go to Egypt.

OMINOUS.

On Wednesday night last says the Herald a powder keg, half filled with something resembling powder, and having a fuse attached, was placed under the snow at the east end of the block occupied by Mr. J. D. Thornton and the Herald printing office, and when discovered on Thursday morning created quite a sensation. The plot was evidently laid for the purpose of scaring the tenants of the building, but it didn't work worth a cent.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Sarnham, Simcoe Steet. 16-tf

THE COPESTONE CARNIVAL.

Grand Glacial Gathering of the Gorgeous and the Grotesque.

The Grandest Display of the Kind Ever Held in Town—A Monster Meeting of Masquers—The Attendance a Literal Crush—The Foresters Foremost in Success.

On Tuesday evening the second fancy dress carnival under the management of Court Peterborough Foresters was held in the Skating Rink, and its magnitude, magnificence and success were infinitely ahead of anything ever accomplished here, or elsewhere, outside of Montreal, and opinion is divided as to whether even that should be excepted.

THE BONSPIEL.

The beginning of the carnival was the grand curling bonspiel that took place in the afternoon, between six rinks of the Toronto Granites and a like number of the home club. The visitors arrived at noon and were entertained at the refreshment rooms to a fine banquet, spread by Mr. R. N. Roddy. Play then began, and the result of the closely-contested match was the victory of the visitors. The following is the composition of the home rinks and the scores of both parties:

Rink No. 1.—Robt. Hall, W. VanEvery, A. McNeil, Dr. Boucher, skip—24; Toronto, 17.

Rink No. 2.—H. B. Merrick, Geo. Walker, R. S. Davidson, W. G. Ferguson, skip—23; Toronto, 14.

Rink No. 3.—E. B. Edwards, F. Haultain, C. H. Geale, M. Millar, skip—14; Toronto, 21.

Rink No. 4.—J. McClelland, C. McGill, W. H. Badden, Geo. Dunstord, skip—20; Toronto, 19.

Rink No. 5.—T. Laplante, W. Croft, T. Rutherford, A. Hall, skip—13; Toronto, 18.

Rink No. 6.—A. Stevenson, W. H. Cluxton, Geo. Brown, T. P. Attrill, skip, 10; Toronto, 20.

THE MASQUERADE.

In the evening, as early as six o'clock the rush at the Skating Rink began, and from that till eight o'clock a steady stream poured through the doors till at least fifteen hundred persons were present.

The Rink presented a gorgeous appearance. The decorations were magnificent, and under the gleam of the electric light, the rink, crowded with a brilliant throng of over 200 gaily-clad figures, presented a splendid sight, as impossible of detailed description as a display of fireworks. The costumes were exceptionally excellent. Most of them were new and many surpassingly beautiful. We are sorry that we cannot give a complete list, but as many failed to hand in their names, securing them otherwise was impossible. The following is a fairly full list of maskers and costumes:

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

The following are the fortunate winners of the splendid prizes offered by the Carnival committee:

Best Comic Costume.—F. J. Lewis, Court Jester.

Special Prize, Best Dressed Forester.—Jas. Menzies.

Best Dressed Gentleman.—Mr. R. J. Sailsbury, Henry VIII.

Best Dressed Lady.—Miss Rubidge, Patchwork.

Best Dressed Girl.—Miss Tina Hall, "The Old Woman that Lived in the Shoe."

Best Dressed Boy.—Arthur Robinson.

Barrel Race.—Adam Bell.

Hurdle Race.—Percy Miles.

Mrs. Hon. R. Hamilton, Mrs. F. J. Lewis, Mrs. Durand, Mrs. M. B. Clementi, Miss Spillabury, and Messrs. J. H. Roper, H. T. Strickland and Robt. Hall, filled the difficult positions of judges.

NATIONAL CURLING CONTEST.

During the evening, a contest between rinks representing different nationalties, in characteristic costumes, took place. The following players composed the several rinks:

Scotchmen.—E. E. Henderson, A. W. Brodie, A. St. A. Smith, F. Haultain, skip.

Irishmen.—J. Morris, C. A. Lawford, C. H. Geale, R. M. Hamilton, skip.

Frenchmen, (Lakefield.)—P. Wigg, W. Hicks Beach, G. Postlewait, G. A. Strickland, skip.

Dutchmen.—James Connal, R. Fair, Geo. Walker, W. VanEvery, skip.

After this contest was over, the maskers who were rather crowded on the skating rink, overflowed on the curling rinks, and the skating continued till a late hour.

The Fire Brigade Band furnished with great liberality, its invariably excellent music, with vocal accompaniments.

The Pontypool Minstrels had a complete stage erected at the north end of the rink, and their performances during the evening were highly appreciated, causing no end of fun.

Mr. R. N. Roddy's well managed refreshment rooms were liberally patronized.

Altogether the Carnival was a magnificent success, and the Foresters are to be congratulated on their talent for management. The public heartily enjoyed and appreciated the grand evening's enjoyment amusement presented on Tuesday.

Turnbull has got an Excellent Stock of Spring Tweeds, some of them bought away below regular value. Where can you get a suit that will fit you better than at Turnbull's?

HON. MR. ROSS' SCHOOL BILL.

Hon Mr. Ross' bill to amend the school law contains many excellent provisions. The amendments, of which a summary is given below, will commend themselves to the good sense of the people and they will place Mr. Ross's reputation as a clear-headed legislator far in advance of that of any previous educationist in the province. The vexed question of teachers' superannuation is likely to be finally settled. It is proposed that compulsory contributions to that fund shall cease. Those who wish to continue to pay shall contribute $8 per year instead of $4 as at present. Those now withdrawing from the fund would receive their contributions back. Election for trustees in cities, towns, incorporated villages, and where township boards are formed, may if the board desire, be held at the same time as the municipal elections and by ballot. This change has frequently been asked for and the optional part of it savors of true liberalism. All salaried municipal officers shall be ineligible as candidates for public school trustees. Third class certificates shall be valid only in the county in which granted. Old first-class county board certificates are made provincial. French and German examiners may be appointed where there are a number of French and German pupils. The municipal treasurer shall be treasurer for the school board except in cities. Teachers resigning their positions on the eve of the summer vacation will be paid according to the proportion their length of service bears to the total number of teaching days in the year. There are many other new provisions which will be very acceptable in regard to the qualifications of trustees and others at school elections, the break up of union sections, compulsory attendance and school age, to which reference will again be made.

As an article for the toilet, Ayer's Hair Vigor stands unrivalled. It cleanses the scalp and preserves it from scurf and dandruff, cures itching and humors, restores faded or gray hair to its original dark color, and promotes its growth.

ANNUAL MEETING OF BAILLIEBORO UNION AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Baillieboro Union Agricultural Society was held in the Town Hall, Baillieboro, on Tuesday evening the 10th of February. On account of the cold stormy weather the attendance was not large, but there was a good representation from the different sections. The directors presented their report which was read and on motion adopted. The financial report showed a balance on hand of $141.02.

The auditors reported that they had examined the books and vouchers and found the balance stated, correct, with assets over and above, of $13.

The following officers for 1885 were elected; President, Thomas McCamus; Vice-president Richard Parker; Secretary, A. Dawson; Treasurer, J. W. Lucas.

Directors:—James Fisher, James Johnston, L. Byers, M. Parker, J. Eagleson, G. Berry J. A. Armstrong, J. Heaslip, A. Anderson, T. Delahay, J. Muncy, E. Keer, J. Byers, H. Earl, J. Smithson, W. Griggs, Richard Henderson, W. J. Wastington, E. Dyer, James Barnard, Robert Waterman, J. Dobbin, Wm. Loch, D. Jewison, Wm. Woods, Asa Barnard and James Wood. Auditor, John Coulter.

It was decided to hold a Spring Show on the 30th April, on the grounds at Baillieboro, when liberal prizes will be given. Open to the Province.

It was moved and carried that a vote of thanks be given to the several newspapers for their kindly notices and that a copy of the report be sent to them; also a vote of thanks to the Orange and Grange bodies for the free use of the hall. The following is

THE REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS.

GENTLEMEN,—In presenting to the members of the Baillieboro Union Agricultural Society the proceedings and financial statement, of the Acociation for the past year, your directors have much pleasure in being able to congratulate you on the prosperity and firm financial standing of your society. Our annual fall show, held at Baillieboro, on the first and second of October last, was a decided success. As our society is a Union Society composed of the townships of South Monaghan, Cavan, Hope, Hamilton and North Monaghan, and as we do not receive any government aid it is necessary that you elect such men for officers and directors, as will take an interest in the society, and will spend a little time to get members to join so as to increase the funds of the society and attend the meetings. Let all, both officers and members, do the best they can to secure a membership of 250 or 300, and make the show of 1885 a still greater success; the display of horses was very fine indeed, the teams being well matched and in good condition. Also a great number of very fine single drivers, there being about one hundred horses shown in all the different classes. The show of cattle was good, there being some very fine animals, both in thoroughbreds and grades. In sheep and swine the numbers were not so large as we would have expected but those shown in the different classes were good. Poultry was very good. Grains Roots and Vegetables were extra good, both as regards quality and quantity. The dairy department was very good. Ladies' work, fine art and domestic manufactures were extra good, the Hall being literally crowded. The show of fruit and flowers exceded our expectations; we had a very large and magnificent display. The mechanics' department was very well represented, Mr. Mundy of Port Hope had a very fine collection of photographs on exhibition. We take this opportunity of thanking all our numerous friends in Port Hope and Peterborough for their kind support also for their attendance at our show.

In now surrendering the trust you reposed in them in 1884, your directors avail themselves of the opportunity of thanking all classes of the community for their cordial cooperation and the general desire to add to the prosperity of the Baillieboro Union Society.

In concluding this report, we have reason to be thankful to God for the many blessings he has bestowed upon us and in giving us a bountiful harvest and allowing us to enjoy it in peace.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The council met on Monday, Feb. 16th. All the members present. A by-law was duly passed appointing the following pathmasters: Beat No. 1, Sam'l Porter, 2 Thos. Hutchinson, 3 Martin Parker, 4 Jos. C. Harnard, 5 Robt. Fisher, 6 Wm. Moncrieff, 7 Sam'l White, w. hf 8 James Perrin, e. hf 8 A. Tinnie, sr., 9 A. Tinnie, jr., 10 Jos. Dawson, 11 Jos. Wood, 12 Jos. Clarke, 13 David Truscott, 14 Sam'l Smithson, 15 Wm. Crebor. 16 D. F. Morison, w. hf 17 Wm. Robinson, e. hf 17 Wm. Morison, 18 Wm. Rutherford, 19 Rich. Mullen, 20 Wm. Smithson, 21 John Buckham, 22 Arthur Graham, 23 Jas. Lang, 24 Thos. Magee, 25 John Maucy, 26 J. W. Lucas, part 26 Henry Perrin.

The auditors' report was presented, showing a balance in the treasurer's hands of $362.18. Report adopted and 100 copies ordered to be printed. Messrs. Baxter and Riddell, committee on west boundary, reported that they had met the committee from the Cavan council and inspected the bridge over Needler's creek. They found the bridge too low and have called for tenders to raise it, with posts for embankment. Mr. Baxter reported that this bridge had been damaged by the parties moving the Orange Hall. The reeve was instructed to communicate with the parties and have them repair the damage at once, or as soon as the weather will permit.

On motion the dog-tax was declared in force in the township, and that the owners of sheep destroyed by dogs be compensated at a rate of one half of the value.

On the petition of Mr. Fisher and 24 others, a grant of $20 was made for the village, for work the amount payable to Mr. L. Byers.

The reeve and clerk were empowered to borrow what money might be needed. The following bills were ordered paid:—Auditors' salary, $6; D. Baxter, committee work, half day, $1; John Riddell, committee work, half day, $1; L. Byers, for sidewalk, $20; J. Riddell, councillor's pay, $10.

SPRINGVILLE

(From an Occasional Correspondent.)

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

MY DEAR SIR,—What has become of your Springville correspondent that he has not told you long ere this of the "Mutual and Self-improving Society" established here some months ago? The society counts already between 40 and 50 members. It meets for business in the Orange Hall, kindly granted for the purpose. The society owes its origin to the minister of the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Wm. Bennett. The object of the society will appear from some of the regulations drawn up by Rev. Mr. Bennett, and unanimously adopted:—

(1.) The society shall be composed of those of either sex above the age of 15 years, who are willing to give and receive help in the cultivation of the mind and the soul.

(2.) The society shall meet for the prosecution of its work, in some place appointed for the purpose, at least once every month.

(3.) The exercises of the society on each evening of meeting may be either religious or secular, or both combined, as the society itself or a committee thereof may determine.

(4.) It will be lawful for the society to seek the furtherance of the object contemplated in its formation by means of lectures, concerts, debates, essays, books on subjects, either secular or religious.

(5.) The officers of the society shall be: a president, secretary, treasurer and committee, with such others as may from time to time be found necessary.

(6.) The several meetings shall be opened with singing, reading and prayer.

The society has had several most interesting meetings. Not long since a discussion on the Scott Act, and another one, "Napoleon versus Wellington," and still another on "Town versus Country Life.

A few weeks ago Mr. Cleland, of Port Hope, lectured on behalf of the library fund. The subject of his lecture was "Anglo-Israel," showing conclusively that the people of England are not the lost tribes.

When giving you notes from Springville we may tell you also of the formation of a "Ladies' Aid Society" in connection with the Presbyterian congregation.

Under the auspices of this Society a most successful tea meeting was held on the 29th of January, proceeds on behalf of the general fund of the congregation. On the following Tuesday evening a social was given on behalf of the Sabbath School, which was also well patronized.

On Thursday evening the choir of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough was the great attraction. Taken as a whole, this tea meeting has been pronounced to be the best that has ever been held in Springville.

There was an exceedingly good programme also on Tuesday evening. Springville is looking up.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met in Warsaw, Dummer, Feb. 14th, 1885. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The Reeve nominated Benj. James Jr., Auditor, in place of Wm. Snelgrove, resigned. Samuel Hamblin made application to purchase the timber on a street in Warsaw, and the Commissioner for Division No. 4 was authorized to sell the same. Robert McCracken was granted the original allowance of road on the 12th Con. like opposite lot 29, in lieu of the present road through lot 29 in 12th Con. until the same is required by Council for a road. A Statute Labor tax and interest of $1.10 was refunded to Peter Ferguson on north-west quarter 11, Con. 8, for 1883.

John Clements was granted the original allowance for sideroad between lots 10 and 11 in 1st Con., commencing on west end of present clearing, and thence westward to Indian River, until the same is required by Council for a road. The following orders were granted:—

To Allen Kidd, for cleaning Hall	$1.25
" M. Emery, for keep of Alex. Slavin	9.00
" A. R. Kidd, for attending adjourned Land Sale	3.00

Bylaws passed: One to repeal part of a Bylaw and to appoint an Auditor. Council adjourned to meet in Warsaw on the 28th instant.

APSLEY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A grand ball was held here on the 12th ult. in the Town Hall, which was tastefully decorated with flags and evergreens by Mr. Bean, who is assisting T. Hewson Esq. D. L. S. on numerous surveys in this part of the country.

The reason of the ball being held was the re-opening of the Eastland House under an entire new management, Mr. W. P. Grey from Madoc having purchased the contents from Mr. T. H. Pratt (the late proprietor.) Mr. Grey is the right man in the right place and with his kind and genial manners, is likely to do a good business, and being full of enterprise will no doubt do a great deal of good to this county at large.

Mrs. Grey in the culinary department cannot be beaten which was fully shown on the night of the dance, in the fine manner the supper was got up. There were about 30 couple sat down to the table and we think they did ample justice to the viands supplied to them. There were many came from a distance. Mr. Scrimager and Mr. O'Neil furnished the music on fiddle and organ and the light fantastic toe, was indulged in until daylight, when all hands having thoroughly enjoyed themselves, departed for home.

We here fully wish Mr. and Mrs. Grey success in their new undertaking.

BRIDGENORTH.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

During the past week the roads between here and Bobcaygeon have been badly blocked up with snow.

Ice twenty inches thick and of a splendid quality has been taken from Chemong lake at this place.

Prof. Crowe and his family will give an entertainment in the Town Hall here on Friday evening, 27th inst. We would advise the young men of this vicinity to take advantage of this opportunity to treat their lady friends to this grand musical entertainment.

The parlor social held last Thursday evening at Mr. A. Nicholls' was well attended, and was in every way a success. Those present were entertained by vocal and instrumental music, readings, and a stump speech, and everyone appeared well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A SURPRISE.

On Friday evening last the choir of the Presbyterian church, as a body, paid a surprise visit to Mrs. A. Scott (late Miss Jennie Eaton), at her residence, in Asphodel, and took advantage of her recent secession to the ranks of the benedicts, to give her not only a most unexpected call, but to express in word and deed some appreciation of her lengthened and worthy services as a member of the choir and a zealous official of the Presbyterian Church. An address, couched in most praiseworthy language, commenting in highly commendatory terms upon her past services both in the choir, Sabbath school and church, was read by Miss Edith Roxburgh, while Miss Annie Raddon presented her with a costly and handsome gold watch. After the reading of the address Mrs. Scott, though unmistakably taken by surprise, made the following reply:—

"MY DEAR FRIENDS,—I cannot find words to express my thanks for your very handsome token of your respect which you have presented to me, and I assure you I shall always prize it, not only for its money value, but also in remembrance of the many happy hours I have spent with you in the different departments of the church services in which I have taken part. I do not feel that I have done anything to deserve such kindness, but I tender you my hearty thanks, and sincerely pray for the future prosperity of the church."

After the presentation Mrs. Scott made her friends feel perfectly at home, by according the hospitality of her new home in a most liberal and substantial manner, and a delightful evening was spent in singing and social conversation.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

On Tuesday of last week a boiler but recently placed in the saw-mill on the 9th line, Dummer, owned by Messrs. Roxburgh, Rork & Ferguson, exploded, severely scalding a workman engaged in the mill, named Ed. Fornier, and so severely injuring another workman, named Wm. Black, as to cause his death in about forty-eight hours after the explosion took place. There were several other men engaged in the mill, but they fortunately escaped injury, some state by a good use of their legs—in fact, it is thought one man is on the run from the catastrophe even yet. Fornier is rapidly improving. Black, who was about 37 years of age, leaves a wife and several children to mourn his untimely end.

TEA MEETING.

The Presbyterian church of this place held their annual teameeting on Monday evening, and, as usual, was very numerously attended. A most substantial tea was provided by the members of the church, and ample justice was done to the delicious spread. After tea, the Rev. Mr. Milligan, of Toronto, delivered a most interesting and instructive lecture upon the subject, "What the Sunbeams Say." The rev. gentleman, by his beautifully descriptive details of the sun's reflective powers, kept his large audience deeply interested in his subject. The Rev. Mr. Gee and the Rev. Mr. McCleary, of Norwood, and the Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Hastings, also delivered addresses. Proceeds of the festival amounted to $95.

NOTES.

As the C.P.R. local was approaching Norwood from the west on Saturday evening the axle of one of the freight cars broke and the car left the track. The disabled car was temporarily fixed up and brought into the station yard here. The accident caused but little delay to the running of the train, and fortunately no casualty happened to life or limb. The trains are now keeping good time.

Col. Rogers, of the 57th Rangers, was in town on Tuesday and inspected the armoury of No. 6 Company, which he found in good condition.

Quite an interest is being taken in this community in the Scott Act, and it is expected there will be a good representation of temperance people from the East Riding at the meeting in Peterborough on Wednesday next.

A revival under some branch of the Saved Army is now going on at Havelock, and the meetings are well attended.

The Messrs. Harper, of this place, have received the contract for building the new Presbyterian church at Peterborough.

The first crow has appeared here, and now we are awaiting the arrival of the first robin.

Shipping of grain will take place from the Norwood elevator as soon as the necessary cars will be forwarded here.

Look out for the small block pattern, on a plain ground, in Mantle Cloths, Silks, Satins, Cashmeres, Delaines Prints and Ribbons. All who wish to see the Latest Spring Styles will find them at Turnbull's.

HASTINGS.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The Scott Act is the principal topic of conversation at present.

On Sunday last temperance sermons were preached in the morning at the English church by Rev. Mr. McCleary, and in the evening at the Methodist church by the Rev. Mr. Lewis.

On Tuesday evening, in the Town Hall, the Rev. S. D. Chown, M. A., gave an excellent address in support of the Act to a good audience. The proofs were convincing, and good results, no doubt, will follow.

"St. Paul" is wonderfully excited over the agitation, and no doubt will lay in a plentiful supply of the "crater" before the law comes into effect.

We notice, by posters, that Elder Hawkins and troupe of colored singers will visit this section next week, and give one concert; at Westwood on the 5th, and another here on the 6th. Doubtless large audiences will greet the Elder on both occasions.

The many friends of deputy postmaster Morrison will be glad to learn that he is now considered out of danger and hopes soon to be at his post again.

The public are curious to learn why Mr. John Sharpe, who for so many years acted as returning officer for the village and with such commendable impartiality, has been set aside to make room for the Star man during the voting on the Scott Act. Our Mr. Cochrane, M. P., must be shaping matters for the next parliamentary election. For the credit of the village it is to be hoped the Star man will make less blunders on election day than he did when printing the bills, tickets, etc., for the late Purdy and Mulhern concert at Warkworth.

WESTWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Arrangements have been made to hold a Temperance Convention in the Temperance Hall, Water St. Peterborough, on Friday, March 6th, commencing at 2 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of having petitions circulated for the submitting of the "Scott Act" to the electors of Peterborough County.

The meeting will be addressed by prominent members of the "Dominion Alliance" and others.

It is hoped that representatives will be present from all parts of the county.

[Since the above communication was received, the secretary has changed the above date to Wednesday March, 4th, the date of the General Convention called by the town Scott Act committee.

LAKEFIELD

FORESTRY.

Lakefield Court held their anniversary on Thursday evening last. There was a large attendance of Foresters with their wives and families. Music, vocal and instrumental, games, &c., made the evening pass off very pleasantly indeed. Lakefield Court is in a flourishing condition, we believe being one of the largest in membership in Ontario.

ACCIDENTAL POISONING.

On Wednesday, the 18th inst Mr. T. Reycroft, who has been ill for some time took by mistake carbolic acid from the effects of which he died on Saturday the 21st inst. There is a deep feeling of sympathy for the bereaved family. The deceased was very much respected by his fellow citizens.

EXTENSION OF BUSINESS.

Mr. W. H. Casement is going to open up a tin shop and keep a stock of stoves &c &c.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Carnival next Friday, 27th. We are having magnificent weather, and the appearance of the world of nature on Wednesday morning in particular, was as if an enchanter's wand had been waved over all the earth, loading even the smallest twig with glistening, sparkling rime, which glorified every object it covered, and made this wintery world of ours seem to have a touch of Paradise.

We do not mean the "rime" of the ancient Mariner nor yet the "rhyme" of poetic fancy, so truly delightful when penned by genius, but the pure, beautiful, all-charitable cloak of lustrous rime which is folded round all lonely or prominent objects in nature whether great or small, after a night of mist in winter.

The missionary meeting held in the Presbyterian church last Tuesday evening was not so largely attended as we could wish, owing, we understand to insufficient publication. However, the audience who were present were what a speaker most likes, attentive, appreciative and generous. The Rev. Mr. Ewing addressed the assembly in a clear and powerful manner, giving a most comprehensive view of the workings of the church in home and foreign lands. The rev. gentleman is well known in Keene, and alluded kindly to the olden times when he had visited this church, the faces he recognized and the many friends who were missing to be found in the Beyond. He complimented the people on their evidence of religion in their midst, shown by their beautiful new building of worship, which would do credit to a great city, and hoped many souls would be brought to see the truth in that building, and much good done through it. Rev. Mr. Andrews then followed in a forcible and eloquent speech, in which he earnestly counselled all to do what they could for the great cause of missions; he also gave us some specimens of Scottish wit, apropos to the subject, and concluded his address in a masterly appeal to the generous hearts of his audience. Mr. James McNeil then read the report of the proceeding year, it which it appeared that the ladies of this congregation were faithful workers in the great cause, having raised most of the funds spoken of in the report. He gave brief and succinct account of the disposal of those funds which were appropriated to both home and foreign needs, and the report was received and adopted unanimously, Dr. McCrea moving and Rev. Mr. Ewing seconding the motion. The proceeds of the plate collection of the evening were about thirty-three dollars, a most generous one when we remember the sparseness of the attendance.

A gloom has been cast over the whole community by the sudden death of Mr. David Moore, whose dangerous illness was mentioned in our last report. He died a day before we saw the printed issue of the report. His remains were followed to the grave last Friday by one of the largest funerals ever seen in the township. His stricken widow and family have the sincerest sympathy of all who know them in their sudden and great bereavement.

"NO MEDICAL HEALTH OFFICER."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR.—Under this heading the following item appeared in a London (Ontario) correspondence to the Daily Globe of the 12th inst. It reads thus:—"The Council voted down the suggestion of the Board of Health, which recommended the appointment of a Medical Health officer."

We would respectfully recommend our Peterborough Council to follow the very sensible example of the London Council. Every body knows that London is not nearly so well situated in a sanitary point of view as the town of Peterborough, and yet our friends in the west very wisely refused to appoint a Medical Health officer.

They didn't want to pay a medical man hundreds of dollars every year, to write imaginary bug-bear stories, and to frighten the wits out of their wives and children, about malaria and microbacteria (whatever that means) and dozens of other jaw-breaking words. The real meaning of which, is to the doctor himself, poor man, as well as to all other mortals, impenetrable mystery.

It is well known that about a year ago a sort of sanitary craze passed over the country. It became infectious in towns and villages, and we must confess that Peterborough in its turn caught the disease. And last summer the air was darkened with prophetic rumours about malarial diseases and about Asiatic cholera, and all the other ills that flesh is heir to. And if any body thought it worth while to read the dismal literature which the Board of Health and the Medical Health officers, kindly bestowed on us, he would doubtless be led to think that his earthly career was about over.

But it is fortunate for us all, that the sanitary craze itself is now passing away. People are returning to their senses and they will not willingly increase their taxes for the purpose of supporting a Medical Health officer, and all the preposterous expenditure connected with such appointment. The Medical Health officer in Toronto has a salary of about fifteen hundred dollars a year and is clamoring for more. And this will be the fate of Peterborough if the thin end of the wedge could be introduced for a sufficient length of time to afford an opportunity. Let us be wise before it is too late.

CANADA AND EGYPT.

THE OFFER OF A CANADIAN REGIMENT.

Why it was Declined.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Much regret is expressed here at the refusal of the Government to accept the offer of Canadian troops for the Soudan. The opinion held by the Government is that it would be useless, and even foolish for colonial troops to proceed just now to the Soudan, and spend the hot season there. The ordeal even to the most seasoned veterans, will be a very severe one, and to place the comparatively untried recruits of a colonial regiment in such critical circumstances would be too great a risk. But there is still a possibility of the Government accepting the proffered colonial co-operation when active operations are resumed in the autumn.

THE FRANCO-CHINESE WAR.

The Recent Naval Engagement Relating the Foreign Enlistment Act.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Admiral Courbet reports that in the recent engagement with the Chinese gunboats the French steam launches ran the gauntlet of a heavy musketry and artillery fire. The French torpedo boats opened the sides of the Chinese men-of-war, and the sea rushing into the engine rooms, the ships sank in a few minutes. They were wooden vessels built in 1874.

The British Minister at Pekin has asked Tsung Li Yamen to annul the proclamation issued by the Governor of Canton, exhorting Chinamen to poison the French in Tonquin, Sargon, Signapore and Penang.

The Government has instructed the British authorities at Hong Kong to relax the regulations of the Foreign Enlistment Act so as to permit French men-of-war to coal and repair in ports under English control on condition that the French squadron exercises the right of search without impeding English vessels.

LORD LORNE'S OPINIONS

On the Relations of Canada and the United States.

The New York Tribune prints an interesting article written by the Marquis of Lorne on the relations of Canada to the United States. It says the frank recognition of our neighbor's interest and position is the best way to avoid differences with him and to keep the mutual respect on which the friendship rests. The relations between that Empire, of which Canada now forms an important part, and the United States seem to realize the conditions favorable to progress and peace in the harmless rivalry of two kindred peoples. American capital is largely invested in the British coal mines of Vancouver Island, and the American market at San Francisco is supplied with coal at the same rates as those paid by our own navy vessels and railway lines. Cross over the forest filled valleys of the Cascade range, the cattle pastures near Okanagan and the Columbia as it roars through the gorges of the Rocky Mountains, and we come to the Province of Alberta, rich in coal and ranches. Here the old Indian depredator has almost disappeared, but the white ruffian, the whisky smuggler and the horse stealer, represent the criminal classes, and these gentlemen ply their vocation along the whole prairie frontier until we arrive at Manitoba. An agreement between our Governments is needed to make these disturbers of the public peace amenable to the law and extraditable. The frontier once crossed gives them protection for their persons. Lakes Superior, Huron, Erie and Ontario separate the citizens for about 1,000 miles, and here we have what is called the "salvage question," this being mainly a struggle between owners of steam tugs belonging to the opposite shore to get the lion's share of the money for saving property. Obligations recognized by International law have been observed to the letter by the United States Government in the matter of attempted Fenian raids. Lord Lorne discusses the treaty in regard to Atlantic fisheries. He favors a mixed commission to determine what local laws should be maintained in the common interest of all.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

Dynamite Cartridge Found in the Post-Office New Smelting Company.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—This afternoon an expressman about to ascend the stairs in the Post-office building leading to the Customs office picked up a suspicious looking instrument, which he at once handed to the authorities. It was a small cylindrical affair, about four inches long and the thickness of a man's finger. Examination proved it to be a dynamite cartridge. It was conveyed to the office of the Superintendent of the Dominion Police.

Mr. E. A. C. Pew, who is at present in Ottawa, and Mr. Eccles, of New York, have organized a company to erect smelting works at Irouside, and construct a line of railway (three feet—narrow gauge, from Gatineau Point to Whitefoot lake, a distance of forty miles. They will make application to Parliament for a charter during the present session. The capital of the company will be $500,000.

Last fall the steamer Osborne was run into and sunk in the Sault Ste. Marie river during a dense fog by the Canada Pacific steamer Alberta. The latter vessel was libelled by the Osborne's owners for the damages, and judgment was rendered yesterday at Detroit, declaring both vessels in fault and decreeing that the damages be divided.

Rev. Dr. Talmage has sent a letter to the Legislature of New Jersey in answer to the strictures recently made on him. He produces extracts from the proceedings of that body showing that the speaker indulged freely in the use of profane language. The eminent divine expresses utter contempt for the members who made an "assinine exhibition of themselves" last Tuesday, and says they would disgrace a mule driver on the Raritan Canal. The only merciful explanation of their behavi

"THE DOWNFALL OF RELIGION."

"The sun shall be turned into darkness."—Acts ii., 20.

Solar eclipse is here prophesied to take place just before the destruction of Jerusalem. Josephus, the worldly historian, says that this prophecy was literally fulfilled, and that the skies were full of strange appearances about this time. Of course the sun was not obliterated, but clouds rolled between it and the earth. Christianity is the rising sun in our time, but there are many who, by the uprolling vapors of scepticism, and the smoke of their blasphemy, are attempting to turn it into darkness.

Suppose the archangels of malice and horror were unloosed and permitted to extinguish the sun in the natural heavens. They throw on that great lamp of our planetary system oceans from other worlds, and the waters roll rushing down into the ravines and chasms of that great luminary, and explosion follows explosion, until only a few sparks of fire are left, and how they are cooling off and going down, until the vast continents of flame are reduced to a small acreage of fire, and this has been reduced to a few coals, and they are whitening and soon go out—not a spark left in the mountains of ashes, and the valleys of ashes, and the caverns of ashes, an extinguished sun, a buried sun. Let all worlds wail at the stupendous obsequies.

Under this withdrawal of solar light and heat, our earth, of course, takes universal chill, and tropics become the temperate and the temperate becomes the arctic, and there are frozen rivers, and frozen lakes, and frozen oceans. The inhabitants gather in from arctic and antarctic regions toward the centre to find the equator as the poles. The slain forests are heaped into huge bonfires, around which shivering villages and cities gather. The wealth of all the coal mines is hastily pou redinto furnaces and stirred into rays of combustion, but even the bonfires are lowering, and the furnaces are cooling off, and the nations are dying. Vesuvius and Cotopaxi and Stromboli and the California geysers cease their smoke, and the ice of the hailstorms remains unmolested in the craters. All the flowers have breathed their last breath. All the leaves of the forest have fallen. Ships on the sea with sailors frozen the masts, and the helmsman frozen at the heel, and passengers frozen in the cabin.

All the nations dying, first at the north and then at the south. Children frosted and dead in there cradles. Workmen with frozen arm holding the hammer, or frozen foot on the shuttle. Winter in all zones. Winter from sea to sea. All-congealing winter. Perpetual winter. Hemisphere shackled to hemisphere. Globe of frigidity. Universal Nova Zembla. The whole earth an ice-floe grinding against ice-floes. So the archangels of malice and horror have put out the natural sun and destroyed our world, and they may take their throne of glacier, and their crown of ice, and their sceptre of icicle.

What the obliteration of the natural sun would do for the natural world, the destruction of Christianity would do for the moral world. The sun turned into darkness. At the present time infidelity is a joke. There are people who will give fifty cents to hear by epigram and quibble and badinage and harlequinade. If correctly reported, one of the loudest laughs in Brooklyn Theatre Sabbath night was at the Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world, the One who came to carry our sorrows, and read from that lecture the following in regard to Christ: "When He was here He was forgiving and half human. But now he is God. Instead of saying, 'Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do,' He sends them to eternal fire. It is wonderful the difference office makes with some people. (Laughter.)"

Now, there is one law that ought either to be erased from the statute book or else executed, and that is the law against blasphemy: what is blasphemy? I went into the law library and I find this authority: "Blasphemous words against God, contumelious reproaches and profane ridicule of Christ or the Holy Scriptures are offences, punishable at common law, whether uttered by words or in writing." If a poor drunken man stood on the street corner this morning and took the name of God irreverently on his lips in the presence of passers-by he would be grabbed and hustled to the police station. But there is not a city authority in the United States that has backbone enough to stop the indecent and blasphemous utterance of last Sunday night, though it is being delivered in all the cities. Ribaldry and profanity for those who defame the most insignificent man in the city, but defamation of God has perfect immunity. It would have been the finest drama ever enacted on the stage of that Brooklyn Theatre, if, in the midst of such utterances, my friend Patrick Campbell, chief of police, who believes in God and Christ, had, with platoon of his officers, stepped upon the stage and gently putting his hands upon the shoulder of the lecturer, said: "In the name of the common law of this country and in the name of the families of Brooklyn this infamy must stop and stop here and stop now."

"But," says some one, "are you not in favor of free speech?" Oh, yes; I am in favor of all styles of freedom—free driving of horses, but not liberty to run over people in the street—free fire in your stove, but not incendiarism or the burning of the property of others—free air, but not permission to poison that which others breathe—free use of knives, but no right to stab others—free use of gunpowder, but no allowance for assassination—free speech, but no permission for obscenity, or slandr, or false swearing, or blasphemy—free to do right and act according to law, but never free to do wrong and against law. I call the attention of judges, and attorneys, and police commissioners, and mayors of cities to the importance of either driving the law against blasphemy from the statute book, or putting it into immediate execution.

There is a class of persons in all our community hoping for the overthrow of the

and many who are bold to say that the world will be better off without it than with it. I want to show them the end of this road, the terminus of this crusade and what will be the state of things on the supposition that they triumph.

First, woman's complete and

UNUTTERABLE DEGRADATION.

I will prove it by arguments and facts that no sound or honest being will dispute. In the communities and the cities and the nations where the Christian religion has reigned, woman's condition has been ameliorated and improved, and she is honored and deferred to in a thousand things, and there is not a gentleman who does not take off his hat in her presence. She may in the United States and England suffer some injustice, but she has more of her rights in Christendom than anywhere else. If your associations have been good, you know that the words wife and mother and sister and daughter are suggestive of the most gracious surroundings. The best schools and seminaries of the United States are for young women.

Then take woman's condition in lands where Christianity has made no or little headway, China, Egypt, Turkey, Assyria, Borneo, Barbary. The Burmese sell wives and daughters like sheep The Hindoo Bible forbids a woman to hear music or sit at a window during the absence of her husband, and allows a divorce if the wife eats before her husband finishes his meals. The Hindoo wife is consumed on the funeral pyre of her husband. The horse, the cow, the dog, the cat, are better off. They were intended for brutes, and only expect to be treated as brutes. But see the white bundles on the rivers in the morning in China,

INFANTICIDE AFTER INFANTICIDE.

Female children are cast off because they are females. See the women harnessed to plows like oxen. Hidden from sight of men by barricades and by veils and by all styles of cruel seclusion. Their birth a disaster, their life a torture, their death a horror. The missionary of the cross in heathen lands today preaches to an audience divided into two parts, the men, who may sit as they will and do as they will, and the women, cruelly hidden in a side apartment, where they can hear and cannot be seen. No intelligence, no liberty, no refining influences, no hope for this life and no hope for the life to come. Ringed nose and cramped foot, disfigured face, maltreated mind and embruted soul. How far back toward that condition would women go if the Bible and Christianity were withdrawn is only a question in dynamics. If an object be lifted to a certain point and be not fastened there, and the lifting power be withdrawn, how far will the objects fall? Clear back to the point from whence it was lifted. Christianity found woman in the last point of degradation and raised her almost to the skies. Now, let the power that brought her up be withdrawn and she will fall clear down to the depths from which she was resurrected.

Again, the downfall of religion and triumph of infidelity mean the demoralization of society. The most obnoxious thing to infidelity is the idea of retribution. Now, take all fear of voluntary punishment out of society and let the rule be that all go as they please, and how long before disintegration? I declare it—take the fear of hell out of the minds of men and the majority of them would soon make this world a hell. The vast majority of those who are offended at the idea of future punishment have such unclean hearts or lives that they are opposed to future retribution for the same reason that a criminal don't like a penitentiary. All this brave talk about not fearing punishment for sin in the next world is only a coward whistling to keep his courage up.

I have seen men talk very brave about the future and defy God and flaunt their immoralities in the face of society and challenge the eternal, but in their last moments they shrieked until you could hear them for two blocks away, and the neighbors on a hot summer night had to put their windows down because they could not endure the sounds, and had rather see a railroad train with five hundred Christians on board go down through a draw-bridge into a watery grave than to see one infidel or one atheist die, though it were on a pillow of eider-down and under a canopy of vermillion. I would not want to see the first catastrophe yet I would be sure of their happy destination. I have never been able to brace my nerves up for the latter spectacle; the terror of the brow is so unparalled, the clutch of the fist is so diabolic, the strength of the voice is so unearthly. "There is no hell! There is no hell! There is no hell!" he had said over and over again for 40 years, but there was something in that dying scene of my infidel neighbor which seemed to say, "There is! There is! There is! There is!" Mightiest barrier to atheis, and libartinism, and outlawry and crime of all sorts, are the

RETRIBUTIONS OF ETERNITY.

Men may escape the law, for that is done every day, but there is something down in the offender's nature which says. "You cannot escape God! He stands at the end of your road of prodigacy." He will by no means clear the guilty. Take the Bible idea of retribution out of the world, and Brooklyn, and New York, and Boston, and Chicago, and Charleston, and New Orleans would become Sodoms right speedily. The only restraints on the evil passions of the world to-day are Bible restraints.

Suppose now, these giants in blasphemy succeeded in marshalling a majority of the world on their side. There they are in companies, in regiments, in brigades. Forward march, ye great army of infidels and atheists! Banners flying before, banners flying behind, inscribed with "No God," "No Saviour," "Do as you please," "No punishment," "No moral law," "Down with the Bible." The sun turned into darkness. Forward, march! The first assault is upon the churches. Down with all the houses of worship that have been occupied by people who were deluded into being comforted over their bereavements and their sorrows. They deserve to be extirpated because they spent much of their life in reforming inebriety and in saving the lost, and holding before the struggling the idea of eternal rest after the paroxysm of life is over.

Forward, march, ye hosts of infidels and atheists! Take the Bible, on which witnesses are sworn, out of the Court House, and let loose testimony be unhindered. Forward! And down go ten thousand asylums and hospitals of mercy supported by churches and Christian philanthropists, prayers every morning by the sick and prayers over the dead. Never mind the blind eyes and the deaf ears and the weakened intellects and the crippled limbs. Let paralyzed old age pick up its own food, and orphans find their own way and the half-reformed go back to their old iniquities. With the broad axe hew down the Cross and split up the Bethlehem stable. Tear down from Vatican and Florence and Venice and Dresden and all the picture galleries of the world, the mightiest works of art, for they are religious—Claude's "Burning Bush" and Ghirlandajo's "Adoration of the Magi," and Paul Veronese's "Marriage in Cana," and Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment." And drive back all the oratorios of Handel and Haydn and Beethoven into the crypts of the ruined churches, for they tell of the Messiah or the Creation or Jeptha or Samson or other Bible heros or heroines.

FORWARD, MARCH!

Forward, march, ye hosts of infidels and atheists, into the graveyards and cemeteries and tear down the sculpture from Greenwood's gate representing the Resurrection and break up the artist's figure of Old Mortality and his chisel at the entrance of Laurel Hill, and then march on and when you find an epitath "Asleep in Jesus," chisel out the words, and when you find a stone that speaks of Heaven, cut it away, and when you find an inscription on the child's resting place, "Suffer little children to come unto Me," substitute the words "Delusion and sham," and if you find an angel in marble, strike off the wings, and on the door of all the family vaults inscribe "No hope," "Dead once, dead forever." And then open the graves and sit down on the broken slabs for banquet and carnival. And pour into the skulls of the dead the wine of derision and hate, and altogether, lifting chalices of skeleton, drink to Doom Darkness and Annihilation, a life without comfort, a death without peace, and for body, mind and soul and family extinction. Make all the places of Christian burial the graveyards in which lie the whole family of Christian graces. Prayer dead, faith dead, repentance dead, self-denial dead, hope dead, society dead, honesty dead and happiness dead. "Turn the sun into darkness."

That is what infidelity wants. That is what it will accomplish if it can. Civilization will be hurled back into semi-barbarism and semi-barbarism into Hottentot savagery. The wheel of progress will turn the other way and roll toward the dark ages. The clock of the centuries will be set back two thousand years. Turn back the Sandwich Islands from their schools and libraries and reformed condition to what they were in 1820, when the missionaries of the cross began their work of gracious revolution. Call home the 500 Christian missionaries in India and overthrow their two thousand stations and scatter the 140,000 pupils gathered out of barbarism into Christian schools. Level to the ground on the coasts of all heathendom the Gospel batteries which were planted to capture all Asia and Africa for civilization. Disband the twenty evangelizing societies in South Africa for the salvation of bushmen and Hottentots. Send back the converted Chippewas, and Delawares and Oneidas to their war-paint and barbarity and nakedness. Let the 300 Polynesian islands that have relinquished heathenism be given back to their former cruelties.

Never has such a nefarious plot been laid for the destruction of the planet, and never has such an all-destructive engineery been set in motion as that which infidelity is working. When infidelity has conquered this world it will be a habitation of three wards, the one a madhouse, another a lazaretto, the third a pandemonium. The concert of this band of infidel music has not yet fairly begun. You have only heard them stringing their instruments. I put before you their whole programme from first to last. In theatres the tragedy comes first and the farce last, but in the drama of death the farce leads off and the tragedy follows. In the farce the infidels laugh and mock, but in the tragedy God will laugh and mock. He says so:—"I will laugh at their calamity and mock when their fear cometh." From such opening chasms of individual, social, national and world-wide ruin, stand back. The time will come when the infidel will be treated as a criminal against society as well as against God. Society will push out the leper and the man with soul gangrened, icherous, vermin-covered and rotting apart will fall into the ditch and, men will come with spades and cover him up where he is, that the air be not poisoned with the carcass; the only fit text for his funeral, Jeremiah xxii and 19: "With the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem."

But a thousand voices cry: "Will all these allied forces of infidelity and atheism succeed in destroying Christianity? Will the Church become extinct, the Bible obsolete and civilization only a memory?" Yes! When the smoke rolling up from the city chimneys can arrest and annihilate the noon day sun. At the destruction of Jerusalem, Josephus says the text was fulfilled, "The sun shall be turned into darkness." His eyes were shut out for a while, but did that destroy the sun? No; that great luminary, which at the beginning shot like an electric spark from God's finger is rolling on to-day warming continents, gilding oceans, and with a glorious light deluging the world. Light for mountain and valley. Light for this world. Light for a whole circle of worlds. Not faded light, but the blending of violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red, just as true as when first evoked from the white light by the solar spectrum. Light not worn out by the ages, but stepping 190,000 miles a second. Light pulsating 451 trillion undulations in a second. At the beginning God said: "Let there be light." And light was and light shall be. And so Christianity goes right on to warm and cheer all nations. Men may shut their window blinds of prejudice, so they cannot see it, and may smoke their pipe of speculation till they are in the shadow of their own vaporing, but the Lord God is the sun and all the earth shall yet bask in its warmth and brighten in its illuminations. Aye, when fully let loose it will be a swift gospel, and who can calculate the speed of its undulations. Aye, the pure white light of the gospel, holding in it all the beauties of earth and heaven, the violet plucked from amid the spring greens, and indigo of southern jungles, and blue of skies and green of forest foliage and yellow autumnal forests, and orange of trophical groves and the red sunsets, all brought out under the spiritual spectrum. Great Britain will take Europe for God and the United States will take America for God. Then both nations together will take Asia for God. Then all three will take Africa for God. Who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubabel, thou shalt become a plain. The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1883. 48-52t

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. AYER'S Hair Vigor restores, with the glossy and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color or glossy black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and pliable in appearance, and imparts a delicate, fragrance, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRIGHAM writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1883: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time progrnits, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 16 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Five years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

A FAMOUS POKER GAME.

The Story of How William M. Scott Won $150,000 Recalled by His Death.

The name of William M. Scott, who died at Toronto recently, was heralded from one end of the continent to the other about two years ago, when he won the sum of $150,000 in a single game of poker. Scott was a native of Newburg, New York, where he lived when he played his famous game. The players in the game were three well-known citizens of that town, one of whom, the victim, had just become heir to half a million. This was a man named Weed. Scott also had money, and was surrounded by wealthy friends. The third member of the party was a former Sunday school teacher, a dentist named Dr. Montreville M. Hedges. It was shown afterward that the poker pot was adroitly run up to $150,000 on bets of at least $5,000 each. The dealer was Dr. Hedges, the shrewdest player of the three. As he deftly dropped the last card on the little round table he called out to know what the other players wanted. Scott said he only wanted one card. Of course the question arose, Was he drawing to fill a straight or a flush? Weed applied to the dealer for two cards, and the question to be decided in his case by the others was whether he was drawing to get four of a kind or to fill a full hand, a straight, or a flush. Hedges rested on his oars. He had enough, which was of course interpreted to mean that it was anything from a straight or a full hand up to a straight flush. The drawing over, the faces of the three brightened up, and it is safe to say that never before had three lonely men in a little game held three such hands of cards. When the betting got up to $6,000 or $8,000,

WEED WANTED TO STOP,

"because," as he said, 'there is not one of us that will pay if we lose such an amount." It was not stopped, however. After a little Hedges, who had stood pat with his hand and engaged in the betting as it went around until the pot was pushed up to $150,000, called Scott. Then came the lay down, and afterward Hedges' memorable words to Weed. "This is dreadful, ain't it?" Of course, the simple-minded Weed was taken in. He had received a fine hand that would have nerved even the most timid gambler up to a strong betting point. It was four of a kind, and they were aces at that. In any ordinary game a bold better would have done as Weed did, go to the bitter end. Scott's one draw card was the corn breaker. Did it fill a full hand or a straight? was the question that ran through Weed's mind continuously, while the chips, representing thousands of dollars, were being thrown into the pot. "Of course, if it's either, my four aces will beat him," he argued, "while it isn't possible that Hedges drew better than four aces in the deal."

When the end came Weed was struck almost dumb. His four aces were worthless; Scott had drawn in the one card he took the right color and the proper number of spots to make his hand a straight flush, the only thing that would down four aces. Weed attempted to compromise by paying $2,600. He then thought the game had been honestly conducted. But Scott was obdurate and would not settle. He not only wanted the whole amount, but he wanted it then and there, or at least something in settlement that would to the payment of the debt. If he didn't get it he said he would publish Weed all over the town, where his family stood high in society. This was more than Weed could stand, and at the same time, it is said, there were other strings that were pulled to bring him to terms. Hedges told Scott to retire a minute, and he went out. Then Hedges approached Weed with smiles and offered his assistance. Of course, Hedges was also a loser of $150,000 to Scott, which made the latter's winnings on the game $300,000, but as it could not be paid, probably no notice was taken of such a trifling thing.

"This is dreadful, ain't it?" said Hedges and added: "There is only one way we can get that money back." Then he proposed to Weed to mark the cards and go at it again and clean Scott out. He took his knife and marked a card with it. "Now," said he, "we can tell in this way which are aces and which are kings, and we'll get square with him that way."

"No," said Weed, who still innocently believed he had been treated fairly and honestly; "no, if I can't play a square game, I won't play at all." The Doctor was now at his wits' end, and the victim of the plot walked out. At the bottom of the steps which led to the street he met Scott, who was still stubborn. His pleading with Scott was unavailing. Weed said to him that he'd always been his friend, and he didn't think it square to exact all of the $150,000 from him. They parted that night with no understanding about the payment of the money.

The next morning Weed met Hedges and Scott in the Hedges laboratory, where the game had been played. Scott still demanded payment of the full amount owed. Weed did not know what to do.

HE DARED NOT SEEK ADVICE

for fear of publicity, and the only way he could see out of the matter was to foot the bill and to let it be the last. Hedges stood ready to give his note in payment of his $150,000 loss. "And why shou dn't I?" mused Weed. "Probably Hedges will never pay his note, but that is no reason why I shouldn't act the part of an honorable player. Yes, that is best, and I'll do it." So Weed and Hedges both paid their debt of honor with notes.

In a few days a compromise was effected, and Scott let up on each to the amount of $30,000, he agreeing to accept $120,000 from each in payment of the debt. This Weed assented to, as did Dr. Hedges, who gave Scott his note for the full amount, and perhaps it is now among the dead man's effects. Weed paid $20,000 in cash and gave notes for the balance, which was paid with the exception of $15,000, which he refused to pay by the advice of a friend named Moore. The case finally got into the courts and Weed got some of the money.

But the poker game was a small one in comparison with the game that followed. It was a game of faro. Weed was again the loser to the enormous amount of $450,000. The game was played between Scott and Weed for the purpose of giving the latter a chance to win back his $150,000. If Weed won, it was to offset the claim against him and the two were to call it square. Weed jumped at the opportunity. The game was played in the dental laboratory, and the betting ran up very fast, until it stood $450,000 in favor of Scott. Of course, the money was never paid, but it was after this that the trouble over the poker debt got into the courts.

A MYSTERY OF THE PLAINS.

The Fate of a Wagon-Train of Nitro-Glycerine Revealed.

The following strange story was told a News reporter some time since by an old miner just from the hills: "Would you like to hear of a strange thing that happened me last week?" Of course the reply was in the affirmative; so, seating ourselves in the office of the St. James, and tilting our chairs at the proper angle, he said: "Some years ago, while prospecting near Idaho Springs, I came upon a rich lead. The rock, however, was hard, and had to be drilled, and necessarily required two men to do the work. While I was still in a quandary as to whom I could get, a stranger came up to where I was at work and asked me if I knew where he could get employment. I inquired whether he knew anything of mining and could hold and strike a drill.

"He assured me that he had worked in mines in California and Nevada for years, and thought he understood it. Something in the manner and conversation of the man made me take a strong and sudden fancy to him, and I never had cause to be sorry for it. He gave his name as Robert Williams, and had a mild and rather agreeable face, but with a melancholy that seemed to be the result of years of habit. As it is not customary in this country, especially in a mining district, to inquire particularly into a man's antecedents, I at once made a proposition to Williams to join me and work the new prospect on shares. He accepted the offer, and, as I said before, I never had occasion to regret the transaction. Always quiet, sober, and industrious, he became a favorite with everyone, the only remarkable thing about him being he never once in any way referred to his early life. Our mine turned out pretty well, and Williams and I continued partners in working that and other claims ever since until last week, when he died after a very short illness from pneumonia. On the last day, when he felt that he could not live, he called me to his bedside, and told me a wonderful story. He said: 'I was born in Pittsburg, Penn. My father was a large iron manufacturer, and gave me all the benefits of a good education that money could buy. When I became of age I was admitted to the firm. Shortly afterward, owing to fluctuations in the iron market, our firm was forced to suspend. The blow was a particularly severe one to me, as I was engaged to one of the most beautiful as well as wealthy ladies in the Iron city. At this time stories were rife of the immense riches of Colorado, and the Pike's peak and other excitements were drawing to that favored country a large number of the young men of the east. With bright visions of the future and of the fortune that I would make to replace that which I had lost, I started west. Upon arriving at St. Joe I found a number of trains fitting out for the promised land. While seeking to make some arrangements to cross the plains, I was accosted one day by a man who asked me if I was going to Colorado. Upon being told that that was my intention, he said: "I am about sending a wagon loaded with nitro-glycerine or blasting oil, as it is called, to the Colorado mines, and as the trip is attended with some danger I find it difficult to get anyone to take the risk. I will pay well for the service, and all expenses besides." Not knowing or realizing the danger, I eagerly seized the opportunity. Joining a party of emigrants who were about to cross the plains, without informing them of the dangerous character of the cargo contained in our wagon, I started one morning together with another man who was employed with me. When we camped for the night we always drew our wagon a little to one side, took our horses out and slept at some distance away. Toward the close of an afternoon in September, 1860, when near McCandless' ranch, on the Little Blue, the skies became dark, a thunder storm arose, and as fate would have it a bolt of lightning struck our wagon, exploded its contents, which consisted of 3,500 pounds of the dangerous substance, killing everyone of the small party, together with all of the horses and cattle, and reducing to fragments every wagon in the train. By a miracle I was riding considerably in advance at the time, seeking to get a shot at some antelope which were grazing in the distance. I became aware of a report louder and more distinct than thunder, and, turning on my horse, saw a dense cloud of smoke where the train should have been, but could not discover its whereabouts. Riding back, I beheld a horrible sight. Bodies of men without legs or arms lay scattered about, and mingled in the confusion of fragments of wagons and their freight were the still quivering carcasses of cattle and horses. You can judge of my horror at the spectacle. I was the only living survivor of the party. Almost bereft of my senses I rode on, and was seized with a new terror. What account could I give of the party or how explain their mysterious disappearance? Then I came to a resolution that was both cowardly and inhumane.

"'I would avoid going to the point of destination of the train and would conceal the facts of its fate in the fear that I might be accused of making away with it. Instead of stopping at the mining camps near Pike's peak, I made a detour around them, fearing to meet anyone who would question me, and went to California. Once in a great while I would see a newspaper in which the mysterious disappearance of the wagon train and those composing it was commented on, everyone believing they had been massacred by Indians. This secret I have kept locked in my breast all these long years, and it has tortured me at times almost beyond endurance.' At this point of his story Williams became so weak that he could not continue, and shortly after breathed his last."—Denver News

A Perfect Preservation.

Mr. Runaround was out late the other night, and the next morning at breakfast, in order to "justify" himself, he remarked to his wife:

"Pet, we have been married twenty years, and you look almost as young as you did then."

"You have not changed a particle," she responded sweetly.

"Not changed!" he answered in surprise, remembering his gray locks and ruby nose. "Why, how can you say that?"

"Because things preserved in alcohol never change," she answered.

Mr. R. but ared his napkin-ring under the impression that it was a muffin, and the meal progressed in silence.—Washington Hatchet.

The Troy, N Y., steam-heating works, which were built five years ago, at a cost of $175,000, have proved a failure, and will be abandoned this winter.

Pulling a Monkey's Tooth.

A few days ago an Italian vender of cheap music halted with his hand-organ and monkey in front of the dental parlors of Dr. J———, on West Jefferson street. The doctor is a man of science, and, having studied Darwin's theory, had frequently expressed a desire to pull and examine the eye tooth of a monkey, to see if he could trace any relationship between it and the similar tooth of a human being. Presently the band, or rather the organ, struck up a melancholy tune, and as the first notes reached the ears of the dentist and a patient whom he was operating upon, a large spider monkey, dressed in yellow, with a red cap stuck jauntily on its head, sprang in at the window and sat upon the sill, as if waiting an invitation to enter.

The doctor requested the patient to vacate the chair, and, when he had complied, motioned the "connecting link" to take a seat. The monkey did so, leaning back in the chair and opening its mouth as naturally as a human being. This was what the dentist wished, and seizing a pair of forceps he took a firm hold of an eye-tooth. The monkey screamed, and wrapped legs, arms and tail about the doctor's left arm in a deathlike grip, but the doctor would not let go, and after a desperate struggle the tooth was torn from its fastenings. The monkey fell back in a dead faint, and, after placing his prize in a drawer of the cabinet, the doctor threw some water in the animal's face, and when it had revived placed it back on the window sill.

The organ-grinder, seeing the monkey disappear, supposed he had got the coveted nickel, and accordingly jerked on the string attached to it, calling, "Come a la, come a la!" His pet, however, sat for a moment as if dazed, then seeming to realize his surroundings, began slowly to descend to his master, and getting near the organ he sprang upon it, the blood running from his mouth. The man examined it with surprise, then, looking up to the window, howled:

"Caramba! What e hell for pull monkey tooth? I not want monk-key tooth pull. You come a la down here I lickee you like hell!"

"What in the deuce did you send your monkey up here for? He can't talk and I thought he wanted a tooth pulled," responded the doctor.

"No! no! no! Caramba!" shouted the Italian, growing purple with excitement, and stamping the ground in his rage.

"Look here," shouted the doctor, "you come up here and pay me fifty cents for pulling that tooth or I'll have you arrested."

The organ-grinder for a moment looked at the doctor's threatening attitude in astonishment, and then shouldered his music-box and marched off grumbling. Just after dark the same evening there was a ring at the doctor's door-bell, and upon answering it the doctor found the son of sunny Italy standing upon the threshold. Fearing he had come to use his stiletto, the dentist retreated behind his operating chair, picked up a weapon and stood on the defensive; but the dispenser of stale music only looked around the parlor, grinned, with a merry twinkle in his eye, and inquired: "What e hell you do with e monkey cap?" The doctor found the cap, and the musician went on his way rejoicing.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

What are the North American Indians?

Dr. E. B. Tylor made some remarks before the American Association on North American races and civilization. In attempting to answer the question: "What are the North American Indians?" he stated that whenever he had been among the Indians the thought had always struck him that, if these people were dressed up as Asiastics, there would be little observable difference. Admitting this supposition the next question that arose would be: "How came they here?" To answer this question, Dr. Tylor warned his hearers that they must beware of taking for granted that the physical geography of this continent has not changed. The next question would be: "How it is that among tribes, physically so similar, there should be such a diversity in language as we find among the North American Indians?" For the solution of this question, we must look to the geologists to prove the antiquity of man. Dr. Tylor remarked that even if the North American Indian was the result of the migration of one stock to this continent, the remoteness of the time when that migration must have taken place, would fully account for the great diversity in speech. We are so accustomed to consider the patriarchal system the only natural one, that we do not look for any other, yet the matrimonial system which Sir George Gray found among the Australians is also prevalent among the Indians. This system is not so uncommon as may be supposed, and lingers in many curious customs. Thus among the Kaffirs of South Africa there is a custom by which a man is supposed to completely ignore the existence of his mother-in-law. If the two should meet in the street they turn away from each other. This custom, traces of which, Dr. Tylor thought, existed among the Spartans in historic times, points to a matriarchal system of society in which marriage is surreptitious and unrecognized. These speculations were strangely confirmed by the report during the past year of some Dutch residents in Sumatra. The inhabitants of that island still live in the matriarchal system. When a man and woman marry they do not set up housekeeping for themselves, but both stay in their mother's house. The father has no control whatever over his children, the head of the family being the maternal uncle. It would be considered a grave offense against his wife's family were a man to undertake to reprove or chastise his children. The curious state of affairs which exists in Sumatra is the key to customs, common to the Kaffirs of South Africa, to the hill-tribes of India, and the Indians of North America.

Several days ago Mr. Saunders, the proprietor of the Woodland Democrat, had occasion to transmit a message to Oakland, California, and the following was formulated and started over the wire in good shape: "Cannot come down till Thursday foreman drunk." As appointed, he went down on Thursday, and was not a little chagrined to learn that his telegram had been the source of much puzzling and speculation among his friends, to whom it read as follows: "Cannot come down till Thursday forenoon—drunk."—*Virginia (Nev.) Two Frenchmen, the brothers Perre, have invented a new kind of harp, made entirely of wood. Instead of strings the inventors use strong strips of American fir. Plans have been prepared for a ship canal across Ireland, from Dublin to Galway, a distance of 127 miles. The estimated cost for ships of various sizes is as follows: For ships of 1,500 tons, $40,000,000; for ships of 2,500 tons, $60,000,000; for ships of 5,000 tons and upward, $100,000,000. The plans have been prepared by a London engineer, assisted by Captain Eads.

The electric railway at Brighton, in England, is a success. It runs along the shore every ten minutes, picking up passengers as it goes, and can be stopped, when hailed, as easily as an omnibus. Its motion is sliding and pleasant. Its capacity is apparently unlimited. It is to be extended to the western end of the Brighton Beach, and is then expected to yield a very handsome revenue to its promoters.

The Niagara International Park Commission has ascertained that Goat Island during the past ten years has yielded an annual revenue of about $15,000, and Prospect Park, during the same period, $18,000. The island, containing eighty acres, is held at $1,000,000, and the park, fourteen acres, at the same figure. The real estate immediately about the falls, desired by the commission, is held at $3,500,000.

An English firm of potters has produced the largest vase in the world. It is of china, and its chief feature is a globe representing the world, which is supported on a pedestal and surrounded by a number of mythological figures. The color of the globe is a subdued green, and the figures are china bisque and other decorated and white glazed china. The vase is eleven feet high and six feet four inches in diameter. It cost $17,500.

A child with two brains is the latest freak of nature in Nebraska. On the back of its head was a tumor eleven and a half inches in circumference, connected with the head by a ligament six inches long. A post mortem examination proved the supposed tumor to be a second head supplied with an active brain, scalp, etc., and lacking only the face development. Through the ligament between the two heads was an artery, entering the real head through a small aperture near the first vetebra.

Silver, copper and other metals have been found in paying quantities in the Blue Hill, Union county, Pa. Five drifts have been driven in the side of it, and a vein of ore struck in each. One shaft has been sunk from the top to a depth of forty feet. The first drift is at the foot of the mountain. Silver and copper ores were found at the surface. It is driven 100 feet, and shows the vein of ore sloping or leading to the bed of the Susquehanna river. This ore, under analysis, contains $19.60 in silver to the ton, and 70 per cent. copper. Eighty feet west of this vein is another containing the same ore and about the same proportion. The second and third drifts are midway up the mountain side. One is driven in seventy feet; the other forty, showing a vein of ore from the start, each containing manganese, iron and silver, the amount of silver being $76 to the ton. The fourth drift is one mile west of the first and at the head of the basin. It is driven in 100 feet, showing a twenty-two-inch vein of ore. The fifth drift is in the end of the mountain, where a country road cuts through it, and shows a vein of eighteen inches, carrying 45 per cent. of metals. These drifts show there are millions of tons of the ore in the mountain.

Mr. T. C. Berchard, public school teacher, Norland, writes: "During the fall of 1881 I was much troubled with Biliousness and Dyspepsia, and part of the time was unable to attend to the duties of my profession. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure was recommended to me, and I have much pleasure in stating that I was entirely cured by using one bottle. I have not had an attack of my old complaint since, and have gained fifteen pounds in weight."

PETERBOROUGH, FEB. 26, 1885.

The Public Debt.

The Tory Government at Ottawa seem to be entirely reckless in regard to the expenditure of public money, and utterly indifferent to the financial obligations they impose upon the country. The growth of the public debt is something alarmingly enormous. The debt of Canada was in 1867—the date of Confederation ninety millions. After six years of Tory rule in 1873 the debt had grown to over one hundred and thirty and a quarter millions. When the Pacific Scandal put the Tories out of office, they left obligations which compelled their successors to add enough to the debt to make it one hundred and seventy-four and a half millions. Since 1878 the debt has grown from these figures to the total of two hundred and fifty-two and a half millions, the figures at present. During the last half year the debt of Canada has increased at the rate of over a million a month. Last year there was a decrease of between three and four millions in Consolidated Revenue, while the ordinary expenditure showed an increase of two and nearly one-half millions. Even with the grinding taxation the country groans under, the revenue is insufficient to keep pace with the recklessly extravagant expenditure of the Tory Government. And the revenue shows marked falling off, it being probable that the end of the present fiscal year will show a decided deficit. For the past six months the expenditure has exceeded the revenue by over a million dollars, and the expenditure is over a million in excess of the expenditure for the corresponding six months of the previous year. The manner in which the public money is squandered is something alarming, especially when it is borne in mind that a large amount of the increased expenditure represents the disbursement of the people's money to strengthen the hold of the present Tory Government on power. Ten years ago the annual expenditure was twenty-three and a half millions; to-day it is nearly ten millions greater. Can it, for a moment, be supposed that the demands of the public service have increased in proportion?

Change of Front.

Sir John Macdonald has not been noted for any great amount of self-sacrifice on behalf of the country, but it does appear that he is capable of sacrificing himself for himself. The indications are that he intends to mount the prohibition horse as the next party dodge. He has stood as the friend of the liquor interest, though, it must be confessed, his friendship consisted largely of promise than performance. his address to the deputation (a thousand strong) of the Licensed Victuallers at Ottawa last week, he practically threw them overboard. To all their demands for his interference on their behalf he had only one word. He could do nothing himself his quondam allies and supporters must look to Parliament for relief. Coming from Sir John this consolation was an ungrateful impertinence. With the servile following a large majority—he has in the House of Commons. Parliament and Sir John are convertible terms. The wily Chieftain has some object in view in thus throwing over the Licensed Victuallers. He sees by the way in which the Scott Act is being adopted, that the temperance sentiment of the country is growing, and that prohibition will be a strong card to adopt. As an election cry, the N. P. has seen its best days. The Gerrymander will hardly be safe to repeat, and Sir John will try Prohibition—not because he believes in it, not because he desires it, but because by mounting on the crest of the temperance wave, he will hope to be again carried to power. If he can get the temperance people to trust in him, if he can secure their support, he will be well pleased. But of one thing there is certainty. When he has used them to promote the success of his own purposes, he will, if he sees any political advantage in such a course, desert them in their greatest need, as he has done the Licensed Victuallers, whose friend he professed to be, and for whose sake he plunged the country into confusion by tampering with the license question. Sir John can be trusted to maintain a policy so long only as it is to his personal and party interest to do so. He can feel and recognize no higher motive.

Bent on Mischief.

The Tory party have claimed to have great confidence in the Privy Council and Supreme Court, and great respect for their decisions. These bodies have decided that the Dominion License Act is "not worth the paper it is written on," yet the Ottawa Government seem determined to attempt to enforce an invalid statute. In the face of these positive decisions, it directs its Commissioners to issue licenses under a worthless license law. Thus, to spite Ontario, the license question is to be kept in a state of turmoil, the trade annoyed and injured, and every possible obstruction placed in the way of reaching the satisfactory results that would follow the unmolested administration of the best license law in the world—the Crooks Act. The Government's course is neither in the interests of the trade nor the temperance people, and if Sir John is not in his dotage, it is difficult to understand his reasons for the high-handed and arbitrary course he chooses to pursue on this subject.

Gentle Reminders.

We call the reader's attention to the fact that Mr. Geo. Hilliard, M. P. for West Peterborough, has not made motions for the following returns, or given notice of his intention so to do, namely:

Order of the House for a return showing the site selected for the new postoffice in Peterborough, a copy of all the petitions, maps, plans, papers and correspondence connected with the subject; also the report of the Government engineer sent to Peterborough to examine and select a site for the said postoffice, and all information in possession of the Government with reference to the matter.

Also:

Order for a return, showing the names of all persons who have received money for right of way or other purposes in connection with the Trent Valley Canal, in the townships of Harvey, Galway, Smith, Douro and the village of Lakefield; also, a return of all moneys paid on account of expenses of land valuators, legal expenses and other services in connection with said canal scheme.

Mr. Hilliard, forgetful of his duties towards the riding he is supposed to represent, has, as before stated, failed to make a motion for the above information, which is of the first importance to every elector in the riding. By the published reports of the proceedings of Parliament, we do not find that Mr. Hilliard's time is consumed completely in making orations and discussing public matters—in fact, the only place in which his name is conspicuous is the division list always on the Government side, no matter what the measure. We beg to call our representative's attention to the matter, and to intimate that by moving for information such as that indicated, he will earn the thanks of his constituents, and give the first evidence that he is the representative of West Peterborough, and not of the Tory party and Government.

Captious Criticism.

For the past dozen years the member for West Peterborough has been aiming and endeavouring to work up a reputation as a financial Goliath. Both in the columns of the paper he edits and in his place in the House, he has been active in seeking to establish the fact that he is the one man capable of criticising the financial policy and practice of the Mowat Administration. And he is deserving of some credit for his persistence in the face of repeated and to a man less conceited and thick-skinned—humiliating failures. Last session he was so lamentable a failure that even his fellow Tories sat on him and his aspirations. So obtuse was our financial critic that the Provincial Treasurer found it necessary to volunteer to teach Mr. Carnegie a little arithmetic, and in the Public Accounts Committee, in examining a witness, so palpable was Mr. Carnegie's inability to deal with a certain matter that his leader, Mr. Meredith, had to take the job out of his hands. Still, however, with his scrap-book reinforced, he is again on the trail of the Provincial Treasurer, like a sleuth hound. But he pursues the same methods and is meeting with the same amount of success. His criticism is of the petty, pettifogging, pick-fault nature, characteristic of the man. His talent for trifles is immense. His bete noir is, especially, Colonization Roads. It will be remembered that last session he made a terrible onslaught on the administration of this branch. He was bound to probe matters to the bottom. With this object in view he put the country to greater expense than the expenditures he attempted to show wrong, by summoning a host of witnesses before the Public Accounts Committee. And what was the result? He made himself the laughing-stock of the Legislature. After all this flourish of trumpets, the most serious extravagance, Mr. Carnegie was able to bring home to the Government, involved the enormous sum of fifteen cents. He showed that, on some colonization road, the supply of tea ran out, and that the Government bought five pounds of tea in the neighborhood for $2.15, when it could have been bought in Toronto for $2.00! Such is a sample of the broad and statesman-like nature of Mr. Carnegie's criticism; and when he does not indulge in little peddling trifles he deals in vague generalities. He animadverts in acidulated diatribes and splenetic periods on the increase of the expenditures, ignoring the fact that the population and territory of the country have also increased, and also ignoring the fact that the increased cost of Government in Ontario in ten years was only 10½ per cent., while the population increased 18½ per cent. In Quebec in the same time the population increased 12½ per cent. and the expense of government, 32 per cent. This was under Tory rule, and Mr. Carnegie wants the people to believe that Tory rule in Ontario would be more economical. After his dozen years of pointless growl and grumble, Mr. Carnegie was challenged during the campaign, at the last election, to specify one item of wrong or extravagant expenditure that either he or his party voted against in the House, and he was as dumb as an oyster. He has not the manliness to formulate some specific charge and challenge the expression of the Legislature on the subject. He sticks to his strongest groove—petty, trifling charges, vague generalities and unmanly insinuations. Everybody that knows him, knows his style. It would be too tedious to follow him through his financial vagaries, but the speeches of Hon. Messrs. Pardee and Fraser, which we reproduce as a supplement to this issue, so fully dispose of Mr. Carnegie's assumptions, misty charges, sneering insinuations and financial flights of fancy, that we invite the reader to a careful perusal of them.

Mr. Carnegie's Budget Bugbear.

THE "GLOBE'S" OPINION OF "SARAH."

(Globe Assembly Notes.)

THE CONSISTENCY OF IT.

Mr. McLaughlin reminded Mr. Carnegie that an important item of growth in expenditure was the increased cost of printing Government returns, and he reminded * * * Mr. Carnegie that they (the Opposition) were responsible for a very large outlay in this direction. This, however, will make no difference to Mr. Carnegie. In order to find who purchased a lot in Peterborough, or who got a license somewhere else, a few hundred dollars do not count with him, but if the money had been expended in convicting the Bribery Conspirators, or prosecuting Ontario's claims to a large territory, or resisting Federal aggression, the whole country would be asked to denounce it as wanton, useless, and extravagant. Mr. Carnegie comes high.

TRUE TO HIS OTTAWA MASTERS.

Mr. Carnegie, however, did venture to say that we should not demand that the subsidies should be made payable to the Provinces on the basis of population, and that we should not venture to make demands upon the Federal Government until demands were made by the other Provinces. That these demands have been made and are being made and that Ontario is now being taxed for the additional burdens imposed upon her by Federal concessions to the other Provinces, does not seem to have occurred to Mr. Carnegie, or if the fact has occurred to him he dares not admit it for fear of hurting his Ottawa friends. Mr. Carnegie is too timid for a representative of Ontario, while a Government which day after day seeks new means to dispossess and degrade the Province holds power at Ottawa.

NOT UP TO THE OTTAWA STANDARD.

Mr. Carnegie is essentially a man of small grievances. If the few little petty charges he hurled against the Government in his jerky and ungraceful manner yesterday were true, instead of being the reverse, they would not make one good third-rate job of the approved Ottawa standard. No wonder Mr. Carnegie has no respect for men who utterly decline to do corrupt things and have no more consideration for their opponents than to refuse year after year to to perpetrate a job or furnish the material for a scandal that would sound well on the stump.

RIGHT FOR ONCE.

Mr. Carnegie says there is "too much running to Ottawa." He is right. He should remember, however, that the Ontario Government goes to Ottawa only to compel the Federal authorities to do justice by Ontario, while he and his friends go to Ottawa for instructions as to how they may best keep Ontario out of her rights.

SUPPRESSING THE FACTS.

Mr. Carnegie censured the Government for its expenditure on immigration. It should be borne in mind, however, that a large part of this expenditure was on account of work done in 1883.

CLIPPER BUILT.

Mr. Carnegie did not speak by the scrap-book yesterday, but he has evidently committed his last year's clippings to memory, and falls back on the clippings whenever he runs out of facts. His speech yesterday seemed to be almost exclusively composed of clippings.

LOADED WITH SCRAP-BOOK.

Mr. Carnegie spoke for about an hour and a half, and had not concluded his speech when the House adjourned. If he should again load himself with scrap-book it is pretty hard to say when he will get through.

ANYTHING FOR THE SAKE OF GRUMBLING.

Mr. Carnegie is aggrieved because the Government under the Dominion Act of 1884, dealing with the subsidies payable to Quebec and Ontario between 1867 and 1873, secured only $2,800,000 for Ontario. He declared we should have got more. This goes on all-fours with the Tory claim that Ontario was entitled to more territory than that given her by the award of the arbitrators. Figured out to its legitimate conclusion, it means that the financial claim, like the territorial claim, would have been cheerfully surrendered to the Dominion if Mr. Carnegie and his friends had been in power.

SANGUINE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

Mr. Carnegie declares that after the Mowat Government "the deluge." He evidently hopes that he and his friends will succeed to power in Ontario some time away in the future.

"SARAH'S" SOURNESS.

Hon. Alex. Morris some time ago established beyond all question his claim to be considered the saddest man in the House. Mr. Carnegie has equally established his claim to be considered the most repellant man in the House. The two should be put together, and induced to work off their surplus sadness and sourness upon each other. It would relieve the House, and would, perhaps, have a good effect upon each of the gentlemen named.

CARVING UP THE CRITIC.

Hon. T. B. Pardee rose amid enthusiastic applause to reply to the petty charges advanced by the Opposition against the financial record of the Government. He at once proceeded to dissect Mr. Carnegie. He gave that self-satisfied gentleman credit for having made a speech containing more reckless and incorrect statements than any speech he had heard in the Legislature during an experience of 18 years. Mr. Carnegie smiled assent, as though he felt that that was the only kind of reputation he was capable of working up, and was proud to be informed that he was doing it so well. As Mr. Pardee proceeded, however, the member for Peterborough lost his self-satisfaction by slow and sure degrees. He grew sad and depressed, angry and uneasy, and presented a pitable spectacle before the Minister got through with the deserved castigation he so ably administered.

A WRECKED CONTENTION.

Mr. Pardee ably refuted the charges against the general management of the Crown Lands Department. He utterly wrecked the contention of Mr. Carnegie that the office should be abolished, and showed that the duties assigned to it were absolutely necessary functions of Government, and that the net profits accrued from Crown Lands since the office was established were $8,900,000.

PERSONAL.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

We regret to hear that our friend, honest John Gall, was somewhat unfortunate last week. We believe the case was premature, and but for the timely and skilful services of his accoucheur, the editor of the Peterborough Times, the case might have been serious. For sometime past it was plain to be seen that there was something the matter. However, it is over now and we trust he may be favored with a speedy and complete recovery. The inquisitive who may wish to get a sight of the bantling may have their curiosity gratified by taking a peep at last week's Times.

Questions in English Literature.

The subjoined questions have been prepared by Mr. B. Earle, for use in the English Literature classes of the Collegiate Institute;

SCOTT'S LADY OF THE LAKE.

1. "The literature of our native country, like that of every other, is related, intimately and at many points, to the history of the nation. The great social epochs are thus also the epochs of intellectual cultivation."—Spalding. Discuss this.
2. What four names may be taken as representative of the phases through which our literature has passed?
3. Briefly describe the character of each of the first three periods.
4. Who were the harbingers of the Natural School? How did they differ from their predecessors?
5. What forces operated to produce the Natural School?
6. Write a note on the influence of ballad poetry.
7. "English literature has been affected in turn by the Italian, the French and the German." What in each case, were the nature and extent of these influences? Name the leading writers affected by them.
8. What are the leading peculiarities of the Natural School?
9. Brooke says that "poets worked on two great subjects—Man and Nature." Up to what age was the subject of Man alone treated? Name the first English poem devoted to natural description. Briefly describe its character.
10. "All cultivated and perfect enjoyment of poetry, or of any other of the fine arts, is partly emotional, and partly critical."—Craik. Explain. Show that these two qualities are blended in Scott's poetry.
11. "Walter Scott, again, was never accounted one of the Lake poets; yet he, as well as Wordsworth and Coleridge, was early a drinker at the fountain of German poetry."—Craik. Name the Lake poets. Why so called? To what extent was Scott influenced by German poetry?
12. "It was Scott who first in his day made poetry the rage. Scott's poetry impressed its character upon all the poetry that was produced among us for many years after."—Craik. Discuss fully.
13. Brooke says of Scott, "No poet . . . is a finer colourist." Discuss this criticism, giving examples from the "Lady of the Lake."
14. "In the illustrious band of poets, who enriched the literature of our language during the first generation of the present century, there are four who have gained greater fame than any others, and exercised greater influence on their contempories."—Spalding. What poets are referred to? Name some of the greatest of their contemporories.
15. "It might almost seem as if there were something in the impressiveness of the great chronological event formed by the termination of one century and the commencement of another, that had been wont to act with an awakening and fructifying power upon literary genius in these islands."—Craik, P. 457. Discuss.
16. Spalding says that Scott and Byron "owed their popularity mainly to characteristics which they had in common." What are these characteristics?
17. "It (The Lady of the Lake) is a kind of romantic pastoral; and a good deal of vagueness, both in character and in narrative, is hidden from us by the charm of its magnificent landscapes, and the cheerful airiness of the sentiment and adventures." Discuss this criticism.
18. Write a brief sketch of Scott's life.
19. Write notes on Southey, Coleridge, Wordsworth, Campbell, Rogers, Moore, Byron, Shelley, Keats.
20. Name and very briefly describe, Scott's chief poems.
21. Upon what does Scott's fame chiefly rest.
22. What does Jeffrey regard as the great secret of Scott's popularity?
23. Write notes on (a) his choice of subjects; (b) the management of his passions; (c) his diction and imagery.
24. Write a general criticism on Scott's style.
25. Compare "The Lady of the Lake" with "Marmion," and with "The Lay of the Last Minstrel."
26. Criticise the plot of "The Lady of the Lake."
27. How does Scott rank as a descriptive poet? Compare him in this respect, with Goldsmith.
28. How does he rank as a delineator of character? Compare him with Byron in this respect.
29. What does Angus regard as the secret of the success of Scott's poetry? Give the substance of Angus' opinions as to his subjects; his mode of treating them, and his versification.
30. If Scott's own genius were to be described by any single epithet, it would be called a narrative genius."—Craik. Show this to be true.
31. Estimate the influence of the Waverley novels on historical writings.
32. What are the greatest of Scott's poems? Upon what does the interest in each of these poems depend?
33. What measure does Scott generally employ? What is his principal metrical expedient?
34. What may be said of the plots or intrigues of Scott's poems?
35. Name the different kinds of poetry and give examples of each kind.
36. Define the following, giving examples: Alexandrine, Heroic Measure, Romance Measure, Adonic Measure, Ballad Metre, Tumbling Metre.
37. Derive and define Iambus, Trochee, Dactyl, Anapæst, Amphibrach, Anacrusis.
38. Derive and define Monometer, Dimeter, Trimeter, Tetrameter, Pentameter, Hexameter.
39. Derive and define Catalectic, Acatalectic, Hypermetric.
40. Give the history of the Spenserian stanza. Describe its metrical structure. Name poems written in this stanza.
41. Draw a map of the scene of "The Lady of the Lake."
42. Write a brief epitome of Canto I., introducing quotations.
43. In what relation do the Spenserian stanzas, at the opening of Canto I., stand to the poem?
44. Make any remark that may seem necessary to a clear understanding and a full appreciation of these stanzas.
45. What purpose is served, generally, by the opening stanzas of the other Cantos?
46. How do these Spenserian stanzas compare with the rest of the poem as to poetic excellence?
47. Describe, in your own language, introducing quotations, the stag hunt. Point out some of the finer touches.
48. Describe, after Scott, introducing quotations, the Trosachs. Refer to some of the finest passages in this description.
49. Give, in your own language, an account of the stranger's meeting with the Lady of the Lake, and their arrival at the Island.
50. Briefly describe the lodge, and give an account of Fitz-James's dream.
51. Point out any improbabilities in the plot, which appear in this canto.
52. Why should the plot in this poem not be criticised severely?
53. Which do you regard as the finest passages in the canto?
54. Show clearly the bearing of this canto on the rest of the poem.

COBOURG.

Major and Brevet Lieut-Col. Charles Elliot, of Cobourg, has been permitted to retire, retaining his brevet rank. This is the second field officer of the 40th Battalion who has retired lately.

We regret very much, to announce the death says the World, of Mr. James R. Barber, the well known Superintendent of the C. P. & M. Railway, which took place on Monday morning last. Mr. Barber was one of our prominent and enterprising citizens, and will be very much missed.

BOBCAYGEON.

Mr. John Kennedy, the contractor, had completed extensive improvements to his now thoroughly equipped Planing Mill. A new twenty-five horse power boiler has been put in. It was from the Wm. Hamilton Foundry, Peterborough, and is one of their best make. Additions have been made to the machinery, and there is every convenience now for turning out dressed building material at the shortest notice.

EMILY.

The Omemee Herald records the death of Mrs. Jane Storey, an old and respected resident of Emily. Deceased has resided in this township for about fifty years, was loved by all her acquaintances, and had reached the good old age of 81 years at the time of demise.

The opinion is expressed in Paris that neither France nor England will enter into treaty obligations with Russia for the extradition of political conspirators "France" said a government official, "can attend to the Communist. They can talk treason, but they are too thoroughly under police surveillance to act, and England can manage her unruly Irish subjects without inviting the hostility of continental secret societies by entering into foreign alliances."

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Hon. T. B Pardee's Speech on the Budget.

Thursday, Feb. 19

Hon. T. B. PARDEE was loudly applauded on rising to reply. He said:—The hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat seems to think the posterity of this country is in some way going to be injured by these annuities. The hon. member and his friends who sit beside him usually take a greater interest in the posterity of the Dominion than in that of their own Province. Now, while I believe that we should not forget our posterity, I also believe that we should not forget the people in existence at the present day. (Hear, hear.) The tongue of the hon. gentleman seemed to loosen when dealing with the Canadian Pacific Railway, thus showing that he was more at home when defending the Dominion Government than in his attacks upon the finances of this Province. Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman seems to have taken on the question of Provincial rights. I wonder if he has succeeded in converting his leader and the other hon. gentlemen who sit on that side of the House. Why, Sir, I was more than surprised when he took the Hon. Attorney General to task because he said he did not intend to appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court on the question of the right to grant schools and vessel licenses unless the Dominion Government appealed from the other part of the decision. What is that decision? It gives this Government the right to issue all the licenses in the Province with the exception of wholesale and vessel licenses. Well, Sir, what course did hon. gentlemen opposite take in respect to these questions of Provincial Rights? Why they deserted their Province on the great question of territorial rights, they defended their friends at Ottawa on the great railway question, and they defended—they excused—the Dominion Government when that Government seized the whole question of liquor licenses. Show me the word of protest that came from hon. gentlemen opposite in any of these matters, and yet we find the hon. member for West Peterborough (Mr. Carnegie) taking exception because we do not propose to appeal from the decision on these minor questions if the Dominion Government accepts the decision on the others. Let me say that I never felt better satisfied with our financial position than I do at the present moment. Notwithstanding the small petty charges and the base insinuations—(hear, hear)—of the hon. member for West Peterborough, I am more satisfied with our financial position at the end of 1884 than I was at the beginning of 1872, which is the year that hon. gentlemen opposite always refer to, because it enables them to glorify over the surplus of John Sandfield Macdonald. I am not going to say one single word against John Sandfield Macdonald—he is dead and gone—but I will say that the surplus moneys handed up by the John Sandfield Macdonald Government did not help to develop the country, and had we adopted the same course and hoarded up the funds of the Province instead of expending them liberally in developing this country in every way, we would not to-day be occupying the proud position of being by far the first Province of this Dominion—of being one of the most advanced communities, educationally, financially, and morally, in the world. (Applause.) Now, Mr. Speaker, these hon. gentlemen say, "but you have than the Sandfield Macdonald Government did." Sir, I admit we have expended more money than they did. I am glad of it, I am proud of it, because it has brought more than fourfold advantages to the people of this country. It would not, and should not, avail this Government very much if I were able to say, "We have a surplus of fifteen or twenty million dollars in the treasury," and leave it open to some hon. member opposite to rise and say, "Yes, you have that large surplus, but it is at the expense of the development of this country." Sir, John Sandfield Macdonald did not build any railways; we have built some 2,000 miles, and expended millions of money upon them. John Sandfield Macdonald did not distribute money among the people, but we have distributed millions among the people to relieve their burdens, and enable them to make their improvements. John Sandfield Macdonald built some 213 miles of colonization roads; we have built no less than 2,095 miles of colonization roads. (Cheers.) It would take too long to enumerate what this Government have done over what the Sandfield Macdonald Government did. We have acted upon the principle that it is not the highest aim of a Government to hoard up money, but to ascertain what the requirements and wants of the people are and to supply them as far as possible. I have been in this House a great many years, and I am bound to say that I never listened to a speech more abundant in incorrect statements than the one I have just listened to by the hon. member for West Peterborough (Mr. Carnegie). (Applause.) I repeat the statement. During the eighteen years which I have sat in this House I have never listened to a speech more abundant in reckless assertions—statements both incorrect and untrue—than the one I have just listened to. Now, Sir, as a sample of the speech which has been delivered by the hon. gentleman, he starts out with the statement that this Government have not accounted for seven millions of the people's money. The hon. member for North Grey (Mr. Creighton) said that the Government could not account for two and a half millions. I wish that hon gentlemen opposite would agree upon the amount. Why, Sir, the hon. member for West Peterborough goes him three times better. (Laughter and applause.)

A NEW POSITION

Mr. MEREDITH—Explain that to the Attorney-General.

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—I have no doubt that there is no one in the House who understands what that means better than the hon. member for London. (Laughter.) He knows all about it, Sir. The hon. member for West Peterborough tries to give emphasis to the statement that there are seven millions unaccounted for by saying that we are bound to account for all our moneys, thus leaving the impression to go abroad that we have seven millions of dollars, for that is what his statement amounts to. Now, Sir, no hon. gentleman knows better than he does that every single dollar has been accounted for, because every single dollar that is spent goes into the public accounts, where everybody can see what we expended it for. No one knows better than he does that the excess of expenditure over the Sandfield Macdonald Government was what was required by the Province; that it was largely increased on account of education, public institutions, increased grants to charities and hospitals, and in various other ways, and yet the hon. gentleman stands up and says there are several millions of money which are not accounted for. Now, Sir, I appeal to this House to consider whether that statement is correct. It is a harmless one in the House, because hon. members do not receive it, but, Sir, the hon. gentleman has been reiterated to the front benches by his leader, and should not be reckless in his statements, and I say that statement is entirely incorrect and entirely untrue. (Hear, hear.) I believe that is Parliamentary. I do not say he had intentionally made an untrue statement, because perhaps he does not know it is untrue, but what I say is that the statement is untrue. And one who has sat so long in this House had no right to make it, and he was attempting to mislead the country and his fellow members when he did so. Is that the way he speaks out in the country? If it is I do not wonder that he and his friends remain in opposition because extravagant statements always bring their own punishment, and hon. gentlemen must make statements somewhere near what the facts are. Well, Sir, let me follow up the hon. gentleman. He does not do things by half at all. He goes the whole hog. (Great laughter.) The hon. gentleman who sits at his right hand, says:—We have to account for two millions and a half but the hon. member for West Peterborough saw that this did not create much sensation, so he says we must be out seven millions. The member for North Hastings (Mr. Wood) could not believe it; he looked aghast. (Laughter.) But this hon. gentleman who takes such an exaggerated view of the amount of money mislaid by this Government is going to do away entirely with the Crown Lands office. He takes a summary way of crushing out one member of the Government by wiping out the Crown Lands Department altogether. Why? Because he says the receipts are so small and the expenditure of running it so great that it is hardly worth while running it at all and it might as well be closed. The hon. gentleman bows his assent, and I am glad to get it, because I intend to disclose the hon. gentleman. (Hear, hear.) I say, Sir, that a man who would make that statement in the year 1885, after the Crown Lands Department has been in existence as long as it has been, and after the work which it is said has been doing, in ignorance, ought to think seriously as to from Parliament altogether,—(laughter)—and the man who makes it wilfully stands precisely in the same position. (Hear, hear.) How did the hon. gentleman, who has already his name on the back of the statement? Instead of taking the receipts from the Crown Lands Department from 1872 to 1884, during which time the present Government has been in power, he says nothing about these, but confines himself to last year, 1884, when the receipts from the Department had taken off a good deal, when there was great depression in the country, and in the timber trade especially, when revenues all over the world had decreased and when those of the Dominion had fallen off some millions of dollars. He takes the receipts for 1884, some $577,000 in round numbers, and from this amount he deducts the cost of the Crown Lands office, the cost of surveys, the cost of colonization roads, the expense of the Forest Ranger (who is not in my Department, but in that of the Commissioner of Agriculture), and the cost of certain work done under my friend the Commissioner of Public Works, and then he says, "Look at the small excess of receipts over expenditure." Even according to his own statement this excess was $170,000, but his statement is all wrong. Why should the cost of surveys be charged against the management of the Crown Lands Department? Would the Government not have to make surveys whether there was a Crown Lands Department or not? (Hear, hear.) Take colonization roads in the same way; why should they be charged to the management of the Crown Lands Department? Would it not be the duty of the Government to construct colonization roads for the purpose of settling up our new districts whether we had a Crown Lands revenue or not, so long as we could afford it? (Hear, hear.) Again, why should the work done under the Public Works Department in opening up certain streams be made a charge upon the revenue of the Crown Lands Department?

IT WOULD BE JUST AS FAIR

to charge the cost of public buildings to the management of the Public Works Department as to charge my Department with the cost of constructing colonization roads, and making surveys. But, Sir, I will refer the hon. gentleman to the Dominion. What is the practice of the Dominion Government in regard to surveys? If the hon. gentleman will go into the Library and look up the public accounts of the Dominion for last year, he will find that the cost of surveys in the North-West is charged to capital account. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. MEREDITH—But your party objects to it.

Mr. PARDEE—I will undertake to say that my hon. friend will side with the Dominion in this matter, even against the hon. member for West Peterborough, for it will never do for him to take any other course. (Laughter.) What are the facts? Between the years 1872 and 1884 we have received from the Crown Lands Department the sum of $10,000,000, and I want to show how entirely incorrect the hon. gentleman is, even following his own mode of calculation. The figures I have here will show how much foundation there is for his statement that the Crown Lands Department might as well be closed up. For the thirteen years, the total cost of management and collection in Crown Lands Department was $1,100,000, the total expenditure upon colonization roads $1,392,505, the total cost of surveys $502,011, and for refunds—for I want to include every possible item of expense—the cost was $190,192. Did this expenditure exhaust all the revenue from the Department during these thirteen years? Instead of doing so, it left a net revenue, even adopting the hon. gentleman's unfair method, of $6,754,248. (Applause.) And yet this new financier says the Crown Lands Department might as well be closed altogether. (Laughter.) Another statement made by the hon. member for West Peterborough in connection with this matter was that every $100 collected in the Crown Lands Department cost $64 to collect it. When I heard the hon. gentleman make this statement I was startled; I fancied he had in his figures. (Laughter.) Let us look at the facts. For the 13 years which I have been taking, it cost to collect $100 including everything except colonization roads and surveys, which I believe every hon. member will say ought to be charged to capital account, instead of $64, only $11. Taking the total cost of collection during that period, $1,100,000, from the gross revenue, $10,000,000, we have a clear profit in the 13 years of $8,900,000 from the Crown Lands Department. (Cheers.) I ask the leader of the Opposition if he agrees with the proposal to close up the Crown Lands Department. There would be a necessity for such a Department, even if there were no surveys to make or colonization roads to construct, in order to promote the settlement of the new districts of the Province. The policy of the present Government in connection with these new districts has been largely a free grant policy, and it must not be forgotten that it costs just as much to give away land as it does to sell it. Our receipts from the sale of lands have not been so large proportionately as they were in Sandfield Macdonald's time, this being a consequence of our free grant policy. Such lands as we have sold have been mostly at 20 or 30 cents an acre, which has had the tendency of making the percentage of the cost of collection appear larger than under the Sandfield Macdonald Government. I am not sure that it is larger, but even if it is, the reason I have given more than accounts for the increase. Let me apply the new logic and the new reasoning of the member for West Peterborough to the land transactions of the Dominion, logic and reasoning with which, I von ure to say, Sir Leonard Tilley would not agree. In the Dominion last year the receipts from lands were $951,636. The expenditure on account of lands, chargeable to capital account, was $728,441, and chargeable to income, $168,898, making a total expenditure on account of lands of $895,339 which would leave to the Dominion a net revenue of $56,297, according to the reasoning of my hon. friend. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) My hon. friend says that we have not taken into account the

REVENUES FROM THE NEW TERRITORY.

Well, Sir, that statement comes with bad grace from my hon. friend, when we consider that hon. gentlemen upon that side of the House have been largely, and I don't know that they have not been entirely to blame for our being deprived of the revenues from that part of the Province, and the course taken by their leader at Ottawa in illegally keeping us out of possession of that country, and revenues from it, has been applauded and supported by the Opposition here. (Applause.) The crucial test of the hon. gentlemen's sincerity has yet to be applied, and it is to be seen whether the hon. gentlemen will continue to oppose the rights of this Province's interest. Now, it is very little use to have the boundaries of the Province settled if the Dominion Government is to arise and keep possession of the land and timber, and one is curious to know what course hon. gentlemen opposite will take when the matter is submitted to them. Will they stand by their Province? or will they repeat their former course and go over to the enemies of the Province? I hope for their own sake—I hope for the interests of the country—that they will stand by Ontario and resist the aggressive policy of the Dominion Government. (Applause.) They have hitherto deserted their Province and joined her opponents. Upon the great question of the boundary, upon the railway question, and upon that of the liquor licenses, they have deserted their Province. My hon. friend the leader of the Opposition moved a resolution and made a speech, and I have searched the resolution through, and read the speech, but I failed to find one single sentence which could be construed as a protest against the enemies of Ontario taking possession of her territories. Will hon. gentlemen stand by mutely and see Ontario despoiled, or will they protest against the Dominion Government's course in this respect? Let me come to the on Crown lands and colonization roads, and I think it necessary for me to make an explanation as to the manner in which the expenditure of the Crown Lands Department stands in the Public Accounts. The hon. member for West Peterborough said that there was a great discrepancy between the expenditure of 1883 and 1884 in the Crown Lands Department. Now, Sir, according to the Public Accounts, there is a discrepancy between these years, and let me explain. In the Public Accounts for 1883 the expenditure on Crown Lands is put at $67,131, while the amount for 1884 is put at $103,000, an increase of $35,000. There does, at first sight, appear to be a large difference here, but practically the expenditure of the Crown Lands Department in 1884 was the same as in 1883. It might have been a few thousand dollars more than in 1883, but practically it was the same. The next thing is to state how this arises. It arises from the fact that the Crown Lands Department has a special account in the bank and the Treasurer keeps the accounts in his office. In 1883 we took an estimate for $81,000 under the head of Crown Lands expenditure.

Mr. MEREDITH—What is Crown Lands expenditure?

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—Surveys, agents' salaries, and forest ranging.

Mr. MEREDITH—Colonization roads?

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—No. I am speaking merely of the expenditure in the estimates under the head of Crown Lands.

Mr. CREIGHTON—Does that include surveys?

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—Yes. We took for 1883, as I have said, an estimate of $81,000 while we really expended $90,896, but the Treasury Department owned its accounts when $67,131 had been paid, leaving a supplementary $17,749 to be voted, which, added to the estimate, would make up the $81,000. But you will see the report of the Commissioner of Crown Lands and compare it with the Public Accounts for several years, you will find that it generally exactly, and that there is no discrepancy. (Hear, hear.) For 1884 there was voted by this House $81,000 for the service of the year, and then we took a re-vote for the amount of the apparently unexpended balance of $13,749, showing a total vote for 1884 of $94,749, whereas we only really took for the service in 1884 $83,000, and the amount actually expended was $89,267, being an over-expenditure of $5,867.

Mr. MEREDITH—Is that shown by the Public Accounts?

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—It is shown by the Crown Lands report. The Crown Lands Department pays its expenditures out of its general account, and at the end of every month takes out an accountable warrant from the Treasurer for the amount.

Mr. MEREDITH—I not that a bad system?

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—It may be, but it is one which is difficult to avoid. For you have to do with men who are in many cases in districts removed from all facilities for conducting business by the usual methods; they are distant from banks, and we have to send money to them in bulk, and I contend that though the system is not one we would willingly have chosen, it is one which it seems impossible to avoid. I would be glad to avoid it, and so I have tried to get out of it. The hon. gentleman in making the statement that the expenditure of 1884 is larger than that of 1883 knows very well how the matter stands, for he has had the system explained to him in the Public Accounts Committee, and yet he contends here that there has been a large increase when there has been no increase at all. He also claims that there has been a large increase in surveys. Now I want to explain to the House and the country that there has been no increase for 1884 over the amount for 1883. In 1883 the amount voted for surveys as per estimates was $40,000; the Public Accounts for 1883 show an expenditure of only $29,501, whereas the whole amount was expended. In 1884 a re-vote was taken for the balance, and the amount of the re-vote and the expenditure for that year appear in the Public Accounts for 1884, making the apparent expenditure $50,098. He complains of over-expenditure in 1884, and yet I say there was no over-expenditure, as will readily be seen from my statement. (Applause.) The hon. gentleman complains of some over-expenditure for sessional writers, and endeavours to show that we have been extravagant as compared with Sandfield Macdonald's Government. Well, as has been pointed out, the hon. gentleman is himself as much responsible for this as any member of the House on account of the number of returns he moves for and which are ordered to be brought down. These necessitate the employment of extra sessional writers, and for this he must assume the accountability. Let me refer to the Dominion Government.

Mr. MEREDITH—Is that the true standard?

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—Hon. gentlemen always point to the Dominion Government when it is to their interest to do so, but whenever it is against them they ignore it. They are in favour of going back to the Sandfield Macdonald Government of 18 years ago, and object to a comparison with the Dominion Government of 1884. In his report on last year's Public Accounts the Dominion Auditor-General calls attention to the extra clerks employed, and shows that in the Interior Department the sum paid for them was $54,992, in the Department of Public Works $53,051, Railways and Canals $34,937, Agriculture and Census $32,801, and Geological Survey $13,280. The total sum amounts to about two hundred thousand dollars expended for extra clerks, and yet with this large sum before them hon. gentlemen opposite complain of the slight increase of expenditure of this Government over that of Sandfield Macdonald. They do not refer to this because they are ashamed to, and I must confess that I was astonished when I saw the immense sums, and as I looked into the Public Accounts I almost doubted my own eyes. Now the hon. gentleman comes to the subject of

and I will deal with it. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Carnegie) revels in colonization roads; this is the one subject on which the hon. gentleman delights to dwell. It appears to be the only part of the financial statement to which he had very serious objections, and he has charged the Commissioner with all sorts of crimes, and stated that the servants of the Department are guilty of all kinds of corrupt acts. He has not said that every scoundrel is a colonization road overseer, but he wished us to believe that every colonization road overseer is a scoundrel. He implicated almost every one from the Commissioner down. He asserted that the money of the Department had been used for electioneering purposes, and as I had control of the money as I was responsible for it. The hon. gentleman asserted in tones of great indignation that the colonization road money had been used for electioneering purposes in Muskoka and Algoma. The hon. gentleman stands here in his place and makes cowardly attacks upon respectable men, almost every one of whom is as able as himself. I say it is a cowardly attack, because it is made in a place where the men cannot reply to him. He says these overseers have taken the colonization money and used it for electioneering purposes in Muskoka and Algoma. I would like to know what sort of agents the leader of the Opposition employs there? Who are they that are sent all over the country using the corrupt funds of the party? We all know Wilkinson and John Shields. These gentlemen are in the constant employ of hon. gentlemen opposite and using the weapons of corruption against the friends of Ontario. They have used these men against us whenever opportunity offered, and they sent them first through Muskoka and Algoma. Though they were effectually employed in Muskoka, in Algoma they were not quite so successful. Again the leader of the Opposition took the chief of these two men to West Middlesex in order that he might exercise his wiles upon the honest electorate. He took him there in order that he might elect that poor man Johnston, who had just been unseated for bribery by the courts, and only escaped disqualification, as the judge remarked, by the skin of his teeth. The leader of the Opposition and this man Wilkinson were on the platform together, and what did they do? Mr. Wilkinson denounced the Commissioner of Crown Lands for making any expenditure upon Manitoulin Island, whence the Crown Lands Department did not derive any revenue, as the lands there were Indian lands.

Mr. MEREDITH—It was for the way in which the expenditure was made.

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—I will just explain what it was. I have got The Free Press here. "He denounced the Crown Lands Department, for the Government had actually expended money upon Manitoulin Island, which is Indian land from which we derive no revenue." That is the statement he made, and yet when Mr. M. C. Cameron berated the Government for not expending money on Manitoulin Island because we were not getting revenue from it, the hon. leader of the Opposition stood by and had not a word of dissent. Then the case of these settlers was taken up; they were stated to be citizens of Ontario; that Manitoulin Island was part of the Province, and, therefore, they were entitled to the benefit of the expenditure from the Provincial exchequer. My hon. friend did not then demur to that, and yet he allows this man, Wilkinson, to denounce the Government because we had expended money upon that very island. It is upon such a basis as this that charges of corruption are made against the Department. My hon. friend cites particular cases where two or three members of a family are employed upon a road, and gives this as the reason why he charges that the colonization road funds have been improperly administered. I am not aware that any more money went to the persons than they were properly entitled to, or that the Province got any fewer miles of road in consequence of their being employed. Then again, he says that we have over-expended, and this I admit, but it is not true or correct that we expended $185,000 in 1884 as shown in the Public Accounts for that year, and this the hon. member for West Peterborough knew pretty well. The over-expenditure for 1880, 1881, 1882, 1883 amounted to $30,598, and these over expenditures the Government had charged up and put in the Public Accounts for 1884. Suppose the over-expenditure in 1880 amounted to $10,000, the very moment that our appropriation was exhausted the Treasurer closes his accounts for that year and the amount over-expended is carried forward to the next year, and is shown in the Public Accounts as having been expended in 1881; and so this goes on through the years until $30,598 had accumulated in 1883. There is no deception in placing them in the Public Accounts for 1884, and if you will take the Public Accounts for a number of years and compare them with the report of the Commissioner of Crown Lands for the same years it will be found that they agree exactly. Therefore there is no wrong done, and no wrong intended. If hon. gentlemen were honest in their criticism they would attack the system and not attempt to show that $183,000 had been spent in 1884. Let me point out exactly what was spent in 1884, because I have and I want this House and the country to fully understand my position in the matter. We proposed to take for 1884 $122,550; we had overexpended up to then $36,598 which had not been charged up to 1883, and $26,000 New Ont. Ry., there was $62,44[illegible] accounts of last which had not been included in the $36,598. This $62,447 was paid in 1884, and these were over-expended in 1884 $14,178, making in all $83,772, though the total actually expended in 1884 was $136,524. Then the hon. gentleman states that there has been an expenditure of $7,000 upon three inspectors, when he must have known that the expenditure was not all for 1884.

Mr. CARNEGIE—I so stated.

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—But what are the facts? He said that these three inspectors were paid $7,000 among them, which amounts to $7 a day for the whole year, when he must have known that this sum covered a greater period than the year, and that part of the expenditure was for 1883. As a matter of fact, the average pay for each inspector amounts to $1,400 or $1,500 a year, or they receive $7 a day and pay their own expenses. Each one has to keep a horse, and one keeps two horses in order to enable him to do his work. In the large District of Muskoka and Parry Sound, Inspector Card keeps two horses, and I do not think that $7 a day for men who have to pay their own expenses is extravagant remuneration. I shall not follow the hon. member into his dairies, his ice, and his vegetables, but will save him among the cabbages. (Laughter.) If he will take a cartload of such little petty charges, and put them all together, they will not make up one of the scandals which the hon. gentleman dealt in the Government at Ottawa; lumped all together they will not amount to one Onderdonk or Section B scandal. I desire to make a few statements in connection with the speech of the hon. member for North Grey. The House must have been struck with the great difficulty he had to find objections to the statement made by the Treasurer. He started off with the statement that the $3,100,000 received from Crown Lands and timber by the Sandfield Macdonald Government had been treated as capital, and that, therefore, this Government ought to be condemned because they had not hoarded up the $10,000,000 raised by them from the same source. How does the hon. gentleman know that Sandfield Macdonald treated this sum as capital?

Mr. MEREDITH—The Treasurer said it was so treated.

Mr. PARDEE—I believe that if the Treasurer, who is dead and gone, could hear that statement made his bones would turn over and shake in the grave. Because the report of the Treasurer happened to show that the surplus in one year was $3,100,000, the hon. gentleman concludes that the surplus comprises all the receipts from the Crown Lands Department. How does he know that that is not subsidy? I desire to refer to another statement somewhat more important. The hon. gentleman said there was only $2,500,000 not accounted for, and was a good deal more easy upon us than the member for West Peterborough was. He says the $2,500,000 can only be accounted for by the extra cost of civil government and legislation, and he let this statement go to the country, that the extra cost of civil government since Sandfield Macdonald's time had been $2,500,000. Here is the future Minister, the embryo Treasurer, making such a statement. I will call attention to the statement that the extra cost of legislation and civil government had been $2,502,000. The average amount expended by the Sandfield Macdonald government on civil government and legislation was $174,233, and the average since has been $379,610, and I have not deducted some services which were not in existence in Sandfield Macdonald's time—leaving a difference of $105,377 against us. This multiplied by 13 will give us $1,369,809, which will give the amount by us expended on civil government and legislation over the sum which would have been expended had the cost been continued at the same rate as thirteen years ago. This shows that the hon. gentleman was only $1,132,000 wrong. (Applause.) He should not make such reckless statements as these calculated to mislead the House and the country. I don't deny that there has been an increase of expenditure. There must necessarily be an increase of expenditure, and I am only repeating a platform platitude when I say that there must be an increase of expenditure with the increase of population. Let us compare the increase which has taken place in Ontario with the increase which has taken place in Quebec. This is a fair comparison and one which they are constantly making when serves their purpose. The increased cost of civil government in 1883 as compared with 1873 in Ontario, has been 10½ per cent., while in the same period the population has increased 16¾ per cent. In Quebec the cost of civil government for 1882 was 32 per cent. over that of 1873, while the population had increased 12½ per cent. The cost of legislation in Ontario in [illegible] was 11½ per cent., population 16¾ per cent.; while in Quebec the increased cost of legislation was 214 per cent. and the population, as I have said, only 12½ per cent. It may be said, however, that we don't take into consideration the fact that they have two Houses, but there are disadvantages against us sufficient to make up for that. Instead of finding fault with the increase, the true and manly course would have been to point out what increases are wrong instead of harping upon the fact that there has been an increase. Let them then make their charges in an open manner against our constitutional management, the maintenance of public institutions, or any other machinery of government, and we will meet them item by item. The hon. member for West Toronto has admitted that the mere fact of an increase of expenditure over the amount spent by Sandfield Macdonald was no evidence of extravagance, and I would recommend the hon. member for North Grey to take a lesson from him. Let me make a reference to another statement of the members for North Grey and West Peterborough. They say the Treasurer stated that under the Dominion Government came to our hon. nothing stood between us and direct taxation. Now, the Treasurer said nothing of the kind. What the Treasurer did say was that the fixing of the subsidy from time to time at the time of Confederation was a mistake, and that the present plan of giving special grants and subsidies to several Provinces was most unsatisfactory. Now I am sure that every gentleman who has given the subject any consideration will say that the present basis of Confederation is working most unsatisfactorily. Many Provinces have already received special grants and subsidies, either directly or indirectly, and as Ontario pays three-fifths of all the money that goes into the Dominion treasury, therefore three fifths of these special subsidies and grants comes from Ontario. Ontario therefore in addition to paying the expenses of her own government has to bear an undue share of the BURDENS OF THE OTHER PROVINCES.

This is most unsatisfactory, and I entirely agree with the Treasurer that if it continues Confederation is in danger, and unless a change takes place one can hardly say what the consequences may be. It is the duty of the hon. members of this House to speak out and defend the rights of this Province, and I ask them whether it is fair that such a state of things should continue. If we ever expect to get justice we must protest against the injustice, and we have a right to do so. We find that the hon. gentleman who leads the Opposition has remonstrated with Sir John Macdonald; and how has he remonstrated? On the floor of this House? No, he leaves the House, and goes secretly down to Ottawa, and I can fancy him on that Sunday saying to Sir John, "Now you have seized our territory, you have seized our railway system, you have taken our licensing power, and there is a great outcry against us. Cannot you relieve us in some way of the unpopularity?" Secret remonstrances of this kind are of no effect, and if the leader of the Opposition does not make them on the floor of the House of Parliament they will be useless. But I will say this, that if he will devote as much time this session to publicly protesting upon the floor of the House that he did to privately remonstrating, he will accomplish some tangible good for his Province.

It being six o'clock, the Speaker left the chair.

AFTER RECESS.

Hon. T. B. PARDEE, resuming, said—I admit that increased expenditure is a fair subject for discussion, but there are times when the interests of the country demand that there shall be expenditures over and above the average, and it is a weak Government that would refuse to make the expenditure when the circumstances demand it. Especially as in the case of our Government it can be done out of the surplus. Hon. members opposite are very fond of denouncing us when we have a deficit, and yet the time was when the friends of hon. gentlemen opposite had a deficit, and we never hear them denounced for it. I will read a statement of the deficits in the old Province of Canada:—

Year.	Over-expenditure.
1859	1,494,000
1860	1,975,000
1861	1,369,000
1862	2,054,000
1863	870,000

Mr. MEREDITH—Who was in power in 1863?

Hon. T. B. PARDEE—I am glad the hon. gentleman has called attention to this. There was undoubtedly a hiatus in the income of the defict, for then the Reform Government came into power, and this accounts for the over-expenditure dropping from over two millions from 1862 to $870,000 in 1863. The opponents of the present Ontario Government denounce us because there has been an over-expenditure of a few hundreds of thousands of [illegible] over, but they have not a word to say against the Government of old Canada for the deficits it rolled up. I will carry the comparison to Ottawa, and I find that the expenditure on the Dominion Government for carrying on the government has increased from $13,000,000 in 1884 to $31,000,000 in 1884—an increase of nearly $20,000,000. Two increases in the cost of the Dominion government is always set down to the addition of new Provinces to the Dominion. Well they have added Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, and British Columbia, and this I regard as a good excuse so far as it goes. But we have got the same excuse, for we have practically to the old Province of Ontario. We have added what may be termed the provinces of Algoma, Muskoka and Parry Sound, and Nipissing. In 1867 the population of Muskoka and Parry Sound was 7,000, while it is now about 30,000. I appeal to the hon. member for Muskoka if this is not a true estimate—in 1871 it was 27,000. Take the District of Algoma. In 1867 the population was 7,000, and now it is 30,000. The same may be said of Nipissing, though I cannot give the exact figures. In 1867 there was hardly a person living in that vast district, and now it is inhabited by many people, and there are thriving villages springing up in many places. We have created in these large districts new judicial districts, established courts for the administration of justice, with all its machinery, erected court houses and gaols, and built colonization roads necessary for the settlement of the country, and yet hon. gentlemen give us no credit for these, and assume that we should go on and carry on the government at the same cost. I say this is very unreasonable and unfair. Take the area of Prince Edward Island; it is 2,000 square miles, while the district of Muskoka and Parry Sound is over 6,000; Manitoba is 66,000 square miles in area, while Nipissing and Algoma exceed Manitoba in extent. Therefore, if the increase of the Dominion Government expenditure is justified by the addition of new Provinces, then the increased expenditure of Ontario is justified by the addition of new provinces to it. (Applause.) I would like to know how hon. gentlemen of the Opposition propose to reduce the expenditure. Do they say that we have too many schools, or that they cost too much? Or do they propose to decrease the grant in aid of education and throw the burden upon the people? If they propose that, what is it but direct taxation? Can they reduce the number of our public institutions, and throw the insane, deaf and dumb, blind, and idiotic back upon the people and force them to take them into their homes? If they do that it will be direct taxation. Will they cripple the administration of justice by reducing the grant, or will they throw the burden upon the people? I would like them to point out what the increases are that they object to. That is the true and manly way to criticise. They complain that the surplus is not as large as it was, but I am not as much concerned about a large surplus as about it being wisely expended—in the interests of the people. I would rather see it under a charge of spending the surplus than under the charge that we have not attended to the material, moral, and educational interests of this country. (Applause.) There are no charges of corruption against the present Government—none whatever. I don't take credit for this. I don't take credit because we have honestly administered the affairs of the people, because it is our duty so to do. The money we have spent was not ours, and if we have spent it well it was our duty to do so. But if we were to apply the same rule to the friends of hon. gentlemen opposite, who are at Ottawa, where would they be? Sunk some fathoms deep in political oblivion. Why don't they apply the same rule to them as they do to us? The Dominion Government they defend in all things, and here they complain of everything whether right or wrong. Hon. gentlemen complain of the expenditure of a few thousands of dollars in law costs in connection with the Boundary question, but who are responsible for that expenditure but hon. gentlemen opposite? If hon. gentlemen opposite had stood true to their colours at the last as they did at the first there would have been no necessity for that expenditure, for I am satisfied that if they had been consistent, and had not changed their opinions there would have been no necessity for one dollar's expenditure on that behalf. (Applause.) The expenditure has been amply justified by the results. We were bound in fealty to our Province to maintain our rights, we were bound to hold our position in the territory, we were bound to hold to the territory awarded to us, and in all that we were successful, and the country would justify us if the cost had been ten times as large. (Applause.) The Opposition complain of our increased expenditures but they never are heard to complain of the manner our revenues have been depleted by the illegal action of the Ottawa Government in keeping us out of our territorial rights. Judging from an answer Sir John Macdonald has given in Parliament it is clear that he is determined to keep us out of our territory if possible and deprive us of the revenues of that country. I believe that if we were united in this House Sir John Macdonald could not longer, or much longer, keep us out of our just revenues. Sir John Macdonald and the Dominion Government can not and will not resist the united demand of the great Province of Ontario for justice. But we can hardly expect hon. gentlemen opposite to take that patriotic course after the speech made by Sir John Macdonald at the Tory Convention in Toronto—Convention so called, it seems to me, for the triple purpose of ratifying the Pacific Scandal, justifying the bribers, and completing the alliance between Sir John Macdonald and the leader of the Opposition in this House. (Applause.) We may now expect that there will be a more abject submission on the part of the leader of the Opposition than he has made heretofore. We may expect that there will be no such independence as he left behind when he betrayed his convictions for the mere chance of office. The utterance of Sir John Macdonald at that convention was the most shameless ever made since Confederation. He there announced that he had been after all the power, and all the patronage of the Dominion Government would be used for the placing of the leader of the Opposition on this side of the House. But this is only what Sir John has been doing for years, and yet this Government has not been defeated, and the shameless compact he has entered into with the leader of the Dominion Government will not help to gain the member for London the power he so much covets and which he has bartered so much for. The speaker took his seat amidst loud and prolonged applause.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Fifth Parliament—Second Session.

(By Our Own Reporters.)

The following is a summary of the speech of Mr. Meredith on the Budget and a full report of Mr. Fraser's reply.

Mr. MEREDITH claimed that during the election in Algoma the Government had run up the expenditure of the Crown Lands Department to $151,497. They were teaching patriotism with one breath and putting their hands down in the public treasury at the same time for the purpose of debauching the constituency. The Provincial Treasurer had told the House that Confederation could not be maintained unless the financial basis of Confederation was readjusted. In making those statements he had gone back on the record of his party, and had made an announcement that would be detrimental, not only to the Dominion, but to the Province also. In 1872, after the admission of Nova Scotia into the union, Mr. Oliver made a motion in the Dominion Parliament to the effect that no additional grants should be made to the Provinces, and

THAT WAS CARRIED.

Now, the hon. gentleman declared that the financial basis must be altered. Now they said, Oh, but the basis of Confederation has been departed from.

Hon. MEMBERS—Hear, hear; we do.

Mr. MEREDITH—They say these additions to the grants made to other Provinces entitled the d to make a change from the position their leaders took in 1872. What other changes had been made with respect to any of the other Provinces? $150,000 was given to New Brunswick, because under the terms of the Treaty of Washington they were to receive that amount and there was not a dissenting voice in the Dominion to its being given. These hon. gentlemen were willing that the whole fabric of Confederation should be broken up unless the basis if it was altered.

Hon. A. M. ROSS—It has been altered.

Mr. MEREDITH knew that in the House and country he had been accused of selfish adherence to the views of Sir John Macdonald and of treason to the Province of Ontario. He was ready to take his stand now, as in the past, on the ground that while he was of Ontario he was also a citizen of the Dominion, and it had been said by a far greater statesman than him on one occasion—Henry Clay—that he was a citizen of the United States, where the interests of his own State came into consideration. He could tell hon. gentlemen that never on any occasion had Sir John Macdonald attempted to dictate to him what course he should take; and when the history of this country came to be written, if he were worthy of even a small share of notice, he would prefer that it should be recorded of him that he sat among the Opposition rather than that he should obtain power by dishonest means.

Hon. C. F. FRASER, on rising to reply to Mr. Meredith, was greeted with prolonged applause. He said:—Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat, has treated us to rather a warm speech. He has pumped a good deal of artificial thunder into what he had to say, and he has been able to make not a little clamour among his friends over the matters to which he referred. It is evident somebody has hit him pretty badly. Somebody has said something during this discussion that site is no very pleasant manner upon the hon. gentleman's feelings. His attitude here this evening reminds one of what was reported of him at one of the meetings in Middlesex during the last election there. I believe he appeared there on one of the platforms. He was full of A gomi and full of his artificial thunder. He waved the air with that strong right arm of his, and he gave the Commissioner of Crown Lands notice that he would impeach him, not only in the House but also in the Courts. One-half of his speech to-night, if not three-quarters of it, is this over again. Well, now, if we were entering upon the Boundary question afresh—if it were arising for the first time again—we should find this very consist at leader of the Opposition doing what he did before. After two, nay after three long years deliberately putting himself on record, both by supporting the resolutions of the Government and by his speeches, in the most emphatic way—after saying he approved of the action of the Government, even after the House at Ottawa had shown that they did not intend to ratify that award—he continued to support this Government, and he did so until that later day when his leader came up from Ottawa and summoned a convention here. I have heard the statement many a time that it was not until after the Government at Ottawa had taken a certain course that the hon. gentleman changed his attitude. I tell him that the Parliament at Ottawa had in 1881 signified as conclusively as they could what they intended to do, yet even then, and after, he did not dare to do other than to approve of the action taken by this Government. Until the convention was held in the city of Toronto, until Sir John Macdonald called his faithful followers together, there is not a syllable of his, from the time the Boundary question first started, to show that he thought this Government was not doing what was right with respect to it. Did this consistent gentleman, this pure patriot, this son of Ontario, who when he might have done something for his Province, when his position as a leader in this House, even though he did not command a majority of it, gave him influence with his party, when he might have done something for his Province if he had but held to his convictions—did he say a word in favour of Ontario? Was there a lisp then from his son of Ontario, this glowing patriot? No. (Cheers) With his anxiety to have the influence of his leader at Ottawa on the one side, and his cowardice which on the other deprived him of the courage of his convictions, he consented to be the spaniel of Sir John Macdonald. (Cheers.) Here was his love for the interists of the Province. Yet the hon. gentleman talks about standing by Ontario. Then, what has he said about the license question? We had possessed the right of matters for fifteen years. The matters involved in that case afforded an opportunity where the leader of the Opposition might have spoken out with some influence, some importance. Why did he not point out to Sir John Macdonald that the Provinces had been exercising the power ever since Confederation, and if there were any doubt about the jurisdiction, the right course would be to first settle the jurisdiction, not to introduce confusion and discord into the working of the law. The Dominion Government attempted to take to themselves the licensing power, resting their right upon a strained construction of a Privy Council decision, and with a view of delivering a blow at the Local Government of Ontario. They intended their legislation without justification, and this patriot—this loyal son of Ontario—found no word of remonstrance against his chief at Ottawa. Applause.) No wonder he shrinks into nothing before his chief. If he ever reaches power it will be by humbly endorsing all that Sir John demands.

Mr. MEREDITH—I don't think I will get there by the same way as the hon. gentleman gets there.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—If the hon. gentleman ever reaches it as I have done, he will require to have been born over again. (Cheers.) His record is too bad. There is too much against him. I dare him to say that since the time I entered public life down to this day there have been any such inconsistencies in my record as there have been in that of the hon. gentleman. Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman has challenged what my hon. friend the Commissioner of Crown Lands said with reference to what he called the shameless compact between the leader at Ottawa, of hon. gentleman opposite, and his humble servant who sits there—between the gentleman who rules the Opposition here from his seat at Ottawa and this his humble servant who represents the city of London. I say it is a SHAMEFUL COMPACT.

There is no doubt that the member for London knows that the Dominion Government has connived at plundering the territory that has been awarded to Ontario, that they have made timber and other grants, and that no matter how speedily the question may be settled as to the ownership, he knows that this Province will lose largely of what should go to increase its revenues. I say that if he were a true son of Ontario, if he were to use that voice which he has told us authorizes him to speak for one hundred and thirty thousand of the people of Ontario, if he were to use this voice that ought to have so much potency and influence, and tell those at Ottawa that they ought not to have made those grants, that they ought not to make them now, that they ought not to be negotiating for further grants, and that when we asked for information respecting their dealings with this territory we were entitled to get it, then he might have some right to pose as a patriot. But instead of that what is he doing? Has he remonstrated with the Dominion Government? No, not he. If he dared to lisp a word that appeared to be against the interest of his leader a Ottawa, Sir John Macdonald would put his thumb on him. Small wonder Sir John Macdonald pledges him his support in open day. A better servant he could not have—one who would be more pliant and humble than he could not be found. Since he turned his back upon his Province and became the servant of Sir John Macdonald he has not dared to call his political soul his own. (Cheers.) What would the Province be with such a man in power? Where would he make any struggle against Sir John Macdonald? If the people had been mad enough to have returned him to power in 1882 there would have been a sham battle before the Privy Council over the Boundary Award. There would have been a pretence of a contest, but all the while with his tongue in his cheek the leader of the Opposition would have been doing what Sir John Macdonald wanted him to do. What did we find when we did go before the Privy Council, when the rights of the Province were at stake, and my hon. friend, the Attorney-General was over in England supporting them? When the electric wire flashed across the Atlantic the first part of the decision on the Boundary award you found one shout of jubilee from all these men. You found their press throughout the Province, from The Owen Sound Times to The Peterborough Review, and unable to hide their chuckling satisfaction. (Cheers.) Now, Sir, I say if this hon. gentleman wants to be a patriot, if he wants to do something for his province, if he is going to do anything at all, he had better do it now and not wait until he gets to these benches. Get to these benches, Sir! The people of Ontario

DO NOT WANT HIM.

I have heard something about an increased Opposition under his leadership. But where is it? On assuming the leadership of the Opposition he found it just where it is now, and if he spends six years to keep it where he started, how long is it going to take him to get into power? He is not a vote stronger to-day than he was then. Though his leader at Ottawa, though the chief who holds him in the hollow of his hand, did all he could for him, he is no farther towards the goal than when this same leader professed to keep his efforts secret, and did not boast of them openly. (Cheers.) We knew that Sir John Macdonald had so warm a love for his success that he was continually doing all within his power for him. Then there was this enthusiastic gathering, this Convention of Conservatives the hon. gentleman has referred to. They enthused, no doubt, and said fine things about their leader. Why should they not? He was the gentleman who was going to put them in power. Those hon. gentlemen opposite were all there. What was the balance made up of? I suppose the John Shields' were there, and with them a goodly proportion of those who have had their elbows down deep in the public crib. The men who were getting their timber grants were all there. Public plunder will always make a good deal of enthusiasm. But the hon. gentleman wants to know why Sir John Macdonald would think of doing anything against the Province of Ontario. I can give him a good reason. Any man who has followed Sir John Macdonald's political career and studied his history will have learned that he is inordinately fond of power, and those who have been his colleagues confirm history in this regard.

An hon. gentleman—Hear, hear.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—Hear, hear, the hon. gentleman says. I suppose those who have been his colleagues ought to be the best authority on that subject. It is only so long ago as just prior to Confederation that a then colleague of Sir John Macdonald publicly said that he much mistook Sir John's astuteness if the millions that were to be expended on the Intercolonial Railway would not be made use of to retain himself in power for the next ten years. (Cheers.) Now, Sir, I say Sir John Macdonald's love of power, his strong not for the love of the mere office or the emoluments which it brings, is so great that he sacrifices the interests of this Province of Ontario for the purpose of remaining in power, and that to some extent explains the attitude he has taken so far as this Province is concerned. (cheers.) Sir John will do almost anything in engineering or manipulation of public matters to keep in power. He wants power. He loves it. He will keep it to the last hour of the last day, if it is possible.

APPETITE FOR OFFICE,

Mr. MEREDITH—He will keep it.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—Perhaps he will; he has had unbounded opportunities to use the means, and the hon. gentleman comes to his defence with but scant reason. For, if the people of this Province ever come to realize the losses sustained by Dominion interference in the disputed territory, there is no honest man amongst them, be he Conservative or Reformer, Tory or Grit, who will say my expression that it has been a shameless plundering is a whit too strong. (Cheers.) If these limits were put up to public competition then there might be some appearance of disposing of them honestly, but the system which is being pursued goes to show conclusively that the Dominion is being plundered if it be found that the timber does belong to it, and if the timber belongs to this Province that the Province is being plundered. When it can be told that one of these limits bought from the Dominion for $20,000, was less than six months afterwards put on the Chicago market for $750,000, it shows the way in which the territory is being plundered. Our son of Ontario thinks that this is a good thing to laugh at. It proves what I said. Sir John Macdonald may do just as he likes, and no fear but that this patriot will be as mum as a babe. (Laughter.) Whatever Sir John does he may do without any apprehens on of this dutiful son of Ontario saying a single word of condemnation. Now, passing from this attitude personal to the hon. gentleman and coming to a question we have been discussing during this debate, and about which the hon. gentleman opposite speaks with so much vehemence, so far as is concerned, I shall but detain the House for a very few moments upon it. The hon. gentleman finds fault with the attitude taken by the Provincial Treasurer, because he says that taking matters as we find them now, that taking circumstances as we have them to-day, that having regard to the claims of the other Provinces upon the Dominion, and having regard to the changed condition of all the Provinces since Confederation, it would be far better for the safety of Confederation that there should be some new basis with regard to our subsidies. In all that I entirely agree with the Provincial Treasurer. I admit there is a great deal of force in what the member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) said when he took the ground that in the true interests of the people it would be far better that so far as their local expenditure is concerned the moneys to be used for that purpose should be gotten by direct taxation. I think that the result naturally would be that the people would take a great deal more active interest in the expenditures, and it might have been well if this had been provided for by the fathers of Confederation.

Mr. MEREDITH—There is one of them.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—Thanks to the hon. gentleman for reminding me. He spoke about the pigmies which we were, compared with the fathers of Confederation. Here is one of them—the Attorney-General—(great applause)—and he deserves all that the member for London (Mr. Meredith) unintentionally said about him as being a mastermind. (Renewed applause.) He has shown in the controversy about Provincial Rights, he has shown in his conduct on every constitutional question which has come up, that he is entitled to be designated as one of the master statesman of Confederation, and more than equal to the man who leads at Ottawa. (Cheers.) But here, of course, we are mere pigmies. No one among us would profess to such ability, and such aptitude, as for instance, the member for West Peterborough (Mr. Carnegie), and I am sure I would not for a moment put myself on the high level of the hon. member for London. He is another Henry Clay. No common clay could he be. (Cheers and laughter.) But to continue I say I have always entertained the conviction that so far as the true financial interests of Ontario were concerned it would have been better for this Province if the arrangement at confederation had been that all the Provinces should raise the moneys necessary for local purposes by DIRECT TAXATION.

Then the people would have taken a much greater interest in tracing out how these moneys were expended. There is no doubt whatever when a man comes in contact with the tax collector he asks himself, How much do I pay, and what must I pay it for? And if our moneys had been raised by direct taxation, the whole expenditure would have been very much more closely scrutinized. Those who framed the Confederation scheme, however, had arrived at a different conclusion, and thought it best that the Dominion Government should collect the revenue and give each Province a subsidy. The amount which was thus arrived at was intended to be sufficient for all local purposes, and the understanding was that the Provinces would not require any increase thereafter. Now, I say that if Ontario had stood still, and all the other Provinces with it since Confederation, if there were not a single additional institution, if there were nothing at all added to the cost of civil government by the addition of Departments that did not then exist, the increased cost of every service now, as compared with 1867, would of itself necessitate some readjustment. (Hear, hear.) In other words my point is this, that you cannot buy so much to-day with a dollar as you could in 1867, and the experience the world over is that the purchasing power of the dollar is growing less. Any man who has had any business experience will know that. Well, now, instead of the Provinces being smaller we have grown in population and added to our public institutions, and the cost of administration has been growing. It follows just as naturally that the amount of money necessary to meet these expenditures in 1867 cans not be sufficient to meet them to-day. We, in the Province of Ontario have managed our affairs and for that we are entitled to credit. (Cheers.) We have been able to manage our affairs far better than any of the other Provinces, and we will be able for many long years to come, without any readjustment, to avoid anything like direct taxation, yet it is just as inevitable as anything can be that as we go on increasing our population the time will in the future come when the Province will have to meet its expenditures by direct taxation, and the burthens we are keeping from the people now will have to be put back on their shoulders. Any man will see that the expenditure will advance with the development of our territory, and that the time will come when it will have to be met by taxation, as come it has already in other Provinces. Now, let us discuss this reasonably. We all have a common interest in what is best, after all, for the Province of Ontario. Is it better that the other Provinces shall be getting from year to year from the Dominion Government financial assistance, without regard to what Ontario's rights are, or is it better for all the Provinces wisely to come together again—not to break up Confederation, not to break the bond that binds the Provinces of this great Dominion, but to make it more lasting and more certain to continue in peace by making just and reasonable readjustment of the financial basis if that be needful. (Hear, hear.) I have heard different conclusions to-day as to how much we lost by the scheme of the Dominion Act of last session, but what we are certain to lose if, instead of the three-fifths of what goes to the other Provinces we pay the whole five-fifths is a more serious consideration. Hon. gentlemen opposite will not remonstrate when the other Provinces go to the Dominion authorities from time to time and get better terms, but they are quite ready to insist that the Province of Ontario must purchase

PEACE AT ANY PRICE.

I say that if at that Ottawa the policy is to be that none of the Provinces shall get any money the people of Ontario are prepared to accede it. But instead of that being the policy hon. gentlemen opposite know—we all know—that the other Provinces have been getting financial assistance, not in the shape of annual subsidies but in lump sums, and under various guises; and we who have charge of Ontario affairs would be recreant to our trust if in the face of what we see going on, and what is absolutely certain to occur again, we made no sign, and did not indicate that Ontario would not continue submitting to these raids by the other Provinces. (Cheers.) I say again, let there be any needful re-adjustment, and when such a re-adjustment does take place, let it be understood as an absolute and final settlement. That is the attitude of the Province of Ontario. We do not care to get one dollar of subsidy more than we are getting, but we do care a great deal that the other Provinces shall get these indirect and unwarranted grants, and that Ontario shall be the milk cow for the whole concern. A readjustment is the very best thing that can possibly take place for the Provinces and for the safety of Confederation. As it is now, Quebec, for example, goes to the Dominion authorities and gets two or three millions to replenish its diminished treasury. That can be repeated, and if the other Provinces do likewise then the day may come when the people of Ontario will refuse to let such a state of affairs go on, and will insist on one of two things, either that there shall be a readjustment of the financial basis which will do justice to them, or that indirect subsidies to other Provinces shall stop. That is the attitude we take. (Cheers.)

Mr. CREIGHTON—It is toned down in some skilful sentences from the position the Provincial Treasurer took.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—I am taking precisely the attitude he took. He explained the demands made by other Provinces from year to year; he stated that while they were getting these sums Ontario was getting nothing. I am showing that, taking the basis of 1867, the increased cost of the public maintenance since 1867 warrants it being said that what sufficed for the Provinces then will not carry them on in 1885, nor in 1895, and that in the future means will have to be secured in some other way than the present; that Ontario can meet its own expenditures now, with the aid of the present subsidy, but that as the other Provinces will insist upon making irregular demands at Ottawa then everybody who has an interest in this Province ought, without reference to politics, to have the courage to take the attitude that there must be no acceding to these demands unless upon some common basis of fair play between all the Provinces. I have no doubt that inasmuch as Ontario is the first Province, inasmuch as she contributes more largely to the revenues of the Dominion than any other, it will always be open to say that she pays more than she receives. Other Provinces had no right to get a re-arrangement through the Act of last session as on the basis of the population of 1881.

Mr. MEREDITH—Does not Mr. Blake want a re-arrangement for Manitoba every five years?

Hon. C. F. FRASER—I am not prepared to say that Manitoba should not be exceptionally treated, but let us know what these expenses are to be. I say under the provisions of the Act of 1884 better terms were given to some of the Provinces than were warranted by the Act of Confederation. And that leads me to say a word or or two with reference to the Act of 1884. The hon. member for North Grey (Mr. Creighton) spent a good fifteen or twenty minutes in proving, as he thought he did, that we were entitled to no credit whatever for anything done by the Dominion authorities in reference to that Act, that we had made no representations with respect to the Act of 1873, and hon. friends behind him almost spat their desks applauding him, and after saying no credit whatever is to be given to us he turns around, and in just as deliberate a manner says that we were the instruments morally and entirely responsible for the interpretation that had been put upon the Act of 1873—(laughter)—that it was our fault that the people of Ontario had been plundered by the construction that had been put upon that Act. (Applause.) I did not know we were so potent or so powerful that we could make the chief of Ontario's son do a wrong against the Province of Ontario against the dear old man's wish, but members opposite do not seem to realize that the responsibility for that outrage, that the responsibility for that robbery if there was a robbery, rests upon the shoulders of those who rule affairs at Ottawa and control a majority of that Parliament (Hear, hear.) Now, a good deal has been said in this debate about the

this year. A very little comforts these hon. gentlemen opposite. (Laughter.) They have been endeavouring to get something by which they might arouse the people, and for the first time they think they have found something which will warrant them in making a cry. One would fancy there had never been an over-expenditure before at all. The Provincial Treasurer may exercise the greatest care and deliberation, he may put his whole mind upon keeping within the estimates and still be unsuccessful. Take the affairs of any Province, nay of any municipality, or of a city like Toronto, and they cannot be managed without certain items of over-expenditure. (Cheers.) It is perfect fudge for people who have any knowledge of public affairs to pretend to say that there should not be an over-expenditure in certain items. There always will be. I do not care who happens to be in power, they will always find what I have been saying about an over-expenditure to be true. Last year was a year of depression; bad for the Dominion; bad for business. Every one knows that last year was as bad as 1878, which was another very bad year, and the one in which the N. P. was promised as a rectifier of trade. (Laughter.) Now, a comparison of our first year and those in 1878 will show that every we had a large over-expenditure also. We had $150,000 of an over-expenditure that year.

Mr. CARNEGIE—What for?

Hon. C. F. FRASER—On various things.

Mr. CARNEGIE—Not upon the same class of items.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—Well, now the hon. gentleman says not upon the class.

Mr. CARNEGIE—I said the over-expenditure was not $150,000.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—My reference is to the amount of the expenditure over that of the revenue for the year. That was because 1878 belonged to the same class of years as last year. The timber trade was very much depressed, business was very bad, and the result was that we spent more than we received. If there is any year in which a Province like Ontario, having regard to the surplus assets we have on hand, is justified in making an over-expenditure in, it is in a bad year. How do we find ourselves now? So far as our surplus is concerned we have not been in a better position any single year since Confederation down to the present day. (Cheers.) In other words, we have more available assets than we have had any day since Confederation, notwithstanding that we have spent this year close on $200,000 more than we have received. I say to the budding Finance Minister, the member for West Peterborough (Mr. Carnegie), that the amount at our credit with the Dominion is a better asset than so much cash. It is better for this Province than so much actual money, because it is virtually put in the shape of an annuity bearing five per cent. interest, and we could put it on the market to-morrow in such a form that the Province would not be called upon to pay a cent in respect of it, and yet would realize a quarter to a third of a million more upon it than we much money would represent. Now, Sir, absurd charges are made about extravagant expenditure, but from the first day I entered the Government down to the present the Province has never been in such a position as she is to day. All the fancy bookkeeping will not change the fact that after converting our available assets we would have over seven millions of money. That reminds me that the hon. member for West Kent made the funniest kind of a speech I have heard for a long time. (Laughter.) He must have been asleep somewhere when the Provincial Treasurer made his statement. He could not even have read the papers, because if he had the basis of his whole argument would have been swept away entirely. He was labouring under the delusion that the Government had six millions laid away in a bank somewhere. (Laughter.) We have invested with the Dominion Government several millions that bear interest; we have several other investments which bring $50,000 interest. (Hear, hear.) If we wanted to do what the hon. gentleman says we ought to do, that there would be no difficulty about it at all. He will see that the $2,800,000 bring a great deal more than $50,000, that we could take that $2,800,000, upon which we receive five per cent. from the Dominion finances, and retire the whole railway liability, provided those who held that railway scrip could be induced to come in and take it. But could they? How foolish then to use such arguments in broad daylight. (Laughter.) They might do where people do not understand the subject, but here what is to be gained by talking nonsense? How can we call in this railway scrip? We have to wait till it falls due.

Mr. MEREDITH—You are taking power to call it in.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—Yes, to call it in as it falls due, and to call it in before if any holders are willing. We have the power to call it in when it falls due, but we have not the power to insist or enforce and say, "Come in you holders of scrip and take your pay now."

Mr. MEREDITH—Why did not you make a straight loan?

Hon. C. F. FRASER—Ever since I came to this House there has always been some fancy bookkeeper on the other side. There is one there now, and his idea is that if we had made a straight loan we would have saved half a century hence a million or more. But a very important little two or three items are left out of this calculation, and one of these is that you require some one on the other side of the Atlantic to look after your straight loan, attend to the interest and so forth, and that costs money, so much money that for a forty years' straight loan, instead of saving anything the Province of Ontario would have been out of pocket. (Hear, hear.) So far as the annuities are concerned, we have scrip out at 6 per cent. interest. Instead of paying that we have made an arrangement for paying 4½. It is just as if the people who held the scrip had said, instead of giving us six per cent. we will enlarge the time for payment and lower the interest to 4½ per cent. (Cheers.) I have kept the House longer than I intended, but I cannot sit down without referring to some charges made by the member for West Peterborough (Mr. Carnegie.) He undertook to criticize certain expenditures, but a man of his ability, who professes to have some ability and experience in financial matters, or not do it at all.

OUGHT TO DO THIS HONESTLY

Mr. CARNEGIE—Thank.

Hon. C. F. FRASER—The hon. gentleman is thankful for very small favours. (Laughter.) The hon. gentleman criticized the expenditure on cargoes. He is great on little things. These petty trifles of one kind or another are fitted to his mind. He told the House, for instance, with great deliberation, that the expenditure for work on the grounds around these buildings was in excess of the amount spent in 1882. Now, this is a tremendous thing to spread himself on. (Laughter.) If we ought to be condemned for anything it is that the ground has been neglected, and that we spend far too little on it. It would have been, perhaps, the right and proper thing to do, if instead of incurring so small an expense, we had spent a sum large enough to put these grounds in decent order. I think it is no credit to us to have a fine square in a magnificent city like this, and that we do not incur a sufficient expenditure to put it in proper order.

Mr. MEREDITH—Why did you not?

Hon. C. F. FRASER—If we had you would have charged us with making an extravagant expenditure. If anything can be said against us it is that we spend too little. (Hear, hear.) The people of the city of Toronto have a right to expect that grounds like these in the heart of the city should receive a very considerable expenditure. If the member for West Peterborough is not more careful he will become a bloated monopolist of that very nasty article called shabby principle. (Applause.)

CAMIOLA:

A Girl with A Fortune,

BY

JUSTIN McCARTHY. M.P.,

Author of "The Comet of a Season," "Maid of Athens," "History of Our Own Times," &c.

We have much pleasure in announcing the conclusion of arrangements for the early publication in the SATURDAY GLOBE and in THE WEEKLY GLOBE of a new and splendid Story by that highly popular and attractive author, Mr. Justin McCarthy, M.P. While distinguished as the historian of Our Own Times, of which he has given a picture with a force and beauty of word-painting charming as any romance, he has achieved not less eminence as a novelist. His stories have commanded the warmest encomiums of the Press. His plots are remarkably skilful and ingenious, his characters, although often taking extraordinary ways, are extremely natural; his colloquial parts are always good; even his descriptive matter is thoroughly entertaining; and his language and style of treatment bright, pleasant, and attractive. Such are the qualities and merits which our readers may rest fully assured will characterize the new story "Camiola: a Girl with a Fortune." The Novel opens with a singularly delightful picture of Fitzurseham, and before many chapters are read a fascinating interest is felt in the further development of that evidently remarkable character, Mrs. Tollen, whose vivacious intellect, sparkling wit, and perfectly original ideas will afford one of many fertile sources of pleasure in this Mr. McCarthy's latest work.

The opening chapters of the new Story will appear in our columns about March 21, and we shall much appreciate the cordial co-operation of present readers of our fiction in making this announcement widely known amongst their friends.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS ON NOVELS BY JUSTIN McCARTHY.

"THE COMET OF A SEASON."

"Entertaining from the first line to the last."—Spectator.

"All are good studies of character. 'The Comet of a Season' is pleasant and clever."—Athenæum

"A work decidedly worthy of the accomplished author."—Figaro.

"There is abundant evidence of the brightness and lightness of Mr. McCarthy's imagination, and of his power of seeing into the motives of mankind."—Scotsman.

"In all Mr. McCarthy's recent novels there is bright originality in the central conception, and an ingenious picturesqueness in the grouping of the subsidiary characters, which are irresistibly attractive."—Academy.

"Always a flavour of world-wide experience, of great familiarity with the fancies and follies of the hour."—Manchester Examiner.

"A decidedly clever novel. Many of the scenes—such as the fire in the church and Montana's first revelation of his mission—are described with great power."—St. James' Gazette.

"Has from first to last a clear, subdued sparkle, very pleasant to the eye and grateful to the fancy. One of the best novels of its class we have recently had."—British Quarterly Review.

"The conception is worthy of Balzac: the execution is exceedingly skilful, and by no means deficient in appropriate power. The interest of the story is increased by an easy avoidance of everything in the shape of bad taste."—Graphic.

"Mr. McCarthy's new novel may be confidently recommended to any one who wants amusement. The characters form excellent contrasts, and mix well."—Westminster Review.

"MAID OF ATHENS."

"Throughout a piece of free and graceful writing, marked with much original thought and observation."—St. James' Gazette.

"Light and amusing."—Athenæum.

"The production of an artist who has discovered the true bent of his genius in fiction."—Scotsman.

"From first to last a very charming novel."—Morning Post.

"So pleasant a book that it would be easy to extend our notice of it."—Standard.

"Clever, and in parts even a brilliant performance."—Pall Mall Gazette

"The various characters in the novel are admirably drawn."—British Quarterly Review.

"The light of chivalry plays round his short story, which the author has so skilfully interwoven with the threads of the chief interest as to lift the whole work far out of the range of ordinary fiction."—Daily News.

"Though Mr. Justin McCarthy often takes us far afield in the company of his heroes and heroines, he has the capacity of investing all places he touches with interest and inspiring us with concern for the fate of those who move in the most distant scenes."—Cork Examiner.

"The story is a pretty one, and is well worked out. The skill with which the author has blended the lighter with the dark features of his (Margaritsa) characters is beyond all praise."—Academy.

"It is an almost perfect piece of workmanship. A scholar, a critic, a chronicler of his own time, like the author, must have had strong temptations to put scholarship, analysis, and antiquarianism into his story; but Mr. Justin McCarthy, when he is writing a novel, is all novelist."—Spectator.

"Is a book which has almost every quality considerated in a good novel. The story is constructed with a perfect art. The moral tone is healthful, and the skill displayed, both in the dialogue and the descriptive parts, is of a very high order. The characters are real men and women, and not mere puppets."—Congregationalist.

"The entire story is interesting and amusing."—Literary World.

Our Provincial Parliament.

How Our Local Lawgivers are Employed.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th.

Hon. Mr. Fraser's bill, to amend Division Courts Act, received its second reading to-day and his bill to amend the Registry Act was also advanced a stage. It provides for the registration of maps and plans of towns and villages in the country registry office.

Hon. Mr. Mowat's bill respecting the district of Rainy River received its second reading. It separates this district from Thunder Bay for registration purposes, and provides for the appointment of officers.

Hon. Mr. Ross stated that, in compliance with the wishes of about fifty members, it had been decided to visit the Agricultural College and Model Farm at Guelph next day.

The debate on the motion to go into Committee on Supply was resumed by Dr. McLaughlin. He congratulated the Treasurer on the full and satisfactory character of his financial statement, and called attention to the weakness of Mr. Creighton's attack. It was thought by the Opposition enough to show that the expenditure of the year had slightly exceeded the estimates, but except it could be shown that this increased expenditure was unnecessary and unjustifiable, it was simply established that the Government had neglected no reasonable duty nor denied the people any reasonable demand. He remarked that the Opposition could see nothing wrong in an over-expenditure of $1,145,717 by the Ottawa Government. He justified in detail the expenditure in excess of the estimates, showing that in times of depression the cost of the administration of justice was invariably higher, that the rapid settling up of new districts made a large outlay for colonization roads imperative, that the costs of teachers' examinations were unusually heavy, that $11,000 of the amount over-expended had been given to the municipalities, that the "Brawling Brood" had cost the country $8,000, that the Boundary expenses had been heavy, that the Board of Health was a new item, and that not a single expenditure of the whole year had been or could be successfully attacked.

Mr. Carnegie blossomed out in a full blown speech on provincial finances. It was the usual pettifogging grumble about trifles, and was full of scrap book and largely composed of matter he has used time and again for the past dozen years. He kept the floor by moving the adjournment of the debate.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th.

Yesterday the House did not sit—for two reasons—it was a holiday, and the majority of the members paid the expected visit to the Agricultural College, Guelph. They were entertained at lunch at the College, and speeches were made praising the management and efficiency of the College. Even Mr. Carnegie said he was not opposed to the College, but the motion he gave notice of in the House referred to the management of it. He has, doubtless, discovered that some of the cows wasted their turnips in feeding, and we may expect a grand oration denouncing the Government for its extravagance.

He seems to consider himself ready, for on the opening of the House he seemed exceedingly anxious for the printing of the report of the College.

He started out again on his mission of demolishing the "finance minister."

Some idea of the fate that met Mr. Carnegie may be inferred from the fact that he was followed by Hon. Mr. Pardee.

Hon. Mr. Pardee's speech was such a complete and cutting dissection of Mr. Carnegie's grumbling generalities and so able a defence of the financial policy and practice of the Government that no condemnation of it could do it justice, therefore we issue it in full this week in supplement form, together with Hon Mr. Fraser's speech, which has been described as a "masterpiece of sarcasm, logic and eloquence."

The debate was continued by Messrs. Waters and Balfour on the Government side, and on the Opposition by Messrs. Clancy, Merrick and Meredith. The latter made an energetic speech, the gist of which was to justify his treachery towards Ontario, and to praise Sir John Macdonald as infallible.

Hon. Mr. Fraser gave Mr. Meredith, who posed as a "son of Ontario," a terrible skinning, which the double dealing member for London will long smart under.

The motion to go into Committee of Supply was carried, and the House adjourned.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th.

Hon. Mr. Fraser in reply to Mr. Clarke stated that the Government had under serious consideration the health, safety and welfare of factory operatives. The Government did not feel warranted, however, in enacting or enforcing legislation while the matter of jurisdiction as between the Local and Federal authorities was undecided.

Mr. Young's motion for full information respecting negotiations between the Local and Federal Governments respecting the final settlement of the financial affairs of the Province of Canada, was agreed to.

Mr. Harcourt brought up his motion for information respecting the admission of women to University College, and Hon. Mr. Ross went into detail of the provisions made for their admission to the College, and intimated that steps would at once be taken to make more adequate accommodation.

Mr. Wood's motion was agreed to for copies of correspondence between Mr. Coe and the Crown Lands Department relative to lands sold him in 1883, with prices, etc.

The Provincial Treasurer introduced a bill to authorize payment of money in lieu of railway aid certificates.

Turnbull's Dress-makers have been looking for a slack time to take holidays, but the Choice Stock of Material and the way they get them up has brought a steady flow of customers all the slack season.

THE BRIBERY PLOT.

Bunting et al. Plead Not Guilty After Some Hesitation.

A SPECIAL JURY TO BE ASKED FOR.

The demurrer entered by Messrs. Bunting, Meek, Kirkland, and Wilkinson against the indictment charging them with conspiracy to bribe certain members of the Ontario Government, having been overruled, the defendants were called last Thursday to decide whether they would plead to the charge or allow sentence to be pronounced. It was understood that the case would be called in the Queen's Bench Divisional Court before Chief Justice Wilson, Justice Armour, and Justice O'Connor, and several counsel retained in the case were on hand when the court opened. When the court adjourned at 1:30 p. m. for recess, the conspiracy case has not been called, and after recess a case that had occupied the greater part of the morning, was again taken up. At noon one of the defendants informed the Globe representative that it had not then been decided whether they would plead and go on with the trial at the next Assizes or not. At this time a hurried consultation was being held in the library at Osgoode Hall by Hon. Stephen Richards, representing Mr. Bunting, Mr. Caswell for Mr. Kirkland and Mr. Meek, when it was decided what course the defendants should take in the matter. Shortly after this was filed in the office of the Registrar of the Queen's Bench Division, on behalf of Mr. Bunting. Later in the afternoon pleas of "not guilty" were also filed on behalf of the other defendants Wilkinson, Meek, and Kirkland. The case will therefore come up for trial at the next Assizes, and it is understood that a special jury will be asked for.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

In and Around Our Legislative Halls.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17th.

The Tory papers that circulated the report that Sir Tilley's temporary loans, amounting to thirteen millions, had been paid by the proceeds of the last sale of bonds, were a little too anxious to vindicate the Finance Minister's colossal ability. The latter said to-day, in answer to Sir Richard Cartwright, that the loans were not paid.

Sir Leonard explained his bill affecting benefit societies—assessment associations, such as Oddfellows, Masons, Foresters, United Workmen. They were to be permitted to do business under certain conditions without deposit, but they must become subject to the inspection of the Superintendent of Insurance. It was not proposed to interefere with associations chartered by the Local Legislatures.

The second reading of the bill to extend the jurisdiction of the Maritime Courts of Ontario was carried. The bill provides that seamen's wages, pilotage, towage, salvage and other claims be made first liens on vessels.

Mr. Casey moved for a copy of the separate report of the finding of Judge Clarke as arbitrator on Section "B" in regard to the award given by the other arbitrators. He referred to the statement in circulation that of the $395,000 given the contractors $275,000 were allowed for damages caused by delays in the construction of section 15. The late Minister of Railways had informed the House that the Government would strenuously oppose the payment of the award, but it did not do so. Sir Charles Tupper had read from Judge Clarke's report, and afterwards, when its production was demanded, the claim was made that it was a confidential document. He held it was public property made by a paid official, and should be produced.

Mr. Pope denied any knowledge of the document, and his refusal to ask Sir Charles Tupper respecting its whereabouts, leads to the conclusion that the incriminating document was destroyed like—certain telegrams we all know of. The excuse that the report was a confidential one will not hold water. It related to a public matter and merely endorsing it "confidential" would not justify the facts being kept in the dark.

Mr. Blake moved for papers connected with the proposed Trent Valley Canal. He quoted from the appendix of the report of the Minister of Railways and Canals, showing that the old plan had been abandoned. The report mentioned the idea of utilising the ice on the lakes and rivers to make surveys. He inquired what had been done and what was proposed to be done. He pointed out that it was of the first importance that the country should be improved. Hon. Mr. Blake also moved for plans and papers of the proposed route of the C.P.R. from Port Moody to English Bay on Coal Harbour. Hon. Mr. Blake also moved for papers referring to the projected "Short Line Railway" between Oxford and New Glasgow, N.S.

The large sum, amounting to over $6,000, paid to H. W. Bennett, of Prescott, for printimmigration pamphlets has been explained. Many publishers of weekly papers supporting the Government have been very angry at the payment of such a large amount to Mr. Bennett, but it is now asserted that a number of Tory wire-pullers resident in Ottawa shared in the profits of the Bennett job. This explanation will no doubt prove satisfactory to the party.

The national debt continues to grow at an enormous rate. A statement brought down to-day shows that it was on the 1st of February $255,966,416, and several large amounts have been borrowed since. The net public debt on the date mentioned was $192,123,080, an increase of ten millions since the 1st of July.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19th.

Yesterday was a dies non in the House, there being no sitting, and to-day there were very few members at the opening of the sitting, the attention of the ministers being taken up with the Licensed Victuallers deputation, over a thousand strong. The usual courtesy was not extended to the deputation of placing a room in the Parliament buildings at their disposal, but they were forced to "hire a hall"—the Opera House, —at a cost of $100. After hearing the memorial of the deputation praying chiefly for compensation for damages to vested rights done by the Scott Act, Sir John addressed the deputation, and managed to do as much dodging and evasion as possible. The acknowledgement that he voted for the Scott Act's passage rather disgusted some of the supporters of the Chieftain who has always posed as a particular friend of the Licensed Victuallers. The deputation received the impression that Sir John promised some sort of legislation respecting their grievances, but they have been fooled so often that they will watch him closely to see that he does not dodge them this time. There is no doubt but that the general adoption of the Scott Act will injure the liquor trade, but they may be sure of this, that they will get no relief from Sir John unless he can see that it is in his power to turn it to some political account.

In Parliament there was not much done. Petitions in favor of a Factory Act were presented, and Mr. Charlton introduced his bill to prevent cruelty to animals.

Hon. Mr. Caron stated that Onderdonk had been granted extension of time on his contract.

Mr. Landry moved the second reading of his bill to limit the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, stating that the Court as now constituted was unsatisfactory to Quebec. Hon. Mr. Blake showed that this bill had been brought in year after year without any progress being made. Sir John, he said, had promised to give redress but had failed to find the courage. The debate was continued, and Sir John demanding that the bill be voted down, down it was voted 125 to 34.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company are preparing to resume operations against the Dominion treasury. Messrs. Stephen, Van Horne, and their secretaries arrived today, and will probably make a formal demand upon the Government at once. The article in yesterday's issue of the chief Tory organ is variously regarded here. Some look upon it as a blustering threat on the part of the Canadian Pacific Company that they must have all they want or the country will be ruined, while others think the conclusion to be drawn is that the members of the Syndicate have made all they can out of their contract and are anxious to get the work taken off their hands. There is a general suspicion that the Pacific Company have not expended the money obtained from the Government upon their railway. It is charged that four millions of dollars were paid Mr. Duncan McIntyre for his interest in the Company, and that in some round-about way the money obtained from the Government was used for that purpose. It is also alleged that the Company lost large sums of money in fruitless attempts to boom their own stock. Mr. Charlton has given notice of his intention to ask the Government what was the total floating debt of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company on the first day of the present month.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20th.

The House to-day went into committee on the bill for taking the census in the North-West territories. To show that this bill is largely intended to distribute Government pap to needy hangers on, it is proposed to take the census of Keewatin, so entirely composed of Indians that the labour and attending expenses of going over a vast extent of territory will be largely thrown away. Hon. Mr. Pope seems bound to provide for his friends, and Hon. Mr. Mackenzie's suggestion to get information from Hudson Bay officials before going to the expense, was, of course, unheeded.

Mr. Cameron's bill to amend the criminal law to allow the accused to testify in his defence provoked a lively discussion, and the six months hoist was voted down by 87 to 55. The bill was referred to a special committee.

The Senate after a week's rest actually had a session to-day, and succeeded admirably in doing nothing.

One of the Tory law makers was a law breaker to-day. Mr. Landry, M. P., made a brutal assault on Mr. Charles Langelier, a Quebec journalist, who was visiting the House. Mr. Landry had so little sense of shame for his wanton attack, that he passed around to admiring Tory members the whip with which he committed the assault.

A return showing the names of applicants for Northwest Timber limits is composed chiefly of Tory members of Parliament or their friends. Wideawake fellows these, to use their position of representatives to enrich themselves.

NEWS NOTES.

A despatch from London says the Duke of Edinburgh is indisposed.

An Independent Irish Conservative party has been formed.

The proposed new Court House in Toronto will cost about $200,000.

New South Wales will pay the entire expenses of the contingent being sent from that colony to the Soudan.

An oyster famine is imminent at Baltimore, owing to the ice and severe weather.

The annexation fever has reached Garden Island, the inhabitants being desirous of joining part of the county of Frontenac.

President Arthur gave his last public reception as the Chief Executive of the United States at Washington on Saturday night.

The Niagara river is blocked from Queenston, Ont., to Niagara and two miles out into the lake, making an ice bridge nine miles long.

There is great destitution among the Stony Indians. A band came into Calgary recently saying they had had nothing to eat for five days.

The discharge of Short, who attempted to assassinate Captain Phelan in O'Donovan Rossa's office in New York recently, was refused by the court on Saturday.

Five people were cremated by a fire at Philadelphia Saturday morning, and several others probably fatally injured in making their escape by jumping from the third storey.

The accident on the Virginia Midland railway on Thursday last has caused a loss to the Adams Express Company of a quarter of a million dollars on money burned in the wreck.

The Lord Mayor of London has issued an appeal to the public for funds to assist the large number of people thrown out of work because of the depression of trade.

During the past year there were 2,496 convictions for Sunday drunkenness in Scotland, though in that country a public-house cannot be legally opened on Sunday.

Essex county reports show 30.1 births to the 1,000 population in 1884, being the third highest county in this respect in the province. In deaths the county stands sixth, reporting 12.6 to the 1,000.

The Indians in the vicinity of Fort Reno, Kansas, are showing a hostile spirit in consequence of the aggressions of the Oklahoma boomers on their territory. An attack on the fort is threatened.

The inhabitants of a section of West Virginia are threatened with famine owing to the failure of last year's crops. The supply of grain is nearly exhausted and cattle are dying by hundreds.

Mr. Gladstone's health is completely shattered. A special despatch says the Premier has scarcely slept since the news of Gordon's death reached him. Sir Andrew Clarke considers his condition very serious.

The Caughnawaga Indians intend banqueting the braves of their tribe upon their return from the Soudan. The list of invited guests include Lord Melgund, the grand chiefs of Oka and St. Regis, and several members of Parliament.

His Excellency the Governor-General has received a telegram from Earl Derby stating that the offer of a Canadian regiment cannot be accepted owing to the lapse of time necessary to put them in the field for active service. Her Majesty considers that the force already under orders is sufficient.

The Local Legislature of British Columbia, by a vote of sixteen to seven in a full House, has ratified the agreement entered into between the Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, whereby the latter agree to locate the terminus of the railway at Coal Harbor on consideration of receiving a grant of six thousand acres from the Government.

A Dublin despatch says the Castle authorities are alarmed owing to the probability of a Fenian uprising. The constables declare since the fall of Khartoum and the news of the Soudan disasters there has been a jubilation in Fenian ranks. The Fenians are only awaiting the intelligence that the Mahdi has smashed the Britishers to strike a blow for freedom.

Mr. Van Wagner, the Alabama Claims Commissioner in London, is considering 150 English claims for damages from the Alabama award, amounting to $1,000,000. The largest single claim is for $25,000. Twenty-five of the heaviest claims have been adjudged, amounting to $200,000. These are subject to the decision of the court at Washington, after an examination of the evidence taken at London. Owing to proof being defective from lapse of time, a large percentage of the English claims will fail. In the examination the American counsel are very watchful, in order to preclude absolutely all claims of persons who sympathized with or aided the Confederates during the war of the rebellion.

The national monument to George Washington was dedicated with imposing ceremonies at the United States Capital on Saturday. The site of the monument is on the north bank of the Potomac, south of the Executive mansion, and in almost as forsaken a place as that where Cleopatra's Needle once stood on the banks of the Nile. The monument is surrounded by thirty acres of ground. It lies on the banks of the Potomac, and when the electric lights are burning on its top it is said they can be seen thirty miles away. One gets no idea of the immensity of the monument in looking at it from a distance. It is only when you come close up to it that you appreciate the fact that nearly a hundred thousand tons of stone are looking down upon you. Each of those sides which at a distance look no more than two feet broad at the base are fifty-five feet. It is a good sized house that has twenty feet front, and each side of this monument at its foot, if located in a residence part of the city, would cover as much space as three good sized dwellings. The slope of the monument from the foot to the top is very gradual. Its summit is thirty-five feet square.

NEWS FROM SOUDAN.

A DASH AT THE REBELS.

Buller Meets the Enemy—The Australian Contingent—Extracts from General Gordon's Despatches—A Gordon Memorial.

ABU KLEA, Feb. 23.—Gen. Buller commenced a systematic shelling of the Arab lines on the 17th inst. Two well-directed shots did the enemy great damage, one exploding amidst a group engaged in placing a howitzer on the summit of the hill, and another removing the wheel of a gun carriage. Lord Beresford also seriously injured the enemy with Gardner guns. Major Wardrop, with 18 men, stole cautiously round the enemy's right, and found they had only a few hundred riflemen on the hills and no reserve spearmen. Wardrop and his men, keeping out of sight, sent volleys at 800 yards on the enemy's flank. Leaving one man at this point to continue the fire, he took twelve others and pursued the same tactics at three successive hills, giving the Arabs the impression that fresh bodies of the British were arriving. The Mehdi's forces became panic-stricken, ceased firing, and decamped towards Metemneh, taking their guns, dead and wounded with them. A few Arab scouts only were left three miles off to watch Buller's movements. There has been no sign of the enemy since. Buller will advance to Gakdul as soon as reinforcements arrive from Korti. The British loss during the engagement was four killed and twenty-five wounded.

The War Office finds it exceedingly difficult to put forth an explanation of the Soudan disasters and retreats which will keep up the people, and at the same time make them tolerant of delay. The latest effort of the authorities in this direction is a masterpiece of ingenuity. They announce a plan of campaign which is only equalled for brilliant strategy by the man who, being floored in a fight, kept his opponent down by inserting his nose between the opponent's teeth. Gen Lord Wolseley is now straining every nerve to get the scattered portions of his army together preparatory to retreating down the Nile. If he succeeds in making that retreat a heartfelt thanksgiving will be sent up from many homes in England. The prevailing fear now is that Gen. Wolseley with what troops he has at Korti, may be compelled to retreat as best he can, leaving the little bands under Gen. Brackenbury and Buller to their fate. In the face of these gloomy facts the War Office asks the public to believe that Gen. Wolseley is simply

DRAWING THE ARABS INTO A TRAP.

The theory is that Gen. Wolseley is inclined to allow El Mahdi to concentrate his forces at Berber, believing that he will by that time have become so full of fanatical zeal that he will want to proceed to Mecca and there proclaim himself the head of the Mohammedan Church and the commander of the faithful. To do this El Mahdi would have to march his troops across the Bisharin desert and hills from Berber to Suakim and there embark for a voyage across the Red Sea to some point on the coast of Arabia, whence a march to Mecca would be comparatively easy. The place where the Mahdi is to be entrapped while carrying out this programme which Gen. Wolseley is said to have arranged for him is Suakim. To get to the coast El Mahdi would have to attack and capture Suakim, but by the time he could get to Suakim, Gen. Graham would also be there with the flower of the English army. Thus the task of "mashing the Mahdi" is to be rendered easy, and British prestige is to be restored. El Mahdi has not yet signified his intention of carrying out his share of the pleasing programme.

FAILED TO REACH KHARTOUM.

A messenger sent to Khartoum from Korti last Monday failed to reach there and has returned. He met a native, who told him he had been present at the capture of Khartoum. The soldiers had killed Gordon with swords and spears. They considered him the cause of their trouble, and feared that the Mahdi would spare him. All the regular soldiers of the garrison were spared, except the men who were holding the Boorigate.

THE NEW SOUTH WALES VOLUNTEERS.

The popular fund for the equipment of the New South Wales contingent now exceeds $150,000. Enthusiastic meetings are being held for the purpose of taking steps to urge the Home Government to hasten the despatch of the contingent to the front. Eight thousand persons attended the meeting.

A GORDON MEMORIAL.

A meeting, presided over by the Lord Mayor, is to be held in London to promote the work of securing a national memorial to Gen. Gordon.

GORDON'S ADVICE.

Gen. Gordon instructed the messenger he sent from Khartoum on December 14th, to deliver the following message to Gen. Wolseley:—"Don't scatter your troops. Bring plenty of troops. The enemy is numerous. We still hold Omdurman. The Mahdi's works are within rifle shot. Come quickly. Don't leave Berber in your rear. Keep the enemy in your front. Don't let rumours of your approach spread." In another letter written between April and July 1884, Gen. Gordon says, "Let the relief expedition follow the right bank of the Nile from Wady Halfa to Berber in the hope of surprising Berber. If you find it impossible to follow the Nile route, take the Massowah-Sinkitat-Kassala road. I would not leave Khartoum if I could." August 24 Gen. Gordon wrote to the English naval commander at Massowah:—"We have five months' provisions and hope to get more. Our country's role has not been very noble in Egypt or the Soudan."

A horrible scene was enacted on Monday at the gallows in Exeter, England. John Lee, the Babbicombe murderer, was to have been hanged for the murder of his employer. Three times the unfortunate man was placed on the death trap with the noose around his neck, and each time the machinery refused to work. The execution was finally postponed pending instructions from the Home Office.

"Said Aaron to Moses Let's cut off our noses."

Aaron must have been a sufferer from catarrh. The desperation which catarrh produces is often sufficient to make people say and do many rash things, and many continue suffering just as if no such cure as Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy existed. It cures every case from the simplest to the most complicated, and all the consequences of Catarrh. A person once cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will not be apt to take cold again, as it leaves the mucous membranes healthy and strong. By druggists.

Mr. W. R. Lazier, Bailiff, etc., Belleville, writes: "I find Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil the best medicine I have ever used in my stable. I have used it for bruises, scratches, wind puffs and cuts, and in every case it gave the best satisfaction. We use it as a household remedy for colds, burns, etc., and it is a perfect panacea. It will remove warts by paring them down and applying it occasionally."

PERSONAL.

Last Sunday Rev. Mr. Keefer occupied the pulpit of the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

On Tuesday morning, Mr. Joseph McClelland, Manager of the Saved Army Trumpet, Capt. Piper and Lieut. J. Harry Wyatt, went to Cobourg to attend the meeting of Saved Army Council of War.

Mr. Charles W. Ewing, organist of St. John's Church, has been summoned home to England by a pressing business call and will be absent about six weeks. His place will be filled during his absence by Mr. F. E. Bell.

On the occasion of his departure for California, Mr. Fred Elvige, employed in the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company's Works, was presented with a handsome meerschaum pipe and smoking outfit, accompanied with an address, by his fellow-employers.

On Monday morning, Messrs. J. B. McWilliams, County Master, Robert Weir, Past County Master, Richard Waram, District Master Lakefield, and Wm. King, District Master, Peterborough went to attend the Grand Lodge of the Loyal Orange Association, in Kingston.

The Port Hope Times, under the heading "Rev. A. H. Munro," says: "This eloquent divine will deliver a lecture, 'Models from Life and for Life,' in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Port, on Friday evening next." We can assure those of our southern neighbours who may be wise enough to attend this lecture, that they will enjoy a rare treat.

Mr. N. Lush, of this town, is "cock of the walk" wherever he exhibits his splendid Langshans. He wiped out the prize list at the Ontario Association Exhibition, Guelph, besides capturing the silver medal. In Peterborough he was equally successful. At Bowmanville the red tickets glowed on his Langshan coops, for both fowls and chicks, and at Ottawa, last week, he took first prize for fowls, the only class he competed in. Would it be safe to suggest, as a secret of Mr. Lush's success, that he is so constantly employed in making good bread that his fowls must be well-bred also? May his success spur him on to new hen-thusiasm.

will be held on Monday, the Sixth day of April 1885, at the hour of half past seven o'clock in the evening, for the purpose of passing a By-law for stopping up the road allowance established by By-law No. 55, passed by the said Council on the twenty-sixth day of December 1879, which said road allowance is particularly described as follows:—Commencing at the intersection of the west rail of the Midland Railway track, with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, at a distance of ninty links more or less Westerly from the West side of the said original allowance for road, thence Northerly along the said rail three chains and sixty links more or less to the intersection of said rail with the West side of said allowance for road, thence Northerly along the West side of said original allowance for road, three chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonabee, the described line to be the East side of said new road, and the new road to be sixty-six feet wide. And for opening in lieu of the said road so stopped up, the original road allowance, which was stopped up by the said By-law, the said road so stopped up and now proposed to be opened, being described as follows: Commencing on the West side of the said Concession road, at its intersection with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, thence Northerly along the West side thereof, six chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonabee, thence Easterly along the said river road, one chain and thirty links more or less to the East side of said Concession road, thence Southerly along the East side thereof six chains and seventy links more or less to the North side of Church street, thence Westerly along the North side of Church street, to the place of beginning.

All persons claiming that their lands may be prejudicially affected by the stopping up and opening of the said road allowances, are entitled to be heard in person or by counsel at the said meeting of the council, upon their petitioning to be so heard.

Dated at Lakefield the 12th day of Feb 1885.

ALEXANDER BELL,
Clerk of the said Village.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

THE RED FLAG.

BY

M. E. BRADDON.

Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc. etc. etc.

"Anything new?" repeated a man in a group that stood on the bridge watching the burning of the Lyric Theatre, as if it had been a free representation, waiting for the Chatelet to take fire on the other side of the wide lurid street, mementarily expecting the dark towers of Notre Dame to vomit flames—"anything new? Yes, we live in stirring times. There is always something new. The Versaillais have taken the Pantheon, the stronghold of the Commune, just as the Federals were going to blow it up. Millière has been shot. That is new. Have you heard of the massacre of the Dominicans? That is new. And Serizier has taken to his heels—Serizier, the colonel of the 101st battalion; Serizier, the hero of Issy and Chatillon. The colonel is gone, and the battalion is scattered."

The Dominicans! At that name Kathleen drew closer to the group, as near as she could to the speaker, gazing at him with wild wide-open eyes. The Dominicans! Almost the last words she had heard from her husband's lips were an indignant protest against the ill-treatment of these good monks.

"I would shed my last drop of blood rather than that a hair of Father Captier's head should be hurt by those devils," he had said a few minutes before he left the house.

She went close up to the man who had spoken, and who was now staring, open-mouthed, at the burning theatre. She laid her hand upon his arm.

"Is that true?" she asked. "Has there been any harm done to the Dominican Fathers of the school of Albert the Great? My husband was at school there, and he loves them as if they were his own flesh and blood."

"Your husband's sons will have to find another school, citoyenne," answered the man, with a cynical air. "The Dominican school is sacked, and the shaven-polls have been given their passport for paradise."

"Murdered!"

"Every one of them. Shot down like pheasants in a battue, this afternoon, yonder in the Avenue d'Italie," pointing far away to the south. "There is nothing left of the nest or of the magpies, citoyenne."

She clasped her hands before her face, and reeled against the parapet of the bridge. Nobody noticed her, or cared for her. The roof of the theatre was falling in—a shower of burning fragments was blown across the dark water like a fiery rain. On the other side of the river the glare, the smoke, the stench of burning were intensifying with every moment.

"Will there be anything left of Paris but dust and ashes when the sun rises?" asked one of the bystanders.

Kathleen leant against the bridge, motionless, speechless, paralysed by fear. She tried to think. But for some moments thought was impossible; her brain was clouded, benumbed, frozen. Then came reflection. Gaston had said that he would die to save them, fight for them to the death, these good fathers; and they had all been murdered, and Gaston was missing. He who had given her such faithful love had abandoned her to desolation and despair.

Was it likely that he would so abandon her, unless a higher duty claimed him? Was it likely that he would leave her for a space of four days in ignorance of his fate, unless he were a prisoner—or unless he were dead? Paris reeked with blood, every street was the scene of murder, and he was gone from her—gone with the rest of those victims of whom the crowd spoke with such seeming lightness, while it looked on at the burning of the city as at the fireworks which conclude some grand fete.

They were waiting for the conflagration to burst from yonder mighty pile, from painted window, and tower and battlement, from nave and transept, from clerestory and roof: Notre Dame was to be the bouquet.

"Tell me, sir," said Kathleen, in a hoarse half-strangled voice, "was there any one else killed in the Avenue d'Italie—any one besides the Dominicans—any one who was in company with the good fathers?"

"Yes, there were a few understrappers, I believe, servants of the school."

"No one else?"

"What do I know? The news has passed from mouth to mouth. There is no official bulletin, citoyenne. The Commune keeps these things quiet. It is only hearsay."

Only hearsay! A ray of hope lit up the blackness of her soul. Only hearsay! And how many wild stories had been told in Paris within the last week, how horrors had been bruited about which had been but bubbles of foul imagining! The story of the bodies found in the church of Saint-Laurent, for instance. The desecrated corpses exposed at the church-door, the supposed victims of priestly crime; foul fictions invented to stimulate the populace to carnage and spoliation.

"Is it far to the Avenue d'Italie?" she asked.

The bystanders answered carelessly, one saying one thing, one another, each and all absorbed in the awful rapture of the scene, and caring not at all for individual needs and feelings.

One o'clock struck from the clock-tower of Notre Dame. Kathleen was footsore, faint, her eyes burning with fever, her mouth parched with thirst. She looked down at the river, but the stream seemed to be running with liquid fire, not water. There was no fountain near. She must get on somehow, without the longed-for refreshment of a cup of cold water. There was no use in asking for information here, where the news was only hearsay, where people answered her carelessly. In the Avenue d'Italie, on the scene of this hideous crime, as the thing were true, she must more easily learn the actual facts—who had fallen, how many. There she might learn the worst.

She crossed to the left bank of the river, and began her pilgrimage of despair. The distance was long, every step was weariness and pain after her days's wanderings. All the length of the Boulevard St. Michel, along which the ambulance-wagons were passing in dismal procession, crimson-with blood. Under their scanty covering were heaped a confused mass of corpses. The dead were being carried away by wagon-loads. On and on, past a barricade at which the men of the quarter were working, old-gray-headed men among them, men who only wanted to die peacefully at home with wife and children, and who, knowing that death was inevitable, struck heroically to their posts. On and on, till the blaze of the conflagration, the roar of the flames, seemed to be left behind. But not the dull thunder of the cannonade, the sharp crack of pistol-shots. Carnage was audible on every side.

Blood everywhere—the pavement was stained with it; the doors and door-posts were splashed with it; the gutters ran with it. Refuse of all kinds littered the road; butt-ends of muskets fragments of belts, tails of coats, strips of blouses, caps, cartouch-boxes, shoes; and here, on the open space in front of a barricade, the soldiers who had eaten their soup had lain down to sleep by the side of the slain, the living mingled with the dead. Kathleen looked at the sleepers shudderingly in the cold clear moonlight. The clouds had drifted away, and that scene of carnage was steeped in the silvery light. Impossible to pass that spot with feet undyed in blood, impossible to avoid seeing those dead faces. There, with arms thrown wide apart and face turned to the sky, calm, proud even in death, lies the young lieutenant of artillery whom Kathleen remembered to have seen in the early morning, sitting astride a cannon, thoughtful, with arms folded, and face prophetic of doom. Yes, it is he and no other. His vest is open, as he flung it apart when the victors called upon him to surrender. His heart is one wide bloody wound. All the gladness and pride of youth have welled out in that purple stream.

No lack of traffic upon the boulevard or in the street, albeit the night is far advanced towards morning. The omnibuses are going again—those useful omnibuses, the luxury of the poor—but their faces are not the living, but the dead. They carry a ghastly load of blood-stained corpses piled at random, thrust in helter-skelter. There are not vehicles enough for this dismal traffic. Railway-wagons, breaks, all are pressed into the funeral service. Men with sleeves turned up collect the dead, the hideous train moving slowly from barricade to barricade.

One man stands looking with horror at his naked arms, steeped up to the shoulders in blood. "Are there no fountains hereabouts?" he asked of the crowd. Yes, fountains, rivers of water are needed to purify this Paris, drowned in the blood of her children.

It is deep in the night, but the stillness of night is not here. Men, women, families are grouped in the doorways. No one knows where the conflagration will end, how near the carnage may come; no man knows if he and his dear ones will see the daylight above the roofs and steeples of eastern Paris. Heavily, drearily the wagons go by with their silent burden. This may be called the night-watch of the slain. On the Boulevard d'Italie the insurgents have erected a monster redoubt, a fortification in triple stages, with trenches, loopholes, tunnels, defended at first by five hundred men. The defenders have dwindled to five, but these five will not yield. Their fortress is bombarded, the adjoining houses are in flames: but still the five refuse to surrender, and after a deadly fight, that has lasted thirty-nine hours, they are taken and shot by the Versaillais.

Such conflicts, as bloody as resolute, have been enacted all over Paris in the day that is not yet old. And now the moonlit hours, the calm of night, are given to the gathering up of the dead. Victors and vanquished lie cheek by jowl on the stones of Paris; hecatombs sacrificed to discord and civil war. The red flag flies yet here and there above the carnage, the bloody ensign of a bloody reign.

CHAPTER X.

WIDOWED.

It is morning, dim early morning, dawn pink and pearl-colored above the housetops, an odor of verdure, of lilacs, and acacias in the fresh sweet air; and Kathleen wanders up and down the Avenue d'Italie, always coming back to that house which has been used as a prison by Citizen Serizier, Colonel Serizier, the leader of the 101st battalion. From one and from another, from many informants who all seem to tell their story differently, she has gathered the history of the massacre. She has heard how those harmless Dominican Fathers were hunted down, slaughtered like sheep in the shambles. It is after much questioning that she hears from a woman in one of the houses opposite the prison that there was another victim, one who was neither Dominican nor subordinate of the Dominican school—a young man, handsome, with dark hair and eyes. He would have escaped in the melee, only he lost time in trying to save Father Captier, the Prior; and it was only when the Prior had fallen, when the fathers had been shot down all along the street, that this noble youth had turned to fly. And then, like a young antelope, he rushed through the savage crowd. He would have got off even then, perhaps, if it had not been for a petroleuse, a veritable she-devil, who gave the view-halloa, and rushed after him with half a dozen ruffians. He fell at the corner of a side street—that new street to the left yonder—the woman thought.

Kathleen listened to the woman's story, questioning her closely at every stage. She was so calm in her white despair, she listened and pondered the details of the tragedy with such a tranquil air, that one could have hardly guessed that each word was a death-blow.

"Do you recognise this young man as any one belonging to you?" asked the woman compassionately.

She was a sempstress, who cared neither for Peter nor Paul, a decent person who had descended from her attic in the roof to see what this new dawn was bringing to Paris—deliverance or death. She was not one of those furies who had stood at their windows shrieking and applauding during the butchery.

"I believe he was my husband."

"Heavens, that is sad!"

"Whose fault was it? Whose work, the massacre? Can you tell me that?"

"They say hereabouts that it was Serizier, Colonel Serizier. He was at the head of it all. He ordered the Dominicans and the others to be brought here; he ordered them to be shot; he was there, in the midst of the massacre directing his men, encouraging those vile women who were even more savage than the Federals; his own hand fired upon those helpless priests; he mocked them with abusive epithets; he was pitiless, devilish, murder incarnate. You look ready to sink with fatigue," said the sempstress, moved with pity for Kathleen, whose eyes were fixed and glassy as the eyes of death; "come up to my room and rest; it is a poor place, but you are welcome. And I can give you a cup of coffee and a bit of bread; it is not so bad as in the siege."

"Not so bad? the streets were not drowned in blood then," said Kathleen. "No, you are very good, but I am not tired," with a ghastly smile. "I will go and look at the corner where he fell. Stay, what did they do with the bodies?"

"The Versaillais came an hour after and carried them all away."

"Where—where?" gasped Kathleen.

But the woman could not tell her. Among so many wagon-loads of dead, who could tell, who cared, whither one particular batch had been taken? Perhaps they had all been carried to that gaping chasm behind the chapel at Pere Dachaise, into which the Federal corpses were flung en masse after the battle of Asnieres. The sempstress had seen that common grave, sixty corpses waiting for recognition, a sight to freeze one's blood.

Kathleen left her, and walked wearily to that side street, a narrow shabby street; doors and windows were all closed, most of the houses had an evil aspect. There was no one standing about whom she could question.

A few paces from the corner of the street, at the foot of a lamp-post, she saw the spot where the victim had fallen. A pool of blood had stained the summer dust. It was dry now, but she could see how the corpse had lain in blood and mire. The figure had printed its outline on the ground. There was no other trace of the massacre about. One victim, and one only, had fallen here.

She knelt beside that awful stain; she watered it with her passionate tears, the first she had shed throughout her pilgrimage of two and-twenty hours. The church clocks were striking four. Yesterday morning at six she had left the Rue Git le Cœur. And now she had come to the end of her journey; she had found her resting-place. She knelt alone, unnoticed, with her hands clasped over her face, praying, first for her beloved, for the repose of his soul; then followed a prayer less pure, less Christian, for revenge upon his murderer, the destroyer of her happiness.

Who was his murderer? Not the blind mad mob, not even the devilish woman, the petroleuse, lashed into crime and murder by the scourges of insurgent tyrants. Serizier, the man in authority, the wretch who brought those good fathers from their peaceful seclusion to the gaol and the shambles. It was Serizier of whom she thought when she prayed for vengeance.

"Let it come, O Lord; long or late, let Thy thunder come and strike him as he struck them! Let Thine hour of vengeance be sure and swift! Lo here, looking up to Thee, I swear never to know rest or respite till I have tracked him to his doom!"

Serizier, colonel of the 101st battalion. She wanted to know more about him—whither he had vanished after the carnage; in what cellar or what garret this craven hound had hidden himself.

When she had exhausted her passion in prayer, she calmed herself and began to think.

She was tired to the point of being fain to cast herself down upon the dusty road, and to lie there till sleep or death came to give her rest from the fever of her brain and the dull aching of her bones. But she struggled heroically against this overpowering lassitude, and went back to the boulevard, and hobbled on till she came to a workman's cafe that opened early for the accommodation of the neighborhood. Here she entered, and seated herself at a table near the door. The fresh morning air blew in upon her face as she sat there, and she felt as if that alone kept her from fainting. Never in all her life before had she entered such a place alone, or sat alone among such company. Her girlhood and brief married life had been as closely guarded as if she had been a duchess. To sit alone among rough blouses and Versaillais soldiers in their stained uniforms was a new experience.

She ordered some coffee, and the waiter brought her a roll and butter. She had eaten nothing except one piece of bread since she had left home. The coffee and the food revived her, and she was able to look about her, and listen to the eager voices of the blouses and soldiers, as they sat eating and talking, smoking, drinking all at once, as it seemed to her, with their elbows on the table, seen indistinctly in a cloud of tobacco.

"He, le pere, two little glasses of cognac, one of absinthe," called a blouse.

"Garcon, une gomme," drawled another blouse, with sublime affectation, imitating the expired, or temporarily obliterated, race of foplings, the petits crevés of the Empire, known afterwards as gommeux, elegant consumers of absinthe considerably diluted with gum arabic. And then came a name which riveted Kathleen's attention to the next table. The name was Serizier. They were discussing the delegate of the 13th arrondissement, the commander of the 101st battalion.

"They say that he has decamped, this good Serizier, the hero of our battles," said one of the men.

"It was time," answered a soldier; "our cavalry were at the end of the street when cette bete took to his heels. They have been hunting for him ever since, but the rat has run into some hole where he is not easily found. We shall have him, though. Nom d'un chien, such butchers must not be allowed to escape. Those good Dominican Fathers! No, the canaille shall not get off!"

"He is a man of yesterday, this Serizier, a creation of the 18th March, is he not?" asked the other.

"He is Communard, crapule among the Communards. He is a currier by trade, but he got into trouble under the Empire, and was a refugee in Belgium up to the 4th of September. He hates all priests with a diabolical ferocity, and has prided himself upon desecrating the churches by his brutal orgies. He is more tiger than man; but we shall cut his claws and draw his teeth when we find him."

"When we find him, yes!" answered the other, lolling over the table, and, eating his soup with an air of luxurious repose.

His hands and face were alike blackened by gunpowder; his hair was clotted with dust and blood. There had been no leisure yet for the victors to make their toilet.

"You think he has taken the key of the fields?"

"I should say he was across the frontier by this time, or on board one of the American steamers at Havre. He would not let the grass grow under his feet."

"Not so easy to get out of Paris, my friend. Look at Raoul Rigault. He tried to hide himself yesterday afternoon, but they unearthed him, and set him with his back to the wall—his favorite attitude for other people. And this Serizier is a marked man. He commanded twelve battalions at Chatillon and at Issy. All the army know him. He will never be able to pass our outposts unrecognised."

"I hope not," answered the other. "They say that some of the communist dogs—the leaders of the sheep—have provided themselves with balloons, and that, as soon as they have burned Paris, they mean to set sail for England or Belgium."

There was no more said about Serizier, and Kathleen left, after paying for her refreshment, and walked homeward slowly, feebly, in the bright cool morning. The sun was rising over the heights beyond Paris. It was shining on the faces of the dead, on the dreadful crimson dye which stained the streets, on rags and tatters, and fragments of arms strewed thicker than autumn leaves on roadway and pavement.

Some of the street-lamps were still burning—a pale and sickly light in the glow and glory of the morning. The barricades were deserted. This side of Paris was in possession of the regular army, and a comparative quiet reigned—the quiet of death and desolation. But mighty masses of flames and smoke yonder, as of a burning volcano, told that the conflagration still raged with unabated fury—the Rue du Bac, the Rue de Lille, the public granaries, the Palace of Justice; enough material there to last for a few good hours yet.

Half-way towards the Rue Git le Cœur, Kathleen met a melancholy procession. Forty Communards, men and women, prisoners, in chains, silent with bent heads, in the midst of the soldiers who are leading them to the place where they are to be shot. No trial—no formula of any kind. They have been taken red-handed among the ruins they have made, in ditches, behind heaps of stones. They have been forced to fight, no doubt. The Commune would take no excuse. Her children must give her their hearts' blood. To refuse was treason; and death to all traitors was the cry of those last days. Rebellion, in her death-agony, was merciless. "As good one death as another," said the sheep, as they went to the barricades; and they worked and drank—they were passing liberal with their strong drinks, these Communard leaders—and they fought with the desperate courage of men who knew that death was certain either way.

And now, meekly as they obeyed their leaders, they suffer themselves to be led to their doom. Not theirs the brains that hatched rebellion; not theirs the pockets that were filled by pillage and theft; not theirs the profligate orgie or the brief spell of power; but theirs the penalty—death.

It was nine o'clock when Kathleen toiled slowly up the staircase, and knocked with tremulous hand at her sister's door. That last portion of her pilgrimage had been the slowest of all. She had crawled along, half asleep, hardly knowing where she was or what she was doing. She had stumbled against the passers-by, and had been accused of drunkenness more than once by an enraged citizen. And now, as Maman Schubert opened the door, she fell into her arms, and sank from that matronly bosom to the floor in a dead faint.

The door of the inner room—Rose's bedroom—was ajar. The good Schubert lifted up Kathleen's lifeless form and laid it on the sofa. She ministered to her with the skilfulness of an experienced nurse, and then ran to close the door of communication, lest Rose should hear too much. Already Rose had inquired several times for her sister. Was Kathleen better? Would she be well enough to come down to see Rose and the baby? The mother had an idea that Kathleen would find the little one grown. He seemed to develop so quickly. He was all perfume and bloom, like an opening flower. His breath was sweeter than summer roses.

Durand was lying down on a mattress spread upon the floor of the tiny kitchen. He had taken his turn at the barricade last night, and had received a bullet in the fleshy part of his arm. He was feverish with the pain of his wound, devoured by perpetual thirst.

"You good soul, what would become of us without you?" he said, as he took a glass of water from Maman Schubert's hand. "How shall we ever repay you?"

"My friend, do you think I need any payment? What has a lonely old woman with a small annuity to do in this world except care for her neighbors? And Rose and Kathleen are to me as my own daughters. Did I not see them when they first entered Paris, footsore and dusty, but so gentle and so pretty in their weariness? Was I not the first to welcome them to this great city, which is now the city of death? Heaven help us! Lie still, and keep your mind tranquil, my friend, and soon as I have given baby his bath—how he loves the water, the dear innocent!—I will come and put a fresh dressing on that poor arm."

Madame Schubert was surgeon, nurse, intermediary between the sick-room and the outer world—everything to the Durand household in their affliction.

From his bed in the kitchen Philip heard Kathleen's return—her feeble voice presently talking in low murmurs with Madame Schubert. She was safe; she had returned. Through fire and smoke and carnage she had passed unharmed. Here, at least, was a blessed relief—one burden lifted from their weary hearts. But he, the husband? What of him?

Kathleen told Madame Schubert the story of her pilgrimage; told how she had knelt upon the bloodstained ground where her husband's corpse had lain. But the good Schubert refused to be convinced, would not see any sufficient evidence of Gaston's death. What did it come to after all, this story which Kathleen had heard in the Avenue d'Italie? A young man, nameless, with dark hair and eyes, had been killed with the good fathers. But why should that young man be Gaston Mortemar?

"There are enough young men in France, my faith, with dark hair and eyes! Ca ne manque pas," said Madame Schubert.

"Has my husband come home?" asked Kathleen.

The good Schubert shrugged her shoulders and shook her head despondingly.

"Alas, no."

"Then he is dead—no matter how or where. He is dead! Do you think that if he was living he would forsake me?" asked Kathleen.

"He may be a prisoner."

"Would to God it were so! But I know; there is something here," touching her breast, "something stronger than myself, that tells me he fell yesterday—on that spot."

"Kathleen," called a voice from behind the closed door, "Kathleen!"

Rose had heard those murmurs in the next room, and had recognised Kathleen's voice.

Madame Schubert grasped Kathleen's arm as she was going to answer that call.

"Don't go to her yet," she said. "You will frighten her with your ghastly face and your dust-stained gown. She was very ill yesterday, weak and feverish. She is weak to-day, but the fever is better. She must not be agitated in any way. Go to your room, and wash and change your clothes, and come down presently looking bright and happy."

"It will be easy," said Kathleen, with a ghastly smile. "Yes, I understand."

"And not a word about Gaston or your wanderings. We told her nothing but lies yesterday—told her that you were in your own bed, ill with a cold. Don't undeceive her. She is so happy, poor soul, nursing her first baby. Yet, even in the midst of her new happiness, she was full of anxiety about you."

"I will be careful," said Kathleen. "I think I am getting used to sorrow. I ought to be able to hide it."

She obeyed Madame Schubert in every particular, and came back in less than an hour, fresh and bright in her clean cotton gown and black silk apron, her lovely hair brushed to silky softness, and coiled in a smooth chignon at the back of her head. She smiled as she kissed Rose. She sat beside the bed and rocked the baby on her knees, and talked to him, and cooed at him, trying to awaken some faint ray of intelligence in the little pink face, which seemed to the mother to be full of soul.

"Do you think he has grown?" asked Rose fondly.

"I think he is wonderfully improved since the day before yesterday," answered Kathleen.

"Improved!" Rose felt inclined to resent the word. Could there be room for improvement in a being so perfect as that child had been from the very first hour of his life? But Kathleen had vague memories of an unlovely redness and spottiness in the infant's earliest idea of a complexion, and the soft rosy tints of to-day seemed to her a marked advance in baby's development.

Rose lay with her face turned towards her sister, her hand in Kathleen's hand, perfectly happy. Happy in the fulness of her love, albeit fort still answered fort with sullen thunder, and cannon and mitrailleuse, chassepot and revolver, still made deadly music in the streets. There was peace here for Rose Durand in the narrow circle of home. She had suffered all anxieties about the outside world to be lulled to rest by Madame Schubert's cheerful assurances. And then, since the birth of the Commune, Paris had grown accustomed to the sound of bombardment, to the smoke of cannon. Polichinelle had made his jokes, the merry-go-rounds had revolved the barrel-organs fifes and drums had sounded discordantly in the Champs Elysees, albeit Versailles was bombarding Paris. The roar of guns, the noise and havoc of war, had become the every-day sounds of the city. Rose, lying in her curtained bed, windows closed and muffled, hardly knew that the guns to-day sounded louder and nearer.

"Philip will go no more to the barricades," she told Kathleen. "He was wounded in the shoulder yesterday—a very slight wound, praise to Heaven! but enough to prevent his fighting any more."

A Note of Warning to Suffering Humanity

We feel that we would be wanting in the duty we owe to humanity if we did not sound a note of warning in regard to the use of Mercury and other poisonous minerals in the treatment of blood and skin-deseases. If the reader could see the horrible suffering, the awful wrecks of human health and happiness, shown by our correspondence with those who have been dosed with these mineral poisons, he would shudder with horror. Arsenic, Mercury, Antimony, and Iodide of Potassium, are some of the remedies most ordinarily used for these diseases, and they are all POISON. Do not take these poisons. They might dry up your disease for a few days, but it will surely return, and with it you will have Mercurial Rheumatism, which may bring you years of torture. Shaker Blood Syrup will invigorate you and build you up, and force all the poison out through the pores of your skin, and cure you sound and well.

SHAKER BLOOD SYRUP

cures completely Scrofula, Syphilis, Rheumatism Cancer, Catarrh, and Skin and Blood diseases of every description. Sold everywhere, $1.00 a bottle, or six for $5.00.

THE WAGES OF SIN

"Papa," asked a little boy, looking up from his Sunday school lesson, "what are the wages of sin?" "The wages of sin these days," replied the old man earnestly, "depend upon circumstances, and one's opportunities and business capacity. But they run up into the thousands, my boy, they run up into the thousands."

ODE TO DREAMING.

"Your ringlets, your ringlets,
That look so gold and gay;
Will you give me one, but one,
To kiss it night and day;
Oh ringlet, oh ringlet,
She blushed a rosy red,
When ringlet, oh ringlet,
She clipped you from her head."

DREAMING.

(Written for THE EXAMINER.)

Sleep, oh sleep! thou matron of round form,
Wraped in flannel night robe warm;
Whilst on the pillow on thy right,
Thy husband snores through the night.
The baby cries, screams and yells,
In vain you try the Winslow spells;
And soon the rude awakening day,
Scatters all thought of sleep away.
Till the dark night returns once more,
With baby's cells and papa's snore.

VARIETIES.

"There's no such word as fail." It is modified into assignment.

There are a number of varieties of corns. Holloway's Corn Cure will remove any of them. Call on your druggist and get a bottle at once.

The sun rises in the east to set; the yeast sets in the bread to rise.

Consumptive should try Allen's Lung Balsam; it can be had of any druggist. See adv.

National Pills act promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels, and as a purgative are mild and thorough.

Wealth has its cares as well as poverty, but they are more popular.

Freeman's Worm Powders require no other purgatives. They are safe and sure in removing all varieties of Worms. 8-2t.

"It is hard rain," said Smith, as he came in out of the wet. "Then it must be hail," returned Jones.

Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped hands, Pimples, Tan, etc. 3-5t.

"Neck or nothing," remarked the landlady, as she handed that part of the chicken to the late boarder.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup has removed tape worm from 15 to 30 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm. 8-2t.

"This is enough to take away my breath," murmured the youth, as he seized a handful of cloves before re-entering the theatre.

An Excellent Report.

Hon. Jos. G. Goodridge, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I cannot express myself in sufficiently praiseworthy terms of Burdock Blood Bitters which I have used for the past two years with great benefit." 8-2t.

According to statisticians, preachers live two years longer on an average than lawyers. After all there is nothing that improves health like a clear conscience.

Do not delay in getting relief for the little folks. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is a pleasant and sure cure. If you love your child why do you let it suffer when a remedy is so near at hand?

The most miserable man, next to the spring poet, is the chap who composed some verses on the beautiful snow and is awaiting its appearance in print.

A Good Record.

Among the many thousand bottles of Hagyard's Yellow Oil sold annually in Canada, not one has ever failed to give satisfaction. It cures rheumatism, colds, and all painful complaints and injuries. 8-2t.

A burglar got into the house of a lawyer the other day. By superhuman efforts he escaped without losing anything but his time.

To the aged and infirm, the nourishing and invigorating properties of Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion give renewed strength and buoyancy of spirits. Always ask for ROBINSON'S PHOSPHORIZED EMULSION, and be sure you get it. 9-2t

"Her waste is enormous." "Well, then, why don't you get her a pair of corsets?" "O, you don't understand me. Nothing can stay her extravagance."

To Our Readers.

If you suffer from headache, dizziness, back ache, biliousness or humors of the blood, try Burdock Blood Bitters. It is a guaranteed cure for all irregularities of the blood, liver and kidneys. 8-2t.

To write for all time is the ambition of every author. The man who originated the series of negro minstrel jokes is the only one up to date who has apparently succeeded in his endeavor.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine for every one in the spring. Emigrants and travellers will find in it an effectual cure for the eruptions, boils, pimples, eczema, etc., that break out on the skin the effect of disorder in the blood caused by sea-diet and life on board ship.

Nothing exasperates a woman who has been shading her eyes from the gaslight with her hand all the evening, so much as to find that after all she had left her best diamond ring on the washstand.

Useful to Know.

Everyone should know that Hagyard's Yellow Oil will give prompt relief; applied externally will stop any pain; taken internally cures colds, asthma, croup, sore throat and most inflammatory complaints. 8-2t

The Texas editor and father who penned the following paragraph must have had a tough time: "If in proportion to size a man could yell as loud as a baby, there would be no telephones needed in this country.

The laws of the Medes and Persians were not more immutable than those of nature. If we transgress them we suffer. Sometimes, however, we break them inadvertently. Damages frequently take the form of Dyspepsia, Constipation and biliousness, which can be easily repaired with Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, the Great Blood Purifier and Renovator of the system.

The Tanners' Gazette, of Vienna, states that during the recent epidemic of cholera in Italy tanners were not attacked by the disease, and that the epidemic was less severe in towns containing tanneries.

Danger in the Air.

In the chilling winds, the damp atmosphere and suddenly checked perspiration, colds are lurking. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam cures colds, coughs, asthma and bronchitis, and all complaints tending towards consumption. 8-2t

Three hundred wooden images of saints, stolen from churches by Mexicans, were among the fuel purchases reported recently by a Mexican railway manager. He bought them for 50 cents apiece.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES,

Is Remarkable as a Flesh Producer.

The increase of flesh and strength is perceptible immediately after commencing to use the Emulsion. The Cod Liver Oil emulsified with the Hypophosphites is most remarkable for its healing, strengthening, and flesh producing qualities.

They charge a quarter of a dollar to witness a marriage ceremony at Larned, Kansas. Nearly $75 in money was taken at the door at a recent marriage at that place for the benefit of the groom.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

Invalids who take WHEELER'S ELIXIR OF PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA remark how promptly and uniformly increased appetite and improved digestion follow its use. This is explained by the universal adaptability of the preparation to the most sensitive, irritable conditions of the stomach, which secures its absorption and distribution to the nerve ganglia. Phosphates being, par excellence, the food of the nervous system, it is easily seen why this elegant compound has proved of such great value in so wide a range of diseases depending on failure of nerve power and blood impoverishment.

THE CANADIAN HIGHLANDER.

BY CHARLES MACKAY, LL. D.

I

Thanks to my sires, I'm Highland born,
And trod the moorland and the heather,
Since childhood and this soul of mine
First came into the world together!
I've "paddled" barefoot in the burn,
Roamed on the braes to pu' the gowans,
Or climb the granite cliffs to pluck
The scarlet berries of the rowan.

II

And when the winds blew loud and shrill
I've scaled the heavenward summits hoary,
Of grey Ben Nevis or his peers
In all their solitary glory—
And with the earaptured eyes of youth
Have seen half Scotland spread before me,
And proudly thought with flashing eyes,
How goddy was the land that bore me.

III.

Alas! the land denied me bread,
Land of my sires in bygone ages,
Land of the Wallace and the Bruce,
And countless heroes, bards and sages.
It had no place for me and mine,
No elbow-room to stand alive in,
Nor rood of kindly mother earth
For honest industry to thrive in.

IV.

'Twas parcell'd out in wide domains,
By cruel law's resistless fiat,
So that the sacred herds of deer
Might roam the wilderness in quiet.
Untroubled by the feet of man
On mountain side or shelving corrie,
Lest sport should fail and selfish wealth
Be disappointed of its quarry.

V.

The lords of acres deemed the clans
Were aliens at the best, or foeman,
And that the grouse, the sheep, the beeves
Were worthier animals than yeoman;
And held that men might live or die
Where'er their fate or fancy led them,
Except among the Highland hills
Where noble mothers bore and bred them.

VI.

In agony of silent tears,
The partner of my soul beside me,
I crossed the seas to find a home
That Scotland cruelly denied me,
And found it on Canadian soil,
Where man is man in life's great battle,
And not, as in my native clime,
Of less importance than the cattle.

VII.

And love with steadfast faith in God,
Strong with the strength I gained in sorrow,
I've looked the future in the face,
Nor feared the hardships of the morrow;
Assured that if I strove aright
Good end would follow brave beginning,
And that the bread, if not the gold,
Would never fail me in the winning.

VIII.

And every day as years roll on
And touch my brow with age's finger,
I learn to cherish more and more
The land where love delights to linger.
In thought by day and dreams by night,
Fond memory recalls and blesses
Its heathery braes, its mountain peaks,
Its straths and glens and wildernesses.

IX.

And hope revives at memory's touch,
That Scotland, crushed and landlord-ridden
May yet find room for all her sons
Nor treat the humblest as unbidden.—
Room for the brave, the staunch, the true,
As in the days of olden story,
When men outvalued grouse and deer,
And lived their lives:—their country's glory.

A MATTER OF DOUBT.

Zadkiel's Almanac predicts the death early next fall of "a high American functionary." This leaves us in an exasperating state of uncertainty as to whether Zad. means a hotel clerk or a porter in a Pullman car.

"I Don't Know What Ails Me,"

says many a sufferer. "I have the "blues" frightfully; I am troubled with headache and dizziness; I have lost my appetite; there is a bad taste in my mouth constantly. What is the matter with me?" We will tell you; you are "bilious." Get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," use it faithfully and you will soon be a new man again. All druggists have it.

SOLAR FUEL.

A Minnesota farmer states that he can "keep one stove going" during six months with the sunflower stalks produced on an acre of land. The seed produced and fed to fowls pays for all the work of cultivation. He burns the smaller heaps with the stalks, which are cut in the fall to the required length.

What 10 Cents Will Do.

A 10 cent bottle of Polson's NERVILINE will cure neuralgia or headache. A 10 cent bottle of Nerviline will cure toothache or facesache. 10 cent sample bottle of Nerviline is sufficient to cure colds, diarrhœa, spasms, dysentery, &c. Nerviline is just the thing to cure all pains, whether internal or external. Buy a 10 cent sample bottle of Nerviline, the great pain cure. Safe, prompt, and always effectual. Large bottles at any drug store, only 25 cents.

A DOUBTFUL COMPLIMENT.

"So I may really have the next waltz? so good of you, Mrs. Masham—I know how rarely you'll consent to waltz with anybody. I'm greatly favored." "Not at all, Mr. de Gauque—I don't object to waltzing, in general. It is only my husband's absurd jealousy, you know. But I'm sure he won't mind my taking a turn with you, you know."

These are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaudice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetiser, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

THE REASON WHY.

An anti-railroad orator had the floor in the Florida Legislature the other day. He gave an eloquent recital of the high-handed outrages committed by the railroads, and in conclusion exclaimed, with telling effect: "And why, let me ask this honorable body, do the railroads dare do this?" At this point a bony legislator, three seats in front of him, rose, and drawing from his pocket a handful of railroad passes, said, "This is why." The eloquent orator had no more to say.

A Remarkable Escape.

Mrs. Mary A. Dailey, of Tunkhannock, Pa., was afflicted for six years with Asthma and Bronchitis, during which time the best physicians could give no relief. Her life was despaired of, until in last October she procured a Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, when immediate relief was felt, and by continuing its use for a short time she was completely cured, gaining in flesh 30 lbs. in a few months.

Free Trial Bottles of this certain cure of all Throat and Lung Diseases at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store. Large Bottles $1.00.

WOLSELEY'S FALL.

Lord Wolseley's fall from his camel was more serious than reported. The brute swerved, it will be remembered, as he was inspecting a portion of the Camel Corps, and he fell heavily to to the ground. "I don't fall so lightly at 53 as I used to do," he wrote home. However, he was on parade and at work; so he pluckily remonstated, and although suffering really excruciating pain, went through the remainder of the day's parade. Latest accounts state that he has quite recovered from the effects of the fall, and is in excellent health and spirits.

A Voice from London

Repeats the oft repeated story that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is the best, least harmful, most certain and prompt of all preparations ever offered for the removal of corns. Kennedy & Callard, London, Ont., writes, "Nothing ever introduced has given the satisfaction that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor has. We recommend it." Beware of cheap or poisonous substitutes. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston. Always safe, harmless and sure.

A LEGISLATIVE JAUNT.

Lieut.-Governor Robinson, Speaker Clarke, Treasurer Ross and a large number of Ontario legislators and friends made a trip to Guelph Wednesday, the objective point being the Agricultural College. Having been duly received at the station by the civic officials, the visitors were driven out to the college, where they made a tour of inspection. The institution has about 150 students, and impressed the party favorably. An excellent lunch was by no means the least enjoyable part of the visit.

It is a good rule to accept only such medicines as have, after long years of trial, proved worthy of confidence. This is a case where other people's experience may be of great service, and it has been the experience of thousands that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best cough medicine ever used.

Los Angeles Orange Groves.

Not everbody has seen an orange grove. But everybody has an idea, from description or otherwise, if he has not seen for himself, of how an orange grove looks. I had an idea, but it was not the correct one. For instance, I never saw or heard it stated that orange groves are plowed, harrowed, and hoed, and kept as free from grass as a vegetable garden, but such is the fact; and when I saw my first "grove" standing on plowed ground, instead of on pasture land like the apple orchard in New England, I recorded the event as surprise No. 1. Again, while standing amid a cluster of orange trees, and observing the profusion of great golden globes pendent upon the branches in every direction, I ventured a remark to the gardener: "We are just at the proper season for seeing the fruit at its best?" "You may come again at Christmas, and it will be as you see it now," he replied. Which is true, for the orange tree of Southern California is ever green and ever bearing. It buds and flowers and fruits continually from January to December. This was surprise No. 2. And while I am in the line of confession it may as well be recorded here that my idea of a "grove" had by early education become so contracted that surprise No. 3 awaited me when I rode straight through six miles of orange trees and learned that the plant extended miles on either hand. No name less dignified than "orange forests" will appropriately describe these great tracts of land devoted to orange culture in the Los Angeles valley. The locality known as the Passdena is simply a great collection of private residences whose owners are orange growers. Their houses are palaces, and their grounds are flower gardens, each in the midst of an orange grove. There may be, but there need not be, a more beautiful spot upon the earth.—Boston Transcript.

The Dude and the Oysters.

Right alongside the Cremorne Mission is a new Cremorne Garden, a typical music-hall, with no features now enough to justify description. Here the slummers learned two more lessons. The first was that, seated at a table in a quiet corner, sipping their beverages while scrutinizing the scene of dissipation. They were not, in aspect, sufficiently different from that of frequent visitors to attract special attention. The girls had dreaded the commotion which their respectability would create, and were vastly chagrined when it did not do any such thing. They were almost unnoticed. The second piece of instruction related to the folly of British imitation. Their seats were near the oyster-stand, at which a youthful dandy stood to take a midnight luncheon.

"'Pon me woard," he remarked, after emptying the final shell. "I cawn't get oysters anywhere else in town that taste as they do in London, ye know."

As London oysters are not d for their brackish, unpalatable quality, one of the slummers inquired, on the Anglomaniac's departure, for an explanation.

"O, I got onto that dude the first time he came in," replied the man behind the counter, "he said the oysters I opened for him wasn't no good, and wanted ter know why we didn't open such ones as they did in London. Says I, 'I kin git yer some of ther London kind, but they'll cost yer double.' He said 'Bawther the expense,' an' I promised ter have 'em next time he dropped in. Well, when he showed up I jest opened a dozen of stale ones—reg'ler rankers, that was left over from ther day before. They hit hard. Now he comes in every night fer more of 'em. I sometimes guess they go ag'in his stomach, but he ain't going to let a little thing like that interfere with his English racket."—New York Letter.

After-Dinner Speakers.

The after-dinner orator whom I now have in mind, is on his legs before the company, digging his fork into the table-cloth, his lips quivering, his eyes wandering and blinking, and an observant doctor would say that with a little more strain upon him the poor man would go off in a fit. As to what he did blunder out, the least that is said the better. The poor fellow finishes and falls into his chair, glaring wildly—he has made his after-dinner speech.

Mr. John Bright is conspicuously one of the very best public speakers in England, and this is what he once said about after-dinner speaking at a banquet in London:

"I must confess that since dinner terminated I have been actuated by something like a feeling of envy. I have envied the speakers who have gone before me the facility, the fluency, with which they have been able to perform the task that has been allotted to them. I believe there is no task so severe to which a speaker can be put as to make a speech which is not absolutely uninteresting on an occasion like this." Now, mark, the great speaker speaks of "speakers." How, then, about the great bulk of us, who are not speakers at all? If Mr. Bright can with difficulty do it, what is to become of you and I, dear reader, who have not the gift of gab?—Howard Paul in San Francisco News Letter.

Another Champion Mean Man.

A Montreal physician takes the palm for sheer, clear, unadulterated meanness. He took into his employ last fall a young man named Ezra Tilton, a hard-working, deserving young man, who went into service in the hopes of being able to save up enough during the winter to purchase a horse and cab, it being his ambition to become a cabman. Several times during the winter the doctor said to Ezra: "You are sick." "No," he would reply, "I'm very well," but the doctor would insist that he was sick, and induce him to take some medicine. It also happened, in the natural course of events, that Ezra occasionally broke a household implement of some sort. When spring came Ezra went to his employer and said: "I have not drawn any money during the winter, sir, because I thought it was just as safe in your hands as it would be anywhere. I'll take it now, sir, if you please." "Well," said the doctor, producing a memorandum book, "I find that you owe me —— dollars for attendance, —— for medicine, and —— for breakage. There is $1.50 coming to me, but I'll make you a present of it."

Pressure on the ears is to be avoided by persons who wish to preserve their sense of hearing. Narrowing of the auditory canal by the pressure of a handkerchief worn over the head and tied under the chin, as it is commonly adjusted by the peasant women of Europe, often causes deafness; and the coiffe of the nuns, pressing tightly against the pavilion of the ear, frequently produces the same effect.

Germany's Giant Wrestler.

Fritz Gonnenwein, a German of uncommon proportions and great strength, arrived in New York a few days ago. Fritz modestly claims to have done wonders in the wrestling line in Germany, and his design is to do the same in this country. He is 32 years old and weighs 263 pounds. Fritz says he was brought up on a farm near Stattgart. A few years ago, while in that city he visited a circus, where several champion athletes were on exhibition. These athletes were offering large rewards as an inducement to outsiders to come in and triumph over them in the wrestling ring. Fritz entered the lists and promptly laid all of the professionals on their backs. The manager of the circus at once engaged him to travel with him as the champion of all his champion wrestlers. At a recent trial of strength in Germany Fritz held out with his right arm a one hundred pound weight, and at the same time held out with his left thumb a ninety pound weight, on which he wrote his name with a piece of chalk held between two of his fingers. Fritz prefers to wrestle on the Swiss plan, each man having two rings on his belt, either one or both of which his opponent is at liberty to seize—if he can. At the ordinary style he has already broken the legs of several of his opponents. Fritz will study the American style of wrestling before he makes any challenges. In the meantime, he says that he will accept any challenge.

J. Wilkes Booth's Body.

"In reply to an inquirer last Sunday concerning the disposition that was made of J. Wilkes Booth's body, the Courier-Journal was in error," said General Dan Macaulay to a reporter yesterday.

"On what point was the answer wrong?"

"In the statement that the body was taken out on the ocean and thrown overboard. I know that a great many stories have been told on that subject, and I also know that all of them are groundless."

"How did you obtain your information?"

"From his immediate family. Immediately after his death his remains were buried in the navy yard at Washington, where they remained a year or two, during all of which time a sentinel stood guard over them. After the excitement passed away, and his death was in a measure forgotten, the family was permitted to remove the body, and it was taken to the family burying ground, on the old Junius Brutus Booth farm, a few miles from Baltimore. One of the family related the incident of the reinterment to me, and told me that the coffin was opened in order that there might be no uncertainty about the matter, and the features were identified."—Interview with General Dan Macauley.

The Pronunciation of American Names.

Without commencing upon the Tagliafieros ('Tollivers') of Virginia, there are the Cecils (pronounced Sysls, or Syssls), the Champeneys (Chauneys), Rollestones (Rallstons), Leighs (Lees, Lays, and oftentimes Lyes), the Timberlakes (Timliks), the Ashuests (Ashetts), the Blounts (Blunts), the Eloarts (Allests), Auchtenbanches (Arbois), and the Kers (Kares). A family rejoiced in the name of Polly. The eldest son, an unkempt youth of 19, was called George Washington Polly. But the name was always written Pauline. Then the name Ralph was always Rafe, and the name Helena was accented on the first syllable—an English custom, but one not usual in the North.

In Kentucky, Tennessee, and Mississippi, many other names occur, often of French, Spanish or Indian derivation, which assume a peculiar dialectal form. Beauchamp (pronounced Beechum), Daughty (Doty), Dockery (sometimes spelt Dackery—a contraction, it was said, of the French Du Cherie), Des Moulin (Demlin), Dupuy (Dupee), Pevensay (Pinsey), and many others which assume more or less variety in expression and pronunciation. —The Critic.

An Indian's Appetite.

The improvidence of the Indian is proverbial. They toil not, if they can help it, neither do they spin, unless it is around the kitchen about meal time. They take no thought of the morrow, but will gorge their capacious stomachs to the highest notch, utterly indifferent of the coming day. To feast one day and fast six is a pretty fair average, though hardly up to the Indian wish.

Night before last the motor crew tried to measure the appetite of a guileless Piute of ten sage brush summers, and to his demand for something to eat gave him their lunches. Hale, Rice and Merrigan emptied their buckets and the young redman swallowed all and drank three quarts of tea and coffee mixed. He then took a jaunt down to Battle Mountain, but appeared again last night to see if he would not strike another grub bonanza, but the railroad boys did not respond and gave up the contract for filling such a capacious maw.—Austin (Nev.) Reville.

Lights Vitiating Air.

The air of a room lighted by gas is heated twenty times as much as if it were lighted to an equal extent by incandescent electric lamps. When arc-lamps are used the comparison is still more in favor of electricity. You will be surprised to know that our old friend the tallow candle, and even the wax candle, is far worse than gas in the proportion of air vitiated and the heat produced; and you will be disposed to disbelieve it. But the fact is, that so long as the candles were used light was so expensive that we were obliged to be content with little bits of it; in fact, we lived in a state of semi-darkness; and in this way we evaded the trouble. It is only since the general introduction of gas and petroleum that we have found what an evil it is. —Sanitary Engineer.

A French Deputy, very careless of his attire, paid a vacation visit lately to his constituency, and at the station was seized by a traveler, who put a valise into his hands to carry for him. The Deputy took it to its destination, but declined the 5 cents tendered him, saying, "Thanks, no. I don't need that; I have the honor of being your member."

Parlour Social.

A parlour social in aid of the funds of the Baptist Church will be given at the residence of Mr. J. C. T. Lacey, Downey street, on Thursday night March 5th. An excellent programme has been prepared. Refreshments will be served. Admission 25 cents.

Series of Sermons.

On Sunday evening last Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, Rector of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, preached the first of a series of Lenten sermons. The subject was "Salvation," and the five remaining subjects will be consecutively as follows: "Regeneration;" "Conversion;" "Assurance;" "Means of Grace," and "Perseverance." Rev. Mr. Bradshaw's sermons are always well worth hearing, and this series will be especially edifying.

Handsome Horseshoes.

In the window of Mr. A. McNeil's clothing store is displayed a trophy of horseshoes made by Mr. Alex. Gibson, George street. They are of every kind required for every kind of horse, from the sedate plough horse to the trim trotter or the fleet racer. They are not only made with the greatest skill and neatness, but Mr. Gibson also exhibits the same skill and judgment in fitting them to the feet of the horses submitted to his manipulation. For a well-made shoe, well-set, Gibson is the man to go to.

Insurance and Loan Agency.

The reader's attention is directed to the advertisement of Mr. W. H. Hill's general insurance business in this issue. In life assurance, Mr. Hill offers the public the solid security, favorable terms and equitable dealing of the "Sun Life and Accident Insurance Company of Canada." In fire insurance he represents over half a dozen of the best companies in the world. Money to loan on good security at the lowest rates. See advertisement.

Lecture on Tennyson

Mr. L. E. Horning, B. A., will deliver a lecture on the Poet Laureate, at the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Thursday evening. He intends dwelling specially on the "In Memoriam," perhaps the finest of English poems. If those attending the lecture would bring their Tennyson with them, it would make it more interesting. Everyone is cordially invited to attend the lecture, which will begin at eight o'clock. The price of admission will be ten cents.

A Pleasant Parlour Social.

An exceptionally pleasant and successful parlour social in aid of the Baptist church funds was held at the residence of Mr. John McKee, Druggist, on Thursday evening. There was a very large attendance. The Darwinian doctrine of the "selection of the fittest," seemed to apply to the gathering, for it would be difficult to get together a company more congenial than the one of last Thursday night. Mr. and Mrs. McKee extended their hospitality with a grace and generousness that made everyone at home. The musical programme was excellent. Instrumental selections were given by Misses Edmison, Gilmour, Totten (Lindsay,) and Mrs. Duff, Hazel Brae, who also played the accompaniments for the solo songs, which were supplied by Miss Minore, Miss Huston and Mr. Geale. Miss Gilmour and Mr. H. Sears, of Brantford, gave an entertaining instrumental duet—ori-organ and piano—and Misses Huston and Wells favored the company with a duet. Mr. Routley, of Kingston furnished a pleasing guitar solo. Rev. Mr. Munro contributed an excellent reading, and Mr. James Stratton a neat little speech. The next social of the series will be held at the residence of Mr. J. C. T. Lacey, Downey street, on Thursday evening, March 5th, and if it approaches in success to the one noted above, it will be well worth attending.

Possessing the New Premises.

Mr. Kingan now occupies his splendid new hardware premises on Hunter street, on the old stand. The new quarters are large, airy, well lighted and arranged with all the modern improvements. The old customers of the establishment, who may wish to see one of the finest shops in town, in all respects, may do so by visiting Mr. Kingan's new hardware store.

Orange Grand Lodge.

At the annual session of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ontario East, of the Orange order, in Kingston, on Tuesday, the following were among the appointments on committees:—Finance, Mr. J. B. McWilliams (chairman); Suspensions and Expulsions, Mr. W. King, Douro; Petitions and Appeals, Mr. Robt. Weir. At the meeting of the Grand Preceptory of the "Royal Black Knights of Ireland," the following were among the officers elected:—Deputy Grand Lecturer, Mr. R. Weir, Peterborough; Grand Censor (one), Mr. Richard Warham, Lakefield; members of the Grand Committee, Messrs. Wm. King, Douro, and John Smith, Ashburnham.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Protestant Home was held on Tuesday. There were present Mesdames, Gilmour, Wallis, Smith, Beck, Clementi, Vernon, Dunlap, McWilliams, Millar, Innes, Fairbairn, Jeffers, Cox, Hazlett and Hall. The meeting was opened by devotional exercises, and the report of the Secretary Mrs. J. G. Hall was read and adopted. The Treasurer's report was also read showing the total receipts to be $1760.56, and total expenditure 1730.09, leaving a credit balance of $30.47. A detailed statement of receipts and expenditures was also read. Mrs. Vernon was elected President, and Mrs. Geo. A. Cox Treasurer. Mrs. Gilmour resigns the presidency, as it is understood, on account of ill health, and Mrs. Jeffery the treasurership, because she is about to remove to London.

A Former Resident's Death.

The Milton Sun thus refers to the late Rev. John Elliott, a former resident of Peterborough:

"Rev. John Elliott, of Ayr, formerly of Trafalgar, died very suddenly last week, The deceased was 80 years of age and has been a minister of the Methodist Church from 1861. He was of English birth, but emigrated with his parents to this country when young. He located in the township of Trafalgar, Halton County. At the age of twenty, death removed his father, and the cares of a farm and brothers and sisters devolved upon him. Subsequently he conducted business in Port Hope, Peterborough, Lindsay. In 1861, feeling that he was called to the work of the ministry, he connected himself with the New Connexion Church, and was stationed at Holland, Gorrie, Mount Forest, Aylmer, Otterville, Ayr, and other places."

Cannot be Surpassed.

We clip the following from the Port Hope Times. It speaks for itself: "Some time ago we entrusted our numbers of Picturesque Canada to Mr. J. R. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER, to bind, and expected they would be fairly well bound, as Mr. Stratton does everything well he undertakes. On Tuesday last, we had the two volumes returned to us, and we were surprised at the excellent workmanship, which could not be surpassed by any establishment in the Dominion. Those of our readers, who have not yet given their numbers into the hands of the binder, cannot do better than send them to Mr. Stratton, whose prices are low, and the work we are sure will please every one. The covers, lettering and gilding are a fitting and creditable accompaniment to the magnificent typography of the work. Mr. Stratton will pay the express charges both ways on all orders from Port Hope.

John Wickliffe.

On Thursday evening last Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, rector of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, delivered an exceedingly interesting lecture on John Wickliffe, "the morning star of the Reformation," in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. There was, unfortunately, a thin attendance, larger, however, than usual. The lecture showed evidence of a great deal of research, and the facts, new to almost every member of a mixed audience, were well and pointedly presented. The lecture throughout was listened to with the deepest interest, and the audience received a great deal of new light upon a phase of the great Reformation, about which the public knowledge is lamentably deficient. The information given in the lecture was therefore doubly acceptable, and all who did not hear it have occasion to regret it, for the sources of information on the subject are inaccessible to the general public. It is seldom that the people of Peterborough have had the opportunity of listening to an address on the subject of the Reformation in which so much knowledge, hitherto hidden, has been presented in so charming a style and invested with so much interest. We shall therefore, we feel sure, make a pleasing announcement in saying that it is the intention of Rev. Mr. Bradshaw to repeat the lecture on the "Life and Times of John Wycliffe," in St. Luke's church at an early date. On Thursday night Messrs. G. M. Roger and D. B. Gardner, in moving a vote of thanks, expressed unqualified approval, and bore strong testimony to its interest and originality. Dr. Fife, chairman, also expressed great satisfaction at the intellectual treat the audience had been favored with.

FAIR, VANEVERY & Co.'s large selection of Prints comprises everything New in Color and Style. Fancies, Mazzers, Chocolates, Plates, Reversibles, Sateens, Plaids, Sateen Checks, Regattas, &c., all very cheap, TOWN COUNCIL.

Summary of the Proceedings.

The council met on Monday evening, all the members present, his worship Mayor COX in the chair.

After routine a number of communications were received and referred to the proper committees.

Several accounts were also referred to the Finance committee, except the accounts of H. C. Rogers ($4.60), Western Insurance Company ($5.00), and John Smith, cutting ice, ($12.50)—which were paid.

Mr. Davidson presented the report of the Finance committee, which was adopted.

NIGHT WATCHMAN.

Mr. Kendry presented the report of the committee on Appointments recommending the appointment of Charles McGinty, at a salary of $450 per year. On motion to adopt the report, Mr. Rutherford moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that the salary be $460.

Mr. Rutherford did not see the necessity of having any other policeman than the regular force, with Chief Johnston relieved of street work. The amendment was lost, and the report adopted on division.

CHARITY.

Mr. Green, chairman, presented the report of the Charity committee, recommending a grant of $2 each to five worthy applicants, and the remission of taxes to the amount of $22.98, and that John McGrath get no further aid. Adopted.

NEW GAS LAMPS.

Mr. Rutherford, chairman, presented the report of the Fire, Water and Light committee, recommending the setting up of 16 new gas lamps, four in each ward. The report was adopted after some amendments.

LICENSES.

Mr. Rutherford presented the report of the License committee, and introduced the License by-law. The council went into committee of whole on the second reading. Mr. Menzies in the chair. In committee a long discussion ensued, in which every member of the council took part, some speaking half a dozen times. At length the committee reported the by-law, which fixed the figures for licenses, and imposed conditions as follows:

Shop licenses (limited to 10) $180. The number of taverns, the number fixed by law and the fee at $200. The by-law also forbids the pawning of goods or clothing for liquor. Licensees of shops are forbidden to treat any person on their premises.

For billiard and pool, the license fee was placed at $100 for each table. The closing and opening hours to be the same as hotels. The by-law was read a third time and duly passed.

A by-law was passed authorizing the borrowing of money for the use of the corporation, the amount not to exceed $10,000.

TOWN CLOCK.

Mr. Rutherford reported that he had received two tenders for protecting the face of the town clock, the lowest tender for which was $30. On motion the tender was accepted.

On motion of Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Davidson, Messrs. The Mayor, Stevenson, Carnegie and Garvey were appointed a deputation to act with the deputation of the County Council, to urge upon the Government the speedy construction of the Trent Valley Canal.

Mr. L. F. Carpenter's application for remission of taxes was referred to the Court of Revision with power to act, and Mrs. Robert Weatherhead's taxes were remitted.

The treasurer was authorized to draw cheques for the street pay list and for the orders of the chairman of the Charity committee.

A motion of Mr. Rutherford to appoint a committee consisting of Messrs Davidson, McClelland and Kendry for the reception of the Canadian contingent was agreed to.

Mr. Cahill moved, seconded by Mr. Davidson that this council heartily approves of the spirit of a communication which appeared in the local papers some time since, over the signature of D. W. Dumble, Esq., suggesting the advisability of the formation of a committee of citizens, having for its object the encouragement of the introduction of manufacturing industries into town, and that this council assures such committee of its warm support. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Davidson, the street committee were authorized to advertise for tenders for supplying timber for streets and bridges and the committee given power to introduce cedar block pavement if thought advisable.

Mr. Davidson moved, seconded by Mr. Green, that all materials be furnished on the order of and subject to the measurement of the Street Inspector, his order to be attached to all invoices, and that all goods and materials be procured by an order of the Clerk.

On motion the Clerk was instructed to forward a petition on behalf of the council, asking the Local Legislature to amend the law so as to allow municipalities to limit the number of billiard tables.

The council adjourned for three weeks.

The Saved Army has returned to its former quarters, the old Music Hall, where meetings will hereafter be held.

A Ponderous Porker.

Last Saturday Mr. H. C. Winch bought from Mr. N. Doige, reeve of Alnwick, a hog weighing 681 lbs.

A Lady Lecturer.

Miss Bowes, of Halton county, will deliver an address on the subject of the temperance agitation of the present day, in the Opera House, Peterborough, on Tuesday evening, March 3rd. Admission free. Collection at the close.

An Omission.

In our list of costumes represented at the last carnival, that of Miss Ada Miller, daughter of Mr. F. W. Miller, leader of the Fire Brigade Band, representing "THE EXAMINER," was unavoidably omitted. The name was not handed in at the door, and with a list of about 250 maskers it is no wonder that it was omitted.

Salvation Army

On Saturday a brace of Salvation Army officers was in Peterborough making a reconnoisance with a view of making an attack on Peterborough. They were looking for a hall in which to hold their meetings. From them it is understood that the coming of the Salvation Army is decided on, and will take place as soon as barracks can be secured.

Male Concert.

A concert under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association is to be held in their rooms on Monday evening next, March 2nd. The programme will contain choruses quartettes, solos, jubilee songs and other music, and a few readings. The novelty about it is that it is to be given entirely by male performers. Members of the Association are to be admitted free on presenting their membership tickets at the door. The price of admission to others will be fifteen cents.

Systematic and Honest.

An incident, to show how it pays the farmer to keep strict accounts: Recently Mr. Denoon bought some cattle from Mr. R. J. McDowell, Bethany, and yesterday he received a post card from the latter stating that Mr Denoon had overpaid him $2.00, and asking to get particulars of the transaction and he would send the $2.00 by mail. If Mr. McDowell hadn't kept strict account he would have missed the chance of doing an honest action, that will bring him more real pleasure than twenty times $2, unjustly retained, could buy.

Court House Park.

At a special meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society held on Friday last, the proposition of the County Council, offering to give $75 a year to the Park was accepted and a committee was appointed to confer with the Town Council in reference to steps for making the park available for public resort. We would call the attention of the police to the necessity of preventing Central Park being used this season as a baseball and lacrosse ground, as it was last summer. Citizens who used the park were much annoyed by this practice which must be stopped.

CHARLOTTE STREET METHODIST.

Anniversary Sermons and Addresses.

On Sunday and Monday last the congregation of the Charlotte-street Methodist Church celebrated their anniversary. On Sunday, morning and evening, Rev. Dr. Williams, one of the General Superintendents, filled pulpit. In the morning he took for his text the verses of the 16th chapter of Matthew, from the 13th to the 17th verse, inclusive. In the evening his text was the 36th and 4 following verses of the 6th chapter of St. John. On both occasions there were large congregations, that listened with intense interest to profoundly spiritual and stirring sermons, such as might be expected from a preacher of the Gospel who, to deep and earnest piety, scholarly attainments and ardent zeal, adds the pulpit experience of nearly 45 years. The musical services throughout were more than ordinarily excellent, and the entire services were attended with most gratifying success.

MONDAY EVENING.

On Monday evening addresses were substituted for the usual tea meeting, an innovation which, in point of attendance, could not be called a success. The attendance, compared to the crowded pews of Sunday, was not at all large. Geo. A. Cox, Esq., occupied the chair, and the exercises began with an anthem from the choir, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Tovell. Mr. A. L. Davis then read the financial statement, which showed there was an excess of current receipts over current expenditures of $99.05. Mr. Cox, chairman, added some explanations. He pointed out that, in addition to the building improvements and the cost of the organ and stained glass windows, the sum of $1,300 had been spent in the extension of the school room. Of this amount the Ladies' Aid Society had already paid $1,000, and could be counted as good for the balance. It was desirable to reduce the debt to $4,000, when the receipts from the sale of sittings would easily pay the interest and provide a sinking fund. He was in a position to guarantee that $2,000 towards the reduction would be forthcoming, for Mr. Stevenson had told him (Mr. Cox) that if he would give $1,000 he would also, and he now held him to his bargain. (Applause and laughter.) Thus, taking everything into consideration, there remained only $826 to be raised by the congregation to reduce the debt to a form in which it could be easily managed and gradually wiped out.

After more music by the choir, Rev. Mr. Munro delivered a brief but forcible address, which showed that, while Christian unity was desirable, every evangelical church had some special work to do, and the suspension of any branch would impair the integrity of the church as a whole.

Mrs. Chambers and Mr. Davis contributed a duet, after which Rev. Dr. Williams delivered a telling and lengthy address, setting forth the merits, powers and influences of Methodism, and showing that it was in no way changed in its essential spirit from early Methodism. This was proved by the work it had done. In 1791 Methodists were a seventh part of Canada; to-day they were 31½ per cent of the population. His admirable address was full of fire and rousing eloquence.

Mr. W. A. Morrow moved, seconded by Mr. Davis, a vote of thanks to the Ladies' Aid Society. In doing so they gave the information that Mr. Cox had supplied a parsonage rent free, and Mr. Stevenson had furnished free fuel.

After a vote of thanks to Rev. Dr. Williams, moved by Rev. Mr. Tovell, seconded by Rev. Mr. Manning, and a statement by Rev. Mr. Keefer that the preliminary canvass for the Scott Act showed a surprising amount of popular sympathy and made the prospects of its adoption here extremely favorable, the meeting closed with the benediction.

Stock Shipments.

On Tuesday Messrs. Denoon & Roseborough shipped a carload of cattle to Montreal, and two cars last week. They report the market depressed.

Otonabee Flouring Mills.

These mills have been leased by Mr. H. A. Mulhern, formerly of Warkworth. He is now busily engaged in changing the mill so as to introduce the latest improvements in the milling art. This is to be done by the introduction of the full roller system. This will enable the new lessee to produce a grade of flour equal to any made on the continent, and he hopes in about a fortnight to have the mill in full running order.

Play for Provender.

Last Thursday afternoon a curling contest took place between a Peterborough and a Lakefield Rink, the stake being a hundred pounds of flour to be devoted to charity. The following rinks competed: Lakefield—Messrs. Hicks-Beach, R. C. Strickland, A. Strickland and G. Postlethwaite, skip. Peterborough—Messrs. T. Laplante, Wm. Croft, T. Rutherford and A. Hall, skip. The home rink won by a score of 29 to 14.

Declined With Thanks.

Last Friday Policeman Pidgeon picked up a seven-year-old young pauper on the streets. He extended the town hospitality to the youngster and, though the little fellow had been enjoined "not to tell," he extracted the information that he was given a ticket at Lindsay and strictly forbidden to tell where he came from. Peterborough attends to her own poor willingly, but when it comes to shouldering those of Lindsay and neighboring towns, the "free horse" kicks. The boy was promptly sent back.

New Business.

Mr. J. W. Miller has purchased the bankrupt stock of boots and shoes of Mr. A. C. McConnell, Market Block, George street, and will hereafter carry on the business on the premises. He has added a fine new stock and is now in a position to offer great bargains to customers. He is also prepared to receive orders for custom work, guaranteed to be finished in the most artistic and substantial manner. The public have had experience of Mr. Miller's mode of dealing, and will find him still reliable and ready and able to give the best of satisfaction.

A New Industry.

The organization of a company with a capital stock of $50,000 has been completed for the manufacture of locks in Peterborough. The factory will be on Simcoe street, in a building to be erected between the Central Iron Works and Hall's Biscuit Works. This building will be 50x60 feet in size, three stories in height. The upper floor of the Iron Works, 35x75, will also be incorporated with the lock factory premises, as well as a large extension, 22x90, at the rear of the Biscuit Works. The locks to be made are the best class locks, now procurable in Canada only by importation. This will be an important addition to the manufacturing industries of the town, as well as to the population, the hands required, being skilled workmen, drawing good wages.

WALLACE POINT BRIDGE vs. ROSA'S BRIDGE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—The suggestions made to the County Council to do away with the Wallace Point Bridge and build up the Rosa's Bridge instead, has caused a good deal of uneasiness to be felt amongst those interested in the Wallace Point Bridge.

A deputation called upon me last week to enquire upon what terms the Counties assumed the Wallace Point Bridge from the original Company, or if the counties have the power to cancel the bridge. As I was Secretary and Treasurer of the original company while in existence, and also having been employed by the company to make arrangements with the counties Council to assume the Bridge, I feel it a duty I owe the original stock holders and also to the public generally to give a full report of the whole transaction. In the year 1866, although the Rosa Bridge was then in full operation, it was thought that a bridge was so much required at the Wallace Point, and because the Counties could not build one, a joint stock company was formed to build a bridge across the river, called the Wallace Point, road and Bridge Company (limited), the capital stock to be $4,000 in 200 shares of twenty dollars each. The first meeting of the stockholders was held at Morton's Hotel on the thirty first day of October, 1866, the stock being all taken. The company was legally formed and the first call made on the stockholders. On the third day of January, 1867, at a meeting of the directors, there was paid into me as treasurer, $143, the amount required by law to enable the company to register the stock list, which I did in the Peterborough Registry Office.

The Government board of public works was notified and furnished with a specification and tracings of the plan. The Board sent the inspector of public works to make a personal examination of the river and approaches, who reported favorably. The municipalities interested having received the thirty days notice required by law, the company was then allowed to go on and build the bridge and approaches.

Having found that the original stock would not be sufficient, it was decided to increase the stock by fifty new shares, of which only twenty were sold.

It will be seen that the company spent $4,400 besides the amount collected by tolls during the time the bridge was in the company's hands, and it also built a house for the tollkeeper.

The road was so much travelled at that time that at a meeting of the directors on January 25th, 1870, the toll was let for that year at $260 rent, but unfortunately in April a flood took away the swing and injured the bridge so much that it was decided to ask the Counties Council to assume the bridge. Consequently on the 30th day of May, at a meeting of the directors, Mr. Richard Stewart and myself were appointed to attend the County Council at Peterborough, then about to assemble and we were given authority by the directors to make any arrangements that we could with the County Council of Peterborough, subject to a vote of the stockholders. The County Council agreed to assume one half if the united counties of Durham and Northumberland assumed the other half. I was then sent alone to the County Council at Cobourg, and the arrangements with both councils were that by the company transferring their rights over to the counties they (the said counties) would repair the bridge, make it a free road and keep it in repair.

This I reported to the directors at a meeting held on the 15th of June, which was accepted by the directors. I was then instructed to call a meeting of the stockholders on the 27th to transfer their right over to the counties. There was a large number of the stockholders present to meet the committee from the County Councils, and on that day the company transferred their right to the counties.

I have been careful to give the dates in order to show that the counties assumed one mile of road on each side of the river, as well as the bridge, and that the Council of Otonabee have no right to close that portion of the road leading to Peterborough, which belonged to the original Road and Bridge Company.

If South Monaghan wants closer connection with Peterborough, why not insist that the counties keep that road open and in good repair? Or if they want another bridge, let it be an inter-county bridge, and not attempt to do away with the Wallace Point Bridge, because there is no other place between Peterborough and Rice Lake where a bridge could be built that would accommodate so many people. Then why should anyone try to do away with a bridge which has been such a boon to this part of the country?

Look at it in another light. If the company had decided to repair the bridge the toll would have kept it in repair. If the travel over the bridge in 1870 warranted the giving of $260 rent per year, what would the toll have been worth since, when there is three or four times more travel over it now?

It is well known that the Reeve of South Monaghan said in a public speech that if he could do away with the Wallace Point bridge or, that if it would help to build the Rosa bridge, he would do away with it tomorrow if he could.

I see by your report of the deputation from South Monaghan to the Peterborough Council (conspicuous by the absence of three members of the South Monaghan Council, information, or details) that our worthy Reeve promised $3,000 from South Monaghan towards a new bridge at Rosa's, on what authority I know not. I had always thought that the Council had no authority to grant money outside of their own corporation without submitting it to a vote of the ratepayers.

Has our Reeve's sentiment been infused into the County Council to cause the delay of the necessary repairs now required on the Wallace Point bridge? If such be the case then it is time for the people to waken up and demand their just rights.

To show that the counties are obliged to keep the road and bridge in repair, also that the Company had the right to transfer the said road and bridge, I submit the following preamble to the stock list:—

"Be it remembered that on the thirty-first day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, we the undersigned stockholders met at Morton's Hotel, Wallace's Point, in the township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, in the Province of Canada, and resolved to form ourselves into a company to be called 'The Wallace Point Bridge and Road Company, according to the provisions of a certain act of the Parliament of this Province, entitled 'An Act respecting Joint Stock companies for the construction of Roads and other works in Upper Canada,' for the purpose of constructing a road from a certain point on the concession line between the third and fourth concessions of the Township of South Monaghan, in the County of Northumberland, one of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, at the south-east corner of lot No. 4 in the said 4th concession, thence along the present travelled road to the River Otonabee at its western boundary, thence across the said River Otonabee by means of a swing or other properly constructed bridge to the eastern boundary or bank of said river, thence along said eastern boundary or bank of said river in a northerly direction through the lands of one William Morton, to the present travelled road leading to said river, thence along said travelled road to a point at or near the northern boundary of lot No. 12 in the 17th concession of the Township of Otonabee, in the County of Peterborough, in all a distance of two miles and one quarter of a mile. And we do hereby declare the capital stock of said Company shall be four thousand dollars, to be divided into two hundred shares at the price or sum of twenty dollars each.

'And we, the undersigned stockholders, do hereby agree to take and accept the number of shares set by us opposite to our respective signatures, and we do hereby agree to pay the calls thereon according to the provisions of the said in part recited Act, and of the rules, regulations and by-laws of the said Company, to be made or passed in that behalf, and we do hereby nominate John Lightfoot, of the Township of South Monaghan, aforesaid, farmer, Robert Waddel, of the same place, merchant, George Elliott, of the Township of Cavan, farmer, Wm. Morton, of the Township of Otonabee, farmer, and Richard Stewart, of the said Township of Otonabee, to be the first Directors of the said Company."

Knowing that this communication is already too long, I do not wish to trespass any more on your valuable space at present. Thanking you in the name of those interested for giving this insertion,

I remain, yours, &c.,
THOMAS M. WILLAN.

Roller Skating Rink Opening.

Workmen are busy putting the finishing touches to the beautiful new roller skating rink on Water street, which will be formally opened next Monday evening. The visitor will see a spacious room finished in first-class style, 45x100 feet in area. The fine floor is composed of well matched and polished maple, smooth and level as a sheet of virgin ice. Handsome dressing rooms are placed at one end, one each side of the band stand. The three necessary essentials for the successful, enjoyable exercise of roller skating are a good floor, good skates and good order. The first two are already provided, and the management of the rink will see that the last is secured and and maintained. There is no roller rink in Canada better than the one on Water street. It was built expressly for the purpose, and in essential requisites, elegance of appointments and completeness of furniture and fittings, can not be excelled. The rink will be handsomely decorated for the opening next Monday night, when a large attendance will be present to witness the inauguration of a new and popular form of recreation which has created a veritable furore wherever introduced. Admission 15 cents. Skates supplied for 10 cents.

LINDSAY.

The ladies of the town are almost unanimous that the Scott Act should pass, and will use their persuasive powers to that end.

A meeting of the committee appointed to take preliminary steps towards the submission of the Scott Act has been called for next week.

Steps have been taken by those opposed to the Scott Act to select a deputation to go to Ottawa about the 17 inst, where a combined attack will be made on "the old man," for certain modifications to be made in the act, and in matters pertaining thereto.

The case of McNeely & Walters against the county for balance on the Omemee bridge contract was decided in favor of the plaintiffs at the division court on Saturday.

Rev. Mr. McMillen's sermon at Woodstock, Ontario, yesterday morning was interrupted by the clang of the fire bell, and he announced a recess of ten minutes to fix up things, which was successfully done, fire not having got too far under way in a neighbouring house.

CAVAN.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A few days ago while Mr. Richard Howden was attending Mr. Andrew Boyd's threshing he met with a serious accident. It appears that the leather belt came off the canvas pully and Mr. Houden caught it to prevent it from getting into the fans, but unfortunately the belt caught him and twisted round his arm, breaking it just above the wrist, and only that Thomas Boyd had the presence of mind to pull off the cylinder belt it would no doubt have been a great deal worse with him. As it is, he has suffered a great deal on account of getting his arm and shoulder so badly sprained. Dr. Carmichael of Mount Pleasant was called in to dress the arm, and under his skilful and careful treatment he is doing as well as can be expected.

Mr. R. D. Dundass, proprietor of "Beaver Meadow stock farm," Springville, sold a very fine bull calf a few days ago to R. Bowls & Bro's. He is of dark red color, ten months old, and lifts the beam at 940 lbs., and is from his old favorite cow "Lady Whackem." For raising prize stock "Lady Whackem" is equalled by few and excelled by none. Mr. Dundass has also sold another very fine bull, "Rob Roy," to Mr. John Flatters, of Ida. This animal is of rare beauty and size. We compliment Mr. Flatters on his flattering choice. We would advise those interested in raising thoroughbred cattle to inspect Mr. Dundass' herd, for we think it will stand inspection with anything raised in Canada.

On the 20th, ult., the children—and in fact the parents too—of Mount Pleasant were tickled over a "tea fight," held in that place. There were a good many present and all appeared to enjoy the goodies that were set before them by loosing no time in getting themselves on the outside of the cakes. The ladies nobly filled their part in getting up such an excellent tea, which was served in a vacant store. The entertainment was held in the church. The programme consisted of readings, recitations and music, vocal and instrumental.

As our Fraserville correspondent says "Springville is looking up," I might say Mount Pleasant is also looking up. By the way, our brother scribe of Fraserville seems to have our welfare at heart. Glad to have someone to remind us of our duty, but hope he won't loose any sleep over it. The reason I didn't tell you about the "Mutual and self-improving society," is because I didn't know there was such a society in Springville, and moreover its the place of the secretary to conduct the correspondence of the society, not mine. Some time ago I heard there was to be a debate held in Springville. "Resolved that Napoleon was a greater General than Wellington, the leader for the affirmative to be J. R. Laing, and for the negative, A. H. Strike; never heard the result or which was the greater.

The society has my best wishes, and I hope it will prosper in every particular, for I think there is nothing that will improve the mind so much as studying for a debate.

Last week Mr. Robert Howden took his departure from "Fair View" to Peterboro', there to retire from the cares and worries of farm life, and enjoy the fruits of his toils. I think he is doing a wise thing, and if more of our old pioneers would follow his example they might enjoy the declining years of their life much better.

The Scott Act has passed in Durham and Nothumberland with a majority of 3,000. Cavan gave 215 in favor of the act.

Mr. Geo. Seney's sale of farm stock and implements takes place on the 17th inst. I understand Mr. Seney is bound for the "Golden West."

A meeting of the patrons of the Lakefield Cheese Factory was held in Leonard's Hall on Tuesday evening 24 February to organize for the coming season, Mr. T. J. Nelson in the chair, and Mr. Moore, secretary. Mr. J. W. Moore read a short address to the patrons in which he expressed his determination to do everything in his power to make a first-class article for the market. He intended in the future to more frequently test samples of milk as that was a very important factor in the manufacture of No. 1 cheese. The representatives from Douro were asked if they meant to divide and have a second factory in their own neighborhood. They answered that that was their intention, and that a meeting was to be held at Mr. Wilson's on Thursday evening, the 27th to decide that matter. Some discussion then took place as to the advantage of large factories, some contending they could get a better price, others replied that small factories even got a higher price for their cheese. The reply was that they had to spend time in retailing, and that should be considered, as small quantities of cheese could not be supplied to the retail trade without incurring expenses. The representatives from the east side invited Mr. Moore to attend the meeting at Mr. Wilson's.

The following officers were then elected.—Mr. G. J. Galvin Treasurer and Salesman, at a salary of $50.00. Messrs. Harry Garbutt, John Fitzgerald and Levi Payne as a committee to assist when necessary. Messrs. And. Fairbairn and Ed. Foley, Auditors, and W. J. Moore Secretary.

RUNAWAYS.

While Mrs. Purser and Master Fred were out driving on Monday the 23rd ultimo, the cutter ran on their horse's heel, causing him to become unmanageble and run from the railway crossing down Queen Street as far as Crawford's store, where Mrs. Purser reined him into the deep snow and stopped him; she then turned round to drive home when he again started to run; when opposite the Hotel Mr. Purser made an effort to catch the horse by the head but missed and was thrown down. Mrs. Purser reined the animal against the fence when he was caught. Mr. Purses has had a lame back from the effects of his fall.

On Thursday last a colt belonging to Mr. George Roaborough broke loose from the post at Madill Bros., ran down to Baptie's planing mill, along Water Street to the bridge and was caught near Mrs. Phalen's by Mr. Fred Waldon. Not much damage done.

CONCERT.

Prof. Crowe held a concert on Thursday evening in Leonard's Hall. There was a fair attendance.

ENTERTAINMENT.

There was an entertainment given in the P. C. A. Hall on Friday evening last under the auspices of the C. P. Ladies Foreign Missionary Society. There was a good programme, good house, and a pleasent evening was spent. Refreshments were supplied at the close of the intellectual feast.

THE DAM.

Mr. Wynne is again pushing on the work with vigor and he hopes to complete the work by spring. Messrs. R. and G. Strickland are also reparing the side dam and will soon have it completed.

FIRE.

The fire bell rang one day last week and soon there was a rush along Queen and Church Streets towards Mr. Wilcox's house which was reported on fire. The fire, which had originated in the kitchen around the pipe, which passed through the celing, was soon under control though a few minutes more and matters would have been more serious.

GOING WEST.

Mr. Thos. Casement, has sold his farm and is going west to Dakota this month. Mr. Casement has long been a resident in this part of the country and will carry the good wishes of many friends with himself and family to his new home in the west.

WATER WORKS.

A public meeting is to be held in the Council Chamber this (Thursday) evening to receive the committee's report and discuss the desirability of undertaking the work. As ratepayers are all interested, there should be a full attendance.

COUNCIL AND SCHOOL BOARD MEETINGS.

Council meets in Leonard's Hall on Monday evening next and the School Board in same place on Tuesday evening following at 8 p. m. sharp.

FORESTRY.

The Lakefield court meets on Thursday evening next in Union Hall.

BRIDGENORTH.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The concert given by Prof. Crowe and his musical family in the Town Hall, on Friday evening last, was fairly well attended and was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. Several pieces of sacred music were given in good style; but the cheif feature of the concert was the side splitting songs which were given in such a manner as to elicit storms of applause from the audience, who were greatly amused by the Professor's manner of setting them off. Should he visit Bridgenorth again he will, no doubt, draw a much larger audience.

The following is the monthly report for February of S. S. No. 5 Smith:—4th, class, 1st, Lillie Frankish; 2nd, Mary McEwen; 3rd, Sarah Frankish. 3rd, class, 1st, Fred Mann; 2nd, Isaac Mann; 3rd, Percy Udy. 2nd, class, 1st, Annie Pickens; 2nd, Aaron Mann; 3rd, Martha Gagin. Part 2, 1st, Alphonse Fobert; 2nd, Thos. Gagin.

FRASERVILLE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A grand Orange lecture and concert will be held on Friday evening, March 6th, under the auspices of Orange Lodges Nos. 46 and 50, of Cavan, in the Methodist Church, Fraserville. Dr. Smithett, Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Eastern Ontario, will deliver his celebrated lecture, on "Orangeism; its Mission in the Past, Present and Future." The eloquence and repotation of the reverend gentleman promise a rare intellectual treat. Rev. Mr. Manning, of Peterborough, will also deliver an address on "Patriotism," well worth hearing. The best of music will be provided for the occasion. The committee is making every arrangement for the success of the concert. Admission 25 cents; family tickets $1.00. Mr. J. B. Mc. Williams, County Master, Peterborough, will occupy the chair. Come one, come all.

Mrs. D. Morrison, Farnham Centre, P.Q., writing about Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, says: "George Hall used it on his son, and it cured him of rheumatism with only a few applications. The balance of the bottle was used by an old gentleman for Asthma, with the best results. It acts like a charm."

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Enter March, in grieving silence, weeping rainy tears; will he roar in angry violence, when he disappears?

At the second monthly meeting of the Otonabee Council, Geo. Reade, Esq., after much persuasion, consented to retain the clerkship, with the understanding that his son, Mr. John Reade, should assist as a sort of deputy.

The skating carnival last Friday night was the best exhibition of fancy costumes ever shown in Keene. Though the number of masks was not so great as at the last, nor the attendance so large, the general appearance was much finer. Four or five costumes were especially good, making it difficult to decide which was best. The prize for the most characteristic costume worn by a lady was a pretty little satin-lined dressing case, and was awarded to Miss Powell, as Queen Elizabeth. The racing prize was won by Duncan McIntyre, jun. The village of Keene is much indebted to Mr. Robt. McIntyre for giving us a rink, season after season. The excellent condition in which he keeps the ice, his unvarying kindness to visitors and patrons, and his persistent firmness in matter of excellent order, cannot be too highly spoken of. If the weather continues suitable it is possible we may have yet another carnival to close the season. We are sorry not to have a list of costumes, but Mr. McIntyre, who was to furnish us, depended on Dr. Shaw for the names, and the Doctor, on learning that Mr. McIntyre wished to hand the list to THE EXAMINER, plumply refused to give it, so our readers will please accept our regrets, as if we had known of this we would have seen to it ourselves.

Since writing the above we have obtained a list of the costumes from another source, as follows:

LADIES.

Miss Jenny Lang	Dawn
Bella McFarlane	Forest Belle

Marshall Weir	Escaped Lunatic
D. Kennealy	Uncle Sam
Adam Dickson	Jockey
Jas. McNeil, jr	Volunteer
Jas. Massie	Highland Laddie
Fred. English	Southern Planter
James Bryce	Scarecrow

[In reference to the treatment extended our correspondent by Dr. Shaw, it is difficult to fancy that there is another man in the county that would descend to such petty meanness. We trust that the friends of THE EXAMINER in Otonabee will appreciate Dr. Shaw's desire to deprive them of news, of personal interest to many of them, and show their appreciation by leaving him quietly to mind his own business.—ED. EXAMINER.

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

ENTERTAINMENT.

On Friday evening last the pupils of the Norwood High School gave a musical and literary entertainment here. The people of the village responded nobly to the invitations kindly sent by the pupils, and indeed they were in no way sparing of the invitations either, as the Model School room of the new building was thoroughly filled. The programme was a very lengthy one, well selected, and in every particular most carefully precisely rendered, and where all did so well, to make individual mention would be only making an invidious distinction. The audience throughout the entertainment were highly pleased, and manifested their appreciation of the various characters set forth by hearty bursts of applause. The proceedings were proficiently presided over by the the popular Principal of the school, Mr. Davidson, and at the conclusion of the programme a vote of thanks was unanimously voted to the pupils under his charge for providing such a profitable and pleasing evening's entertainment.

RAISING THE LICENSES.

At a meeting of our municipal fathers last week a motion was passed allowing only two tavern licenses instead of three, as formerly, and only one shop license, each to be raised to the neat little figure of $120 instead of $75, as heretofore. This action on the part of the Council has raised the ire and indignation of the vendors of whisky, and they threaten retaliation by taking out a "wine and beer license" and closing their billiard tables, upon which a license of $40 has been placed; but rather than be confined to the open selling of wine and beer, no doubt the hotelkeepers will come to time and pay the full fee for selling all kinds of liquors ad libitum.

ROB ROY COURT.

The court of Foresters recently organized here is making rapid strides of advancement and promises to become one of our most popular and strongest institutions. The members are now handsomely fitting up their new hall in Roxburgh's new building, which they will shortly occupy. Neatly raised stands and pedestals, painted according to to the requirements of the order, have been placed in position for the chief officers; the walls have been brilliantly frescoed, and at each end of the room handsome and appropriate designs in Forestry have been affixed to the walls, as well as other insignias of the order placed at intervals around the room. The members have spared no pains nor expense to provide the most suitable decorations and in making their hall inviting and attractive. The indomitable Chief Ranger, Mr. Jas. Kerr, has had charge of the embellishing of the room, and has evinced great taste and energy in the work. It is to be hoped Rob Roy Court will continue to flourish.

SCOTT ACT CONVENTION.

THE ACT TO BE SUBMITTED

At the Earliest Convenient Time—Organization Begun—Committees Formed.

On Wednesday afternoon a county Scott Act convention was held in Bradburn's Opera House. There was a large attendance, principally from the rural districts, though the town was also fairly represented. Most of the ministers of the county were present and had seats on the platform. Mr. Geo. A. Cox was placed in the chair and Mr. J. W. Flavelle made secretary pro tem. The chairman said the object of the meeting was to elicit an expression of opinion as to the expediency of submitting the Scott Act to popular vote.

Mr. D. W. Dumble then delivered an admirable address on the evils of the liquor traffic and the desirability of doing away with it. At its conclusion he moved, seconded by Dr. Massie, of Keene, that

Whereas this convention is of the opinion that the adoption of the Scott Act will tend to suppress the liquor traffic and promote the social, moral and material interests of the people, therefore it is

Resolved that we do take the necessary steps to cause a vote for the adoption of the Scott Act to be brought on in this town and county at the earliest convenient time.

Mr. F. S. Spence, Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, then explained the provisions of the Act, comparing its superiority and perfection over the old Dominion act. (The prohibitory and penal clauses of the Act will be found in another column.)

Mr. Jas. Stratton suggested the forming of township and polling sub-division organizations, and with that end in view the following gentlemen were appointed a committe to organize the several townships.

PETERBOROUGH.

Geo. A. Cox, president, Geo. Hilliard, Jno. Erskine, G. M. Roger, A. P. Poussette vice-presidents; Dr. Fife, chairman of committee; J. W. Flavelle, treasurer. The secretary is to be appointed at the first meeting of the committee.

The first name of the above committees to be the convenors, with power to add any other names he may deem advisable to add to the organization committee.

WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

In the room adjoining the Opera House a large number of the ladies of the town met to form a branch of the W. C. T. U. The following officers were elected, Mrs. Dr. Fife acting as secretary pro tem:—President, Mrs. W. Fitzgerald; vice-presidents, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Heather, Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. J. Stratton; Recording Secretary, Miss Yelland; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. (Rev.) McAmmond; Treasurer, Mrs. John Moore; Press Committee—Mrs. Kendry and Mrs. J. Stratton; Literature—Mrs. G. A. Cox and Mrs. J. H. Patterson. It is understood that other names are to be added to these committees.

THE SCOTT ACT TO THE SOUTH OF US.

The crushing victory in the counties of Northumberland and Durham last Thursday of the temperance people and the adoption of the Scott Act by three thousand majority, shows that the temperance wave is unabating in strength. It is probable the action of the anti-Scottites is stealing the original petition, for the submission of the Scott act in these counties, in a large measure contributed to the enormous majority.

OTONABEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The following is the honor roll of S. S. No. 5, Otonabee, for the month of February, Miss Lousie S. Harper, teacher.

Council met pursuant to adjournment on the 27th of Febrnary, members all present. The treasurer was directed to pay the following sums, viz:—To A. H. Gaddye, for damage drawing gravel through crops, $7.00; Peter Hamilton, for road scrapers, $25.25; Campbell, McNeil & Co., account, $2.01; Protestant Home for keep of Mrs. Chapman, $36.00; Protestant home for the keep of P. Whittock, $13.00. Messrs. David Crowley, H. Coombs, Timothy Mulcahy, Cornelius Driscol, Dennis Shaughnessy and Timothy Coughlin were allowed their statute labor for current year for work done, on the allowance for road between 13th and 14th concession. The same parties were also allowed to commute their statute labor for 1886 and 1887, the work to be done on same road under direction of Mr. David Crowley. Mr. Wm. Nelson hereafter to do his statute labor on road division No. 11 instead of No. 10. The Reeve, Councillors and Clerk are to constitute a Local Board of Health for this township.

The Clerk was directed to notify Messrs. James Barry and John Crowley to move their fence off the allowance for road between the 13th and 14th concessions. George Read was appointed clerk and treasurer for current year.

Council adjourned till the 16th of March next.

NEWS FROM THE SOUDAN.

BULLER EFFECTS A SAFE RETREAT.

Terrible Sufferings in the Desert.

The despatches from the seat of war contain good tidings. General Buller's entire force has reached Gakdul wells. His retreat from Abu Klea is said to have been effected without the loss of a single man. The distance from Gakdul to Korti, where Wolseley is lying with the main body of the British army, is only seventy miles, but the route is by no means an easy one. There are several wells between the two points, but the water is said to be brackish, and moreover at this season of the year the springs often fail. But considering that he has fought his way from Abu Klea to Gakdul, through several hordes of hostile Arabs, and along a desert trail where little water was to be had, it is reasonable to suppose that the gallant Buller will be able to reach the end of his perilous journey in safety. On his arrival at Korti, the united forces of Buller and Wolseley will probably move to Debbeh, a town at the bend of the Nile, from which several camel routes radiate, and a place of great strategic importance.

Meanwhile Brackenbury, with a force of 1,800 men, is making his way from Abu Hamad to Berber, which he will capture if he can. Osman Digna was supposed to be in that neighborhood with a large army, but the probability is that he is engaged watching the Suakim route. If Brackenbury can reach Berber and take it, the British forces will be safe for the summer.

BRITISH LOSSES IN THE DESERT.

The losses suffered by the British in their desert campaign since leaving Korti in killed and disabled is 80 officers and 450 men.

"I AM MADE OF IRON."

Last October the Mahdi sent a letter to General Gordon exulting over the wreck of Colonel Stewart's steamer and murder of that officer and his companions. The Mahdi inclosed copies of the documents found on the steamer, and an account showing the state of the munitions and supplies at Khartoum at the time of Stewart's departure. Gen. Gordon returned a defiant reply to the Mahdi. He said, "I do not care how many men you have killed, or what success you have gained, it will make no difference to me." After more in the same vein, he concluded, "I do not care what forces you have, I am made of iron and intend to hold on here."

GEN. BULLER AT KORTI.

KORTI, March 1.—Gen. Buller has arrived here. The remainder of his force will leave Gakdul gradually, spoiling the wells as they retire. The troops are suffering the severe strain of trudging through the desert without camels.

ADDRESS TO THE BLACK TROOPS.

Gen. Wolseley has issued an address to the black troops which served under Gen. Gordon, specially eulogizing the engineer and native officers who commanded the steamer which took Gen. Wilson to Khartoum. Gen Wolseley says he will recognize all the promises made by Gen. Gordon. A portion of Gen. Gordon's troops will be sent to reinforce the Mudir at Birti.

KASSALA CLOSELY BESIEGED.

MASSOWAH, March 3.—The garrison at Kassala is reduced to an effective force of six hundred. The town is closely besieged, and the garrison short of ammunition. The Egyptian troops are discontented, and the government at Cairo has abandoned all hope of relieving the town.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT FOR TROOPS.

KORTI, March 3.—It is reported that the British troops will remain in this vicinity during the summer, and be lodged in straw huts. Great fears are entertained concerning the effects of the torrid heat. The mortality will doubtless be large, and the troops may be constantly harassed by the rebels.

General Wolseley's eyes are affected by the glare of the sun. The intense heat has caused an outbreak of typhoid fever among the British troops.

THE MAHDI FEARS TREACHERY.

Messengers from Omdurman report that the followers of the Mahdi were much disappointed at the small amount of plunder found at Khartoum. The rebels do not appear anxious to encounter the English. The Mahdi is in constant fear of treachery.

CHARTERING VESSELS.

The Government has chartered 75 vessels for transporting troops and supplies to Suakim.

TO TERRIFY ALL ENGLAND.

The Dynamiter's Plans—No Harm to Come to the Prince of Wales in Ireland.

PARIS, March 1.—Flannery, the secretary of the Dynamite Committee, in an interview declared the dynamiters began preparations three weeks ago for certain events to take place in England, compared with which all previous explosions were experiments, and which he was confident would terrify all England. He said the Prince of Wales would not be molested during his stay in Ireland, as he was going there with good intentions.

THE DECREES OF THE CONVENTION.

Flannery is a man about thirty-six or thirty-seven years old, of fair complexion, with auburn hair. He is apparently well educated, and has travelled all over Europe and in the East. He refuses to make his birthplace public, fearing to compromise his relations. The interviewer asked his permission to publish the address at which the conclave was held. Flannery said:

"The address was, as you know, in the Rue Cambon, Paris. You yourself were present at the conclave. The British and French police were baffled and the concierge of the building was outwitted. The Home Secretary is very glib in denying the holding of the conclave, but unfortunately for himself, he can neither deny the occurrence of last explosions nor prevent their reccurence."

"You anticipate fresh explosions, then?"

"Yes, within a few weeks, if only to consecrate the decrees of the Convention."

VOLUMES OF BOMBAST have been published about the multifarious and irrecountable effects of many proprietary remedies. The proprietors of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery content themselves with facts susceptible of proof. They state their Further to be what it has proved itself to be, an eradicator of Dyspepsia, Constipation, Liver and Kidney troubles, and a fine general alterative.

PRINCE OF WALES' VISIT.

His Royal Highness May Expect a Popular Welcome.

LONDON, March 1.—The Sunday Observer has an able leader on the proposed visit of the Prince of Wales to Ireland. It believes that the apparent opposition to his visit is artificial, and is being worked up to aid the schemes of political adventurers. It says that the desperate efforts of a few truculent agitators to induce the Irish people to hold aloof from the Prince, proves that the agitators fear that he will have a popular welcome. But whatever may be the warmth of his reception the Observer believes that his visit will be too late by some years to have any material influence in Ireland, as the home rule sentiment is now too firmly established to be shaken by a royal progress.

The programme of the Irish tour of the Prince and Princess of Wales includes a visit to Killarney, where they will remain two days.

The Prince paid two visits to Ireland previous to the year 1868; the first was a pleasure tour of about a month, and amongst the objects of interest visited was the famous Blarney stone, and a royal kiss was imprinted upon that favoured lump of granite. He was next with his regiment, the Coldstream Guards, for four months at the camp of the Curragh, Sir George Brown, K.C.B., being commander of the forces, and during a march out at the head of ten thousand troops to Maryborough, a distance of eighteen miles, his Royal Highness carried the greater part of the way the whole kit of a private soldier, who had fainted under the load, comprising rifle, knapsack, sixty rounds of ammunition, tent pole, and square of canvas. Not a bad load for a royal youth of eighteen; and upon reaching the camp ground at Maryborough, gave to each of the ten thousand men a pint of Dublin stout, to refresh themselves after the march, and after a four days' camp, marched back with his men to the Curragh in a drenching rain, and again wetted the interior of every man with a pint of stout and entertained the officers at the end of each march.

WAR WITH RUSSIA:

Believed to be Imminent—Negotiations at a Delicate Stage—Russia's Sweeping Demands.

LONDON, March 2.—It is undoubted in some circles that war with Russia hangs by a thread. Negotiations between Russia and England respecting the Russo-Afghan frontier are said to have reached a very delicate stage. Lessar, the Russian Commissioner, has urged such sweeping demands that England cannot accept anything approaching them, and the complete collapse of the delimitation project and an early advance of the Russian troops toward Herat are expected.

THE COLOMBIA REBELLION.

A British Man-of-War Fired On.

PANAMA, March 3.—The revolution in Colombia is acquiring formidable proportions. In a battle at Barranquila the Government troops were defeated, with a loss of sixty killed, two hundred wounded, and three hundred prisoners including Gen. Urrutetia, commander, and many officers. The expedition proved a complete failure and Carthagena, the base of Government operations, is now besieged by 800 men under the victorious Gen. Gaitan. On February 28rd, in Carthagena, Capt. Curtis, of the British man-of-war Canada, while going aboard his ship, was fired at by Government soldiers. The boat was riddled with bullets, and the captain and boat's crew were wounded by flying splinters. The British steamer West Indian, which was in port at the time, received a shower of projectiles from Remington guns. Gen. Ruex to-day seized the canal tug Game Cock and took her to join the revolutionists at Barranquila. It is believed he will return with men and material and capture Colon and turn the State over to the revolutionists. The battle of Honda, it is reported, was favorable to the Government. There was much loss of life. The list of prisoners includes the names of half a dozen leaders of the expedition. Few details have been received. Camargo, the famous Colombian leader, is at the head of the revolution, which is solely a protest against the dictatorship and illegal methods of President Numes.

GEN. GRANT'S HEALTH.

Very Little Hope of His Recovery—His Disease the Result of Excessive Smoking.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The family and friends of Gen. Grant as well as the doctors attending him admit there is little or no hope that the General will recover. The General suffers constant pain in the ear and head, and the cancerous growth at the root of his tongue is hardening and steadily growing worse. He is breaking down but has displayed much courage. The cancer was caused undoubtedly by excess in smoking. The doctors cannot say how near the end is, but there is a possibility that he may live for months. The General is unable to see any one, for weeks he has had little comfort in the society of even his most intimate associates. The bare effort to articulate is accompanied at times by acute pains, and always by great inconvenience.

The capabilities of an Irish Municipal Council for fighting are almost unlimited; the Council at Cashel has rather beaten the record. The meeting in its disorder emulated Bret Harte's, "Society on the Stanislaus." In that memorable meeting one of the learned members, "when a chunk of old red sandstone took him in the abdomen," had no further interest in the proceedings, and a somewhat similar fate happened the chairman at Cashel. During a debate in which English rule formed a factor, a personal dispute took place, and half the city fathers were arranged against the other half in a fisticuff encounter, and in the melee the chairman received a severe blow, and he was dragged from his seat in an insensible condition, and the meeting terminated.

Infidel Slanderers Exposed

Evangelical Doctrine Bitter to the Sceptics.

Examples of Regeneration.

The subject of the sermon was a reply to slanders against Evangelical churches recently uttered by infidel pulpits and platforms. The text was from Revelation x., 10-11: "I took the little book out of the angel's hand and ate it up, and it was in my mouth sweet as honey, and as soon as I had eaten it my belly was bitter, and he said unto me, "Thou must prophesy again before many peoples."

Domitian, the Roman Emperor, had in his realm a troublesome clergyman who would keep preaching, and he exiled him to a rocky island used for punishment, as Russia sends convicts to Siberia, and England sent prisoners to Australia. That island, now called Patmos, is so rocky and barren that the inhabitants live by fishing. But one Sunday while the exiled clergyman of whom I speak sat at the mouth of a cavern in the hill-side, perhaps hummed half-asleep by the drone of the sea, he had a supernatural dream, and time and eternity passed in panorama before him. Among other strange spectacles he dreamt he saw an angel with a little book, and he asked the angel if he might have it. Well, you know that things are sometimes incongruous in a dream, and so the angel gave the little book to him and told him to eat it up, and that while it would be so luscious to his taste after he got it down he would suffer from indigestion. Obeying the angel the evangelist in his dream devoured the little book, and, as had been foretold, it was sweet while being masticated, but afterward a physical distress and bitterness. Who the angel was and what the little book he gave was is uncertain to commentators, and so I take no responsibility of interpretation, but will say that it suggests to me the creed of the Evangelical churches which sceptics in our time find sweet to chew up but never can digest.

ALL INTELLIGENT PEOPLE HAVE CREEDS, either written or unwritten, that is, a class of theories which you have adopted political creeds, religious creeds, that is a group of sentiments about deity and about the soul and about the unseen future. The only being who has no creed about anything is an idiot. Recently the beliefs of evangelical churches have been under a fusilade of caricature and misrepresentation. Men, in pulpits and on platforms, have set up certain things as the orthodox faith and then have levelled at them all their musketry of denunciation.

They put up a mere effigy of evangelism to shoot at. They misstate and falsify the evangelical churches. They take some of the Gospel theories and set them in harsh and repulsive ways and put them out of association with other truths. They are like a mad anatomist, who, wishing to demonstrate what a man is, dissects a human body and hangs up a heart in one place and a pair of lungs in another place and the spleen in another place and an ankle bone in another place, and says: "That is a man." They are only fragments of a man and wrenched from their God-appointed places. Evangelical religion is a healthy, symmetrical, well-jointed, rosoate, bounding life, and you cannot by the scalpel and dissecting knife of infidelity discover what it is.

They say, for instance, that the Presbyterians believe that God is a savage sovereign who made some men just to damn them, and that there are infants in hell a span long. There is not an infidel on earth, though he had a retainer of a thousand dollars a day, who could manage in the course of ten years to make an honest, fair and accurate representation of what the Presbyterian church believes. It believes that God is a loving and just sovereign and that man is a free agent. "No, no!" says the antagonist who has chewed up the little book of creeds and has the consequent embittered stomach, "If God is a sovereign we cannot be free agents." But we acknowledge that possibility everywhere else. I, De Witt Talmage, am a free citizen of Brooklyn, that is, I go where I please and when I please. Yes; but I have four sovereigns over me. The highest court of my denomination is my ecclesiastical sovereign. The mayor of the city is my municipal sovereign. The governor of New York is my state sovereign. The president of the United States is my national sovereign. Yet with these four sovereigns, in every faculty of body, mind and soul,

I AM A FREE MAN.

If I should to-morrow walk in the corridors of the Mercantile Library and improve my mind, or go through the conservatory of my friend at Jamaica who has blooming, under the rather of glass, dwellers from all zones and aquariums, aquaria with trout and gold fish, and if I wish to pluck ripe oranges and Bananas from the branches, I may do so. And if I want to go up to the furnaces of the oil-factories in Hoboken and jump into the flames or leap off the platform of a Philadelphia express train, or from the deck of a Fulton street ferry-boat, I can do so. If I leap into the Hoboken furnaces who is to blame? My friend out at Jamaica who offers me his conservatory? That is all there is in Presbyterianism about God's sovereignty and man's free agency. God rules and reigns and has conservatories and he has blast furnaces. If you want to walk into the gardens you may, and if you want to leap into the red-hot cauldrons you may. If you choose the cauldron rather than the conservatory who is to blame? Of course the one who made the conservatory and sent you a written invitation to come and spend your life among the cactus and palm trees. We simply mean that the empire of the future will have a palace and a penitentiary. All our cities have their penitentiary. Suppose some one had a charmed key by which he could go through the United States and open Raymond street jail and New York Tombs and Moyamensing prison of Philadelphia and all the dungeons and penitentiaries, what would become of this country in three weeks? Now the empire of the future has its penitentiary. Suppose all the culprits of that penitentiary should be let out and enter the new Jerusalem, the first morning the gate of pearl would be found off its hinges. The linch pins would be out of the chariot wheels.

THE HOUSE OF MANY MANSIONS would be burglarized, angels of God would be insulted on the street, assault and battery and libertinism and assassination in the capital of the skies. Heaven will be a failure if there be not somewhere a great look-up. If all get heaven without reference to what their character was when they left the earth I wonder if in the heavenly temple Charles Guiteau and John Wilkes Booth occupied the same pew.

I saw a photograph in Arkansas of a capsized mail train. Some villains had taken up the track near a railroad bridge and the train had gone thirty feet down and killed about twenty people, mostly women and children. When the desperadoes who pulled up that track got to heaven I wonder if their thrones will be anywhere near the people they slew. If a murderer break into a house and massacre a whole family, and the police, hearing the disturbance, rush upon the scene and put a bullet through the skull of the ruffian, will they all the slain and their slayer, arrive in glory about the same time? You all see that it is only common sense that there should be two destinies, and as to infants in hell a span long that is a falsehood that comes down from the past, and there is no sign that its longevity will ever fail. If you will bring me a Presbyterian in sound mind and of good morals who believes that there has ever been a baby or ever will be a baby in the lost world I will make over to that man a deed of all the property I have, and he can take possession to-morrow.

FORMS AND CEREMONIES.

The antagonists of evangelical religion say that the Episcopal church substitutes forms and ceremonies for heart religion, and it is all a matter of liturgy and genuflections. False again. All genuine Episcopalians will tell you that the forms and ceremonies of their church are nothing unless the heart be in them. I never have been more overwhelmed with religious feelings than when I heard, at Sharon Springs, our neighbor Dr. Schenck, with voice like a band of music, read that passage from the prayer-book, than which nothing sublimer has ever been written: "By the mystery of the Holy Incarnation; by the Holy Nativity and circumcision; by thy baptism, fasting and temptation; by thine agony and bloody sweat; by thy Cross and Passion; by thy precious death and burial; by thy glorious Resurrection and Ascention, and by the coming of the Holy Ghost; in all time of our tribulation; in all time of our prosperity; in the hour of death, and in the Day of Judgment, Good Lord deliver us."

The antagonist of the Baptist Church say that they believe only those will get to heaven who are baptized by immersion. False again. They believe that all who accept Christ, whether they be baptized by one drop on the forehead or by plunge out of sight in the Ohio or Susquehanna will reach Heaven, although the latter mode is the only gate into their particular society in this world. I have already made arrangements of communion with the close communion Baptists on the other side the garden, and I shall be glad if the chalice passes to me directly from the lip and hand of my glorified friend, John Dowling, the king of Baptist ministers in a former generation.

The antagonists of the Methodist Church say that they believe a man can convert himself, and that conversion in that church is a matter of temporary emotion, and that a man kneels at the anxious bench and feels bad and then the minister pats him on the back and tells him he is all right; that is all there is of it. False again. They believe that the Holy Ghost alone can convert a man, and conversion in that church is by an earthquake of conviction and a sunburst of pardon, and as to the temporary emotion, Lord, give us all more of the temporary emotion that lasted Matthew Simpson and Bishop Jones a half century, keeping them on fire for God until their bodies burned out in his service.

BELIEVERS BELIED.

All the denominations are misrepresented and belied as to their belief. The leading doctrines of the Evangelical churches are misrepresented as dry and dull and impossible. The infidels and unconverted ministers in pulpits have set up a laugh at the Trinity, one God but three Persons. They say if He is one God He cannot be three, and if three They cannot be one. But we have trinity all around us. Trinity in ourselves: body and mind and soul. Body by which we walk, mind by which we calculate, soul by which we love, but all three one man. Trinity in the air: heat, light and moisture, but one atmosphere. Trinity in the court-room: three judges on the bench, making but one court. Trinity all around us, in nature and in earthly government, why not Trinity in Godhead! Of course all illustrations are defective because the natural cannot fully represent the spiritual. But suppose an ignorant man should meet a chemist and say: "You tell me that the air is compound of different elements, and that water is compound of different elements. I don't like either; the air is one for I am constantly breathing it, and the water is one for I every day drink it." The chemist would say to the ignorant man: "Come into my laboratory and I will demonstrate all these subjects." The objector goes in and comes forth from the laboratory convinced.

"Justification by Faith," they say, is another dry and inexplicable technicality. But that means that as soon as a man confides in Jesus Christ as the Saviour from sin, God lets the offender off. Anything mysterious about that? "Regeneration," they say, is another inexplicable word. Well, regeneration is only being made over again. It is another name for reconstruction. The old Constellation, a man-of-war, lay at the Brooklyn navy yard. Famine came in Ireland, and the old Constellation, that formerly carried bullets and cannon balls and gunpowder, carried bread to Ireland. So a sinner loaded down with sin is refitted and loaded up with the bread of life. He hauled down one flag and put up another.

A REMARKABLE CONVERSION.

He came into this church three weeks ago drunk, and sat back by the door and replied in subdued tone to the preacher: "That is a lie." But a church usher heard him and told him to be silent or go out. He came the next day sober and was regenerated. Being in the liquor trade, he sent back all the samples of rum sent him the day before, he resigned that business, and loves the religion he once hated. I baptized him last Sunday morning. Large salary has been offered him if he would go back to his old business. No; he will never go back. Writing home the news of his conversion to his Christian mother, she writes back a congratulatory letter, and says: "If through giving up your business you get out of means, come home. You will always find me ready to rescue you." He told one of his dissolute companions the story of his conversion. "Oh, said his dissolute companion, if you have become a Christian you ought to go and speak to a dying girl in yonder house about her soul. She is dying of quick consumption." He was led to her bedside. She was dying in a room where all around were dissolute. He told her that Christ would save her. "What makes you think that?" said the dying girl. The new convert took out his New Testament and said: "It is in this book." "Show it to me," said the dying girl. The new convert said: "I have neglected this book myself all my life until a few days ago and I cannot find the place, but I know it is somewhere between the lids of this book." Then he began to leaf over the book, and strange and beautiful to say, his eye fell upon the words of Christ: "Neither do I condemn thee. Go, and sin no more." She said: "It is not possible that that is there. Let me see it for myself." The New Testament was handed her and she said: "Yes, yes; I see it for myself and I accept the promise, "Neither do I condemn thee. Go, and sin no more" In a few hours her spirit fled and her funeral sermon was preached by the new convert who, only a few days before, had been a blasphemer and a drunkard, hating God and all that is good. That was regeneration! If you can find any dry husks of technicality in that, show them to me. Regeneration. By the pardoning Grace of God all made over again.

A BRAND FROM THE BURNING.

A ship captain, two or three years ago, came and sat in yonder gallery. He did not believe in churches, and he had a special dislike for Talmage. The Gospel arrow struck that hearer in the heart. He arose for prayer. Over six feet in height when he arose, there was no doubt about the fact that he had arisen. Before he left this house he was a Christian. He went out among shipowners and ship captains and told them what change had been wrought. When on the sea and off Cape Hatteras in a long-continued fog, and he and all his crew were at their wits end, he went to his room and prayed for the salvation of his ship and all on board, and came out, saying: "All right, boys, at such an hour the fog will lift. God tells me so in prayer." A man on deck laughed to scorn such an idea. At the time he said the fog would lift a flash of lightning struck through the fog, a flash that sent the scoffer stunned to the deck. The Cape Hatteras lighthouse suddenly appeared and the ship was put on her course into safety. On the land the captain spends much of his time among the sick, and he kneels by those who have by their illness been in their beds for months, and they rise up restored. And he kneels by the side of those long decrepid, and they walk without crutches; and, in answer to his supplications, blind eyes that have not been able to read, read the Scriptures. Physical agonies, the sight of which was appalling, have left their sufferers to speedy convalescence; no second-hand evidence about this. I have seen the restored patients, and heard the testimony from their own lips. The scoffing sea-captain, who came here with heart full of hatred and contempt for the Gospel, now devoting all his time to evangelical labors. That is regeneration! No far-off story about men in some other land. They are both of them here this morning, subjects of regeneration.

Then the doctrine of

is said to be a dry, and absurd, and useless technicality. Christ suffering for others. Why, my hearers, you don't scoff at it when you see it in other directions. You can see its beauty when a mother suffers for her children, when a patriot suffers for his country, when a friend gives up everything for a friend. Why should you not appreciate Christs suffering for us as well as the instances of vicarious suffering all about us? Oh, how many spend their time carrying other people's burdens and dying other people's deaths! In one of the literary institutions of this country a young lady was employed as teacher. She was a stranger, and of such retired and reticent habits that she formed no acquaintanceship. Her dress was so plain and shabby that she was dismissed from her position, and, in reply to the letter dismissing her, she wrote that if she failed to give satisfaction it was probably her own fault. After being unable to get any other employment, she ended her life by suicide. Upon investigation it was found that ont of her small earnings she had supported a father 80 years of age, and was supporting a brother in college. For that reason she wore the shabby dress, and had gone without blankets on her bed and without any fire in her room all winter. When this was found out the people who had scorned her gathered at one of the largest funerals ever held in that place, and gazed with interest upon the face of the martyr but it was too late, vicarious sacrifice!

PRAYER FOR THE SCOFFER.

For all these on infidel platform or in unconverted pulpits deride evangelism I have nothing but prayer for their recovery. When during the last century the plague was raging in London there was a hotel near the cemetery which excited much comment. The nation was in agony of fright and bereavement. Wagons were driving through the streets and the bell rung and the people brought out their dead. Twenty or thirty corpses in a cart would pass by. Not in a grave, but in great pits or trenches they were buried. 1,114 were buried in one pit, churches were open day and night for prayers and all England was in woe. But at the way side, in or near by the greatest burial place, a writer says a group of hardened men sat blaspheming and imitating the grief of the dread procession as that went by, and when a man, bitterly demented by the death of his entire family, stopped at this hotel on his way from the grave-trench, they ridiculed him and taunted with want of courage in not leaping into the pit into which the cart had tossed

THE BODIES OF HIS HOUSEHOLD.

There they sat, day after day and night after night, scoffing at men and scoffing at women and scoffing at God. After a while the plague struck one of them, and within two weeks all had fallen under it, and they had been dropped into the trench near the mouth of which they had indulged their ribaldry. My friends, the plague of sin has ruined our world. Millions have died under its power, while consecrated men and women all through Christendom are attempting to stay the plague, there are those who have nothing but derision for the attempt, and they scoff at evangelism, scoff at the church and scoff at God. Let them remember the fate of those who sat at the wayside inn, when the London plague spread about in two black wings of destruction. "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful!"

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 45-26-eow.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "32 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 20, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years, for it came out almost all over in the form of a horrible sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. H. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that date. My condition began to improve at once. The scrofula sores all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I tell them here, to take AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully, HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Rashes, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

A REMINISCENCE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—A short time ago an advertisement appeared in the London (England) Standard offering two guineas for a copy of a newspaper containing the following poem.

It has reference to Colonel Baker, decidedly one of the best cavalry officers in the army. As he figured in my time I can speak from experience. The white horse alluded to, was a present from the the Empress of Austria. It was well known in military circles that at the time of the Colonel's trial he had in his possession a letter, the production of which would have acquitted him, but rather than betray a secret entrusted to him, he bore his heavy punishment. The poem will be read with feeling by all military men, especially at this time; men of my day, Anglesea, a Cardigan, a Nolan, a Scarlett, and a Baker, will be in many thoughts. The Prince of Wales is Colonel of the gallant old Tenth. I remain,

Yours, etc.,

T. O. BRIDGEWATER,
Late 8th Royal Irish Hussars.

A TALE OF THE TENTH HUSSARS!

When the sand of the lonely desert has covered the plains of strife,
Where the English fought for the rescue, and the Arab stood for his life;
When the crash of the battle is over, and healed are our wounds and scars,
There will live in our island story a Tale of the Tenth Hussars!

They had charged in the grand old fashion with furious shout and sweep,
With a "Follow me, Lads!" from the Colonel,
and an answering roar from the troop;
On the staff, as the Troopers past it, in glory of pride and pluck,
They heard, and they never forgot it, one following shout. "Good luck!"

Wounded and worn as he sat there, in silence of pride and pain,
The man who'd led them often, but was never to lead again.
Things of the secret anguish! think of the dull vexation!
To see the Hussars sweep past him, united by the old White Horse!

An alien, not a stranger: with heart of a comrade still,
He had borne his sorrow bravely, as a soldier must and will!
And when the battle was over, in deepening gloom and shade,
He followed the Staff in silence, and rode to the grand parade:

For the Tenth had another hero, all ripe for the General's praise,
Who was called to the front that evening by the name of Trooper Hayes;
He had slashed his way to fortune, when scattered, unhorsed, alone,
And in saving the life of a comrade had managed to guard his own.

The General spoke out bravely as ever a soldier can—
"The Army's proud of your valour: the Regiment's proud of their man;"
Then across that lonely desert, at the close of the General's praise,
Came a cheer, then a quick, short tremble on the lips of Trooper Hayes.

"Speak out," said the kindly Colonel, "If you've anything, Lad, to say,
Your Queen and your dear old country shall hear what you've done to-day!"
But the trooper gnawed his chin-strap, then sheepishly hung his head;
"Speak out, old chap!" said his comrades. With an effort, at last, he said—

"I came to the front with my pals here, the boys and the brave old tars,
I've fought for my Queen and country, and rode with the Tenth Hussars:
I'm proud of the fine old Regiment!" then the Colonel shook his hand
"So I'll ask one single favour from my Queen and my native land!

"There sits by your side on the Staff, sir, a man we are proud to own!
He was struck down first in the battle, but never was heard to groan:
If I've done aught to deserve it," then the General smiled, "Of course,"
"Give back to the Tenth their Colonel the man on the old White Horse!

"If ever a man bore up, sir, as a soldier should, with pluck,
And fought with a savage sorrow the demon of cursed ill-luck
That night, he sits beside you! Give us back, with his wounds and scars,
The man who has sorely suffered, and is loved by the Tenth Hussars!"

Then a cheer went up from his comrades, and echoed across the sand,
And was borne on the wings of mercy to the heart of his native land,
Where the Queen on her Throne will hear it, and the Colonel Prince will praise
The words of a simple soldier just uttered by Trooper Hayes.

Let the moralist stoop to mercy, that balm of all souls that live;
For better than all forgetting, is the wonderful word "Forgive!" Punch.

*Hayes received the Victoria Cross and was gazetted Quartermaster soon after.

From Ontario to the Antipodes.

Notes of a Trip from Toronto to Australia.

Below we give the first of a series of letters, sent us by a Toronto friend, of a journey from Toronto to Australia, which will be continued for some issues:

FIRST STAGE—FROM TORONTO TO SAN FRANCISCO.

H. M. ROYAL MAIL STEAMER AUSTRALIA,
PACIFIC OCEAN, LATITUDE 20°, 47'
LONGITUDE 155°, 18' W., 3 P. M., DECEMBER 12, 1884.

MY DEAR FRIEND,—No doubt you have ere this looked for a letter from me in fulfilment of my promise to send a sketch of my journey: A trip across the continent in an "Emigrant Car," and "A Steerage Passage" of 8,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean to Australia, the "Radiant Land of the Southern Seas," as named by Lord Rosebury. One can little realize the wonderful change in ten days coming from our Canadian winter to the Pacific slope, where flowers are in perpetual bloom, with all kinds of vegetables, green peas, new potatoes, strawberries, &c., in every market during the entire year.

My baggage was checked for Hamilton at 12 noon, and after receiving the parting salutations and good wishes of friends, and being reinforced by three adults, we were off for Buffalo, N.Y., leaving the fair future metropolis of the Dominion with regret, where the advantage of cheap rates (the result of a railroad war) was taken. A ticket (first-class) to Omaha at one dollar was purchased by many over the G. T. R. to Chicago, thence by the Burlington and Quincy to Omaha. Then by the Union Pacific to Ogden, where a connection with the Central Pacific to San Francisco, where we were ticketed to sail by H. M. Royal Mail Steamer Australia.

Having for some time had a desire to know the true inwardness of "emigrant travelling" its hardships, pleasures, together with the usual courtesies extended to such passengers by railway and steamship companies, we determined to embrace the opportunity, and donned the garb of a fresh arrival from the "land of bogs," and each armed with a third class ticket have thus far succeeded admirably.

My three weeks' experience reminds one of the character of "Our German Cousin" and "Carie the Fiddler," as played by the comedian Joe Emmett.

There is certainly a reality in the life of the emigrant little appreciated by those who are so fortunately born as the recipients of a silver spoon in each hand. Although our tickets were third-class, we rode through to Omaha in a first-class smoking car, fully equal—in finish to any first-class coach on the G.T.R. Nothing transpired before reaching Chicago worthy of note, except attention was called to the many fine, well-cultivated farms in Western Ontario and Southern Michigan, and making comparison.

Chicago was reached Wednesday morning at 9 a. m., and here a halt made for a few hours, and the interval pleasantly passed by the use of a bansom (two wheeled cab) at 25 cents per mile. This city is certainly a marvel in growth, and its commerce will outrival many older places in the old and new world in a few years. In iniquity it has already only one rival—San Francisco—which, by the way, has already been completely handed down to the devil before Gabriel has sounded his trumpet above its hill top. At 2 p. m. we left the city over the Burlington and Quincy Railway for Omaha, passing over a beautiful rolling prairie country. Along the road were miles of corn cribs under the weight of this year's crop. In some large fields the farmers were picking it from the stalks, while the latter were left standing to rot or be burned up on the ground, which would be considered extravagance by our Ontario farmers, who would teach these western adventurers that a dollar saved is as good as a dollar earned. One cannot help noticing the striking contrast between the farmers of the Western States and those of Canada. While we excel them in many of the comforts of life of which they know nothing, they certainly have a rich, alluvial soil much easier worked and fully as productive. They apparently have no use for barns, only a few miserable excuses appeared, constructed by driving four posts in to the ground, the sides covered with a few boards, and a dozen sticks laid over the top and the whole covered with prairie grass for a roof. Their stock runs out through the winter. During the most extreme cold weather they are "corralled" around three or four stacks of prairie hay, with a few rails enclosing the whole. While towering above was a wind-mill used for pumping the water from a well. Scattered over the broad prairies are to be seen settler's shanties, (they really look like chicken coops.) Occasionally one was erected near the rail road track. A row of trees have been planted to the west of the house as a protection against the prevailing winds. The door yards were ornamented with mowers, reapers, ploughs, drags, etc., covered with rust, reminding one of shiftlessness in the extreme. Hogs are seen everywhere in abundance, and no doubt are "legal tender."

On board our train, (an express of six cars) was a fair representation of the average keen-eyed discriminating American, each discussing the great unsolved problem of who was to be the president of the United States for the next four years, both parties claiming the election and swearing for a "fair count" of the votes.

The Americans are clever, decidedly clever. They never lose an opportunity to drive a good bargain and are always anxious to give a poor unsophisticated "Canuck" a chance to "make an honest penny." One of these keen, sharp-faced, hawk-eyed Connecticut Yanks boarded our train (about dark) near fifty miles east of Des Moines, Iowa. He was attired in a coarse suit of gray tweed, slouch hat, stogs boots, with an air of a drover. His conversation was about cattle, corn and hogs. He "purchased and shipped to the Chicago market every horned critter gone over the road for the past 10 years." He owned miles of corn cribs. He had a liking for Canadians, who are known the world-over as honest, upright people. He always thought they should be annexed to Uncle Sam's domain and thereby add to the moral and social culture of the average American. He had a glib tongue and invited himself to a part of my seat. He owned a large farm out west, and was determined to give the boys a chance at "turning over the green sod" on the old home, as he had done in days gone by, when he and Betsy were all alone. I reminded him of the old log cabin and the latch string which hung out for many years (when I was a boy) to denote to the way-side traveller that the humble occupant was at home. The old- andirons, the fire-place, the crane where hung the noon-day meal. Ah! happy days; it brought tears to his eyes. He invited me to step off the train at the next station (where he had a car-load of corn) and take a drink. "Crops were all drying up out in his county." He knew John Smith and Joe Bilger, of Toronto. "Fine fellows. Met them in Montreal." His tongue rattled on like a wind-mill. He was surprised that I should decline a drink, and thought me a strange Canadian. He was equally suprised to learn that I had passed two years before the mast on the decks of a man of war and had journeyed twice around the globe. We pointed out to him another member of our party, a great hog man (who had passed ten years among the Indians on the frontier and carried a bowie knife and revolver in the mines on the Pacific slope) two seats in advance of us, and assured him he had been known to "take somethin" on the eve of an election. Our stock dealer approached him in confidence and was surprised to see his cane raised in defence, while telling him to "Get out!" We were the most singular emigrants he had ever met. Passing into the next car he found an old man from Michigan, whose aunt he had known, and they became fast friends. To him he related his immense deals in corn. Des Moines, Iowa, was soon reached. A bogus freight agents came on board in great haste and presented a freight-bill of $300, due on several car-loads of corn, which must be paid immediately. Not having the currency he tendered a thousand dollar bond; this the agent could not change. The Michigander kindly loaned him the money and took the bond in trust until they should reach Omaha, and the corn man departed. A few moments later the conductor came through, and pronounced the bond a forgery. A hurried hunt was made, by the depot police, through the trains, but the drover had gone, and we resumed our journey, while the Michigander mourned the loss of his $300 and the company of his new-found friend. We were not so anxious to obtain riches, hence failed to embrace this golden opportunity. Omaha was reached on the following morning, and the brakeman shouted, "All change cars for the Union Pacific Railroad!"

Vital Questions!!!!

Ask the most eminent physicians

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, child-like refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly

"Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu!"

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

"Mandrake! or Dandelion!!"

Hence when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable,

And compounded in to Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed, which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail women, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

A SCRAP OF PAPER.

"By the by, I have not yet asked your name?"

"Millicent Bell, ma'am."

"Millicent! Ah, that is my name. Well, to prevent mistakes, I shall call you Bell. Of course, you don't mind?"

"Oh, no; ma'am!"

"And . ady Lullenworth says you can dress hair well, and that you understand your duties thoroughly as lady's maid?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then, Bell, I shall want you to come to me on Monday, for on Thursday, as I think I told you, we shall leave town for Yorkshire, and in those few days you will be able to get into my ways. So good morning. I shall expect you on Monday."

Mrs. Remington, having thus concluded the, to her, new task of engaging a lady's maid, leant back in her chair with the feeling of having got through her business satisfactorily. "Such a nice looking young woman, and so respectful in her manner; I do hope Charlie will like her;" for Millie Remington was in that first—very first—stage of married life when all her ideas circled round and centered on the said Charlie.

Theirs had been a real love match. Captain Remington having met Miss Duncombe at the house of a mutual friend, in that most hospitable of counties, Yorkshire, straightway lost his heart and his reputation of being the most adamant of captains; and, despite some opposition on the part of Duncombe pere, who, as is the way of fathers generally, considered his daughter a mere child, who couldn't possibly know her own mind. Millicent Duncombe was "wooed and married and a'" all within two months of her meeting with Charlie Remington, and installed in a charming little house at Mayfair, the gallant 800th being quartered at Knightsbridge. Captain Remington had just got his leave, and they were going down to Duncombe for their first visit since their marriage, in all the glory of heaps of new luggage, gun cases, horse box, lady's maid, and the Captain's own man.

"Oh, oh, oh! how dreadfully provoking!" cried Mrs. Remington the Tuesday morning following, as she read through her letters, having supplied her lord and master with coffee and all things needful.

"What's the matter, Mill—— any one dead?"

"No; but those dreadful tailor people say they can't let me have my traveling-dress to-morrow—they can't get the buttons in time;" and she glanced round the coffee urn with a face indicative of the deepest despair.

"Never mind, old girl! wear another. I'm sure you look lovely in anything," in a tone of perfect sincerity; "or never mind the buttons, get others."

"Oh, but, Charlie, I am so disappointed, and you've really no idea what a dress it will be: and, as to the buttons, oh, no, I couldn't reconcile myself to any other. Charlie, I wonder ——"

"Well?" said Charlie, getting up and standing in a monarch-of-all-I-survey style, before the bright little fire, gazing admiringly at his pretty wife.

"Charlie," with the most supplicating clasp of the hands, "would it be very inconvenient if we put-off our journey till next day? It is such a dress to travel in, so plain and quiet, just what you said you liked when you saw the Princess at Baden."

"You unconscionable little piece of vanity!" laughed her husband, pinching her cheek; "the idea of changing all your plans because a dress isn't coming up to time!"

"But, Charlie," nestling under his arm, "you do like to see your wife well dressed, and you always say that it's first impressions that are more than half the battle."

"I declare I shall call you 'Circe redivia.' And I am to countermand the horse-box and rese ved carriage, so that Mrs. Remington may make a startling impression on old Potts, the station-master at Duncombe, and his noble legion of porters. Well, well, and this comes of being married to a ——"

"Don't say 'Circe' again, Charlie; she wasn't very nice, and had something to do with pigs," said Millie, coaxingly. "Then I'll tell Bell we can't go till Friday."

Captain Remington was deeply engaged putting the final polish on a new gun which had just come home, and with which he intended doing great execution in the Duncombe preserves. A knock at the door of his den.

"Come in," he said, and, going to open it, his wife's maid stood there.

"Please, sir, misses says would you please write these luggage labels?"

"All right, Bell; just put them on my writing table. I'll attend to them directly."

The gun being at last satisfactorily packed away, Captain Remington bethought him he would have a smoke, and then he would see about the labels.

"Hang it all! where are the lights?" feeling in all his pockets. "I must have left them in the dining-room. Ah! here's a bit of paper;" and he picked up a crushed half sheet of a letter. He was proceeding to smooth it out before twisting it up, when some words caught his attention.

"By Jove! precious careless of Millie leaving her notes about like this! Who in the world has been writing to her? Hullo? and with a feeling of utter bewilderment he read:

"Darling Millie: As you don't go to Yorkshire on Thursday, meet me in the square at five, for the last time before I sail."

"Oh, I say! I must be dreaming; it can't be Millie—my wife," he muttered. "But who else can it be? Her correspondent seems to have a pretty good knowledge of our movements, too. Hang it all! I have it now!" he exclaimed, furiously flinging the note on the floor. "That excuse about the dress was all a sham! This explains her intense eagerness to postpone our journey. Who can he be?" he went on, hurriedly re-examining the scrap of paper. "No name or initial. Umph! judging from the writing, I can't congratulate her on her friend; not that I write a very good fist myself. Five o'clock in the square. I have a good mind to prove to them that though two is company, three is none," said poor Charlie with a grim smile. Just then the hall door opened and shut. He glanced at the clock on the chimney piece—just on the stroke of 5. "She's gone!" he exclaimed; and snatching up his hat he tore open his door.

"Who has gone out?" he thundered to the man who was lighting the hall lamp.

"Beg pardon, sir," said Jones, nearly falling off the steps in his surprise. "I'm not quite sure, sir; but I rather think, sir, it was misus's—"

But before he could finish his sentence his master had rushed out of the house.

"Well, I never! Wot hever can 'ave come hover the Captain! A fine takin' he's in, surely," said Jones, as he gradually recovered from the shock of his master's sudden exit.

Meanwhile Captain Remington was following the figure which was turning into the square. He quickly overtook it just as a lad in a man-o'-war's dress came up, and, throwing his arms around her neck, exclaimed:

"My dear sister, how good of you to come! I did want to see your kind face once again: for you know it will be three years, Millie darling, before I come back again. Hullo! Millie, is this gentleman ill?" he cried, as Captain Remington, in his revulsion of feeling, staggered up against the railings.

"Why, Jack! it's my master, Captain Remington," said Bell. "What's the matter, sir? Shall my brother run to the house for help?"

"No, my good girl, no. I'll be all right in a minute; a sudden giddiness, I'll been walking fast. Don't say anything about this to your mistress."

"No, sir."

"Who is this lad?" questioned Captain Remington, as he recovered his usual manner.

"My only brother, please sir, and he sails for Australia on Saturday," said Bell. "He wanted to see me once again, for we're the only two left, now, sir, and mistress gave me leave for an hour before dinner."

"And I am taking up all your time," said Charlie. "Don't mention my slight to any one. And look here, young Bell, if I can be of any service to you at any time come to me; meanwhile, I dare say you can find use for these," and he handed him a couple of sovereigns. So thankful did Charlie feel in his heart at the turn things had taken that he would have given his pocketful if he had had it.

"Jones, why did you tell me it was Mrs. Remington who went out just now?" said he as that worthy opened the door.

"Sir, I meant to say it was missus's maid, but you didn't stay to hear me," said Jones with commendable gravity.

"Umph!" muttered Charlie to himself as he turned into his own room again, "I seem to have played the jealous husband to no purpose but to prove myself a fool! Now to write these addresses for Millie."

He was just writing the last when Millie tripped in.

"Look at my dress, Charlie; it came half an hour ago. Don't you think it was worth waiting for?" and she stood demurely before him.

"I do, my darling," he said, in a tone of perfect sincerity, though feeling overwhelmed with shame as he thought of his unreasonable jealousy. "Look here, Millie, tell your maid to be more careful; here's a note she left behind her when she brought in the labels."

"Let me see, Charlie," said Millie, perching herself on the arm of his chair, "why, how careless of Bell! Now, if anybody but you had found it, Charlie, he might have thought it was mine. Really, now, that is a charming idea for a novel. I see it all; jealous husband, injured wife, etc. I declare I'll write it when we come home from Yorkshire, and I'll call it 'Un Billet Doux' or 'A Scrap of Paper.'"

POTASH.

Iodide of Potassium is one of the strongest of the minerals used in medicine, and has produced much suffering in the world. Taken for a long time and in large doses, it dries up the gastric juices, impairs digestion, the stomach refuses food, and the patient declines in health and weight. Persons with Blood or Skin Diseases should be careful how they take these mineral poisons, as in most instances the effect of them is to almost permanently impair the constitution. To take the place of these poisons we offer you a safe, sure, prompt and permanent relief from your troubles. Shaker Blood Syrup is entirely a vegetable preparation, and it is easy to convince you of its merit.

I have cured permanently Blood Taint in the third generation by the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, after I had most signally failed with Mercury and Potash. Dr. Smith, Bangor, Pa.

A young man requests me to thank you for his cure of Blood Poison by the use of your Specific after all other treatment had failed.

J. E. Kennedy, Druggest, Cobourg, Ont.

For years I was officted with Dry Tetter of the most obstinate type. Was treated by many of the best physicians; took quantities of mercury, potash, and arsenic, which, instead of curing the Tetter, crippled me up with mineral poison and rheumatism. The Tetter continued to grow worse, and the itching almost made me crazy. In this condition I was indced to take Shaker Blood Syrup, and the result was as astonishing as it was gratifying. In a few months the Tetters was entirely well, the Mercurial Poisoning all out of my system and I was a well man and due only to Shaker Blood Syrup. All like sufferers should take it.

A HOME REMEDY.

One of the most curious cases on record is that of a man in Memphis who can't live without noise. Silence nearly dements him. His mania at one time was rather expensive, as he was constantly travelling on steamboats, going into sawmills, visiting boiler repairing shops and the like. But his friends will be pleased to hear that he is on the point of getting married, and will stay at home from now on.

VILLIAGE OF LAKEFIELD

will be held on Monday, the Sixth day of April 1885, at the hour of half past seven o'clock in the evening, for the purpose of passing a By-law for stopping up the road allowance established by By-law No. 55, passed by the said Council on the twenty-sixth day of December 1879, which said road allowance is particularly described as follows: Commencing at the intersection of the west rail of the Midland Railway track, with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, at a distance of ninty links more or less Westerly from the West side of the said original allowance for road, thence Northerly along the said rail three chains and sixty links more or less to the intersection of said rail with the West side of said allowance for road, thence Northerly along the West side of said original allowance for road, three chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonabee, the described line to be the East side of said new road, and the new road to be sixty-six feet wide. And for opening in lieu of the said road so stooped up, the original road allowance, which was stopped up by the said By-law, the said road so stopped up and now proposed to be opened, being described as follows: Commencing on the West side of the said Concession road, at its intersection with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, thence Northerly along the West side thereof, six chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonabee, thence Easterly along the said river road, one chain and thirty links more or less to the East side of said Concession road, thence Southerly along the East side thereof six chains and seventy links more or less to the North side of Church street, thence Westerly along the North side of Church street, to the place of beginning.

All persons claiming that their lands may be prejudicially affected by the stopping up and opening of the said road allowances, are entitled to be heard in person or by counsel at the said meeting of the council, upon their petitions large to be so heard.

Dated at Lakefield the 18th day of Feb. 1885.

ALEXANDER BELL,
Clerk of the said Village.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 5, 1885.

Peterborough Last.

Of the big batch of Post-offices and Customs buildings promised at the last general election, those promised to Peterborough are amongst those that seem to be abandoned. The public buildings promised to Peterboro' are the only ones in the Province of Ontario for which a site has not yet been selected. Over a dozen fourteen other towns of far less importance, commercially, are favored in comparison with this town. These towns need public buildings far less urgently than Peterborough. The postoffice revenue of Peterborough was, last year, $10,938.65, while all of the places mentioned had a smaller revenue, the Government having provided post office buildings at the public expense for places whose returns to the post office revenue amounted to as low as $805. Now the question arises, why does the Government treat a town of the size of Peterboro' with such scant justice, and show so decided a preference to smaller places? Hull, in the province of Quebec, with a population of only about 5,000, and a post office revenue of only $1,087, has her post office furnished by a discriminating Government. Port Hope postoffice buildings (revenue only $6,764.27) are well advanced towards completion, so also are those of Barrie. Cobourg has part of her public improvements, done at Government expense, completed, and the others well under way. The sum of $12,379 has been expended in working over a building to accommodate Postal, Customs and other offices, and so great did the urgency seem in her case that the Governor-General's warrant had to be issued for funds to hasten on the work. Can the reason of the preference shown to other towns be that greater political influence has been exercised? Can the possibility of a new election have influenced the activity of the Government in Cobourg? Or possibly the representatives of these places favored have exerted themselves for the benefit of their constituents. Perhaps our readers would like to know what progress has been made with the Peterborough public buildings project. In the last report of the Minister of Public Works, this is all the attention it receives:

"PETERBOROUGH

At the session of 1883 the sum of $15,000 was voted towards the erection of a suitable building to accommodate the Postal, Customs and other offices; but up to the close of the fiscal year (century, according to present appearances, would be the better word), a site has not been selected, and no expenditure had taken place."

Is this what this town deserves at the hands of the Tory Government? Is the solid and unquestioning support it receives from Peterborough to count for nothing? Are our claims for consideration, compared to other towns of far less commercial importance, to be thus ignored? Are our just demands to be treated with insulting indifference? Is a great public need like Postal and Customs buildings to be made the shuttlelock of political wirepullers? Now is the time, when the N. P. fails to find full employment, that the public works should present a chance of a job to our laborers and artizans. Why should we (not to speak of our rights) not have the benefit of the expenditure of a large sum of money? Since Confederation the town of Cobourg has had spent (sunken) within her limits, $12,924.64, while hardly a hundredth part of such a sum has been spent in Peterborough. No remedy of such a state of things can be expected so long as the Government delays action to listen to the advice of interested and self-seeking politicians, instead of consulting the interests of the public.

In our last issue we published a summary of the excellent bill introduced by Hon. Mr. Ross, Minister of Education, to amend the school law. While heartily endorsing the general provisions of the bill, it seems to us that the proposal to do away with the office of secretary-treasurer of school boards is not a desirable nor a beneficial change. It seems plain that school and municipal matters should be kept as distinct as possible, and that the school board, in view of its great responsibility, should be invested with the fullest possible powers for meeting that responsibility. It is not probable that many municipal treasurers will care to assume the duties of the office without extra remuneration. The anomoly will be presented of a de facto officer of the board beyond the control of the body to whom he should be responsible. It seems to us that this change is not a desirable one.

GENTLEMEN will find at the "Golden Lion" full lines of Scotch Tweeds, Worsteds, Furnishings, Dress Shirts and Underwear. Tailoring a Specialty, and a first class Cutter at your command.

The Motion of Censure.

The greed of the Tory party for power prevents the same ravenous longing in England, that it does in this country. No matter what grave national crisis may be impending, the attempt to turn it to account for party purposes must be employed. The British Government have in Egypt had to deal with a most difficult problem, and, at the very moment when the whole energies of the nation should be bent to its solution, the Tories seize the occasion to embarrass the Government and gain a petty party advantage. Another likeness to Toryism is presented by the fact that the present Egyptian trouble is a Tory legacy. Beaconsfield (Disraeli) arranged a joint protectorate of Egypt, and thus committed England to a policy of active interference in Egyptian affairs. Matters went on till the death of Gordon and the fall of Khartoum. Then jingo Toryism proposed to turn out Gladstone because he did not get Wolseley to Khartoum in time to save Gordon. It may be mentioned that Farag, an Egyptian official, had promised to betray Gordon to the Mahdi, whenever the British drew near Khartoum, so that the delay had no effect, or if any, that of postponing Gordon's fate. On the assembling of the Imperial Parliament last week, a motion of censure of the Government was made, but the result was that, though the Tory party secured the alliance of the Parnellites and several weak-kneed Liberals, drunk with an ephemeral jingoism, the Gladstone Government was sustained by a majority of fourteen. Under the circumstances this is not so small a majority. Gladstone will not resign, but will retain power and continue to deal with the Egyptian problem, at least till the Mahdi is so far subdued that England can abandon the Soudan with honour. England wants at present no big wars for annexing more territory—she has grave home questions to deal with. The common sense of the nation pronounces in favor of a policy of improving the domestic condition of the nation, compared to waging an aggressive, costly and bloody war for the sake of prestige and territory.

Liquor Licenses.

The decision of the Supreme Court that the Dominion License Act is null and void, is to be respected by the Mowat administration, at least, though the Dominion ignores it, and instructs its minions to issue bogus Dominion licenses. The Ontario Government, however, has decided not to permit such licenses to be issued in this province. The Dominion License Act will be recognized in no way whatever. No money will be accepted on account of licenses issued under it, and all persons taking out Dominion licenses and selling under them will be prosecuted and punished as selling liquor without license. Under these circumstances it is not probable that very many Dominion licenses will be taken out; especially when the Dominion authorities refuse to protect licenses under their act, from the consequences of prosecution by the Provincial authorities. A Halifax liquor dealer inquired of the Minister of Inland revenue, if the Government would protect the takers of Dominion licenses, and the following answer was returned:

"The liquor dealers must exercise their own judgment in the matter. They should take legal advice as to the course they should pursue. The Government could not take part in any legal proceedings which might ensue."
(Signed). JOHN COSTIGAN.

This is far different from the manly assurance of the Mowat Government that it would protect holders of licenses under the Crook's Act when the Dominion act threatened to come in conflict with them. Liquor dealers now find the difference between a man who acts from purposes of political expediency, and one who acts from principle. Sir John promised the Licensed Victuallers that he would crush the Crooks act and pass a license law in their interest. He did pass a law, which the highest court in the Dominion pronounced worthless; yet Sir John persists in asking dealers to take out licenses under it, and cooly tells the trade that they must take their own risk; if they get into trouble he won't help them. On the other hand Hon. Mr. Mowat, honest in his belief in the validity of the Crook's act, tells dealers who take out licenses under it that they will be protected if trouble should ensue.

Public School Elections.

There is hardly anything of more importance to the public than our educational institutions, and there is hardly a subject on which there is so much public indifference as the selection of men to look after the local administration of our school system. Hon. Mr. Ross, Minister of Education, with a view of increasing the interest of the people in the election of school trustees, has, in his bill to amend and consolidate the Public Schools Act, made provision for introducing the ballot in the election of members of Public School Boards in cities, towns and villages, and for holding the election at the same time as the municipal elections. The clauses of the Act affecting the subject are of so great importance that we give them below:

The Board of Public School Trustees in any city, town, incorporated village or township in which a township board has been established may, by resolution, of which notice shall be given to the Clerk of the Municipality on or before the first day of October in any year, require the election for the School Trustees in such city, town incorporated village, or township, to be held on the same day, and in the same manner as Municipal Councillors or Aldermen are elected, as the case may be.

In every case in which notice is given as aforesaid the nomination and election of Public School Trustees shall thereafter be held at the same time and place, and by the same returning officer or officers, and conducted in the same manner as the municipal nominations and elections of aldermen or councillors, as the case may be, and the provisions of the Municipal Act respecting the time for opening and closing the poll, the mode of voting, corrupt or improper practices, tenure of office, vacancies, and declarations of office shall mutatis mutandis apply to the election of Public School Trustees.

There shall be elected annually by the assessed ratepayers thereof in each township in which a township board is established, two school trustees for each ward, and in the case of incorporated villages not divided into wards six trustees.

A separate set of ballot-papers shall be prepared by the clerk of the municipality for all the wards or electoral divisions, containing the names of the candidates nominated for school trustees, of the same form as those used for councillors, except the substitution of the words "school trustees" for councillors or aldermen, as the case may be, on said ballot papers.

In the said list of qualified voters required to be delivered to the returning officer by the clerk of the municipality before the opening of the poll, the clerk shall place opposite the name of any voters on the said list who have been returned to him as supporters of separate schools, the letters S. S. S. signifying supporters of separate schools), and the returning officer shall not deliver to any a ballot paper for public school trustees.

It is provided that in case a new election becomes necessary in consequence of a vacancy existing or from any other cause, it shall be conducted in the same manner as an annual election, with the exception that the voting shall be open.

Action founded on the above provisions will doubtless tend to excite some interest in the election of school trustee, which is too often at present considered of so little importance that, on election day, it often happens that the returning officer has to cajole or bribe enough electors to attend to nominate a candidate. Under such circumstances, is it any wonder that often trustees are selected who are in every way unfit to deal with such important interests as the education of our children?

Editorial Notes.

The Lindsay Post says!—By a desirable provision in the new school law, separate school boards may appoint a Catholic ratepayer a member of the high school board in which a just and excellent provision.]

A protest has been entered against Mr. Pruyn, member elect for Lennox for the Commons. He will probably be unseated. Mr. Caton is the petitioner, and the grounds bribery and corruption. This is the third protested election for the Commons since the last general election.

The Mail informs us that the threatened split in the Conservative camp at Winnipeg has been healed. The Mail should go further and tell us how the healing was done. No doubt by "healing" the threatening splitters with the people's money, furnished through the Government at Ottawa, directly or indirectly.

The Review has vigorously and, of course, abusively denounced Reform journals for alleged disparagement of Manitoba. But the greatest sinner in this respect has never given Manitoba so hard a blow as our down street cotem, when it says that Mr. Norquay is the ablest man in that province for the position of Premier.

The Dominion public accounts have developed two or three journals that may be called by the strange title of paper newspapers. These are the Arnprior Times and the National. The Times received $94.45 for printing and advertising last year, and the National some $245.00. No such papers exist, except as figureheads for distributing pap to Tory supporters.

Calico is an article of universal consumption, and a tax upon it, says the Hamilton Times, is felt by the poor. In order to help the owners of the single print mill in Canada a protective duty of 27 per cent. is maintained. This duty is a tax which takes from the people much more than the treasury gets. The Manchester Mail says "the duties on prints make the Canadians now use the poorest cloths printed for civilized or semi-civilized people in the world."

A Tory workingman in Napanee (unemployed) on having pointed out to him Sir John's remark that there was plenty of employment for any workingman not too lazy to work, refused to believe it because it appeared in a Reform paper, and threatened if it was true to write to the immaculate "Chieftain" and call him a "d—— liar." Hansard says Sir John did make the remark, and the workingman's opinion of its correctness, though a trifle too strong in expression, is not far from the truth.

Bobcaygeon Independent:—"Whatever Confederation may be for the other provinces, it is a very bad thing for Ontario. The people of Ontario are paying heavy taxation, and the money thus raised is being granted as subsidies to the other provinces. * * * So gross has been the injustice to Ontario that it is safe to say that this Province will sooner or latter withdraw from a Confederation, in which she is regarded merely as a milch cow for the other provinces to suck." It is time the Province of Ontario took a firm stand on this matter and insisted on securing equal rights with the other provinces.

There is documentary evidence—in the pages of the report of the Minister of Public Works—that the Tory Government of Ottawa spent last year $81,272.32 of Canadians' hard earned money, to have government dredges and scows built in the United States—at Lockport, N. Y. And this, too, when thousands of Canadian mechanics were idle for the want of work. There is no pretense that the work could not have been done as well or even better in Canada and more cheaply. Is this application of N. P. principles anything like the promises, made in its name, of keeping Canada for the Canadians?

Mr. Tupper, Jr., is a promising successor to Sir Charles. In a speech in the House of Commons last Friday he sneeringly referred to the working men as the "lower orders." Judging by their treatment of the working classes, this is the true feeling of Tory politicians towards them, but others have more sense than young Tupper, and keep to themselves their contempt for the working man. In the same speech Tupper had the bad taste to sneer at Hon. Mr. Blake as a maker of long speeches, saying that "life was too short to read one of them." It's a mercy that the young fellow's speeches are short—he is consistent—he is not only short on speeches but "short" on brains.

Hon. Mr. Ross Provincial Treasure says:—If confederation is going to continue it must be on a basis that is going to be equal justice to all the Provinces. That the people will not be satisfied where a partnership exists, if this is not done, and that Ontario being the largest contributor to the Dominion revenue, will not be content if the other Provinces are to get all the benefits. It was said last session that Ontario contributed two-thirds of the Dominion revenue, but even taking the amount at one half, Ontario will be called upon to pay $1,300,000 of the sum which was granted to Quebec by the Dominion a year ago. Will she be content that the Dominion should return to Quebec that amount for her road without getting a single dollar for her own.

At the North York teachers' association Inspector Fotheringham discussed the subject of township boards of school trustees. He instanced the following advantages of the system:—(1) It would equalize school taxation over each township. In York County, one school section pays 8½ mills on the dollar, while some others pay but 1½ mills. (2) It would reduce the number of school officials and increase their efficiency. (3) It would set at rest all trouble with school section boundaries and trustees being paid could be better called to account for neglect of proper discharge of their duties. (4) It would give more permanency to a teacher in a situation. Mr. Fotheringham admitted that there were many objections to the introduction of the change, but thought they were outweighed by the advantages.

The "new works" for the improvement of Trent Valley Navigation, for which appropriations have been voted by Parliament, if completed, would open out a total of 150 miles of direct and lateral navigation. Yet all that has been done is a little canal at Buckhorn, a quarter of a mile in length. It is owing to the supineness and indifference of the Government that a large portion of the work is not now done. When we consider the immense importance of this work to this district, the unswerving political support received from this district, it is plain that the Government think that the people of this district are willing to be duped forever—that they are "soft" enough to continue supporting the Government, no matter how much their rights are trampled on and their interests neglected. We shall see.

Referring to the Budget Speech made by the Hon. Mr. Ross in the Provincial Legislature the Bobcaygeon Independent says:

"To owe nothing, and to have millions in hand, is a financial position of which any Province may be justly proud, and it is probably a position which no other Government in the world can boast of. The man, who by his own industry and thrift, without any outside help or inherited fortune, has raised a large family, given them all a good education, provided for the sick, the infirm, the incapable, and the demented, made himself a home, supplied with all substantial comforts, who has religiously kept out of debt, and has as much money in his purse as will meet all expenses for six months ahead, can tread the earth with a proud step, look every man in the face, and have no misgivings as to the future. That is just the position of Ontario—a position which has been reached by the careful economy of its Government, by prudent councils, and by wise forethought.

It is said that the work on the Nippissing district of the C. P. R. is being done in a very slip-shod fashion. One authority says that the dump in one place has been made of roots and moss, with a small sprinkling of earth over them to make an appearance of a solid bank. Gangs have deliberately shoveled away the snow from the sides of the right of way, and then cut out the moss in large squares and used these squares as the foundation of the dump As stumps have been taken out from the sides to enable the men to get at the subsoil, these too have gone in, and by the time the earth was in a fairly workable condition, only a few barrow loads were needed. If this is the case the road will be in a fine state as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and it will be absolutely dangerous to run trains on. The company is anxious to draw the cash subsidy and wish to do so by making a show of finishing the line. If they get the money, what value will such a line be to the Government when the Syndicate, as it surely will do, throws it back on the hands of the Government.

Justice For Ontario.

The Hon. A. M. Ross, the Provincial Treasurer, in his Budget Speech, very forcibly put forward the necessity of a readjustment of the amounts received by the Provinces from the Dominion. There is no doubt Ontario is not treated fairly in this respect, and that a change is in all fairness desirable. The following are the remarks of the Treasurer on the subject:—

Last year I took the ground that our revenue, so far as the amount received from the Dominion Parliament, ought to receive an increase of subsidy as our population increased and our consequent expenditure increased. Last session the Dominion Parliament granted Quebec a sum of $2,886,000 upon the plea that they had given aid to the construction of a line of railway which has been declared to be for Dominion interests. During the summer Manitoba sent a deputation to Ottawa seeking an increased subsidy, and also during the last four weeks we have seen that they were putting forward additional claims. Then there are provinces indebted to the Dominion Government. The Province of New Brunswick drew the subsidy for 1885 and 1884. So the other Provinces from time to time are going to the Dominion Government on specious pleas, and seeking additional grants, and it is time that Ontario should be going forward in order that we should be placed on a proper basis. The basis of confederation has not been found to be a satisfactory one, as the fact that almost all the Provinces have put forward claims to special grants proves. But the system of making special grants by the Dominion Parliament is very pernicious in its effects, and results in the Province concerned being careless and extravagant in their expenditures. It would appear that they think they have nothing to do if they get into debt and embarrassed but to go to the Dominion Government for a grant. I propose that the subsidy of the Provinces should be increased as the population increases. This is the only fair and equitable basis, and would be reasonable for all. As it is now, the Dominion gets all the advantage arising from the increased population, while we are getting none, only having to provide for the increased expenditure consequent on an increased population. It was considered an equitable division that on Confederation the Provinces should receive one-fifth of the total amount of revenue on Confederation, yet last year they only received one-ninth, though they are compelled to provide for the increased expenditure. If the amount granted to the Provinces had increased in the same proportion as the amount derived from them the sum would have been $5,950,000, instead of $3,606,672. In 1867 the tax per head for customs and excise was $3.74, and in 1884 it was $5.86, and the whole of this large increase the Dominion Government absorbed, for there was no addition given to the Provinces generally except what addition was given in 1873. So I say that it is only right that the subsidy should be increased every ten years, as I am satisfied that if the present financial basis is to be continued the Provinces will not submit. The Provinces cannot provide for an increased expenditure with a stationary revenue.

Mr. Meredith—How do the United States manage?

Hon. A. M. Ross—By levying direct taxes. If they treat us all alike as the States are all treated alike, I would not grumble, but the present system of exceptional grants leads to pernicious extravagance.

Mr. Meredith—You don't agree with Mr. Blake, who proposes to abolish subsidies?

Hon A. M. Ross—I don't care if they do take the subsidies away and leave us to direct taxation, if they treat us all alike. But I don't think that was Mr. Bloke's proposition. I believe his proposal was to take the subsidies away, and that certain revenues now collected by the Dominion should be collected by the Provinces. Not content with refusing us the increased subsidy however, they have endeavored to take away revenue we collected long before and also since Confederation.

Mr. Meredith—No, no.

Hon. A. M. Ross—What is the McCarthy Act?

Mr. Meredith—That does not take any revenue.

Hon. A. M. Ross—It does take away revenue arising from vessel licenses and wholesale licenses. So far however, the Provincial Government of Ontario has provided for all its expenditures, and yet has a surplus enabling us to meet any extra demands. But this has been done by economy and good government, and if we are in a better position than some of the other provinces it is not right that that should be cast up as a reason why grants should be given to the other provinces and not to us.

THE SMALLPOX IN CAMPBELLFORD.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—Having been engaged for the past forty days in the treatment of smallpox cases in the township of Seymour and the village of Campbellford—employed by th Board of Health here solely to that end—and having been also in the habit of treating the same disease wholesale in Ottawa in the winter of 1861, having treated over 300 cases there, I have had an opportunity contrasting the very different methods adopted here now to those in Ottawa then. Here I consider the very wise sanitary measures of prevention used, of completely isolating, not only the house infected by the disease, but also isolating anyone known to have visited that house: shutting them off, confining them within the precincts of their own premises, under a severe penalty; barricading the roads leading to or from infected districts; and not only that, but isolating the poor doctor (that's me) as well. I have been exiled forty days, and prohibited from having intercourse with any houses but those affected with smallpox.

What has been the result? The disease is about stamped out. Of late years the people have been rather negligent in having their children vaccinated, and I believe that three-fourths here had not been so done. Had not the Board here used the means they have, it is hard to say what would have resulted. Now, for the contrast. In the winter of 1861 I had over 300 cases in Ottawa. There were no restrictions, isolating of houses. I attended obstetric cases and others as well, promiscuously without let or hindrance; and, moreover, I was on the medical staff of the Protestant hospital, on Sandy Hill, and attended there daily from twelve to one o'clock, and there was no one to say me nay.

WALLACE POINT BRIDGE AND MR. WILLAN.

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—My attention has been called to a long letter from Mr. T. M. Willan, with reference to the proposal of Peterborough County Council to build a bridge over the river between Otonabee and South Monaghan on the concession line due north of George street, Peterborough.

Without attempting to follow Mr. Willan through every paragraph of his letter, I submit the following considerations to the public.

The circumstances and requirements of South Monaghan are greatly changed from what they were thirty years ago. Before that time the bulk of the trade of the township was with Cobourg; from that time till more recently, it has changed and much the greater portion of the produce of the township has found a market at Port Hope; until quite recently it has been divided between various places, Peterborough getting a larger share than formerly. And now, that Peterborough has such and a splendid market, the tendency is still greater towards that town. Seeing that this is the case it behooves Monaghan and Peterborough to shorten the distance and make communication as easy as possible, and it is plain that it is the interest of both to work together with this object in view. Now, as a straight line is the shortest distance between any two points, it is so in this instance. South Monaghan would, by the proposed bridge, be brought within seven miles of the market square, Peterborough.

Mr. Willan shows that the Wallace Point Bridge Company was formed close on nineteen years ago; but there is a great change at Wallace's Point since then. At this time the southwest part of Otonabee was also ready to assist in getting an outlet to the front and the Wallace Point Bridge was the outcome; now I submit all this has changed. At that time or shortly previous there was a saw mill, also a shingle mill, which were kept running almost continuously the year round. The shingle factory was burnt, and now the saw mill is run for custom work, probably not more than two months in winter and some time longer cutting cooper stuff.

Speaking from a South Monaghan point of view, the Wallace Point Bridge does not meet the requirements of the township. Then at a large expenditure of public money, when another bridge could be built for very little more than it would cost for the next ten years?

The proposed new site (not on the place of of the old Rosa's Bridge, as Mr. Willan says) would shorten the distance to Peterborough for all residing on B. F. and 1, 2 and 3 concessions, from one to fourteen miles (except residents close on the west boundary of South Monaghan. Also all on the 4th concession east of side line between lots 6 and 7), would, in like manner, be benefitted. The remainder living on concession 4, lot 5 to the boundary, would not be inconvenienced to the extent of one mile, excepting two families, which would be a little more. The remainder of the township would not be affected at all.

Mr. Willan is in error in several of his statements. The council had three members on the deputation. He need not be alarmed—the township is not committed to any sum by the Reeve although I believe the project under discussion is of the township and also of a monetary assistance. He may also rest assured that if any money is given, it will be done in conformity with the law.

The paragraphs about Wallace's Point being the best, is Mr. Willan's most grandiloquent attempts. He wants to show the importance of the bridge by what the toll was rented for. Now, will he be good enough to state how much was received for any one year? If the proposed bridge were built, my impression is that the Wallace Point bridge would not more than pay for collecting toll, without yielding a revenue. I have always understood that the company were very and have it assumed by the counties. The company began to realize there was no money in it. Why did they let it go so long without repairing it? Another point. Mr. W. when a candidate for a public position in the township, always took great pains to let the electors know that he was very much in favour of Rosa's bridge and what he would do for it.

I trust that all will have an opportunity to explain their views at the public meeting to be held at Beasfort on the 5th of March, for the consideration of this very important subject. I feel sure that an opportunity is now offered to both South Monaghan and the town of Peterborough, which, if allowed to pass will not be had again in the present generation.

Yours, etc.,
JOHN RIDDELL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 23rd.

Hon. Mr. Mowat stated to day that the Government were considering the Franchise bill, but could not say when the measure would be introduced.

Mr. O'Connor in moving the second reading of a bill proviving that the holders of policies in mutual insurance companies may sue for claims in the Division Court where the contract is made, declaimed against the cost of enforcing claims at present. Hon. Mr. Mowat pointed out that the bill by lessening the efficiency of these companies would be prejudical to farmers, among whom they were doing a good work. The second reading was agreed to and the bill referred to a special committee.

In addition to private bills no important business was transacted, and the house adjourned.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 24th.

To-day was a real working day, and the House got through a large amount of business. Mr. Baxter's bill to provide bodies for anatomical dissection was read a first time. Hon. Mr. Ross' bill to amend the High School act was read a second time, as was also the bill relating to the indebtedness of St. Catharines and Cobourg to the Government. The time for payment is to be extended,

The House then went into Committee of Supply, the whole of the estimates for civil government, amounting to $181,337, being passed, after numerous questions upon minor items by the Opposition.

After recess the House again went into Committee of Supply, when appropriations for legislation, administration of justice and education were debated and passed.

Mr. Carnegie objected to the increase of expenditure under the charge of sessional writers, and was covered with confusion on its being pointed out that his side of the House was responsible for the increased work of sessional clerks, by calling for 53 out of the 78 returns prepared by these clerks. Mr. Carnegie himself had called for sixteen. Consistency and Mr. Carnegie don't row in the same boat.

Mr. Woodcat ated an increased expenditure in respect of grants to poor schools, and Hon. Mr. Ross said that the Government did not see its way clear to making an increase, but would assist such schools by presenting them with school books, etc.

At the meeting of the Committee on Privileges and Elections this morning, Mr. Drury was present and stated he claimed the seat, and wished to be represented by counsel. He, therefore, asked for an adjournment until his legal representative could be present to represent him. The committee adjourned until Thursday morning, when Mr. Drury and his counsel will attend.

The consideration of the estimates to-day was chiefly remarkable for the weak criticism of the Opposition and the almost general approval of the proposed expenditures. Mr. Carnegie, of course, attended to the small items as usual, assisted by Mr. Merrick with an occasional lift from Mr. Meredith. Mr. Ross' explanations and defences of his conduct of the Education Department were clear and vigorous. His management of the affairs of his department has very largely the approval of both sides of the House. He is always treated with the utmost courtesy by the Opposition, and never fails to extend a return in kind. He is always ready to give the fullest explanations, and anxious to receive suggestions from all quarters.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25th.

After routine to-day, Mr. Gibson introduced his resolution declaring the present Parliamentary and Departmental buildings unfit for occupation. He pointed out the importance of immediate action in providing new buildings, and denied that there was any general opposition in the country to their erection. Mr. Morris supported the resolution, and accused the Government of shirking responsibility in the matter, but had nothing to say against Mr. Meredith's opposition to new buildings.

Hon. Mr. Fraser showed that the Government was shirking no responsibility but that the Government was released from its responsibility in the premises, when the $500,000 voted by the Legislature had proved insufficient. New buildings were a necessity, and it was time Mr. Meredith ceased to strive to make political capital out of the question. Mr. Clark favored the motion, and Mr. Young called on Mr. Meredith to define his position on the question, and the latter pledged himself not to make political capital out of the question, yet he would not support the resolution, but moved an amendment to it. Hon. Mr. Mowat pointed out that Mr. Meredith was evidently prepared to make party capital out of any expenditure that might be made for such a purpose, as he had done on the stump in 1883. As any expenditure that might be made, must be on the responsibility of the Government, it was folly to charge that the latter was abrogating its functions. The debate was adjourned.

In the evening session Mr. Meredith made charges of partizanship against the Commissioner of Crown Lands, but when his proof was called for he found his information wrong. Mr. Dill, of Muskoka, and Mr. Wood, of Hastings, (Opposition) both personally acquainted with the matter, endorsed the Government's action as involved in Mr. Meredith's charges.

The papers and documents presented to the Legislature respecting the case of Dr. Dowling embrace the report of the Attorney-General of January 17th last, the certificates of the trial judges, the judgment of the appeal judges, and a copy of the act passed at the last session of the Dominion Parliament respecting Sir Charles Tupper. The statement of the Attorney General is clear, impartial, and exhaustive. He comments on the disagreement of the trial judges, the proceedings before the Court of Appeal, and the object of the last session. He showed that Dr. Dowling should not be disqualified by the opinion of a single judge for a mere technical breach of the law, contrary to the intention of the law, or that there should be any doubt on the subject was a wrong to him and his constituents, and they were justified in demanding legislative action to remedy this wrong. He showed that Acts similar in principle were already on our Statute Book, and that many were to be found in the statute law of Great Britain. The present case, he showed further, affords much stronger reasons for legislative interference than did the case of Sir Charles Tupper, where a direct violation of the independence of Parliament had been committed. In the latter case if, as was alleged, the technical effect of the Act was contrary to the intention and spirit of the Act the only hardship resulting would have been a new election, but in Dr. Dowling's the hardship would be not merely a new election but eight years' continued disqualification. It was, therefore, the duty of the Government to introduce a Bill giving effect beyond the possibility of further dispute the intention of the Legislature, relieving Dr. Dowling from disability in respect of the Acts as to which his judges differed, making it certain that he or his constituents would not again have to contest before the courts the question of his disqualification. The case is strongly put, and any person impartially considering all the facts of the case cannot but be forced to the conclusion that Dr. Dowling has been injuriously affected by a defect in the law it is the duty of the Legislature to remedy that defect and clearly define the intention of the law.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26th.

The disposal of routine business was followed by the resumptionof the debate on Mr. Gibson's resolutions, respecting Parliament buildings. Mr. Broder opposed the motion, and Mr. O'Connor moved an amendment to the amendment to the effect that the House was prepared to consider any reasonable scheme for the erection of new Parliament buildings. The debate was entered into by several members, and Mr. O'Connor's amendment was carried, on division, by 52 to 36—a majority of sixteen.

After recess the House went into Committee of the whole on Hon. Mr. Ross' Bill to amend the Public School Act. The Committee rose and reported the act with amendments as far as section 39.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th.

To-day the House gave a third reading to several bills. Mr. Preston's motion asked an expression of opinion from the House on the subject of disposing of the surplus stock of the Guelph Stock Farm. Members on both sides of the House joined in the discussion, all agreeing as to the excellence of the work being done by the Agriculture College and Model Farm, Guelph, and that the surplus stock of the farm should by some means be retained within the Province. Some, however, agreed that if Ontario farmers did not see fit to take advantage of the perodical sales to secure thoroughbred stock, they should not grumble if American cattlemen came in and out-bid them. Under the present system the stock was sold by auction, and all parties had equal chances. Hon. Mr. Ross, Minister of Agriculture, stated that he would communicate with electoral district associations and see if arrangements could be made by which the surplus stock could be disposed of through them, and abandon the auction sales. The vast majority of the surplus stock sold in the past had, he asserted, been sold in Ontario, very little going to the United States. Mr. Preston's object of directing public attention to the matter having been gained, the motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Meredith's Bill to define the liability of employers for injuries sustained by workmen in their employ, came up for its second reading. A similar measure of a tentative nature has been passed in England, and Hon. Mr Fraser suggested that the present bill should be delayed. The Government was collecting information on the subject, and he moved the six months' hoist, which was carried by a vote of 25 to 16, many members of the House having paired and gone home to spend Sunday.

After spending some time in committee of the whole on the Public School bill, the House adjourned.

Turnbull is no longer neglecting the Boys. Call and examine his choice stock of Ties, Collars, Tweeds, Ready-Made Clothing, etc., he has purchased for the Spring Trade.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

In and Around Our Legislative Halls.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

MONDAY FEBRUARY 24th.

Petitions in favor of prohibition and against relaxation of the Scott Act were largely presented to-day.

Hon. Mr. Pope stated that 9,000 whites and 3,000 Chinese had entered British Columbia last year.

Hon. Mr. Laurier moved a resolution in reference to the location of the line of railway to connect the city of Montreal with the harbours of Halifax and St. John, but the servile majority at Sir John's bidding voted it down. The result of this action is to leave in the hands of the Government the selection of the route, with the same danger of blunders as those made in selecting the route of the Intercolonial Railway. The Government will, no doubt, select the route that will utilize "Pope's road," and which will carry the eastern terminus of the C. P. R. through Yankee territory.

Hon. Mr. Blake moved for a return of the comparative working expenses of the Intercolonial Railway since 1879.

To-day a deputation of Senators, Commons members and others waited on Sir John to ask him amend the Scott Act to facilitate its enforcement. Mr. Foster pointed out that the Usurpation Act (the Dominion License Act) had created confusion, and asked that what scanty jurisdiction the Supreme Court had left the Federal Government should be exercised in incorporating amendments for enforcing the Scott Act. Sir John could not deny that it was the duty of Parliament to make its own Acts effective.

The Government is very willing to favor the Syndicate, and equally ready to snub workingmen who are kept out of their wages by Syndicate contractors. The Syndicate can get millions at command, but the workingmen cannot even get helped to a cent of the money they have honestly earned while working for a Syndicate, whose other demands the Government is so willing to look after.

The Government seems inclined to reconsider the legislation by which control of Ontario railways was usurped.

TUESDAY FEBRUARY 24th.

The Scott Act people seem to have been stirred up to greater activity by the monster deputation of the Licensed Vituallers. To-day it took over an hour to present the petitions against relaxing the provisions of the Scott Act, one from Quebec containing 1,200 names.

Sir Richard Cartwright's attempt to get the Government to adopt some rational method in connection with taking the North-West census was without effect, Sir John declaring that the motion of Sir Richard was an attack on those who had voted for the worthless de jure system.

A motion of Mr. Vail, for copies of all correspondence with the Imperial Government on the subject of the flag treaty between the United States and Spain, whereby American products are admitted into Cuba and Porto Rico on more favorable terms than the products of the Dominion, brought on a lively debate. Mr. Vail drew the attention of the House to the fact that a treaty had been drawn up between the United States and Spain which, if carried into effect, would place Canada at a disadvantage so great as to shut her out of the market in the Spanish West Indies. Sir Leonard Tilley refused to submit the correspondence, and Sir John said the discussion would be detrimental to Canadian interests. The discussion showed how important it was that Canada should have power to negotiate her own commercial treaties.

Mr. Blake moved for several important papers connected with the cost of construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. Cameron, of Huron, in moving for a return, set forth the grievances of a number of squatters in the North-West who had been harshly expelled from their lands by the Government and had been allowed no consideration. He showed that the tyranny of Government officials had driven settlers out of the country and was retarding its settlement.

Sir John's Chinese Commission presented its report to-day. The report strongly favors Chinese cheap labour, and shows that the Commission is strongly imbued with the Government's policy, as shown in their assisted emigration scheme, doing everything possible to get out of protecting Canadian labour.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 25th.

To-day petitions against relaxing the Scott Act, against assisted and Chinese immigration, and in favour of extending the C.P.R. to Quebec, so as to make the terminus on Canadian territory, were presented.

Mr. Edgar introduced a bill to give clerks and other employes of insolvent banks, insurance companies, etc., priority of claim over other creditors for three months wages.

Mr. McCarthy introduced a bill to amend the Scott Act, by permitting the sale of liquor by brewers and distillers to parties inside as well as outside the county. Mr. Blake sarcastically suggested that he better amend the McCarthy Act.

Mr. Kranz moved the House into Committee of the Whole to consider the resolution of which he had given notice to provide, in case of the passage of a prohibitionary law, that distillers, brewers and malsters should be compensated for the diminution in the value of their property, premises and plant. He proceeded to state his reason for bringing the question forward; that of over 200 distilleries and breweries are now in operation, in which at least $12,000,000 are invested, and in which 2,500 hands are employed. He said that owing to the adoption of the Scott Act general prohibition was being hastened, and it was the duty of Parliament to take the question into consideration. He contended that those engaged in distilling and brewing had vested rights, of which they should not be deprived without compensation. He calculated that one-sixth of the total revenue of the Dominion was derived from the liquor traffic, and that as large contributors to the Treasury, specific consideration should be given to those in business.

It will be noticed that the motion is not likely to be satisfactory to the trade. There is no mention of compensating hotel keepers and shop keepers.

Mr. Fisher moved in amendment that it was inexpedient to discuss compensation till a prohibitory measure was before the House, and Mr. Foster contended that the passage of such a resolution as was before the House would simply have the effect of raising up before the people a barrier in the way of further legislation by threatening them with a load of from $12,000,000 to $30,000,000. He said the question had so far not been discussed in a single constituency, and that no member could get up and say his constituents desired such a resolution to pass.

The debate was thrown over until it comes up again in regular order of procedure. In the evening several bills were advanced a stage, and the House adjourned.

At the Public Accounts Committee to-day it was found out that the civil servants who were shown at a recent meeting to have made so large bills for extra work, kept their own time and made up their own bills.

Sir John Macdonald is now being badly badgered by Scott Act men and licensed victuallers. He is struggling to please everybody, with the usual result—he pleases nobody. To Mr. Kyle and other representatives of the licensed victuallers he pretends that he is their friend and champion, that the country is now being misled by the temperance advocates, and that he is watching his chance either to repeal the Scott Act or to make such amendments as will render it inoperative. When confronted by a temperance man the Premier poses as a Scott Act man. He voted for that measure, he says, though as a matter of fact he did nothing of the kind.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26th.

The debate on Mr. Kranz's compensation resolution was resumed by Mr. Foster. He pointed out that when the temperance people had prepared the people for prohibition the question of compensation was raised. In face of a temperance agitation of fifty years liquor dealers had deliberately gone into a business which the signs of the times said was an unsafe one. They had made their gains and, he said, let them take their risks.

Mr. Fisher's amendment, which was to the effect that compensation should not be considered before prohibitionary legislation was introduced, was carried by a vote of 105 to 74—a majority of 31.

Mr. Charlton's Bill for the better observance of Sunday was defeated on its second reading, after speeches showing that the matter was one within Provincial jurisdiction.

The British Columbia members are greatly disgusted with the report of the commissioners sent to investigate and report upon the Chinese immigration question. They say that the statements of the Commissioners directly contradict all that they have been saying in Parliament for years past, and are in effect a severe reflection upon their credibility. The trip of the Commissioners, printing of report, etc., will cost the country about $25,000, while it is doubtful if any action will be taken upon it.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27th.

Mr. Small, in introducing a Bill to make further provisions respecting the traffic in intoxicating liquors, said its object was to compensate hotel and tavern-keepers in consequence of the depreciation of the value of real estate by the passage of the Scott Act. This was to be done by a court of arbitration, which was to be a charge upon the municipality where the Act came into force. The Bill was read the first time.

This afternoon the House went into Committee of the Whole on the Civil service resolutions. The first item was an increase of $800 for a new office, superintendent of letter carriers. Hon. Mr. Carling got tangled in answering questions relating to his department, and Sir John came to his rescue. The increase of salaried offices met even the condemnation of Government supporters, Mr. White, of Hastings, asserting that the departments were swarming with officials with little or nothing to do. The Civil Service examinations are little better than a farce for in the Interior Department clerks who were "plucked" were given easier papers written out for them in their own offices, and were passed. The Government could not deny that this is true. Another gross abuse and waste of public money is the payment for extra services. Last year 140 clerks, whose average salary was $1,349, received the enormous sum of $157,000 for "extra" services.

Mr. McCarthy's Bill respecting carriers by land was another of his interferences with Provincial jurisdiction. Dealing with civil rights it can only be legislated on by the provinces. The bill, however, passed its second reading and was referred to the Committee on Railways and Canals.

The estimates for the year 1885-6 were presented to Parliament to-night. The proposed expenditure on consolidated fund or current yearly expenses is $31,757,032, an increase of $1,288,402 over last year. When the supplementary estimates are brought down the total will be swollen to at least $33,000,000.

It is astonishing that the Government, having before their eyes the evidence of a rapidly declining revenue and the certainty of a deficit, should, instead of curtailing expenditure, come to Parliament with a demand for several millions more for ordinary expenses than at any time in the history of Canada. When the Liberal Government of Mr. McKenzie left office the annual expenditure on consolidated fund was $23,503,158. This amount was declaimed against by Sir Leonard Tilley as too great, but notwithstanding this, since he took office it has bounded steadily upward until now it is $9,500,000 more. The following table shows the estimated expenditure for the principal services for next year, as compared with the current year:

Interest on public debt	$10,400,199	$8,921,194
Civil Government	1,200,506	1,176,680
Administration of Justice	636,290	627,020
Militia	1,133,400	1,132,855
Public Works	1,508,837	2,225,515
Subsidies to Provinces	3,962,329	3,585,080
Railways and Canals (revenue)	3,190,441	3,209,072
Postoffice	2,651,837	2,471,596
Other services		7,220,058
Total	$31,757,032	30,468,630

Notwithstanding that there is likely to be a large falling-off in the revenue, the cost of collection is to be increased. The total estimated expenditure on capital account for 1886 is $10,497,726, against $48,816,654 in the current year.

The loan for the Canadian Pacific Railway of $30,000,000 in last year's account is the reason why it appears so large as compared with this year.

Tilley anticipates an increase in every department of the civil service, the total increase being $32,746.

TEXT OF THE "SCOTT ACT."

What the Electors of Peterborough will almost certainly vote for or against.

At the request of a large number of our readers, who have not read the "Scott Act" (The Canada Temperance Act of 1878) we give below the text of the second and third parts of the Act, (the prohibitory and penal clauses). This will be of interest to both classes; the people will see what they are voting for or against, according as they may chose to mark their ballots, in the voting which will ere long, in all probability, take place.

SECOND PART.

PROHIBITION OF TRAFFIC IN INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

99. From the day on which this part of this Act comes into force and takes effect in any county or city, and for so long thereafter as the same continues in force therein, no person, unless it be for exclusively sacramental or medicinal purposes, or for bona fide use in some art, trade or manufacture, under the regulation contained in the fourth subsection of this section, or as hereinafter authorized by one of the four next sub-sections, of this section, shall, within such county or city, by himself, his clerk, servant or agent, expose or keep for sale, or directly or indirectly, on any pretence or upon any device, sell or barter, or in consideration of the purchase of any other property give, to any other person, any spirituous or other intoxicating liquor, or any mixed liquor capable of being used as a beverage and part of which is spirituous or otherwise intoxicating:

2. And neither any license issued to any distiller or brewer—nor yet any license for retailing on board any steamboat or other vessel, brandy, rum, whisky, or other spirituous liquors, wine, ale, beer, porter cider, or other vinous or fermented liquors—nor yet any license for retailing on board any steamboat or other vessel, wine, ale, beer, porter cider, or other vinous or fermented liquors, but not brandy, rum, whisky, or other spirituous liquors—nor yet any other description of license whatever—shall in any wise avail to render legal any act done in violation of this section:

3. Provided always that the sale of wine for exclusively sacramental purposes shall be made by druggists and vendors as hereinafter provided, only on the certificate of a clergyman affimiring that the wine is required for sacramental purposes.

4. Provided, also, that the sale of intoxicating liquor for exclusively medicinal purposes or for bona fide use in some art, trade or manufacture, shall be lawful only by such druggists and other vendors as may be thereto specially licensed by Lieutenant-Governor in each Province, the number not to exceed one in each township or parish, nor two in each town; and in cities not exceeding one for every four thousand inhabitants; such sale, when for medicinal purposes, to be in quantities of not less than one pint, to be removed from the premises and to be made only on the certificate of a medical man having no interest in the sale by the druggist or vendor, affirming that such liquor has been prescribed for the person named therein; and when such sale is for its use in some art, trade or manufacture, the same to be made only on a certificate signed by two Justices of the Peace of the bona fides of the application, accompanied by the affirmation of the applicant, that the liquor is to be used only for the particular purposes set forth in the affiramation; and it shall be the duty of the druggist or other vendor to file the certificates and keep a register of all such sales indicating the name of the purchaser and the quanity sold, and to make an annual return of all such sales on the thirty-first day of December in every year to the Collector of the Inland Revenue within whose revenue division the county or city is situated.

5. Provided also, that any producer of cider in the county, or any licensed distiller or brewer, having his distillery or brewery within such county or city may thereat expose and keep for sale such liquor as he shall have manufactured thereat, and no other; and may sell the same thereat, but only in quantities not less than ten gallons, or in the case of ale or beer not less than eight gallons, at any one time, and only to druggists and other licensed as aforesaid or to such persons as he has good reason to believe will forthwith carry the same beyond the limits of the county or city, and of any adjoining county or city in which the second part of this Act is then in force, and to be wholly removed and taken away in quantities not less than ten gallons, or in the case of ale or beer not less than eight gallons at a time:

6. Provided also, that any incorporated company authorized by law to carry on the business of cultivation and growing vines and of making and selling wine and other liquors produced from grapes, having their manufactory within such county or city, may thereat expose and keep for sale such liquor as they shall have manufactured thereat, and no other; and may sell the same thereat, but only in quantities not less than ten gallonsat any one time, and only to druggists and others licensed as aforesaid, or to such persons as they have good reason to believe will forthwith carry the same beyond the limits of the county or city and of any adjoining county or city in which the second part of this Act is then in force, and to be wholly removed and taken away in quantities not less than ten gallons at a time:

7. Provided also, that manufacturers of pure native wines made from grapes grown and produced by them in the Dominion of Canada, may, when authorized to do so by license from the Municipal Council or other authority having jurisdiction where such manufacture is carried on, sell such wines at the place of manufacture in quantities of not less than ten gallons at one time, except when sold for sacramental or medicinal purposes, when any number of gallions from one to ten may be sold:

8. Provided also, that any merchant, or trader exclusively in wholesale trade and duly licensed to sell liquor by wholesale, having his store or place for sale of goods within such county or city, may thereat keep for sale and sell intoxicating liquor, but only in quantities not less than ten gallons at any one time, and only to druggists and others licensed as aforesaid, or to such persons as he has good reasons to believe will forthwith carry the same beyond the limits of the county or city, and of any adjoining county or city in which the second part of this Act is then in force, to be wholly removed and taken away in quantities not less than ten gallons at a time:

9. In any prosecution against a producer, distiller, brewer, manufacturer, merchant, or trader under this section, it shall be incumbent on the defendant to furnish satisfactory evidence of having good reason for believing that such liquor would be forthwith removed beyond the limits of the county or city, and of any adjoining county or city in which the second part of this Act is then in force, for consumption outside the same.

THIRD PART.

PENALITIES AND PROSECUTIONS FOR OFFENCES AGAINST THE SECOND PART.

100. Whoever by himself, his clerk, servant or agent, exposes or keeps for sale, or directly or indirectly, on any pretence or by any device, sells, or barters, or in consideration of the purchase of any other property, gives, to any other person, any spirituous or other intoxicating liquor, or any mixed liquor capable of being used as a beverage and a part of which is spirituous or otherwise intoxicating, in violation of the second part of this Act, shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty of not less than fifty dollars for the first offence, and not less than one hundred dollars for the second offence, and to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding two months for the third and for every subsequent offence; and whoever, in the employment or on the premises of another, so exposes or keeps for sale, or sells, or barters, or gives in violation of the said second part of this Act, shall be held equally guilty with the principal, and shall be liable on summary conviction to the same penalty or punishment. And all intoxicating liquors in respect to which any such offence has been committed, and all kegs, barrels, cases, bottles, packages or receptacles of any kind whatever in which the same are contained shall be forfeited.

101. Any prosecution for any such penalty or punishment may be brought by or in the name of the Collector of Inland Revenue within whose official division the offence was committed, or by or in the name of any person.

102. It shall be the duty of such Collector of Inland Revenue to bring such prosecution, whenever he shall have reason to believe that any such offence has been committed, and that a prosecution therefor can be sustained, and would not subject him to any undue measure of responsibility in the premises.

[Sections 103 to 105 inclusive relates to the manner in which prosecutions may be brought in the several provinces, etc.]

106. Every such prosecution shall be commenced within three months after the alleged offence, and shall be heard and determined in a summary manner, either upon the confession of the defendant, or upon the evidence of a witness or witnesses.

107. Every offence against the second part of this Act may be prosecuted in the manner directed by the "Act respecting the duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions in relation to summary convictions and orders," so far as no provision is hereby made for any matter or thing which may be required to be done with respect to such prosecution; and all the provisions contained in the said Act shall be applicable to such prosecutions and to the judicial and other officers before whom the same are hereby authorized to be brought, in the same manner as if they were incorporated in this Act, and as if all such judicial and other officers were named in the said Act.

108. In case a credible witness proves upon oath before the Stipendiary, Police or sitting Magistrate, Commissioner of a Parish Court, Recorder, Judge of the Sessions of the Peace, Sheriff or Mayor, or before one of the Justices of the Peace before whom any prosecution for an offence against the provisions of the second part of this Act is brought, that there is reasonable cause to suspect that any intoxicating liquor in respect to which such offence has been committed, is in any dwelling-house, store, shop, warehouse, outhouse, garden, yard, croft, or other place or places, such Stipendiary, Police or sitting Magistrate, Commissioner of Parish Court, Recorder, Judge of the Sessions of the Peace, Justices of the Peace, Sheriff or Mayor, may grant a warrant to search such dwelling-house, store, shop, warehouse, outhouse, garden, yard, croft, or other place or places, for such intoxicating liquor, and if the same, or any part thereof, be then found, to bring the same before him; and any information to obtain a warrant under this section may be in form of Schedule M to this Act; and any search-warrant under this section may be in form of Schedule N to this Act.

109. When any person is convicted of any offence against the provisions of the second part of this Act, the Stipendiary, Police or Sitting Magistrate, Commissioner of a Parish Court, Recorder, Judge of the Sessions of the Peace, Justices of the Peace, Sheriff or Mayor, before whom such person is convicted, may adjudge and order, in addition to any other penalty or punishment, that the intoxicating liquor in respect to which the offence was committed, and which has been brought before him in virtue of a search-warrant as aforesaid (whether the same be or be not the property of such person), or not more than twenty gallons thereof, if there be more of it than twenty gallons be forfeited, and that all kegs, barrels, cases, boxes, bottles, packages, and all other receptacles of any kind whatever, found containing the same, or not more than twenty gallons thereof, if there be more of it than twenty gallons be broken up and utterly destroyed, and the said intoxicating liquor, or not more than twenty gallons thereof, if there be more of it than twenty gallons, poured out, spilled, wasted, and utterly destroyed; and thereupon such barrels, kegs, cases, boxes, bottles, packages; and other receptacles of any kind whatever, to the extent aforesaid, may be forthwith broken and utterly destroyed, and the said intoxicating liquor, or not more than twenty gallons thereof, if there be more of it than twenty gallons, poured out, spilled, wasted, utterly destroyed, by the constable or peace officer who executed the search warrant under which the same was found, or in whose custody the same was afterwards placed by the convicting Magistrate, Commissioner, Recorder, Judge, Justices, Sheriff or Mayor.

110. Any person who, either before or after the summons of any witness in any such case, tampers with any such witness, or by any offer of money, or by threat or otherwise, directly or indirectly, induces or attempts to induce any such person to absent himself or herself, or to swear falsely, shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for each such offence.

111. No conviction, judgment or order, in any such case shall be removed by certiorari or otherwise, into any of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Record; nor shall any appeal whatever be allowed from any such conviction, judgment or order, to any Court of General Quarter Sessions, or other Court whatever, when the conviction has been made by a Stipendiary Magistrate, Recorder, Judge of the Sessions of the Peace, Sheriff, Police Magistrate, Sitting Magistrate or Commissioner of a Parish Court.

112. Any person who, having violated any of the provisions of this Act, or of any Provincial Act which is now or may be from time to time in force in any Province respecting the issue of licenses for the sale of fermented or spirituous liquors, or of "The Temperance Act of 1864," compromises, compounds or settles, or offers or attempts to compromise, compound or settle the offence with any person or persons with the view of preventing any complaint being made in respect thereof, or if a complaint has been made with the view of getting rid of such complaint, or of stopping or having the same dismissed for want of prosecution or otherwise, shall be guilty of an offence under this Act, and on conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned at hard labor in the common gaol of the county or district in which the offence was committed, for any period not exceeding three months.

113. Every person who is concerned in, or is a party to, the compromise, composition or settlement mentioned in the next preceding section, shall be guilty of an offence under this Act, and on conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned in the common gaol of the county or district in which the offence was committed, for any period not exceeding three calendar months.

114. Any person who, on any prosecution under any of the said Acts tampers with a witness, either before or after he is summoned or appears as such witness on any trial or proceeding under any such Act, or by the offer of money, or by threats, or in any other way, either directly or indirectly, induces or attempts to induce any such person to absent himself, or to swear falsely, shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for each offence.

115. In describing offences respecting the sale or other unlawful disposal of spirituous, fermented, or other intoxicating liquor, or the keeping thereof for sale, in any informations, summons, conviction, warrant, or proceeding under the said Temperance Act or under this Act, it shall be sufficient to state the unlawful sale, barter, disposal or keeping of intoxicating liquor simply, without stating the name or kind of such liquor, or the price thereof, or any person to whom it was sold, bartered or disposed of; and it shall not be necessary to state the quantity of liquor so sold, bartered, disposed of or kept, except in the case of offences where the quantity is essential, and then it shall be sufficient to allege the sale or disposal of more or less than such quantity, and it shall not be necessary in any such summmons, conviction, warrant, or proceeding to negative the circumstances, the existence of which would make the act complained of lawful, but upon any such circumstances being proved in evidence the defendant shall be acquitted; and this provision shall apply whether such circumstances are stated by way of exception in the section under which the offence is laid or in a substantive section or otherwise.

116. In the event of any variance between the information and evidence adduced in support thereof, the Justices Magistrates or other officer may amend or alter such information, and may substitute for the offence charged therein, any other offence against the provisions of the said "Temperance Act of 1864," or of this Act; but if it appears that the defendant has been materially misled by such variance, the said Justices or Magistrate or other officers shall thereupon adjourn the hearing of the case to some future day, unless the defendant waives such adjournment.

117. No conviction or warrant enforcing the same or other process or proceeding under either of the said Acts shall be held insufficient or invalid by reason of any variance between the information or conviction, or by reason of any other defect in form or substance, provided it can be understood from such conviction, warrant, process or proceeding that the same was made for an offence against some provision of such Act, within the jurisdiction of the Justices or Magistrate, or other officer who made or signed the same, and provided there is evidence to prove such offence, and no greater penalty is imposed than is authorized by such Act.

118. Upon any appliation to quash such conviction or warrant enforcing the same, or other process or proceeding, or to discharge any person in custody under such warrant, whether such application is made in appeal, or upon habeas corpus, or by way of certiorari or otherwise, the Court to which or Judge to whom such appeal is made or to which or to whom such application has been made upon habeas corpus, or by way of certiorari, or otherwise, shall dispose of such appeal or applications upon the merits, notwithstanding any such variance or defect as aforesaid, and such Court or Judge may in any case amend the same if necessary, and in all cases where it appears that the merits have been tried, and that the conviction, warrant process or proceeding is sufficient and valid under this section or otherwise, such conviction warrant, process, or proceeding shall be affirmed, or shall not be quashed (as the case may be), and any conviction, warrant, process or proceeding so affirmed or affirmed and amended may be enforced, in the same manner as convictions affirmed on appeal, and the costs thereof shall be recoverable as if originally awarded.

119. When in any house, shop, room or other place in any municipality in which any prohibitory by-law passed under the provisions of "The Temperance Act of 1864," or of this Act, is in force, a bar, counter, beer pumps, kegs, or any other appliances or preparations similiar to those usually found in taverns and shops where spirituous or fermented liquors are accustomed to be sold or trafficked in are found, and spirituous, fermented or other intoxicating liquor is also found in such house, shop, room, or place, such liquor shall be deemed to have been kept for sale contrary to the provisions of such Act, unless the contrary is proved by the defendant in any prosecution; and the occupant of such house, shop, room or other place shall be taken conclusively to be the person who keeps therein such liquor for sale.

120. In proving the sale or barter or other unlawful disposal of liquor for the purpose of any proceeding relative to any offender under the said "Temperance Act of 1864," or under this Act, it shall not be necessary to show that any money actually passed, or any liquor was actually consumed, if the Justices or Magistrate or other officer or Court hearing the case, is or are satisfied that a transaction in the nature of a sale or barter or other unlawful disposal actually took place.

121. In any prosecution under the said Temperance Act or under this Act, for the sale or barter or other unlawful disposal of intoxicating liquor, it shall not be necessary that any witness should dispose directly to the precise description of the liquor sold or bartered or the precise consideration therefor, or to the fact of the sale or other disposal having taken place with his participation or to his own personal and certain knowledge, but the Justices or Magistrate or other officer trying the case, so soon as it appears to them or to him that the circumstances in evidence sufficiently establish the infraction of law complained of, shall put the defendant on his defence, and in default of his rebuttal of such evidence, shall convict him accordingly.

122. The proceedings upon any information for committing an offence against any of the provisions of this Act, in case of a previous conviction or convictions being charged shall be as follows:—

1. The Justices or Magistrate or other officer shall, in the first instance, inquire concerning such subsequent offence only, and if the accused be found guilty thereof, he shall then, and not before, be asked whether he was so previously convicted, as alleged in the information, and if he answers that he was so previously convicted, he may be sentenced accordingly; but if he denies that he was previously convicted, or stands mute of malice, or does not answer directly to such question, the Justices or Police Magistrate or other officer shall then inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions;

2. The number of such previous convictions shall be provable by the production of a certificate under the hand of the convicting Justices or Magistrate, or Officer, or the clerk of the Peace, without proof of his signature or official charater, or by other satisfactory evidence.

3. A conviction may in any case be had as for a first offence, notwithstanding that there may have been a prior conviction or convictions for the same or any other offence;

4. Convictions for several offences may be made under this Act, although such offences may have been committed on the same day; but the increased penalty or punishment hereinbefore imposed shall only be recoverable in the case of offences committed on different days, and after information laid for a first offence.

5. In the event of any conviction for any second or subsequent offence becoming void or defective, after the making thereof, by reason of any previous conviction being set aside, quashed, or otherwise rendered void, the Justices or Magistrate or other officer, by whom such second or subsequent conviction was made, may by summons under his or their hand require the person convicted to appear at a time and place to be named in such summons, and may thereupon, upon proof of the due service of such summons, if such person fails to appear, or on his appearance, amend such second or subsequent conviction, and adjudge such penalty or punishment as might have been adjudged had such previous conviction never existed, and such amended conviction shall thereupon be held valid to all intents and purposes as if it had been made in the first instance;

6. In case any person who has been convicted of a contravention of any provision of the second part of this Act is afterwards convicted of an offence against such provision or against any other provision of the said part, such conviction shall be deemed a conviction for a second offence within the meaning of section one hundred of this Act, and may be dealt with and punished accordingly, although the two convictions may be for acts of different descriptions; and in case any such person is afterwards again convicted of a contravention of any provision of the said part, whether similar or not to the previous offences, such conviction shall in like manner be deemed a conviction for a third offence, within the meaning of section one hundred of this Act, and may be dealt with and punished accordingly.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 67 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied you. CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GRENEY."
109 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 6, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

THE RED FLAG.

BY

M. E. BRADDON.

Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc. etc. etc.

Kathleen heard with a shudder, remembering that file of prisoners, with fettered limbs and downcast eyes, pale, despairing, submissive. She had heard people say that all who had carried arms against the Republic would be served thus. "Passez pas les armes!" The phrase was familiar enough now. A short shift, and your back against a wall, citizen, your waistcoat open, so! and eight muzzles pointed at your heart.

"Where is Gaston?" said Rose presently. "Maman Schubert said he was at the office all yesterday. His newspaper is to be revived now that Paris is more tranquil, she told me. Are you glad of that, Kathleen? I hope he will not preach revolution any more. We have had enough of the Commune."

"Yes, enough—more than enough," said Kathleen, her pale lips quivering as she turned away her head.

All that day the sisters spent together, Kathleen devoting herself to Rose and the baby, smiling upon both, speaking hopeful words; but after dark, when Rose had fallen asleep, Kathleen stole away from the sick room just as Madame Schubert re-entered, after having attended to her own home affairs. Before Madame Schubert had time to ask her a question, Kathleen was gone. She ran up to her own room, put on her neat little bonnet and shawl, her thick black veil, and then back to those terrible streets, to the stifling smoke, the glare of the conflagration, the tramp of soldiery, the cry of "Stand, or I fire!"

The struggle was over in the center of Paris. The insurgents had retired to Pere Lachaise, Menilmontant, Belleville, the Buttes Chaumont. The huge storehouses of Villette filled half the sky with lurid flame, across which flashed the swift white light of the cannon. The Hotel de Ville stood sharply out against the sky of flame and moonlight—a ruin, grand as any wreck of Roman greatness; airy columns, fairy arches, doorways without rooms, spectral corridors, cornices of delicate tracery; and, above all, unharmed, in big golden capitals, the legend, "Liberty! Equality! Fraternity!"

And still roars the demoniac thunder of the cannon. Montmartre, from its superior height, rains death and destruction upon Belleville and La Roquette. Belleville and La Roquette reply with mitrailleuse and shell.

"Any news—any news of Colonel Serizier?" Kathleen asks of a group of women at a street-corner.

But they do not even know who Serizier is. They are full of their own troubles, their own fears. One of these weeps for a husband whom she has not seen for four days; called out against his will—he, the peaceable father of a family—to go and work and fight and die at the barricades.

"Ah, ma bonne!" she says to Kathleen, with streaming eyes, "the Commune was very cruel; and now they say Monsieur Thiers will be cruel too. Those foolish people have pulled down his house, and that will not help to arrange matters.

Serizier? No; no one in the streets knew anything about Serizier.

What was this dark rumor which the loiterers in the streets repeated to each other with awe-stricken faces? The hostages had been murdered at La Roquette three days ago, slaughtered within the walls of the prison. The Archbishop of Paris, the Cure of the Madeline, Monsieur Bonfean the President—eighteen victims in all.

Yes, it was true. True also that at five o'clock this afternoon, in the bright May sunshine, another band of hostages—priests, soldiers, civilians—to the number of fifty-two, had been done to death by a savage mob in the Rue Haxo, on the heights of Belleville; but this new horror had not yet become town talk.

It was one o'clock in the morning when Kathleen went home, worn out by wandering up and down the streets, standing at corners or on the bridges listening to the passers-by, to the people who stood at their doors; but nowhere could she hear anything which threw new light upon the tragedy in the Avenue d'Italie, or the wretch who had planned that bloody deed.

CHAPTER XI.

KATHLEEN'S AVOCATION.

Whit Sunday. May on the threshold of June, the very dawn of summer; but the sun, which hitherto has shone pitiless searching light upon scenes of death and horror, shines no more. Stormy winds beat and bluster against that feeble old house in the Rue Git le Cœur, with a sound and fury as of thunder; the cannonade of heaven takes up the cannonade of earth, and echoes it with twenty-fold power. Tempestuous rain lashes the windows, like the spray from a seething ocean. The cannon of Montmartre thunders against the heights of Belleville and Menilmontant. The insurgents reply with savage fury, blind, reckless, deluging Paris with shells.

And while the pitiless struggle still goes on upon the hights of Belleville, the day of reprisals has already begun for the insurgents. From Mazas they bring a hundred and forty-eight prisoners, hastily huddled into the prison yesterday. In the stormy Sunday morning, Whitsuntide morning, they are marched to the cemetery of Pere Lachaise, among the trees and the flowers and the marble monuments of the distinguished dead; and there, hard by that common grave where the murdered Archbishop and his companions lie in their bloody shrouds, the Federal prisoners are divided into batches of ten, and shot to death. They die bravely, joining hands and crying, "Long live the Commune!" with their last breath.

In the prison of Little Roquette, at about the same hour, two hundred and twenty-seven insurgents meet the same doom; not quite so boldly, for some of these, said an eye-witness, were sniveilers, and begged for mercy.

The final hour has come; those shells are verily the death-rattle of the Commune. Thirty thousand men are said to be concentrated upon this point of Paris, where they have built up giant barricades, almost impenetrable fortresses, communicating with each other by underground passages, a wonder of rough and ready masonry and skill. They are held in this supreme hour by men of desperate courage, men who have sworn not to surrender.

Two o'clock on that stormy Sabbath; and so far there has been neither rest nor respite. Cannon, mitrailleuse, chassepot, thundering, rattling, roaring, hissing; but now as the afternoon wears on there come intervals of silence. The cannonade pauses to draw breath. The sounds of battle seem more remote—they die away in the distance. Then silence.

Silence! Are they all dead?

This is Sunday, the day when the laborer rests from his toil; but to-day there has been only one laborer, and his name is Death.

Evening, and for the first time for many weeks and many days no more cannon. O happy silence of peace! Or should we not rather say silence of death?

A column of six thousand prisoners who have surrendered at Belleville slowly defile along the boulevard; and this is verily the end. Yes, the cup of desolation has been drained to the dregs. There have been the sword to slay, and the dogs to tear, and the fowls of the heaven and the beasts of the earth to devour and destroy, as in the day of the Prophet; only the dogs have been human dogs, and the beasts have been human beasts; and the whirlwind of the Lord has gone forth with fury, a continuing whirlwind, and it has fallen with pain upon the head of the wicked; and on the head of the good and just, and innocent and gentle also.

[illegible] consecrated to the holy mother of God, was over—month of May never to be forgotten by the French people, May which has left its indelible mark upon the city of Paris—and now all the gates of the city were opened, and the world came to see the work of destruction. English, Americans, foreigners of all kinds went about looking at the ruins, as at Pompeii or Herculaneum, criticising, examining, somewhat disappointed that the havoc was not more universal.

On the 7th of June came the funeral procession of Monsignor Darboy, the third Archbishop of Paris murdered within a quarter of a century. Under a gray and sunless sky the car with its long train of mourners, soldiers, people, solemnly, silently defiled along the quays, past the still smouldering ruins of palaces and mansions. No roll of drums, no funeral music broke that awful silence; only the rhythmical tread of the soldiers, the hollow rumble of gun-carriages. In the dumbness of a broken-hearted city, a city reeking with blood newly shed, the martyr was carried to his tomb in the great cathedral—last stage of a journey that had known so many dismal halting-places—from prison to prison, and then to the common grave at Pere Lachaise, from there to the bed of state in the archiepiscopal palace, and now to the final resting-place among the historic dead.

In the Rue Ghisle Cœur life had resumed its wonted way, save for one empty place. Rose was again astir, the careful manager, the attentive wife, nursing her baby, busy with her domestic work, cleaning, cooking, keeping the little apartment as neat and bright as a palace. There were flowers on the window-sill again, a bunch of flowers on the table at which Philip wrote or read, a bouquet of lilies of the valley, pure, spotless, telling no tale of a ruined city, a humiliated and impoverished nation. Within, by the domestic hearth, all was peace. Philip's arm was slowly mending. He was able even to work a little at the famous carved sideboard in his workshop, or to bring one of the panels into his wife's sitting-room, to sit there by the open window, chiselling a group of fruit, bird or fish, and whistling softly to himself as he worked, while Rose sat in her rocking chair crooning to her sleeping babe.

And Kathleen, the widowed, the heart broken, what was her life in these days of restored peace? She was very quiet. She bore her sorrow with a silent resignation which was more pathetic than loud wailings or passionate tears. But Rose would have liked better to see her weep more. That bloodless face, those fixed and hollow eyes, that slow and heavy step—the step which had once been so light and swift upon the stair—those long intervals of silence and apathy, were not these the indications of a broken heart?

Rose Durand did all in her power to comfort the mourner. She tried to persuade her sister to surrender the apartment on the upper story, and to occupy a little room off Philip's workshop; a mere closet; but Rose could furnish it, and make it a pretty nest for her darling; and then Kathleen would be her child again, always under her watchful care. She would share all their meals, live with them altogether; and the company of the little one, who showed himself full of intelligence, would soothe and amuse her.

"You are very good, dear," answered Kathleen meekly, when this scheme was pressed upon her; "you and Philip have been all goodness to me. But I like to live alone, just now. I am not fit company for any one. And again, if—if—" with a profound sigh, "if—he should come back, and fine his rooms altered, his books disturbed—it would seem as if I had not really loved him."

Rose was silent. Till this moment she had supposed that Kathleen was absolutely convinced of her husband's death, that the black gown she wore was the sign of hopeless widowhood; but these words told of a lingering hope, and after this Rose no longer urged her sister to give up the apartment. It was better she should go on hoping until the thin thread of hope wore out, than that she should sink all at once into the gulf of an absolute despair. Better, too, that she should have the daily occupation of arranging her rooms, dusting Gaston's books, opening a volume now and then and looking at a page, as if it held his own words. There were pages of Musset's poetry which seemed to speak to her with her husband's voice, so often had he read the lines to her in their brief married life. She knew all his books, and knew the measure of his love for each.

Every morning she put a little bunch of flowers on his writing-table by the window. And yet in her heart of hearts she was convinced that he was dead, and that it was his blood she had seen staining the dusty ground in the street off the Avenue d'Italie. And then when this work of dusting, polishing, and arranging everything was done, work over which she lingered lovingly, she would put on her little black bonnet, with a thick crape veil over her face, and go out and wander about the streets and the quays, and loiter on the bridges, hearing all that could be heard of the public news. People respected that black gown and bonnet, and the thick mourning veil. She was recognized as one of the many mourners who had been left behind after that awful tide of blood and fire had rolled over Paris. Lonely as she was, young, beautiful, no one molested her. She went from place to place, secure in the majesty of her desolation.

She saw the long files of insurgent prisoners led along the streets, fastened together by their elbows, with lowered heads, still fierce and shuddering from the bloody battle guarded by a cordon of soldiers. She saw the exasperated crowd flinging itself savagely upon these victims of their leader's folly, trying to break through the cordon of soldiers, the women more furious than the men, striking at the prisoners with their umbrellas, crying, "Death to the assassins! To the fire with the incendiaries!"

When some poor panting wretch, exhausted by fatigue, tottered and fell, and was picked up by the gendarmes and put in one of the vehicles of relief which followed the convoy, there was a howl of fury from the mob!

"No, no," they cried, "shoot him on the spot!"

And as the dismal train passed through the villages, on the quiet country roads, there was the same chorus of insults and execrations, a torture that knew no cessation till the prisoners reached the camp at Satory, where they had the naked earth for their bed, and the sky for their shelter. Perhaps some among these pilgrims of the chain may have assisted in that other procession on the 27th of May, when Emile Gois and his myrmidons drove the priests and gendarmes to the place of butchery in the Rue Haxo.

The day of reprisals had come, and the day was bitter. And the cry of Paris is like the voice of the daughter of Zion that bewaileth herself, that spreadeth her hands, saying, "Woe is me now, for my soul is wearied because of murderers!"

In all her wanderings, those loiterings under the limes and the maples, on the boulevard, or on a bench in the Champs Elysees, where the old air of gaiety began once more to enliven the scene, Kathleen had as yet heard nothing of the missing Serizier. The people whom she questioned were either densely ignorant—they had never heard of the man—or they remembered him vaguely as one of those heroes of the hour, a shoddy Achilles, who had strutted in a gaudy uniform and played the soldier in a passing show; or they were indifferent, shrugged their shoulders, believed that Serizier had been killed on one of the barricades at Belleville yonder, or that he had been shot at Mazas with a gang of insurgents.

At last, however, one tender June evening, when the storied windows of Notre Dame flung broken colored lights, like scattered jewels, upon the placid bosom of the Seine, hard by the Morgue, which lay low in the shadow yonder, like the black hull of some slave-ship, Kathleen, standing by the low parapet, listening to the deep-toned harmonies of the distant organ, heard two men talking of Serizier.

They had known him evidently; he had been one of their intimates at some period of his career; but they were not talking of him with any warmth of friendship. The man had been too great a brute to conciliate even his own class.

"He got off, sure enough," said one. "He was cleverer than Theophile Ferre, or Raoul Rigault, or Megy, and the rest of them. I met him after dark, on the 28th of May, in the Place Jeanne d'Arc. He was in a fever of fright, poor wretch, shaking from head to foot with agitation and excitement. After all, there is a difference in killing and being killed, and Serizier thought his turn had come. His boots and trousers were red with the blood of the Dominicans, and he complained of having to wear a uniform that was likely to betray his identity. He was colonel of the 101st battalion, you may remember, and had been very proud of his uniform—bulldog that he was. Well, he had never done me any good turn that I could remember; but one is glad to hide a hunted beast when the hounds are close upon him; so I told him I had a married sister living in the Rue Chateau des Rentiers, and that I could get him shelter in her lodging, which was on the ground-floor, at the back, looking into a walled yard—a safe kennel for any dog to hide in. He jumped at the offer, and I took him to my sister's place, gave him a supper, and a bit of carpet to lie upon, and a blouse and a pair of linen trousers in exchange for his fine feathers, and lent him a razor to cut off his military moustache; and at break of day he left us, clean-shaved and dressed like a workman."

"And you conclude that he got out of Paris that morning?" asked the other man.

"He was a fool if he did not, having a fair chance."

"The question is whether he had a chance. That bulldog muzzle of his would not be easily forgotten, and the Government was hard on his track on account of the slaughter of the Dominicans, which really was a little too much; even we of the Internationals thought he had gone too far. I should think it would be easier for him to hide in Paris than to leave Paris just then."

"Perhaps; but there has been plenty of time since for him to get clear off. I dare say he is living by his craft as a currier in one of the big provincial towns. He would have to live by his trade; for I know he carried no money with him when he made off that morning."

A currier! Here was something gained, at least," Kathleen thought. Until this moment she had not known the original avocation of the warrior Serizier, commandant of the famour 101st, the hero of Issy and Chatillon. A currier! Here was a falling off indeed for the Ajax of the gutter!

One of the provincial towns! Alas, this was indeed a vague clue. Rouen, Havre, Lyons, Tours, Rennes—the names of a dozen great cities came into Kathleen's mind as she went slowly homeward, downcast and disheartened. He lived; that was something for her to know. He lived to expiate his crime, to suffer as she suffered, to render blood for blood. Her life, her brain, her heart should be devoted to the task of finding him; her hand should point him out to the law he had outraged.

All that night—the soft summer night, full of the murmuring of leaves—even here in desolated Paris, where the ruined houses stood up blank and black, with shattered windows, through which the moonlight shone and the June winds blew; a handful of dust, a fragment of crumbling mortar, falling every now and then as the zephyrs touched the broken walls—all that night Kathleen lay broad awake, staring at the casement opposite her bed; and when day dawned—the sweet summer dawn that came so soon—she sprang up, and began to wash and dress. Her plan was formed.

One of those two men had said there was safer hiding for such as Serizier in Paris than outside Paris; the other had said that he had no money upon him at the time of his supposed flight. Without money how could he have taken a long journey, unless he had walked, like the two sisters? But the colonel of the 101st—the man who had wallowed in feasting and drunkenness, who had held his impious orgies in the violated churches of Paris—was doubtless too luxurious a person to tramp for weary leagues along the white dusty roads, under the pitiless sun. No; he would stay in Paris. He would think himself safe in his workman's blouse, among workmen, most of them members of the International Society, that fatal association which had sown the seeds of anarchy all over Europe. Amongst these men the assassin would be safe; they would not betray a brother, even were he known as the murderer of the helpless.

She was in the streets before any of the shops were opened, before workaday Paris, no sluggard, whatever her vices—was beginning to stir. This was sheer restlessness, for she could do nothing without the help of her fellow-men. At eleven o'clock she was in a small office in the Marais—an office to which she had gone with Rose years ago, soon after their first coming to Paris, to inquire for work. It was a registry for servants, for clerks in a small way, and for shopmen. Here she asked how many curriers' workshops there were in Paris. She thought there would be several—ten perhaps, or even twenty.

The agent gave her a trade-directory, opened it for her at a page headed "Curriers." There were two hundred and thirty-two curriers in Paris—two hundred and thirty-two workshops, at any one of which the man Serizier might be plying his trade.

Hardly strange, taking this fact into consideration, that the law had hitherto failed to touch this offender; more especially as the government, though ready to administer stern justice upon such of the Communist assassins who came in its way, did not give itself very much trouble in hunting down those who had made clean off.

And then, again, the harmless Dominicans were solitary men. There was no wife or child, no friend or sweetheart, to avenge them.

"It will be longer than I thought," Kathleen said to herself, as she stood at a desk in the shadow at the back of the little office, copying that long list of names and addresses.

Two hundred and thirty-two workshops! There were names of streets which she had never heard of—districts, suburbs, of whose very existence she was ignorant. The work of copying those addresses alone occupied her for nearly two hours; she was so careful to write every address correctly, to be sure of every name.

When her task was done she gave the agent two francs for the use of the book, ink, and paper, and asked him where she could buy a good map of Paris. He directed her to a shop in the next street, where she got what she wanted; and this done, she went home.

Rose was singing over her baby, singing in the sunlit window, bright with flowers. Philip had fitted the windows with flower-boxes of his own designing—Swiss, rustic, what you will—constructed out of odd pieces of rough oak, the refuse of his cabinet-work. Rose was the gardener, who bought and planted the flowers, and tended these humble gardens day by day; and never had bloomed finer carnations than Rose's Gloire de Malmaison yonder, or lovelier roses than her Marechal Niel.

Durand was at work in his carpenter's shop hard by, with a sheaf of chisels, carving a bird whose breast feathers seemed ruffled with the summer wind, so full of life was the chiselling. What a happy home it looked in the July afternoon! The tide of blood and fire had rolled by, and left this little household unscathed, untouched. Nay, in the midst of death and doom the babe had been born, and the Trinity of domestic love had been made perfect.

Kathleen sank down into a chair near her sister's sighing, faintly in very weariness.

"My love, how tired you look!" said Rose tenderly. "Have you been far?"

"No; only to the Marais."

Rose had of late abstained from all close questioning of her sister. She knew that Kathleen wandered about the streets aimlessly, wearied herself with long walks that seemed utterly without end or motive. But this idle wandering might be one way of living down a great grief. It was well perhaps to let the mourner take her own way. Nothing so oppressive as obtrusive sympathy. Rose sympathized, and said very little.

At his wife's instigation Durand watched the girl's lonely walks on two or three occasions—saw that she suffered no harm, went into no vile quarters, provoked no insult; and after being assured of this, Rose was content to let her follow her own devices.

"The angel of consolation may be leading her," she said; "saints and angels know what is best for her."

And in her high-strung faith as a Papist, Rose Durand believed that her sister's pure spirit here on earth might be in communication with the souls of that mighty company which had gone before, that great cloud of witnesses hovering round us, invisible, impalpable—the spirits of the faithful departed.

Kathleen sat silent, those dreamy eyes of hers gazing across the flowers to the blue cloudless sky. The dark-violet eyes seemed larger and more lustrous than of old now that her face was pinched and thin; but O, so unspeakably sad!

"Why were you not home at dinner-time, dear? Have you had anything to eat since the morning?"

"I think not," Kathleen answered absently.

"And you went out so early! I was at your door before six, and found you were gone. You must be faint for want of food."

"I never feel hungry. I am a little tired, that's all."

The boy had dropped off to sleep by this time. Rose laid him softly in his cradle, and then busied herself preparing a meal for her sister.

She made some coffee in a little brown pot, which needed only a handful of burning charcoal to heat it. She brought out some Lyons sausage, a plate of salad, a bunch of crisp light bread, a roll of butter in a little covered dish half-full of ice. Everything in Rose's domestic arrangements was fresh and clean and neat. The cloth she spread on the table was spotless damask, washed and ironed by her own hands.

"Come, pet," she said, and coaxed her sister to the table, taking off her bonnet, smoothing the soft golden hair, kissing the pale brow, so full of gloomy thought.

Kathleen took a little coffee, but ate nothing. She sat with her eyes fixed on vacancy, scarcely conscious of the meal that had been spread for her, quite unconscious of Rose's face watching her.

"My dearest, if you don't eat—if you go wandering about and fasting for long hours—you will be fit for nothing; you will drop down in the streets; you will be carried off to a hospital."

Kathleen looked up at her with a startled expression.

"Yes, yes; you are right," she said hurriedly, with a sudden agitation in tone and manner. "If I become too weak, ready to faint at every turn, I shall be useless—I can do nothing; and I have so much to do. Yes, dear, I will take some of this nice bread and butter. I want to be strong. I am a reed—a poor feeble reed; and I ought to be made of iron."

"Only be reasonably careful of yourself, dear, and you will soon be strong again. Those long wanderings and long fastings must kill you if you go on with them. You ought to be careful of yourself, Kathleen," added Rose, with tears in her eyes—for there were times when she felt as if it were but a question of weeks and days how long she might keep this idolised sister—"you ought to be careful, for my sake and Philip's. We are both so fond of you."

"Yes," Kathleen answered, in a low voice, "and for his sake."

She forced herself to eat, and did tolerable justice to the white sweet bread and the fresh salad. Her meals in her own apartment were less luxurious. A slice of dry bread, eaten standing, a handful of cherries and a crust, a cup of milk. She had hoarded her little stock of money ever since Gaston's disappearance. She held it ready for any expenditure that might help her in her scheme of vengeance.

"I want to be strong," she said quietly, when she had finished her meal. "I have got some employment—a—a kind of place, to which I shall have to go very early every morning."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Rose, sitting at work by the window, moving the cradle with her foot. "Why did you do that, dear?"

"I hardly know," answered Kathleen, with her eyes on the ground. "I thought it would be better for me to be employed."

"But I don't think you are strong enough for employment of any kind, just yet, dear," said Rose anxiously.

The idea seemed to her fraught with peril, with madness even.

WHAT THE N. P. DOESN'T SHUT OUT.

The value of goods exported to Canada from Great Britain during the month of January was $2,512,385, against $2,030,730 in January, 1884. The principal items of increase were: Salt, $7,000; spirits, $1,500; wool, $5,500; woollen fabrics, $79,000; carpets, $15,500; pig iron, $3,000; linen piece goods, $17,000; and saltpetre, $40,500.

O. Bortle, of Manchester, Ontario Co., N.Y., writes: "I obtained immediate relief from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have had asthma for eleven years. Have been obliged to sit up all night for ten or twelve nights in succession. I can now sleep soundly all night on a feather bed, which I have not been able to do previously to using the Oil."

COMES HOME LOADED.

"My husband is very little help to me about the house," remarked Mrs. Smith to her friend. "He never does any of the marketing. He always forgets to bring anything home with him."

"How different he is from my husband," responded her friend, sadly.

"In what way?"

"Mr. Jones comes home loaded every night."

A lady from Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance or stand on my feet for more than a few minutes at a time without feeling exhausted, but now I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles with out feeling the least inconvenience." For Female Complaints it has no equal.

A STRANGE WILL.

The late Mr. D. Bowie, of Rosebank, Blairgowrie, Scotland, has, it is understood, left a large proportion of his wealth to the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Though he was a Presbyterian Free Church elder, he has bequeathed £2,000 to build and £50,000 to endow a Wesleyan church in Blairgowrie, assigning his residence, Rosebank House, as the manse. The peculiarity of the case is that there is no Methodist meeting-house near, so far as we know, any Methodists in Blairgowrie.

The Way of the World.

That many with the glad consent praise newborn remedies, especially if they pay a larger profit—no one conversant with the substitution practiced in this respect will deny, and when you are told by interested parties that such and such a preparation is as "good or better"—than the great sure pop corn cure, Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Just for a moment consider if your benefit prompts the advice, or if the small additional profit secured by the sale of inferior or poisonous substitutes lies at the bottom of the suggestion. We say then, buy only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor; the safe, sure and tested remedy for corns will be found in Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors.

THE SPIRIT OF LENT.

Robert Herrick's quaint poem, "The True Lent," though written about 250 years ago, contains some thoughts which may be new to some persons even of these latter days of enlightenment. Here it is:

Is this a fast—to keep
The larder lean
An clean
From fat of veals and sheep?

Is it to quit the dish
Of flesh, yet still
To fill
The platter high with fish?

Is it to fast an hour,
Or ragd to go,
Or show
A downcast look or sour?

No! 'Tis a fast to dole
Thy sheaf of wheat
And meat
Unto the hungry soul.

It is to fast from strife,
From old debate
And hate,
To circumcise thy life.

To show a heart grief-rent,
To starve thy sin,
Not bin
And that's to keep thy Lent.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES,
In Pulmonary Affections and Scrofulous Diseases.

Dr. Ira M. Lang, New York, says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion and used it in my family and am greatly pleased with it. Have found it very serviceable in Scrofulous diseases and Pulmonary affections."

The Connecticut Senate has passed the bill providing a State bounty of ten cents to any person planting, protecting and cultivating elm maple, ash, basswood, oak, black walnut, hickory, apple, pear or cherry trees, not more than sixty feet apart, for three years, along any public highway.

The Best Combination.

The best combination of blood cleansing, regulating, health-giving herbs, roots and barks enter into Burdock Blood Bitters—a purely vegetable remedy that cures diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys. 10-2t

THE DOCTOR'S HEAD WAS LEVEL.

"Who is your family physician, George?"

"Dr. Smoothman."

"How did you employ that hair-brained creature?"

"Oh, my wife once asked him if he could tell why she always had cold feet, and he told her they were so small they couldn't hold blood enough to keep them warm. She won't have any other doctor."

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklens' Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well.

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by Taylor & McDonald.

A STEPMOTHER WITH WARM WAYS.

A step-mother who roasts her children into submission on a red-hot stove was on exhibition in the the Essex Market Court, N.Y., the other day. She was confronted with a curly-headed little girl whose arms and body were burned to a blister. Additional interest was given to the show by a husband who, when asked why he did not prevent the cruelty of this woman, replied that he was afraid of her. She had evidently roasted the whole family.

The Depopulated Highlands.

There are few Highland glens that do not contain traces of the banished population. In Lochaber, along the shores of Loch Arkaig, the home of the clan Cameron, the remains of what were once extensive townships may yet be seen. The celebrated Glencoe formerly teemed with a hardy population. Famous Glengarry is a sheep walk, and the powerful clan Macdonnell are now in Canada. Round Fort Augustus and far into the country of the clan Fraser is naught but desolation. In hundreds of straths in Ross-shire the wild heather has not even yet obliterated the green pastures, and the cultivated fields that once belonged to the MacKenzies and Munroes, and from whence the different battalions of the gallant Ross-shire buffs marched to conquer at Maidra, at Seringapatam, at Assaye, and Argaum. So late as 1849, when the present prime minister had already obtained political eminence, Hugh Miller attempted, but fruitlessly, to draw the attention of the British public to the work of destruction that was going on. He eloquently proclaimed that "while the law is banishing its tens for terms of seven and fourteen years, the penalty of deep-dyed crimes, irresponsible and infatuated power is banishing its thousands for life for no crime whatever." A large number of the dispossessed tenantry were sent to America; the remainder settled on the seashore, where they were cramped into small holdings, and have since lived. The tourist steaming along the wild coast of the western Highlands and islands may see perched on every cliff, in the most exposed situations and subject to the fury of Atlantic gales, the wretched hamlets that now contain the remnants of the Highland clans. Probably he will wonder how a population can at all manage to exist under such conditions. But there they are, elbowed to the very verge of their country. For large tracts of that country the proprietors even now can show no scrap of document, their claim to possess resting solely on the fact that it has never been contested. Created and looked upon, like the foxes, as mere vermin that interfere with sport, discouraged and thwarted in every direction, these people, notwithstanding their poverty and the hardships of their lot, have maintained unimpaired the noblest attributes of their race. Crime of any kind is almost unknown among them. Their moral standard is the highest in Britain, contrasting in that respect most remarkably with their lowland neighbors; and not a few of the leading British statesmen, lawyers, divines, and soldiers of the past eighty years first saw the light in these crofters' huts. Far behind the strip of inhabited littoral stretch the Blue mountains, the snug and often fertile glens from whence the clans were banished, now turned into silent wilderness, inhabited only by sheep and deer and an occasional shepherd or keeper. There are the vast tracts, rented by the American, Mr. Winans, as a hunting ground, to be visited by that alien for two or three months, and abandoned to solitude for the remainder of the year, where not even a native of the soil may plant his foot.

A Pitiful Sight.

What sadder sight can be imagined than that of a noble man, whom the world can ill-afford to spare, stricken down in the prime of a useful life by consumption. Thousands are yearly filling consumptives' graves who might be saved by the timely use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a positive cure for consumption in its early stages. It is the best alterative and pectoral in the world. All druggists.

EFFECTS OF THE COLD SNAP.

A report from Chicago, dated Feb. 11th, says: Mercury 18° below zero this morning, but reports from the Northwest indicate that the weather is moderating rapidly. Two trains only left Chicago for the East this morning. Roads to the south-east are still blocked, and a large number of passengers and freight trains are snow-bound. It is stated that thousands of cattle and hogs have been frozen to death in the abandoned trains. Eighty to one hundred tons of mail matter are delayed here.

With Satisfaction.

Polson's Nerviline, the new and certain pain cure, is used with satisfaction in every instance. There is abundant reason for this, for it performs all that is claimed for it. Nerviline is a never-failing cure for cramps, pains in the side or back, lumbago, sore throat, chilblains, toothache. Nerviline is in fact a sure remedy for all pains, both internal and external. Try a 10 cent sample bottle. Large bottles only 25 cents, by all druggists.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

"Hello, John, where are you boarding now?" asked one friend of another.

"Same old place," answered John.

"Indeed? I thought you were going to leave there."

"So I was, but you see I'm staying there now as an act of charity."

"Is your landlady hard up?"

"Oh, no, I am, and she trusts me when nobody else will."

An Important Discovery.

The most important discovery is that which brings the most good to the greatest number. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, will preserve the health and save life, and is a priceless boon to the afflicted. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, yield at once to its wonderful curative powers. If you doubt this, get a Trial Bottle Free at Taylor & McDonald's Drug store.

THE FIRST DIVISION.

The first division of the session in the Ontario Legislature, which was taken last night, shows that the Government is more than holding its own. In the first division, last year, the majority was 12; this session, the Ministry was sustained in the division on the South Simcoe case by 13, though Dr. Dowling was absent. The Tory leaders will no doubt be disgusted. Their chance of buying a majority is decidedly slimmer now than it was when Bunting and his fellow-conspirators began operations a year ago.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

The potential energy of the nervous system exists in the brain and other nerve ganglia in the form of a complex body, known as lecithin, derived from the fatty matter, nitrogen and phosphates in our food. In all forms of nervous debility prostration of the vital forces results from a failure of supply of this reserve force of the nerve centres, owing to indigestion and malassimilation. WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA will make up the deficiency, and no imitation nor substitute should be used in its place.

TWO STABBING AFFRAYS IN TORONTO.

Charles Walker, proprietor of a Bay street hotel, was stabbed in the left breast Wednesday night by Wm. Mallon, jeweller, whom he was endeavoring to eject from his house. The wound was inflicted with a jack-knife, and is considered dangerous. John Kirby, aged 17 years, while tobogganing in Shaw's grove with several other youths the same night, had a fight with another boy, who stabbed him in the left breast, penetrating the lung. The wound is very serious and fatal results are feared. The boy who stabbed him is unknown.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time, becomes, when left to itself, the fore-runner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Hickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps the formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough, heals the the diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption, and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Hickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

NEWSPAPER EARNINGS.

Estimates of the Wealth of the Publishers of New York.

Philadelphia papers must certainly pay better than New York papers, for the Philadelphia proprietors are a much wealthier set of men than the New York proprietors. James Gordon Bennett is the only millionaire among our newspaper men so far as I can discover, and yet millionaire newspaper proprietors in Philadelphia are as thick as huckleberries on a bush. Mr. Bennett's income is said to be $1,000,000, and I should not be surprised if it is more. It is fabulous, and I don't believe that even he knows what it is. Of course, there has been some inroads upon it since his fight with the newsdealers, which has cost him in round figures, about $300,000. But if he wins, as he seems likely to, he will soon get his money back.

Mr. Dana, of the Sun, is a rich man, but not a millionaire. His income taking his salary and his dividends from the paper, which is owned by a stock company, may reach a larger figure than the interest on a million or two; but his fortune cannot be estimated at as much capital. Still, he is rich enough, and it must cost him a great deal to live in the style that he does. Mr. George Jones, of the Times, is a wealthy man, and his income is also probably larger than that of some millionaires; but I do not believe that when he dies he will leave a property running into the millions. If Whitelaw Reid inherits any money from his father-in-law he will be a millionaire in time, but he is not now, though he has plenty of money. If I am not mistaken, his wife is the only daughter of D. O. Mills, and Mr. Mills' fortune is estimated at $30,000,000. Mr. Reid lives in the same house that he occupied as a bachelor, and it is quite good enough for anyone, no matter what his means. It is large and comfortable without any pretentions to style, and is on the corner of Lexington avenue and Thirty-fourth street.

Mr. Pulitzer, of the World, is not a wealthy man at all, though he makes a good deal of money by his papers, both the World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He lives very nicely in a house on Gramercy park, but if his income should stop to-day I do not believe that his capital would be found to be very large. His brother, Mr. Albert Pulitzer, the proprietor of the Morning Journal, has probably a few thousands invested in elevated railroad stock, and draws a good salary from the Morning Journal, but he is far from being a rich man, though the chances are that he will be one at no distant day.

The richest newspaper proprietor in New York, after Mr. James Gordon Bennett, is Mr. Cyrus W. Field, proprietor of the Mail and Express, but he did not make his money out of his paper. I do not know what Mr. Field's fortune is, but it runs pretty high up into the millions. He, however, cannot be called a newspaper proprietor in the ordinary sense. He owns the Mail and Express, but he has no more to do with the running of it than Jay Gould had with the running of the Tribune when he owned the controlling stock in that concern. John Kelly, who is the proprietor of the Star, is a rich man, but I have never heard that he was a millionaire. I don't believe that he makes a great deal of his money directly out of the Star, though indirectly it may be worth his while. Maurice Flynn is said to be the holder of the largest amount of stock in the Truth, and he is very well off for a young man, though I do not suppose that he has a very extensive capital. He makes a great deal of money, however, and, if he keeps on as he has begun will one day be a very rich man. He married the daughter of Theodore Moss, a man who began by selling tickets in the box office at Wallack's old theater, and who now owns the theater and Mr. Wallack, too, and is reputed to be worth millions.

The Evening Post, as is well known, is owned by a syndicate, which was first composed of three men—E. L. Godkin, Horace White, and Carl Schurz; but Mr. Schurz dropped out some time ago, and now the paper is owned between Mr. White and Mr. Godkin, neither of whom is a man of great wealth. Mr. Godkin, by the way, has been a bachelor up to within a few weeks, when he imitated the example of another bachelor journalist, Mr. W. H. Hurlbert, and married a young lady of means and accomplishments.

Mr. Parke Godwin, who owns the controlling interest in the Commercial Advertiser, is a wealthy man, but I do not believe that he is worth more than $500,000; $250,000 of this he put in a large building on the corner of Liberty and Nassau streets, which is called the Bryant building, and which brings him in about 10 per cent. on his money, and the other $250,000 he puts in the Commercial Advertiser. His son, Herold Godwin, who is with him, and on whose account he purchased the Commercial, is married to a young lady who is worth $2,000,000 in her own right. The Evening Telegram is owned by Mr. Bennett, and is said to pay him $75,000 a year clear profit. This is owing to the fact that it costs him very little to run it. The Herald plays into its hands, and it sometimes plays into the hands of the Herald, but it is oftener the other way.

The Evening News is owned by a very wealthy man, Mr. Benjamin Wood, the brother of the well-known Fernando Wood, and a man of large means. I think it very likely that he is a millionaire, and I know that he makes a very handsome thing out of the Evening News, which is a penny paper, with a circulation of 150,000 copies. The new evening paper, the Extra, hardly deserves mention among the established papers of New York, because it is run simply for campaign purposes, and will probably die a natural death after the campaign, and then it is only a side issue of the Tribune, and it is not likely that after the campaign funds give out the Tribune people will care to run the paper at a loss.—N. Y. Cor. Philadelphia Record.

There are queer superstitions about the moon among all peoples. The Hurons call it the creator of the earth and the grandmother of the sun. The Chiquitoes call the moon their mother, and the Navajos make it a rider on a mule. The Botucudos of Brazil ascribe most of the phenomena of nature to the moon; in which they are like the superstitious women of civilized Europe and America who wait for the increase of the moon to change their dwelling, to cut their hair, to be married and to baptize their children. A belief existed among the ancient Mexicans and Peruvians, the Natchez of the Mississippi and the Appalachians of Florida, that the sun was the radiant abode of dead chiefs and braves. To the Esquimaux belong the honor of having discovered that the moon was the paradise for the good, while the wicked were consigned to a hole in the earth.

His Wife Was Good to Him.

He had failed for half a million, and his assets would not pay 2 cents on the dollar. He gave up everything he had to satisfy his creditors, not even reserving the watch in his pocket. And yet they growled. An old friend called to see him. He met him at the depot with a $5,000 span of horses and conveyed him to a $200,000 residence, where he dined and wined him like a prince, on the finest of china and costliest of plate.

"Why, Jones," said his old friend, "I thought you had failed!"

"So I have—given up everything, absolutely everything, to my creditors, as an honest man should," replied the bankrupt, in a tone of self-abnegation.

"Why, you appear to be living pretty well," remarked the old friend.

"Ah, my dear sir, how mistaken you are!" returned the 2-cent-on-a-dollar failure. "Everything that you see is my wife's—absolutely everything. But she is too tender-hearted to deprive me of their use on account of my misfortune." Pittsburg Chronicle.

A Sabbatarian Hen.

Some months ago Mr. George Colton, favorably known as a breeder of poultry of the highest grade, presented to the young son of a friend a pair of white Seabright chickens of rare beauty in appearance. When taken to their new home, near the city boundary, one of the hens began to lay eggs, and has continued to do so without any intermission, except on Sundays, up to the present day. Every precaution and test has been used to discover if the aforesaid hen had in any way labored on the Sabbath day, but among the ten or twelve in the family it is the unanimous conviction that she observes the Sabbath in every way, as a Sabbatarian should. Her boy owner contends with all seriousness that the hen respects the Sabbath. He watches the chicken-house carefully, keeps it under lock and key, and finds an egg in the nest daily except on Sunday. His wonder is how Mr. Colton could have so trained his chicken in youth, so that when it became a hen she would not depart from it," and concludes it is the result of a good example. He cannot understand it any other way.—Baltimore American.

Washington Streets.

An excellent judge of such matters asserts that this city has gained more in outward appearance during the last half dozen years than it had before in half a century. It now has forty miles of better pavement than can be found in any other American town, and which compares favorably with any in Europe. This has made thorough street-sweeping practicable at small cost, and it results that, although the city is poorly supplied with water, it is little afflicted with dust, and is beginning to have a refreshingly clean aspect. Bordering these streets there now stands upward of one hundred thousand well-formed, nursery grown trees. Maples of several species are the more common, but there are representations (by the hundred) of at least six different genera. They are at present but club-headed saplings, hardly recovered from the shock of transplantation, or fairly settled in their new homes, and show none of the characteristic mature beauty of their several families. They have as yet, therefore, but little value except as promissory notes, their growth to be discounted. Nevertheless, seen as they constantly are in long perspectives of uniform mass and color, their effect on the city is absolutely transforming, and if all goes well with them Washington will in a few years be a new and glorified city—a capital that Americans may be proud of.

Bulldog and Pork.

Some time since a New England schooner was lying at the Rice Mill wharf, the captain of which was the owner of a ferocious bulldog, whose mouth watered at the sight of the tender-skinned colored people. Things were scattered about the deck of the vessel in a loose manner, and the major told the skipper that he should be careful or he would have some of the articles stolen. The latter laughed at the idea, and, pointing to his dog, said he would like to see any thief come aboard his vessel, adding that anyone who could take that half barrel of pork—pointing to one on the deck near the dog—was welcome to it. He was very emphatic as to the result of the visit, and apparently had in his mind's eye the chewed-up form of the would-be thief.

The major had noticed in the crowd a negro who had the reputation of being a very adroit thief, but who had never been caught—one of the kind that when cornered tells his brethren "dat de white man is bery 'spichus." Calling Sam to him he told him that the captain of the schooner would give the pork to anyone who would get it off the vessel. Sam eyed the vessel, the dog and the skipper. "For true, captain, you gse me de barrel if I take 'im?" The skipper said yes, he could have the barrel and its contents if he could get it without the dog catching him. The sun set in the west as usual, of course, and when it came up, according to Parson Jasper, on the other side in the morning, the barrel of pork had been spirited away. The dog was still pacing the quarter deck, with the air of having performed his duty, and looking probably even more defiant than usual.

As soon as the sun was well up in the sky Sam came poking along. The captain hailed him at once. "Say, you black rascal, you got the pork, did you?" "Oh, yes, sir; no trouble to do dat." "I will give you $10 to find out how you got it off the schooner right under the very nose of my dog," said the captain. "All right, captain; you put up de money, and I will tell you how I did um," replied Sam. The $10 was put up. "You see, Marse' Captain, I see your dog been lonesome; he been a long time from home, so I bring another dog, a little comrade like him, down wid me to play wid him. While de dogs run about de deck and jump on de wharf to get acquainted wid de selves, you see, I took de barrel." The captain said it was worth the pork and the $10 to learn the trick.—Savannah News.

Church Social.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Murray street Baptist Church will hold a church social at Mr. Lacey's residence, on Downey street, on Thursday evening, 5th instant, at 8 o'clock. The first part of the evening will be occupied by an excellent programme of instrumental and vocal music and recitations. Tea, coffee and cake will be served free. Oysters will be served at 10 cents the plate.

Too High Feed.

The seventeenth annual report of the Inspector of Prisons and Asylums shows that the daily cost of rations in Peterborough jail is 13¾ cents. Absolutely, this is cheap board, but compared to other counties it is pretty steep. The average cost in other counties is about 7½ to 8 cents per head per day. There are only three jails in the older and better settled counties that have a higher daily board bill per man than Peterborough. It must be that our feed is too high—that our prisoners and vags fare far more sumptuously than those of other counties. But men that work so hard as our reprobates, should have high feed.

Curling.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week the members of the law office of Messrs. Dumble & Henry took the curling measure of a legal syndicate, with the result of finding the measure six points short. These are the names of those composing the rinks, and the scores:

MESSRS. DUMBLE & HENRY'S LAW OFFICE.—Jas. Henry, A. Stevenson, J. H. Burnham, D. W. Dumble, skip—18.

THE LEGAL SYNDICATE.—G. W. Hatton, R. E. Wood, E. A. Peck, E. B. Edwards, skip—12.

Matrimonial.

We take from the Napanee Beaver the following in reference to the marriage of a citizen of this town, Mr. M. T. Ostrom:—"On Tuesday last, Mr. M. T. Ostrom, wholesale fruit dealer and commission merchant of Peterborough, was married to Miss Florence L., only daughter of Mr. Gilbert S. Casey, of Adolphustown. The ceremony was very quietly performed at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Andrews, West Napanee, in the presence of only intimate friends and relatives, owing to the fact that the family is in mourning, Rev. Mr. Harding, of Adolphustown, officiating. The bride is an amiable and accomplished young lady, and a general favorite with her acquaintances. The groom is very favorably spoken of as an enterprising young man. The bride was attired in a white corded silk costume, trimmed with white thread lace, and bridal veil to match. She was the recipient of a large number of beautiful and valuable presents, including a check for $7,000 from the groom. The newly-married pair left by the noon train for Baltimore on their wedding tour. We wish them a long and prosperous wedded life.

Saved Army Jubilee.

On Thursday (this) evening the Saved Army corps of Peterborough will celebrate the first anniversary of their descent on this town by holding a grand banquet and jubilee. Bradburn's Opera House will be used for the occasion. Tea and refreshments will be served from 5.30 to 7.30, after which a splendid programme will be begun. General Lindsay, Capt. Munt, Lindsay; Capt. Pigion, Cobourg; Capt. Clarke and Capt. Piper, Peterborough, will take part in the jubilee. A detachment of soldiers from Lindsay will be present and render some choice songs. The jubilee programme will be entered upon at eight o'clock. It is expected that there will be a large number present, not only from this town but from surrounding places, as fares on the Midland system have been reduced to return tickets for one fare. Admission, jubilee and banquet, 25 cents; children, 15 cents. Tickets for the jubilee, 15 cents. The sympathy, co-operation, assistance and presence of Christians is solicited to aid the Army in its Gospel work. Proceeds of the jubilee to be devoted towards furthering the work of the Army. Don't forget the date—to-night (Thursday); and the place, Bradburn's Opera House. Let there be a grand rally.

Woman's Words.

On Tuesday evening the Opera House was crowded to listen to an address on temperance by Miss Bowes, of Halton. Dr. Fife occupied the chair. The lectures dealt with the temperance subject generally and with the Scott Act in particular. Rev. Mr. Tovell and several ladies had seats on the platform.

A New Era in the Dry Goods Trade at the "Golden Lion."

This season's importation well worthy of your inspection. Fair VanEvery & Co. are daily opening their New Spring Goods for every Department. Their Grand Exhibit this season will surpass their former efforts and eclipse everything for Variety, Quality and Cheapness.

Force of the Frost.

The penetrating powers of the frost this winter are unprecedented. The service pipe from the water works mains on George street in front of the EXAMINER office, supplying the boiler, became frozen, and in thawing it out the workmen dug down and found solid frost in the earth at the depth of seven feet and a half.

Life, Love and Death.

The number of births, marriages and deaths registered with the Town Clerk for February are as follows: Births, 13; marriages, 4; deaths, 13. According to the returns our population is stationary, the births and deaths exactly corresponding; but the matrimonial statistics give ground for hope that the balance will ultimately be on the right side.

Home from the South.

Messrs. H. LeBrun, Jas. Dolan, D. J. Lundy and Hormidas Laplante have returned home from their excursion to New Orleans. They had a very pleasant trip and are kept busy recounting their adventures and experiences to their friends. It is not known how true the report is that a portion of the population of New Orleans is to be transferred to Peterborough, the bachelors of the party being prettyseverely smitten with the attractions of the captivating Creole charmers.

Longing for Spring.

The recent break in the six weeks' zero weather record has set more than one thinking of spring. The members of the boating clubs long for the open lake and river, the lacrosse boys are eager with hope of again cavorting on the "check"-ered field, and the cricketers more than dream of coming practice and matches. In fact Norley, the cricket club coach is in active training, taking six o'clock spins, and otherwise working up his muscle for the coming season, and a shy at the wickets.

Temperance Entertainment

Unity Lodge of Good Templars, recently organized, held its first entertainment in its lodge rooms on Thursday evening. A moderate attendance of auditors thoroughly enjoyed a very pleasing programme consisting of songs by Mr. J. G. French, Misses Glass, Hamacher and Dame, recitations by Mr. R. J. Sailsbury and Miss Annie King, a dialogue by Misses Dame, Glass and Crowley, and readings by Misses Grundy, Chrow and Mr. W. G. Philips.

"In Memoriam."

On Thursday evening last Mr. L. E. Horning, B. A., lectured on Tennyson's "In Memoriam," in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. The attendance was fair. Dr. Fife occupied the chair. The speaker introduced his subject by stating that Tennyson's poetry embodied the scientific cast of thought characteristic of the age. Scientific allusions, couched in the most beautiful and graceful language, abounded in Tennyson's poems. A high tribute was paid to the beauty of language and nobility of thought of the Laureate's poems. An analysis of "In Memoriam" followed, in which the varying phases of the poet's feelings as modified by time and the circumstances, consequent on the loss of his friend, Arthur Hallam, were clearly and cleverly set forth. His interpretation of the spirit of this most beautiful poem gave new light and delight even to those who had read it many times. The criticism, varied with recitations of the most striking passages, occupied an hour and a half. At the close of the lecture a vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer.

A Credit to the Collegiate Institute.

"About four months ago the publishers of the School Supplement offered $600 in prizes for the best set of examples in arithmetic—the whole subject having been divided into convenient departments. This offer was made known to about a quarter of a million teachers. We note with pleasure, says the Lindsay Post, that Mr. Michael O'Brien, headmaster of the Lindsay separate school, has carried off a first-prize in this competition. The number of competitors was 955. The number of first-prize winners was 33, and included distinguished professors of universities, mathematicians and educationists in America, Canada and Great Britain. Mr. O'Brien submitted a list of questions which will be embodied in a new work on arithmetic to be issued by the publishers of the School Supplement." It is pleasant to know that Mr. O'Brien's success reflects credit on the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, where he was educated during the time of Messrs Dixon and Jeffers. He was at one time a teacher in the Murray street separate school here.

FUN ON WHEELS.

Opening of the New Roller Skating Rink.

On Monday evening the new Roller Skating Rink, on Water street, was formally opened to the public and dedicated to the exciting practice of lignum rite locomotion. The rink occupies the second floor of a large building on Water street, erected specially for the purpose, and it may, therefore, be considered to combine the latest improvements and possess all the facilities for the practice of the art of roller skating, in the first degree. The area of the rink is 100x40 feet. The room is handsomely finished. The ceiling, which is of matched pine, finished in oil, is supported down the centre by a row of light birch columns and is also provided with proper ventilating shafts. The floor, the essential part, is of the very best possible construction. It is laid with narrow planks of thoroughly seasoned maple, and is as smooth and level as mechanical skill can make it. The joints are exceedingly substantial, and with fifty skaters whirling rapidly there is no perceptible jar. However, when some 180 lb. acolyte in the art performs the sudden sedentary "movement," a slight vibration may result. The floor was laid at a cost of about $600, and the expense was not misdirected, for there is not a better surface for roller skating anywhere in Canada. The room is well lighted by windows in front and rear. At the west end two handsome dressing rooms are made, between which in the counter where skates are let. Over the entrance stairway a band stand has been erected, and along the walls seats are placed for the accommodation of spectators. The skates used, and supplied by the management, are of the best manufacturer and are essentially composed of four wheels of lignum vite, upon which is placed the plate for the reception of the foot, which is secured to it by straps. The skates add about an inch and a half to the height of the wearer. Those who have used the roller skates assert that they are not so tiresome on the ankles as ice skates.

On Monday evening the rink presented a gay scene. The room was beautifully decorated with flags and Chinese lanterns down the central range of gasaliers and on the walls were tastefully arranged trophies of Dominion flags. There was a large attendtendance of spectators and the floor was filled with skaters, the supply of skates—over fifty pairs—having been entirely utilized. It seems surprising that skaters who had only tried the rollers once or twice could skate with so much ease and grace. The roller skates are, however, easy to learn on, and persons used to steel skates can become accomplished roller skaters inside of half an hour. The tumbles are not more frequent than on ice, and not a whit more dangerous. There is no doubt roller skating will become popular in Peterborough. The fine rink at command, kept comparatively warm, will be pleasant to those who seek exercise without exposure to cold.

During the evening the City Band orchestra furnished excellent music, and in every way the success of the opening night must be conceded.

The rink is under capable and careful management and every effort will be made to make patronage of it delightful and agreeable. The rink will be open in the mornings from 9.30 to 12; in the afternoons from 2.30 to 5.30, and in the evenings from 7 to 10. The prices of admission have been fixed at 15 cents each for gentlemen, and ten cents for ladies and children. Skates will be rented at 10 cents each pair for the evening, and at 5 cents per pair in the afternoons and mornings.

Where can you do business so well as at Turnbull's? In his extensive establishment will be found fresh Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths, Lace Curtains, Cretonnes, Cotton Goods from the best Canadian manufacturers, Scotch, Irish and Canadian Tweeds, French and English Dress Goods and Trimmings, Silks, Satins, Velvets, Plushes, Laces, Feathers, etc. His efficient staff of Tailors, Mantle Makers, and Milliners pride themselves in sending out well finished work.

A Big Boon to Housekeepers.

As the season approaches for the commencement of the annual house-cleaning carnival, the terror of moving pianos seizes the housewife. The latter, however, will be cheered by the information that Mr. D. Smart has imported an improved truck for moving pianos, by the help of which, two men can move a piano upstairs, or down, or anywhere, with great ease and rapidity. The truck consists of a padded platform for the reception of the instrument. This rests on two sets of small wheels at the end of two frames which elevate the platform about two feet from the ground. In putting a piano on a cart, it is rolled on the platform; one end of the truck is then raised to rest on the cart. The supports of the platform with their wheels, are then folded, so that the height of the truck is reduced to the diameter of the wheels—about four inches. The piano and truck are then slid on to the cart, and the wheels locked by a simple brake, and the piano rides steadily. The rear end of the platform of the truck is provided with a padded standard the height of the breadth of the piano. In moving the instrument up a stairway, the wheels can be so arranged that one step holds the piano while it is being moved to another. There is no danger of accidents, and two men will easily and expeditiously take the heaviest piano up any stairs. In narrow passages the truck containing the piano can easily be placed on end and thus turned in any direction. The truck is an admirable device, and being well padded whereever the piano touches, there is not the slightest danger of scratching or marking. With this truck in use, all a housewife has to do, is to send to D. Smart, and two men will move her piano quietly and quickly, thus saving the necessity of filling her house with half a dozen navvies, planks and ropes, as under the old method. Any one requiring a piano moved, should call at Mr. Smart's warerooms; a moment's inspection of the truck will convince her, and she will be sure to secure its use. It is the finest device of the kind ever invented.

Canadian Contingent's Home Coming.

On Wednesday morning the Canadian contingent to Egypt, consisting of 200 men, arrived safely at Halifax. The Peterborough party consists of Messrs. W. H. Anderson, Thos. Hanson, M. Matheson, J. M. Mowry, W. H. Lowry, A. Ross, N. Harris, A. Bradshaw, P. Phalen, J. Welsh, J. Gorman and John White. Messrs. J. A. Sherlock and Sidney Blade volunteered to remain behind with Gen. Wolseley's force in Egypt, and John Faulkner was drowned in the Nile on December 9th. Up to the hour of going to press it is not known when the Peterborough party will arrive. The committee appointed by the town council have, we understand, made the following arrangements for the reception of our boys. The members of the town council, the Fire Brigade, the Fire Brigade and City Bands, will form a deputation to meet the voyageurs at the station and escort them to town, and the boys will be treated to a banquet to be served by Mr. R. N. Roddy in the roller skating rink.

Pulpit Amenities.

On Sunday evening next the ministers of the town will exchange pulpits, which will be filled on that occasion as follows:—Rev. Mr. Munro will preach in the George-street Methodist Church; Rev. Mr. Torrence in Charlotte-street Methodist Church; Rev. Mr. Tovell in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church; Rev. Mr. Manning in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Mr. Bell in the Murray-street Baptist Church.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Steet. 18-tf

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The regular meeting of the Board of Education was held on Tuesday night. Present, Messrs. Stevenson, chairman, Sawers, Stratton, Weir, Rutherford, Deane, Errett, Millar and Dumble.

INQUIRIES.

After routine

Mr. Rutherford asked how far the Principal of the Collegiate Institute was allowed to go in the way of discipline. He stated that the principal had excluded the children from the school buildings for a long time in very cold weather; that he had told children that they were not telling the truth, and that he punished the pupils unduly. He moved that the matter be referred to the Committee on School Supervision.

Dr. Tassie denied the statements—Mr. Rutherford had been misinformed.

Mr. Stratton said that discipline had been so lax heretofore that proper discipline would seem unduly severe.

Mr. Weir inquired if there was any principle adopted for temporarily filling the place of teachers taken ill. No substitute should be allowed except with the concurrence of the principal.

Mr. Stratton thought the matter should be referred to the School Supervision Committee.

COMMUNICATIONS

were received:

From Ada Graham, asking increase of salary.—Committee on appointments.

—From Secretaries of several Boards in reference to memorializing the Government.

From George Tighe, janitor, asking increase of salary—Committee on Appointments.

From Mr. Beatty, calling attention to the defaced desks in room No. 9, central school.—Property Committee.

From Dr. Tassie, reporting that the number of pupils on the roll of the Collegiate Institute for February was 136, and the average attendance 120.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The average attendance in the public schools for February was as follows:

	On Roll.	Av'g Att.
Central School	736	552
South Ward School	183	148
West Ward School	160	128
	1091	798

From the Department of Education, stating that the request of the Board to make the Inspector one of the entrance examiners, would be attended to.

From R. P. Boucher and others, asking the Board to make Friday afternoon next a half holiday to permit pupils to attend the children's skating carnival.—No action taken.

The chairman informed the Board that the teacher of drawing was ill, and that the subject being obligatory for entrance examinations, some arrangements should be made, and also that Mr. Bell had been employed to teach book-keeping in the Institute two or three days in the week.

SCHOOL FEES.

The treasurer reported that he had received on account of fees—from the public schools, $14; from the Collegiate Institute, $76.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

Mr. Stratton, inspector, made his monthly report, chiefly referring to defects in school furniture.—Referred to the Property committee with instructions to put in new seats where found necessary.

SCHOOL SUPERVISION.

Mr. Stratton, chairman, presented the report of the committee, which was adopted as follows:

The committee on School Supervision beg leave to report:

That according to instructions of this Board, your committee requested the three Bookstores of the Town, to put in tenders for the Stationery supplies for our Schools, for the ensuing year, which they accordingly did.

On comparing such tenders, your committee found that on the average the tenders were about equal in price, and your committee deemed it advisable to divide the stationery requisite as equitably as possible among the several tenders which they accordingly did.

As per instructions your committee wrote the Principal of the South Ward School, complaining of the uncleanliness of some of the children, to which attention was directed by the Inspector. He promised to give the matter his attention.

Your committee also wrote the chairman of the Board, with regard to his seeing that the janitors properly cleaned the ink wells once a week, viz on Saturday.

As to that portion of the report relegating the buying of Ink wells, to this committee; your committee thinking that it more properly came under the duties of the Property committee, referred the matter to them.

The tenders for Stationery, with copies of correspondence referred to, you will find attached.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. R. STRATTON,
Chairman S. S., Committee.

Mr. Millar, chairman, presented the report of the Finance committee, which was adopted as follows:

Your Finance committee beg leave to report that the several accounts referred to your committe at the last regular meeting have been considered by them, and that they have authorized your treasurer to make payment of the following accounts as found correct:—Trustees of S. S. No. 11, Douro, $12.25; Review Printing Co., publishing treasurer's statement, $8.34; Times Printing Co., publishing treasurer's statement, $8.33; J. R. Stratton, publishing treasurer's statement, $8.33. Your committee had under consideration the following claims, left over by the committee of last year, and after duly considering the circumstances in connection with them, recommended that the same be paid: J. Coyle Brown, fee as examiner, $23.75; A. Hutchinson, fee as examiner, $17.00; J. Davidson, fee as examiner, $8.50.

Your committee also report that they have made arrangements with the manager of the Ontario Bank for the necessary advances required by the Board for the current year in such sums as may be found necessary; for which the bank will keep an open account, at 6 per cent. interest. This arrangement your committee think in every way advantageous.

In regard to the application of Mr. Coleman for an increase of salary your committee would recommend that the matter be dealt with by the committee on Appointments, as the proper committee to deal with all salaries.

M. MILLAR,
Chairman.

TEACHERS' SUBSTITUTES.

Mr. Stratton moved, seconded by Mr. Weir, that the secretary of the Board be requested to call the attention of all teachers to rule 60, of the Rules of this Board, and request their strict compliance therewith, and that all rules referring to the duties of teachers be printed and distributed among them.—Carried.

Mr. Dumble moved, seconded by Mr. Errett, that the Property committee be instructed to provide two earth closets for the use of the teachers at the Central school.

NEW COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE BUILDINGS.

Mr. Dumble, in alluding to the motion of which he gave notice at a previous meeting, respecting new buildings for the Collegiate Institute, emphasized the necessity of them, and he moved, seconded by Mr. Errett, that in the opinion of this Board it is desirable to erect a building for the exclusive use of the Collegiate Institute, and that such building be placed in a central position, and to be completely removed from the precincts of the Public school, or that the present large Central school be exclusively used for Collegiate Institute purposes.—Motion carried on the following division:

YEAS—Messrs. Dumble, Errett, Rutherford, Weir, Stratton and Millar.—6.

NAYS—Messrs. Deane and Sawers.—2.

Mr. Dumble gave notice that he would at the next meeting introduce a motion with a view of entirely separating the High and Public schools.

English Literature Questions.

We regret to state that the copy of Mr Earl's "Questions in English Literature" came in too late for this issue.

A PLEASANT PRESENTATION.

Presentation to Mr. D. D. Galletly, Leader of St. Paul's Choir.

On Wednesday evening of last week Mr. D. D. Galletly, leader of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church Choir, received a delightful surprise from the members of that organization. About nine o'clock they invaded Mr. Galletly's home, much to his surprise. But he was not long kept in suspense; Miss Dawson, the youngest member of the choir, advanced and read the following

ADDRESS:

Mr. D. D. Galletly:

DEAR SIR,—We the members of St. Paul's Church Choir wish to express our feelings of good will towards you. We also desire to show our appreciation of your faithful efforts as leader, and therefore we present you with this our token. Our sincere prayer for you is:—"The Lord bless thee and keep thee: the Lord make His face shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee: the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace."

The address was accompanied by the presentation on behalf the choir, by Miss Douglass, of a handsome pair of gold spectacles. The surprise of the visit and the evidences of kindly feeling deeply moved Mr. Galletly, who, however, recovered himself and made the following

REPLY:

My dear associates in singing the praise of Zion, your kind words and useful present have completely taken me by surprise. I cannot find words adequate to convey to you how keenly I feel and appreciate the interest you have manifested by your present action in this slight infirmity that has come upon me, viz: my eyesight becoming impaired. As long as I live I shall ever remember this loving kindness, and as you have ministered to my outward vision by these beautiful gold spectacles, so likewise have you lit up my heart with affection's rays towards you all, that no opposing cloud shall ever obscure. I trust that the good fellowship that has ever in the past existed between us will always continue, whatever changes may take place in the present revolving musical kaleidoscopic opinions of St. Paul's. And when our pilgrimage is over, and Zion's songs on earth are ended, may we who have so often sung together the praises of our Redeemer, join with the redeemed above in singing the ever-new song, free from all sin, free to soar with strong seraphic pinion to heights and depths of adoration we cannot in this temple of clay conceive of, is the sincere prayer of yours in Zion's songs.

D. D. GALLETLY.

Mr. Galletly is well-worthy of the graceful honor his associates in the musical service of St. Paul's have done him. He is an able and ardent musician, and is always willing to devote his exceptional musical talents to the promotion of the services of the church or the general public.

Turnbull has added to his business a Children's and Youth's Ready-Made Department. He has bought nothing but pure Wool Goods, well made and lined.

PICTURESQUE CANADA.

THE EXAMINER Book-bindery has received numerous private commendations for the excellence of its work which has given invariable satisfaction, and we publish below the hearty endorsations by the press, of public opinion on the work finished for different publishers:

EXCEEDINGLY WELL BOUND.

The Cobourg World speaks after this manner:—"We have received from Mr. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER bindery, our two volumes of Picturesque Canada. They are exceedingly well bound, in half morocco, with gilt edges, and appropriately embellished sides. We have seldom seen better specimens of binding; and if all Mr. Stratton's work is like that, THE EXAMINER bindery will not fail for want of patronage."

CANNOT BE SURPASSED

We clip the following from the Port Hope Times. It speaks for itself: "Some time ago we entrusted our numbers of Picturesque Canada to Mr. J. R. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER, to bind, and expected they would be fairly well bound, as Mr. Stratton does everything well he undertakes. On Tuesday last, we had the two volumes returned to us, and we were surprised at the excellent workmanship, which could not be surpassed by any establishment in the Dominion. Those of our readers, who have not yet given their numbers into the hands of the binder, cannot do better than send them to Mr. Stratton, whose prices are low, and the work we are sure will please every one. The covers, lettering and gilding are a fitting and creditable accompaniment to the magnificent typography of the work. Mr. Stratton will pay the express charges both ways on all orders from Port Hope."

FIRST CLASS IN EVERY PARTICULAR

The West Durham News, Bowmanville, thus speaks:—"Parties in this vicinity wanting Picturesque Canada bound, should leave their orders at this office. We have had ours very neatly bound, in gilt, at the EXAMINER Bookbindery, Peterborough, at nearly one half less than the rates charged in other places for the same work. The job is first-class in every particular and is a credit to the Bindery. Samples can be seen at this office."

EXCEEDINGLY HANDSOME.

Exceedingly handsome books are the Picturesque Canada bound for the proprietor of The Post at THE EXAMINER book bindery Peterborough. The book is in two volumes, black Russia leather, cloth and gilt edges. THE EXAMINER bindery is just now making a specialty of this class of work in addition to all other lines of commercial binding. The books were examined by a large number and all were very much pleased with the appearance and evident thoroughness with which the work had been executed.

Concert of Male Voices.

On Monday evening, there was a fair audience to listen to the concert of male voices in the Y.M.C.A. hall. The programme consisted of choruses, quartettes, (Messrs. Williams, Millar, Hill and Stephens,) and a solo by Mr. L. E. Horning. Messrs. A. W. Jones, F. W. Scott, F. Werden and W. Beatty, contributed readings. Mr. J. D. Collins filled the chair, and the concert was, musically, a very pleasant success.

Medical and Surgical Emergencies.

Dr. Clarke will lecture on the above subject in the Y. M. C. A. Hall this (Thursday) evening at 8 o'clock. Much information, valuable in cases of accidents etc., will be given in the lecture. Many lives might be saved when accidents happen if the victims themselves, or the bystanders knew what to do while waiting for the surgeon. The lecture will include treatment in case of wounds and fractures, antidotes for poison, and will tell what to do in other emergencies. Every one is invited to attend. The admission fee will be ten cents.

New Blood Infused.

The dry goods and clothing business of Messrs. T. Dolan & Co. has, for several years, been sailing along serenely, well in the front line of the mercantile fleet, with Mr. John Corkery as head bookkeeper and confidential clerk, at the counting room helm. Now we are pleased to see that Mr. Corkery takes his place at the "officers' mess," having been admitted to partnership in the firm. This fact, however, will not probably make much change, for Mr. Corkery worked as diligently and as zealously as a salaried official of the firm as he possibly can do as a member of it. His admission to the firm is, however, a recognition of long and faithful service, which has contributed, in no mean degree, to the remarkable success the establishment has achieved.

PERSONAL.

Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P., was a guest at the the Lieut.-Governor's dinner at Government House, Toronto, last Thursday.

At the annual meeting of the Dominion Grange, in Toronto, last week, Mr. Dawson Kennedy was elected Grand Lecturer.

At the annual meeting of the Western Insurance Company, held in Toronto last week, Geo. A. Cox, Esq., was elected a member of the Board of Directors.

Mr. H. W. Watson, D.H.C.R. of the Canadian Order of Foresters was in Lindsay on Friday night making preliminary arrangements for the organization of a court of the order in that place, to be called Court Valentine. Between thirty-five and forty have presented themselves for medical examination, among whom is the Mayor of the town.

Boating Club Movements.

The Peterborough Boating Club is making arrangements for holding a joint meet with the Lindsay Canoe Club, at Sturgeon Point, on May 24th, and also to secure the presentation here of the Operetta, "Gertrude," by the Lindsay amateurs. The date has been fixed for Wednesday, April 8th.

Cathedral Mission.

A mission, to last a fortnight, began at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday last. Two Jesuit fathers will be present throughout, and the daily order of services will be as follows: Mass at 6 and 10 a.m., followed by religious instruction, an afternoon service at 3 o'clock, and an evening service at 7 o'clock, when a sermon will be preached—every evening.

KEENE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The wild winds blow,
And the feathery snow
Flies on amain,
O'er hill and plain,
And into the house goes dog and kitten.
While we stand holding our nose in our mitten.

Keen and cold, wild and windy; come get us a cup of tea, Belindy; for just as we write the most blustery snowstorm of the season so far is upon us, and you know in these Scott Act times we dare not even look at the cratur.

H. H. Burnham, Esq., of Port Hope, favored us with a visit this week.

Mr. Walter Scott, of Asphodel, also paid us a visit on Monday.

Mr. John Dickson's familiar face and form are to be seen once more among us. He is over on a visit from Burnley, where he now lives and labors. The air of Burnley must be pure, and the people kind, for we never saw him looking better.

Mrs. Dr. Massie is at Colborne on a visit to her friends there.

We understand that Archibald Shearer, of Otonabee, intends soon to move west, finding rest for the sole of his foot and a home in Old Uncle Sam's domains. John Borland, of this place, also intends to go with him as far as Chicago. May every blessing be theirs, and good luck follow them to the land of their adoption.

Mr. Birdsall's saw mill was burned down some time about 12 o'clock last Sunday night. The fire is supposed to have originated about the furnace. The mill was situated on the north shore of Rice lake, near its eastern extremity, where it converges into the Trent river. As yet we have not heard the particulars, but the accident, no doubt will be a great inconvenience to the neighborhood, and a serious loss to Mr. F. Birdsall.

Eli Perkins lectured in Colborne last Friday evening, and we had the pain of hearing him. His subject was "The Philosophy of Laughter," but the thing as a mental effort was an utter failure. He must have held his audience in low estimation to dish up such stuff to them. In a word, his humor was vulgarity, his wit mere Yankee exaggeration, and his philosophy shallow, one-sided and sophistical. Farewell, Eli!

There are philosophers in these parts at present. Compensation for Scott Act interference seems to be the most fruitful theme. Some favor it, many more oppose it and say, if the floodgates of compensation are to be opened in behalf of the hotel keepers and wealthy manufacturers, then the retailers, dealers, and manufacturers must compensate the hundreds and thousands of women and children who, through no act of their own, but through this system, have been and are impoverished, wretched and in want. And yet some good people who see no harm in it, wonder at us because we dare interfere with one of God's good creatures. They forget that the grain as it grows is God's good creature, and that not till man destroys and perverts it does it become the agent of evil.

HARVEY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The Harvey Council met at the Clerk's Office on the 2nd of March, all present, minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed. Communication read, from the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health urging the necessity of appointing health officers in Harvey. Application read, from trustees of new School Section No. 8 for the Council to pass a by-law authorising a loan to build a school house, and to issue debentures for $650 to be paid in six annual instalments, by levy upon the said section.

A by-law was passed appointing Health officers for the current year. The auditors report on township accounts for 1884 was received and adopted, and the clerk instructed to procure the usual quanity of printed copies for distribution.

A by-law was passed appointing overseers of highways, fence viewers, pound keepers, and deputy returning officers for the current year. Accounts passed and orders drawn on the treasurer for payment viz, James Coons Deputy Returning Officer, $5.00; Arthur Dewduey, Deputy Returning Officer, $5.00; Angus McMartin, Deputy Returning Officer, $15.00; charity granted to George Reynard, $8.80; F. Pero for keeping Robert Johnson, $8.00; Mrs. Robt. Johnson, $5.00. On motion N. Crowe was appointed to count the stumps of timber cut by trespassers on the road allowances in Harvey, also to post notices forbidding any person to cut timber of any description on the road allowances, without liberty from the Harvey Council so to do. On motion a deputation from the Verulam Agricultural Society, was heard, they requested a grant to assist in building a hall. Consideration of the request was laid over to the next meeting of the council. The Council adjourned to meet at the Town Hall on the 16th of March, 1885.

To break up colds and fevers, use early Dr. Pierce's Extract of Smart-Weed.

WEATHER NOTES.

February of '85 I believe has been the coldest on record. On the morning of the 2nd, the thermometer fell to 27° and on the 6th again to 28° and on the 12th to 24°. Nineteen times, either at sun-rise or sunset, it was below zero. During the first half of the month the degrees above and below were nearly equal, the total being 344 above, while that below was 228° which only leaves a balance of 116° for the highest, which, being divided by 2 and 28 makes the average for the month 2° and 2-28. The mildest day was on the 25th the thermometer at sun-set standing at the freezing point. Snow fell on 12 days to the depth of 16 inches and 6-10 of an inch. Rain only made its appearance once and that slightly on the ninth. We had fog and white frost on the 25th and 26th. On the afternoon of the 23rd was seen the prettiest sight around the sun, consisting of sun dogs to the number of eight, their sides being both concave and convex and of brilliant rainbow color. Seldom is the like to be seen. Nothing as yet to remind us of spring has made its appearance, even the ever-returning crow has failed to pay us a visit during the month. The following has been the number of days from the respective points from which the wind was blowing at sunrise namely,—south 3, southwest 6, northwest 6, west 3, east 7, southeast 2, north 1.

BENSFORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

At a meeting held on the 5th inst., called by the reeve, Mr. J. Riddell, at the request of a number of ratepayers of South Monaghan, to consider the proposal of the County Council of Peterborough with reference to building a bridge over the Otonabee river, also the expediency or otherwise of annexing the Gore of Hamilton township with South Monaghan, the township was well represented, which showed at least, together with discussions at issue, that no little interest is felt towards increasing its importance, which is now a byword in common parlance.

With the usual popular vote the reeve was elected chairman of the meeting. A friendly discussion then took place on the new bridge question, opened by remarks from the chairman, who stated briefly particulars of an interview with the Peterborough County Council last summer, had by a deputation from South Monaghan, giving emphasis to the remark that said council spoke favorably of assisting in constructing a new bridge, on a site affording more facility in travelling, after considering carefully the present inconvenience of the township and the general public. The possibility of having the use of two bridges was talked of, which was apparently, under existing circumstances, considered to be rather doubtful, but was supported by several, the drift of whose argument appeared to be, if we cannot have two bridges let us be satisfied with the old one at Wallace Point. The advisability of joining Peterborough County for municipal purposes was then spoken of, also of borrowing a sum of money to aid in constructing a new bridge. Finally the following resolution was adopted, That there be no action taken at present by South Monaghan to join the County of Peterborough, but that there be a deputation appointed to attend the next meeting of the County Council at Cobourg, along with the reeve, to ask a grant towards building a new bridge across the river at or near the original Rosa's bridge. The above mentioned resolution was considered a necessary preliminary on the ground that the question of thus aiding our township had not yet been properly submitted to the Counties' Council. It was then decided that the reeve name a deputation to attend and present matters to the Counties' Counties' Council accordingly. And the names, which include those of the township council, were made known to the meeting.

The next in order, the annexation of the Gore of Hamilton township, was taken up, and, though the meeting opened about three o'clock p. m., it was thought by some that lateness of the evening would prevent arriving at satisfactory conclusions regarding it. However, the chairman asked for reasons to be given either for or against the proposal, which resulted in a somewhat animated discussion, the reasons for being that assistance would be rendered to improve the gravel road at the Gore, and also that school sections would be made stronger in that part of the township. Reasons given against were that there would be necessarily increased expenditure to make the roads of the Gore of Hamilton compare fairly with those of South Monaghan, and that the Gore was not looked upon generally as a valuable addition to the township. The meeting dispersed about seven o'clock.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met in Warsaw Feb. 28th, 1885. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The reeve was instructed to sign and forward an order to Elias Ferguson for $50, on receiving from Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Buck a sufficient guarantee from any further costs in respect of w. hf 18 in 9th con.

After council had checked the auditors' reports, it was moved by Mr. King, seconded by Mr. Kelly, that the auditors' reports of the treasurer's accounts of 1884 be received and adopted, that the clerk cause the abstract to be published, and 200 copies of the detailed statement.

Orders were granted to Duncan Ferguson, for keep of Alex. Slaven, $7.40; Edward McIlvena, as auditor, $5; Benj. James, jr., as auditor, $5.

Council adjourned, to meet in Warsaw, March 28th, 1885.

The extraordinary popularity of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the natural result of its use by intelligent people for over forty years. It has indisputably proven itself the very best known specific for all colds, coughs, and pulmonary complaints.

Gilbert Laird, St. Margaret's Hope, Orkney, Scotland, writes: "I am requested by several friends to order another parcel of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. The last lot I got from you having been tested in several cases of rheumatism, has given relief when doctors' medicines have failed to have any effect. The excellent qualities of this medicine should be made known, that the millions of sufferers throughout the world may benefit by its providential discovery.

GAME PROTECTION.

A public meeting was held in Leonard's Hall on Wednesday evening, the 4th inst, to consider the bill now being introduced in the Local Legislature for the better protection of game. Mr. Geo. Strickland was elected chairman and Mr. F. Barlee secretary. A copy of the bill was read to the meeting. The clause which proposed a license of $2.00 on all but farmers; the prevention of shooting ducks etc., after sundown and before daybreak and the power given to inspectors to search private houses for game, were considered the objectionable features of the bill.

A game society was formed, Mr. R. C. Strickland president, Mr. John Baladon secretary, and Messrs. T. Gordon, John Richardson, and R. Hill, committee. A resolution was moved and adopted that the society should prepare a petition, protesting against the bill as unjust and unnecessary, obtain signatures, and forward to the House of Assembly.

WATER WORKS.

A public meeting was held in Leonard's Hall on Thursday evening to receive the report of the committee appointed to obtain information as to cost of a scheme of water works for fire protection. Mr. W. J. Wallace chairman and Wm. Caldwell, secretary.

The secretary read the report of committee; They had received as definite information as possible. A system, extending from the raceway to St. John's church and across the bridge to Caroline street, also a 4 inch pipe as far as R. and G. Strickland's mill with eight hydrants etc., complete, would cost $4,500 to $5000.

A motion was then made that the question of water works be dropped. An amendment was made that in view of the information received, in the opinion of this meeting it is advisable that a system of water works be constructed for fire protection. The amendment carried. Some discussion then took place as to the amount the fire limit should pay and those outside of the limits, after which Mr. James Wood moved, seconded by Mr. Samuel Henderson, that this meeting recommends the council to submit a by-law, not to exceed $5,000, and so that those within the fire limit pay in ratio of ¾ of the rate on the dollar and those without the limit ¼ of the rate on the dollar.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the committee after which the meeting adjourned

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met on Monday evening last, members all present. The auditors' report was received. The collector's bond was accepted and ordered to be handed to the village treasurer for safe keeping. A resolution was passed appointing Mr. Isaac Garbutt and Mr. James Moore a deputation from Lakefield to wait (with other deputations) on the Minister of Public Works for the Trent Valley Canal. A communication was received from Mr. Joseph Trotter and John Moore asking Albert street to be opened across the railway track to Charles street. Consideration deferred. An account of Mr. Isaac Watson, $5.40, was passed. The minutes of a public meeting held on the 5th inst. in Leonard's Hall were read. The minutes contained, a resolution recommending the council to submit a by-law to raise $5,000 for the construction of water works. The necessary steps are to be taken for preparing the by-law for next meeting of the council. A resolution was passed that Mr. D. Smith, having obtained the necessary legal advice re the exchange of that part of Concession street from Caroline street to the river, the clerk be authorized to prepare the necessary by-law etc., Mr. Smith to pay expenses. The Reeve mentioned that he thought the county would object. The council adjourned.

FIRE.

While the council was sitting a messenger came in with the report that councillor Moore's house was on fire. There was quite a rush and a good long run, when it was found to be the chimney, the house having filled with smoke from a stove pipe hole.

CONCERTS.

There is to be a concert this (Thursday) evening in the P. C. A. Hall under the auspices of the C. P. Church. There is an excellent programme and a special treat for those who avail themselves of the opportunity. A number from Peterborough are to take part.

On the 20th inst Miss Clark gives a concert in the same place. Mr. Hull takes the chair.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

Rev. Mr. Clark of the C. P. Church was the happy recipient of a very pleasent and unexpected surprise in the form of a beautiful gold watch and pencil which were presented on the evening of the 5th inst, by the members of the Sunday School of which he is the superintendent. The presentation was made by Mr. Shields and an appropriate address read by Miss Duff. Mr. Clark replied with a good deal of feeling thanking them heartily for the expression of good feeling which they had tendered him in such an unexpected manner.

FRASERVILLE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On Wednesday evening, March 4th, Miss Maggie Madill became the wife of Mr. Thos. Bowles ceremony performed by Rev. W. Benuett, pastor of Springville church. A number of the very near relatives of bride and groom, together with three or four of the bride's associates were present. All enjoyed themselves remarkably well. The bride received a number of beautiful presents. Our sincere desire is, that they may be long spared to enjoy each other's company.

It is whispered about that the "General Improving Society" intend holding a concert in about 3 weeks. Judging from reports and talent, &c., we conclude it will be something of the No. one sort.

The grandest entertainment ever given in the vicinity, was on Friday, March 6th, in Fraserville Methodist church, under the auspices of L. O. Lodges, No's. 46 and 50. The house was literally packed from door to pulpit, and all apparently enjoyed themselves. The Rev. Dr. Smithett's lecture was indeed worth hearing: and many who think that the Orange Society is of no benefit in Canada and should not be, because of the dissension and strife it is likely to keep up are now convinced that the Orange Society fills an important place in the greatest empire in the world. The Society always took an active part in accomplishing that which had for its aim, "Love to Country" or "True Patriotism," and as it has done, so is it doing, and we have every reason to believe it will do much more in the future. Many people think that the British Empire, will, through time decay as did Rome, Greece and other places—but we sincerely believe, so long as Britain remains true to the Orange Color, just as long will she stand; therefore, it is the duty of every sane person to respect and not only respect, but to do all in their power to assist such a noble cause. Rev. T. Manning was expected, but owning to the very severe illness of his father, he found it impossible to be with us. The former part of the concert was entirely in the hands of our friends from Millbrook, and the Misses Hutchings of Fraserville. The singing by Messrs. Anderson and Gillott, was very suitable and well received. Master Charles Gillott, a boy about 8 years old, sang two pieces which brought forth loud cheers, and cries of more. We must say that little Charlie is the best boy singer we have ever heard. The Misses. Hutchings, as they are wont to on such occasions, did their part well. Messrs Galletly and Moore, and Misses Logan and Galletly of Peterborough did some excellent service, and we must say that whenever their names again appear on posters for a concert in our church, we may look out for a crowded house. Their singing pleased everybody, and especially did the singing of Miss Logan and Mr. Galletly please the Scotch part of the audience. Some of our Scotch friends were so rejoiced that really they were beside themselves or else would have liked one of the singers beside them. The concert was a grand success in every particular. The order was excellent, in fact the best ever known in Fraserville church, on such an occasion. J. B. McWilliams, Esq., occupied the chair to the satisfaction and delight of all present. Such a gentleman as Mr. McWilliams could not expect anything but the best of order, from such an intellectual and respectable audience as was before him on that occasion. Mr. McWilliams will be so kind as to accept the thanks of the Orangemen in this part because of his kindness towards them, and if a concert under the same auspices be ever held here, we hope to see him fill the same position. The meeting closed with "God save the Queen."

Mr. Richard Dundas, has rented his farm, which is situated conveniently to Springville, to Mr. Walters. Mr. Dundas intends having a sale in a few weeks, so look out for large posters, as his stock is of the very best. At the principal County and Township Exhibitions held last fall, we were pleased to see so many 1st prizes awarded him. The greater number of his stock is registered.

By the way we would like to inform our Cavan correspondent, that the so called "Scribe" of Fraserville has lost very little sleep meditating upon his welfare; what the Cavan correspondent referred to of last week, was not written by me; but by careful observation you will perceive it comes from the pen of an occasional Springville correspondent. We might say here for the benefit of a few, that the Fraserville "Scribe" writes nothing but what appears under the heading of Fraserville news. We hope this is sufficient.

Monday, March 9th.—Roads almost impassable, very stormy, probably the roughest day this winter.

The Temperance people held a meeting in the church here a few weeks ago. Rev. Mr. Cameron delivered an exceptionally interesting lecture, and explained clearly the Scott Act.

Mr. A. Stewart is doing a good business, and by carefully studying the wants of his many customers, intends selling as cheaply as our town stores, and also purchasing his stock in first class markets. Call, examine and purchase, and you will be satisfied.

Mr. R. Stewart's trade in the blacksmith line is on the increase. He has secured the service of W. H. McCall who is a very apt workman, and when Messrs. Stewart and McCall take a job in hand, it is soon done, and well done. Not only do they make horse shoeing a speciality, but also the ironing of all sorts of vehicles.

PICTURESQUE CANADA.

THE EXAMINER Book-bindery has received numerous private commendations for the excellence of its work which has given invariable satisfaction, and we publish below the hearty endorsations by the press, of public opinion on the work finished for different publishers:

EXCEEDINGLY WELL BOUND.

The Cobourg World speaks after this manner:—"We have received from Mr. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER bindery, our two volumes of Picturesque Canada. They are exceedingly well bound, in half morocco, with gilt edges, and appropriately embellished sides. We have seldom seen better specimens of binding: and if all Mr. Stratton's work is like that, THE EXAMINER bindery will not fail for want of patronage."

CANNOT BE SURPASSED

We clip the following from the Port Hope Times. It speaks for itself:—"Some time ago we entrusted our numbers of Picturesque Canada to Mr. J. R. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER, to bind, and expected they would be fairly well bound, as Mr. Stratton does everything well he undertakes. On Tuesday last, we had the two volumes returned to us, and we were surprised at the excellent workmanship, which could not be surpassed by any establishment in the Dominion. Those of our readers, who have not yet given their numbers into the hands of the binder, cannot do better than send them to Mr. Stratton, whose prices are low, and the work we are sure will please every one. The covers, lettering and gilding are a fitting and creditable accompaniment to the magnificent typography of the work. Mr. Stratton will pay the express charges both ways on all orders from Port Hope."

FIRST CLASS IN EVERY PARTICULAR

The West Durham News, Bowmanville, thus speaks: "Parties in this vicinity wanting Picturesque Canada bound, should leave their orders at this office. We have had ours very neatly bound, in gilt, at the EXAMINER Bookbindery, Peterborough, at nearly one half less than the rates charged in other places for the same work. The job is first-class in every particular and is a credit to the Bindery. Samples can be seen at this office."

EXCEEDINGLY HANDSOME.

Exceedingly handsome books are the Picturesque Canada bound for the proprietor of The Post at THE EXAMINER book bindery Peterborough. The book is in two volumes, black Russia leather, cloth and gilt edges. THE EXAMINER bindery is just now making a specialty of this class of work in addition to all other lines of commercial binding. The books were examined by a large number and all were very much pleased with the appearance and evident thoroughness with which the work had been executed.

BEAUTIFUL AND LASTING.

The Omemee Herald says: Some days ago we received from the Peterborough "EXAMINER" bookbindery our volumes of Picturesque Canada, bound in a most beautiful and lasting style. Persons who have examined the binding and general finish of the work pronounce it equal, if not superior, to any work of the kind turned out of city offices. Any of our readers wanting to get binding of any kind done can call at the Herald office and examine the work turned out of the EXAMINER bindery.

THE WAR CLOUD.

British Troops Hurried Forward to India.

England Declares Her Ultimatum.

LONDON, March 10.—Despite the pacific assurances of Russia, the British War Office is despatching troops to India with all possible speed. The number sent forward is limited only by the means of transportation, as there are far more men available for active service than can be sent to the scene of the expected hostilities, owing to the lack of vessels. A troopship which arrived to-day from India was ordered to return immediately, taking 1,200 soldiers to Bombay. These troops are needed to partly supply the places of those who have been sent to Quettah and Peshawur, on the southern and eastern frontiers of Afghanistan respectively. It has just transpired that some startling information about the ability of Russia to promptly mass troops in Afghanistan was given to the Government last year by one of the most prominent officers of the British military service in India. The officer was sent for to advise the Government whether it would be possible for Russia to make a sudden invasion in force of Afghanistan and Turkestan. He showed that it would be quite possible to do so, and he traced the route by way of Sarakhs, Puli, Khatum, and Tultkar pass, over which the Russians have since advanced until they are now within easy reaching distance of both Herat and Cabul. He also informed the Government that Russia could within seven days put 28,000 troops into Herat, and follow up this force with an equal number forty days later, and could put 18,000 troops into Cabul, the Afghan capital, with an equal number of reserves near by.

LONDON, March 10.—The Standard has good grounds for stating that Turkey, in view of the aggressive attitude of Russia on the Afghanistan frontier, meditates offering an alliance offensive and defensive with England. If the offer is accepted Turkey will send an army to India to be under the orders of British commanders.

THE ENGLISH ULTIMATUM.

The Observer says:—"We understand the Government sent an emphatic demand to St. Petersburg on Friday for the withdrawal of Russian troops now on the Afghan territory. The despatch partook of the character of an ultimatum."

RUSSIA'S REPLY TO ENGLAND.

A St. Petersburg despatch says Russia has sent an official offer to England to withdraw the Russian forces from the hills bordering on Herat, but states that she will not retire her troops from their positions at Heri Rud or Penjdeh, which Russia claims are essential to her effectual hold on the Turkomans. An active scattering of troops which have been concentrated in Central Asia is taking place. It is reported troops are moving from the Caucasus.

THE SITUATION CRITICAL.

The Daily News states that there is a constant exchange of despatches between the English and Russian Governments. "Although there is a possible hope of a peaceful solution," the News says, "the situation is still critical. The British Government demand that the Russians retire from the Afghan frontier. Whether put in the form of an ultimatum or not, these demands are final. The choice of peace or war lies in the hands of Russian statesmen."

THE COLONIES TO THE RESCUE.

The News says:—"Should the struggle come, it will be the colonies to the rescue, and their recent patriotic fervour has shown they will not be called upon in vain."

PERSIA TO REMAIN NEUTRAL.

Persia will remain neutral in any complication arising between England and Russia.

STRENGTHENING INDIAN GARRISONS.

Orders have been issued to strengthen the Quettah and Pisheen garrisons in India.

KILLED ON AN ELEVATOR.

The Engineer at the Russell House, Ottawa, Crushed to Death.

OTTAWA, March 9.—Early this morning George Peterson was killed on the baggage elevator in the Russell house. He had been employed for about a fortnight, and was acting as engineer. Setting the elevator in motion, he lay down on his chest and looked over to see underneath, forgetting to look out for the coping above, which of course struck his head. Had full power been on it is likely his head would have been severed from his body.

A Married Man Thoroughly Thrashed for Pestering a Factory Girl.

COLLEGE POINT, L. I., March 9.—Carrie Bauer, a pretty factory girl who has recently been receiving a number of amorous letters from an unknown admirer, appointed a meeting on Saturday night with the writer in a secluded spot, whither she went accompanied by her brother-in-law, and met the man, who proved to be Herman Hornberger, a prominent citizen. Miss Bauer's brother-in-law and a constable gave Hornberger a severe drubbing, and a score of women friends thrashed him with brooms. Hornberger is married, his wife being the daughter of a wealthy retired merchant.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Official Decapitations—Rush of Applications for Postmasterships.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—It is generally conceded that the heads of bureaus will have to go. Lamar has already demanded the resignation of the bureau chiefs in the Department of the Interior. Vilas and Garland, it is expected, will follow suit.

The number of applications for postmasterships received to-day has never been equalled on any previous day. It was necessary to detail a special force to file the applications. The commissions of sixty-eight presidential postmasters expire this present month, and over 250 before the next session of Congress.

The Sabbath.

Will the People permit the Desecration of the Sabbath?

The text was taken from Exodus xxxi., 13: "Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep."

The wisdom of cessation from hard labor one day out of the seven is almost universally acknowledged. The world has found out that it can do less work in seven days than it can in six, and that the fifty two days in the year devoted to rest are an addition rather than a subtraction. Experiments have been made in all departments. The great Castlereagh thought he could work his brain 365 days in the year, but after awhile broke down and committed suicide; and Wilberforce said of him. "Poor Castlereagh! This is the result of the non-observance of the Sabbath." A celebrated merchant declared: "I would have been a maniac long ago but for the Sabbath." The nerves, the brains, the muscles, the bones, the entire physical, intellectual and moral nature cry out for the Sabbatic rest. What is true of man is for the most part true of the brute.

Travellers have found out that they come to their place of destination sooner when they let their horses rest by the way on the Sabbath. What is the matter with some of those forlorn creatures harnessed to some of our city cars? Why do they stumble and stagger and fall! It is for the lack of

THE SABBATIC REST.

In other days when the herdsmen drove their sheep and cattle from the far West down to the seaboard, it was found out by experiment that those herdsmen and drovers who halted over the seventh day got down sooner to the seaboard than those who passed on without the observance of the Holy Sabbath. The fishermen off the coast of Newfoundland declare that those men during the year catch the most fish who stop during the Lord's day.

When I asked the Rocky Mountain locomotive engineer why he changed locomotives when it seemed to be a straight route, he said: "We have to let the locomotive stop and cool off or the machinery would soon break down." Men who made large quantities of salt were told that if they allowed their kettles to cool over Sunday they would submit themselves to a great deal of damage. The experiment was made, some observing the Sabbath and some not observing the Sabbath. Those who allowed the fires to go down and the kettles to cool once a week, were compelled to spend only a small sum for repairs, while in the cases where no Sabbath was observed many dollars were demanded for repairs. In other words, intelligent man and dumb beast and dead machinery cry out for the Lord's day. A prominent manufacturer told me that he could see a difference between goods which went out of his establishment on Saturday from the goods that went out on Monday. He said: "They were very different indeed. Those that were made in the former part of the week, because of the rest that had been previously given, were better than those that were made in the latter part of the week when the men were tired out." The Sabbath comes and it bathes the soreness from the limbs, quiets the agitated brain, and puts out the fires of anxiety that have been burning all the week. Our bodies are and unless on the seventh day they are wound up, they run down into the grave. The Sabbath was intended as a savings bank; into it we are to gather the resources upon which we are to draw all the week. That man who breaks the Sabbath robs his own nerve, his own muscle, his own brain, his own bones. He dips up the wine of his own life and throws it away. He who breaks the Lord's day gives a mortgage to disease and death upon his entire physical estate and at the most unexpected moment that mortgage will be foreclosed and the soul ejected from the premises. Every gland and pore and cell and finger-nail demands the seventh day for repose. The respiration of the lungs, the throb of the pulse in the wrist, the motion of the bone in its socket, declare "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." There are thousands of men who have had their lives dashed out against the golden gates of the Sabbath. A prominent London merchant testified that thirty years ago he went to London. He says: "I have during that time watched minutely, and I have noticed that the men who went to business on the Lord's day or opened their counting-houses, have, without a single exception, come to failure." A prominent Christian merchant in Boston says: "I find it don't pay to work on Sundays. When I was a boy I noticed out on Long Wharf there were merchants who loaded their vessels on the Sabbath day, keeping their men busy from morning till night, and it is my observation that they themselves came to nothing—these merchants—and their children came to nothing. It doesn't pay," he says, "to work on the Sabbath."

While the attempt to kill the Sabbath by the stroke of axe and flail and the yardstick has beautifully failed, it is proposed in our day to drown the Sabbath by opening all the grog-shops. An organized movement is on foot to get the New York Legislature to repeal the present law which prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquor on the Sabbath. It is said that this law is not executed. Ten thousand men in the city of Brooklyn in behalf of law and order are about to see that the law is executed. The Sabbath has been sacrificed to the rum traffic. To many of our people the best day of the week is the worst. Bakers must keep their shops closed on the Sabbath. It is dangerous to have loaves of bread going out on the Sabbath. The shoe-store is closed; severe penalty will attack the man who sells boots on the Sabbath. But down with the window-shutters of the grog-shops. Our laws shall confer particular honors upon the rum traffickers. All other traders must stand aside for these. Let our citizens who have disgraced themselves by trading in clothing, and hosiery, and hardware, and lumber, and coal, take off their hats to the rum-seller, elected to particular honor. It is unsafe for any other class of men to be allowed license for Sunday work. But swing out your signs, O ye traffickers in the peace of families and in the souls of immortal men! Let the corks fly and the beer foam and the rum go tearing down the half-consumed throat of the inebriate. God does not see, does He? Judgment will never come, will it?

There are cities in the land where the Sabbath has almost perished, and every Sabbath night those cities are in full blaze of theatric an operatic entertainment, and it is becoming a practical question whether we, who receive a pure Sabbath from the hands of our fathers shall have piety and pluck enough to give to our children the same blessed inheritance. The eternal God helping us, we will!

I protest against this invasion of the holy Sabbath in the first place because it is a war on divine enactment. God says in Isaiah: "If thou turn away thy foot from doing thy pleasures on my holy day, thou shalt walk upon the high places." What did he mean by "doing thy pleasure?" He referred to secular and worldly amusements. A man told me he was never so much frightened as in the midst of an earthquake, when the beasts of the field bellowed in fear and even the barn-yard fowls screamed in terror. Well, it was when the earth was shaking and the sky was all full of fire that God made the great announcement: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Go along through the streets where the theatres are open on a Sabbath night; go up on the steps; enter the boxes of those places of entertainment and tell me if that is keeping the Sabbath holy. "Oh," says some one, "God won't be displeased with a grand sacred concert." A gentleman who was present at a "grand sacred concert," said that during the exercises there were comic and sentimental songs, interspersed with coarse jokes; and there were dances and a farce and tight-rope walking and a trapeze performance. I suppose it was a holy dance and a consecrated tight-rope. I am not certain, however, about that; but this I know, it was a "grand sacred concert."

We hear a great deal of talk about "the rights of the people" to have just such amusements on Sunday as they want to have. I wonder if the Lord has any rights. You rule your family, the Governor rules the State, the President rules the whole land; I wonder if the Lord has a right to rule the nations and make the enactment: "Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy," and if there is any appeal to a higher court from that decision and if the men who are warring are not guilty of high treason against the Maker of heaven and earth. They have in our cities put God on trial. It has been the theatres and the opera houses of the land plaintiffs, versus the Lord Almighty defendant, and the suit has been begun and who shall come out ahead you know. Whether it be popular or unpopular I now announce it as my opinion that the people have no rights save those which the great Jehovah gives them. He has never given the right to man to break His holy Sabbath, and as long as His throne stands He will never give that right.

The prophet asked a question which I can easily answer, "Will a man rob God?" Yes, they robbed him last Sunday night at the theatres and the opera houses, and I charge upon them the infamous and high-handed larceny. I believe with the sailor. The crew had been discharged from the vessel because they would not work while they were in port on the Lord's day. The captain went out to get sailors. He found one man, and he said to him, "Will you serve me on the Sabbath?" "No." "Why not?" "Well," replied the old sailor, "a man who will rob God Almighty of his Sabbath would rob me of my wages if he got a chance." Oh, it is dastardly mean when we break the Sabbath. Suppose you had seven oranges, and you gave to your child six of them, putting the other orange in your pocket for yourself, and you should find that the child had not been satisfied with the six oranges, and had come and stolen your seventh. That is precisely what men do when they break the Sabbath. Suppose you were poor, and you came to a dry-goods merchant and asked for some cloth for garments, and he should say, "I'll give you six yards," and while he was off from the counter binding up the six yards, you should go behind the counter and steal one additional yard. That is what every man does when he breaks the Lord's Sabbath. God gives us six days out of seven, reserving one for himself, and you will not let him have it. It is mean beyond all computation.

I am opposed to this desecration of the Sabbath by secular entertainments, because it is a war on the

STATUTES OF OUR STATE.

The law says:

"It shall not be lawful to exhibit on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, to the public, in any building, garden, grounds, concert-room, or other room or place within the city and county of New York, any interludes, tragedy, comedy, opera, ballet, play, farce, negro minstrelsy, negro or other dancing, or any other entertainment of the stage, or any part or parts therein, or any equestrian, circus, or dramatic performance of jugglers, acrobats or rope-dancing."

Was there ever a plainer enactment than that? Who made the law? You who at the ballot-box decided who should go to Albany and sit in the Legislature. They made the law for you and your families; and now I say that any man who attempts to override that law insults you and me and every man who has a right of sufferage in the State of New York.

Still further, I protest against this invasion of the Sabbath, because it is a foreign war. Now, if you heard at this moment the booming of a gun in the harbor, or a shell from some foreign frigate should drop into our streets, how long would you keep your seats in the Tabernacle? You would want to face the foe, and every gun that could be managed would be brought in use, and every ship that could be brought out of the Navy Yard would swing from her anchorage and the question would be decided. You do not want a foreign war, and yet I have to tell you that this invasion of God's holy day is a foreign war. As among our own native-born population there are two classes, the good and the bad; so it is with the people who come from other shores—there are the law-abiding and lawless. The former are welcome here. The more of them the better we like it. In this particular church there are representatives of all lands. I believe God intended our national heart to throb with the blood of all people! But let not the lawless come from other shores expecting to break down our Sabbath and institute in the place of it a foreign Sabbath.

I will make a comparison between the Sabbath as some of you have known it, and the SABBATH OF PARIS.

I speak from observation. One Sabbath morning I was aroused in Paris by a great sound in the street. I said: "What is this?" "Oh," they said, "this is Sunday"—an unusual rattle of vehicles of all sorts. The voices seemed more boisterous than on other days. It seemed as if all the vehicles of Paris had turned out for the holiday. The Champs Elysees one great mob of pleasure-seeking people. Balloons flying, parrots chattering, foot-balls rolling, peddlars hawking their knicknacks through the streets, hand-organs and every kind of racket, musical and unmusical. When the evening came down all the theatres were in full blare of music and full blaze of light. The wine stores and saloons were thronged with an unusual number of customers. At eventide I stood and watched the excursionists coming home, fagged-out men, women and children, a Gulf Stream of fatigue, irritability and wretchedness; for I should think it would take three or four days to get over that miserable way of Sundaying. It seemed more like an American Fourth of July than a Christian Sabbath.

Now, in contrast, I present one of the Sabbaths in one of our best American cities. Holy silence coming down with the day dawn. Business men more deliberately looking into the faces of their children, and talking to them about their present and future welfare. Men sit longer at the table in the morning, because the stores are not to be opened and the mechanical tools are not to be taken up. There are congratulation and good cheer all through the house. Houses of God vocal with thanksgivings for mercies received, with prayers for comfort, with charities for the poor, rest for the body, rest for the soul. The nerves quieted, the temples cooled, the mind cleared, the soul strengthened, and our entire population turned out on Monday morning ten years younger, better prepared for the duties of this life, better prepared for the life that is to come. Which do you like best, the American Sabbath or the Parisian Sabbath? Do you know in what boat the Sabbath came across the seas and landed on our shores? It was in the "Mayflower." Do you know in what boat the Sabbath will leave us, if it ever goes? It will be in the ark that floats over a deluge of national iniquity.

Still further, I protest against this because it wrongs a vast multitude of employes of their rest. The bar-tenders, in case of the grog-shop, and in the case of the theatre, the scene-shifters, the ballet-dancers, the call-boys, the innumerable attendants and supernumeraries. They are paid small salaries at the best. You see them on the stage in tinsel and tassel, or you see them in gauze, whirling in toe-tortures, and you mistake them for fairies or queens; but after twelve o'clock at night you see them trudging through the streets in faded dress, shivering and tired, seeking their homes in the garrets and cellars of the city.

I oppose this invasion of the Christian Sabbath because it is a war on the spiritual welfare of the people. You have a soul. Yes. Which of the saloons or theatres on the Sabbath day will give that soul any culture? If you gentlemen of the restaurant and the opera have six days in the week in which to exercise your evangelical and heavenly influence, ought you not to allow Christian institution to have twenty-four hours? Is it unreasonable to demand that if you have six days for the body and the intellect, we have one day at least for our immortal soul? Or, to put it in another shape, do you not really think that our imperishable soul is worth at least one-seventh as much as our perishable body? You must not forget that ninety-nine one-hundredths of all the Christian effort of this country are put forth on the Lord's day.

Still further; I am opposed to the invasion of the Sabbath because it is unfair and it is partial. Why has it been during the past few weeks that some of the theatres have been allowed to be open and others not? Why not have all open? Go further and see how unfair it is. While operas and theatres in different cities are allowed to be open on the Sabbath day, dry-goods establishments and the butchers and the bakers and the shoemakers and the hardware stores. Tell me by what law of justice you compel me to shut the door of my store while you keep open the door of your theatre? May it please your honors, judges of the Supreme Court, when you give to the opera and the theatre the right to be open on the Sabbath day, you ought to give at the same time the right to all commercial establishments to be open, and to all mechanical establishments to be open. What is right in the one case is right in all the cases. But come now and be honest you men who manage theatres and operas, and confess that you do not care anything at all about the moral welfare of the people, but you only want more dollars. Indeed, the leader of one of the operas says in the public prints that unless he can have this theatre open on the Lord's day he cannot afford to keep it running. We are told by the operatic and theatrical leaders that they must get money on Sabbath nights in order to pay the deficits of the other nights of the week. Now, in answer to that, I say that if men cannot manage our theatres without breaking the Lord's day they had better all go into bankruptcy together.

WE WILL NEVER SURRENDER

the Christian Sabbath for the purpose of helping these violators pay their expenses. While there may be a difference of opinion among some people about the propriety of having theatricals during the week, I think all lovers of good order must unite in one solid, unanimous resistance to this infernal attempt to massacre the Christian Sabbath.

Bring your voices, your pens, your printing presses and your pulpits into the Lords artillery corps for the defence of our holy day. Decree before high heaven that this war on your religious rights and the cradles of your children shall bring ignominious defeat to the enemies of God and the public weal. For those who die in the contest, battling for the right, we shall chisel the epitaph: "These are they who came out of great tribulation and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb." But for that one who shall prove in this moral crisis recreant to God and the church, there shall be no honorable epitaph. He shall not be worthy even of a burial place in all this free land; but perhaps some steam-tug at midnight may carry out his poor remains and drop them into the sea, where the lawless winds which keep no Sunday will gallop over the grave of him who lived and died a traitor to God, the church, and the free institutions of America. Long live the Christian Sabbath! Perish forever all attempts to overthrow it!

Families that require mourning will find at Turnbull's Jet Cashmeres and a good range of Silk Crapes, just received. Also Crape Millinery made up on short notice, neatly trimmed.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

Consumption Cured.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the Stomach, Bowels, and Liver. AYER'S PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are hopefully depended to correct the disorders caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 2, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable.

J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS D. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been troubled with constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

In and Around Our Legislative Halls.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

MONDAY MARCH 2nd.

The House was largely occupied to-day with motions for papers. Public opinion, and the protests of the Reform press have induced the Government to declare that only female domestics and farm laborers would be helped to immigrate to Canada. The Government also declines to help laborers who have been kept out of their wages, on the C.P.R., to secure their just dues; but, of course, they will be on hand when the Syndicate makes its demand. Mr. Blake's inquiries showed that the wharf and freight shed at Port Moody had been so shamefully built and neglected that it would take $100,000 to put it in repair.

Mr. Edgar showed by the sworn testimony of persons employed on the C. P. R. that a large part of the work had been wretchedly botched.

Hon. Mr. Blake denounced the Government for its instructing the issue of liquor licenses under a law declared to be invalid, and other members showed the evil wrought by Sir John's unwarrantable interference with provincial licenses.

TUESDAY, MARCH 3rd.

After routine to-day, Sir Leonard Tilley made his budget speech. His work was of an up-hill character. He made a desperate attempt to prove that the increase in the average expenditure for the last five years, which he admitted was from five to seven millions, was not injurious, and met with but ill success. He advanced the strange doctrine that the increase in the expense of railways and canals and the postal service did not increase the taxation, and therefore cost the country nothing. He even had the hardihood to assert that the increase of postoffice maintenance caused the decrease of revenue. He attempted to justify the increased cost of immigration by asserting that the results have been greater. He defended, of course, the immense increases that mark every department of the public service, even going so far as to show that the corrupt extravagance of the civil service was justifiable, when it is not even excusable. An increase of $261,047 cannot be explained away. Extremely pitiable were his efforts to show that an increase of the amounts raised by customs and excise do not mean increased taxation. In respect to the effect of the National Policy his arguments, fallacies and forced conclusions were simply a rehash of former budget speeches.

Sir Richard Cartwright's reply was a most able and, to the Finance Minister, exceedingly damaging. He pointed out that the country did not enjoy the prosperity Tilley would have believed, and he showed the fallacy of most of the statements advanced by the financial Colossus.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4th.

Petitions continue to come in against the relaxation of the Scott Act.

A number of bills was introduced, and Peter Mitchell showed a continued itching to get at the Grand Trunk. Sir John stated, in reply to Mr. Blake, that the C.P.R. Company had paid all the interest due on loans, to date, amounting to over half a million, and that the company had not sought any relief from the Government. An animated discussion resulted from Mr. Wilson's motion for papers respecting the applications for relief by municipalities which had aided railways. There is little reason to hope that the Government will give any relief, for Sir John crustily told the deputation that waited on him to-day that he could hold out no hope that anything could be done, but would consider the matter. The members of the deputation are very much dissatisfied with the reception accorded them, particularly as it is plainly evident that the Government will not accede in the slightest to the request. Mr. Bergin withdrew his Factory Act, because some of its clauses conflicted with Provincial jurisdiction. The delay will make it impossible for the bill to be gone on with this session. The Insolvency Committee met this morning and made good progress in the work of drafting a Bill. It was decided to make the Act apply to traders only, taking the definition of traders adopted in former Bills, and to exclude Incorporated Companies from the provisions of the Bill.

THURSDAY, MARCH 5th.

In answer to Mr. Robertson, Sir John said the Government had not come to any conclusion respecting the amendment of the Scott Act in compliance with the wishes of a recent temperance delegation.

Sir Richard brought up the Exchange Bank matter to-day, and he cruelly scarified Sir Leonard Tilley with reference to the action the latter had taken. He had, when that concern was in a very shaky condition (in 1883), advanced $300,000 of the people's money. The Finance Minister, he alleged, justified his course in which he had wasted $300,000 of public money—hard-earned money paid in taxes—by stating that the money was advanced to strengthen a bank in time of depression to prevent a panic. He forgot that only a few days before he prophesied seven more years of the prosperity the country was then, as he alleged, enjoying. The advance was made in the interest of Tory supporters interested in the Bank, and if the money was lost the Tory member of Montreal west and the depositors had to suffer. Sir Richard closed his castigation by moving a resolution declaring that the House regretted the action of the Finance Minister in the premises. Others joined in the debate, and Hon. Mr. Blake presumed the Government supporters would publicly say Sir Leonard was "not guilty," and whisper to him privately "not to do it again." The brute majority—59 this time—of course, voted Sir Richard's motion of censure down.

FRIDAY, MARCH 6th.

After routine to-day the Budget debate was controvert Sir Richard's figures and bolster resumed Mr. White (Cardwell) tried to up the N. P. Mr. Patterson, though not in full health, vigorously criticised Sir Leonard's policy. It had failed to keep the balance of trade; under it work was scarce and grain low in price. He denounced the N. P. Commission respecting manufactures, and said its report was intended to let the Government down easy.

The Government, in refusing to submit to the House a copy of Judge Clark's report protesting against the award of the Section B Arbitrators, shows there is something in connection with the matter that is better kept dark. When a well-known partizan like Judge Clark refused to consent to an outrageous award in favour of Manning, Shields & Co., the Government conceals his report. They must be deep in the plot to plunder the public chest in the interest of political contractors.

A return brought down last night shows that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have already received $872,000 for work on the Thunder Bay Branch between Port Arthur and Winnipeg, the last payment of $88,000 having been made to that Company on the 28th January last. The contract for completing this branch was, it will be remembered, given to the Pacific Syndicate without tender and without any specification as to the quantity or nature of the work to be done. The total sum to be paid for completing the branch was $926,000.

There seems to be no doubt that the Government, after having given $12,000 a mile to the Quebec Government on account of the expenditure upon the railway between Montreal and Quebec, are considering a proposal to pay five million dollars for the road and lease it to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. They have already granted twelve thousand dollars a mile for that particular piece of railway. They propose to pay $27,000 a mile more for it, and all to help the Pacific Company.

MONDAY, MARCH 2nd.

The Legislature adjourned to-day at once on it meeting, upon motion of Hon. Mr. Mowat, seconded by Mr. Meredith, out of respect to Mr. D. McCraney, of Halton, whose death took place on Friday. Both gentlemen paid high tributes to Mr. McCraney's many public and private virtues.

A deputation waited upon the Attorney-General, Commissioner of Public Works and Provincial Secretary to-day to oppose clause 2 of Mr. O'Connor's bill, by which municipalities are empowered to impose a license fee upon hawkers, under which term it is proposed to include sewing machines, agricultural implement, book and other agents.

A deputation also waited upon the Attorney-General to ask that a police magistrate be appointed for the enforcement of the Scott Act in Dufferin county upon the ground that the liquor interest intend taking advantage of the Act which allows the decision of justices of the peace to be appealed against for the purpose of preventing the Act being properly enforced. Another reason urged was that the local officials were opposed to the Act. The Attorney-General promised to consider the matter.

TUESDAY MARCH 3rd.

Mr. Ferris introduced a bill to limit the cost of election trials, and Mr. Ross, Treasurer, a bill to permit the government to arrange vacations for the agricultural College.

In moving the second reading of the bill to regulate the public fisheries of Ontario, Hon. Mr. Fraser explained that under a recent decision of the supreme court the inland fisheries hitherto supposed to be under the control of the doninion were under the jurisdiction of the province. The bill empowered the commissioner of crown lands to take control of the leasing and licensing of inland fisheries. It provided that no leases should be granted except by public competition.

After recess Mr. Meredith moved an amendment to the resolution to go into committee of supply, to the effect that it was not in the interest of the province that any increase in the subsidies from the Dominion should take place, and regretted that the Government had taken ground in favor of such increase, as if it were granted it would render the Dominion government less able to withstand the claims of other provinces. He made a speech, charging the government with unjustifiable extravagance.

Hon. A. M. Ross replied, defending the government's position on the ground that special favors were given to other provinces year after year without any equivalent being given to Ontario. The opposition leader, he said, was the advocate of direct taxation. He reviewed the financial situation and the frequent additional subsidies and grants made in answer to the importunity of the other members of the Dominion, and urged that Ontario should press for a readjustment of the financial basis of Confederation.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Fraser, Carnegie, Creighton, Young, Clarke, and Ferris, and on a vote being taken, the amendment was defeated.

WEDNESDAY MARCH 4th.

On the House reassembling this afternoon Hon. Mr. Hardy introduced the bill for the redistribution of seats in the Legislature. The bill creates one additional member, making the total number 89. Algoma is divided into two ridings, east and west, the latter consisting of that portion west of the meridian of 87 degrees of west longitude known as the territorial district of Thunder Bay. Hon. Mr. Hardy said that in redistributing the seats the government followed the rule of preserving the autonomy of the counties and other municipalities; they had broken no boundary lines and made no attempts to "hive" their opponents. The unit of representation with eighty-nine members and a population of 1,923,228 according to the last census was 21,621, and they had endeavored to approximate to this figure as nearly as possible. They had made an exception in the case of Algoma owing to the extent of the territority, the scattered population and the important interests involved. Bruce county was divided into three ridings—south, centre and north—in place of two as at present. Population: south Bruce, 23,394; north Bruce, 20,196; centre Bruce, 21,628. Cornwall was merged in Stormont giving the latter a population of 23,198. The group comprising Leeds, Grenville and Brockville now had between them four members. It would be reorganized in three constituencies as follows; Leeds, 20,759; Grenville, 22,741; Brockville, 17,724. The group of five constituencies comprising the Simcoes, Cardwell and Peel would be redistributed by dividing south Simcoe between Cardwell and west Simcoe, restoring Caledon township to Peel and creating a new constituency of centre Simcoe. The population of the group would stand as follows: west Simcoe, 20,134; east Simcoe, 20,382; centre Simcoe, 17,406; Cardwell, 22,357; and Peel, 21,697. Toronto including the recent annexations and Parkdale, would be constituted one constituency with three members. The population, about 96,000, would warrant giving it a fourth, but the government took into consideration the fact that many of the representatives of other constituencies were resident in Toronto, and that it had great influence outside of representation, owing to the fact that the legislature met in this city. It was proposed to introduce the principal of minority representation by giving each elector two votes, for which there was a precedent in English legislation. The Brant ridings were reorganized by adding Tuscorora to north Brant. Population south Brant 19,084; north Brant, 14,785. Dufferin was enlarged by the addition of east Luther—population, 23,086.

The group comprising Addington, Frontenac and Kingston were re-distributed by increasing the two latter considerably, leaving the populations: Addington, 16,805; Frontenac, 16,385, and Kingston, 19,564.

The Wellingtons will stand as follows: West Wellington, 18,892; Centre, 22,218; South, 22,237. The Greys are organized so as to give East Grey, 24,522; South Grey, 24,529; and North Grey, 21,488. East Elgin trades off St. Thomas for Port Stanley with the western riding and has 19,848 population, giving West Elgin 22,580. East York, less the annexation to Toronto, takes over Richmond Hill, making the population 15,006. West York has 15,762. North and south Essex exchange some territory, leaving them as follows: North, 23,657; South, 23,305. North Ontario loses Reach, Port Perry and Scugog island, leaving it with 20,917 population and briuging that of the south riding up to 27,895. South Victoria gives up Verulam and Bobcaygeon, and takes over Woodville from the north. This leaves the ridings as follows: South Victoria, 18,289; North Victoria, 16,323. London east is added to London, giving it 23,636 inhabitants, and leaving East Middlesex with 26,710.

Hon. Mr. Fraser proposed to introduce the Franchise bill, the complement of the redistribution bill, but on Mr. Meredth's request it was allowed to stand. After the redistribution bill it was impossible for the opposition to work up any excitement over the alleged shortcomings of Mr. Peck of Haliburton. It was explained that the government had taken no action because it had not been officially advised of the alleged irregularities.

The second reading of Mr. Gibson's bill to impose a fine upon any person buying liquor in prohibited hours received its second reading.

THURSDAY MARCH 5th.

Hon. Mr. Mowat introduced a bill to amend the law of admistration of the estate of deceased persons.

Hon. Mr. Fraser in rising to introduce the Franchise Bill was received with loud cheers. He set forth the chief provisions of the bill which are as below. The qualification for owners, tenants and occupants is reduced from $400 in cities, $300 in towns, and $200 in incorporated villages and townships to $200 in cities and towns and $100 in villages and townships. It is provided that in all cases only those resident within the electoral district shall vote, so that each elector has only a single vote, instead of as at present being able to vote wherever he owns or occupies property. The $400 income franchise qualification is reduced to $300, and the condition as to payment of taxes abolished. A new franchise is created, that of "wage earners," including anyone having or deriving an annual income of $300, the value of board or lodging furnished, as part of wages, being included. Householders, including any person who is sole tenant and occupant of and actually resident in a dwelling-house, are also to receive the franchise. The expression dwelling house is to include any part of a house separately occupied and resided in as a dwelling. The "farmers' sons" franchise is abolished, and in its place is substituted a much broader provision, enfranchising "landholders' sons." The expression "landholder" is defined to include any person being the owner of and residing on land at least twenty acres in extent, or of an actual value in cities and towns of $400, and in villages and townships of $200; and also any person actually residing in any dwelling as tenant when such dwelling and land, if any, is of an actual value in cities and towns of $400, and in villages and townships of $200. "Landholders' sons" includes sons, stepsons and grandsons. It is provided that all landholders' sons must be resident at the time of the election in the municipality in which they tender their votes. There is a strict provision as to residence, but occasional or temporary absence not exceeding four months in the year does not operate to disentitle a "landholder's son" to vote. In Algoma and townships in some other constituencies having no assessment roll, the franchise is to be exercised by resident owners of real estate of the value of $200, and resident householders who have been such for six months. The status of Indians as to voting is unchanged. All these classes will have to appear on the assessment roll, and another bill will be introduced to extend the machinery of assessment so that the principle may be carried out.

Saved From a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated sores breaking out on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with Rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores began to discharge freely, and Rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. Cannon, South Boston, Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible Blood Poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighed one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

A CURIOUS PROBLEM.

A curious and patient individual has worked for an indefinite period on the following problem:—When walking against a heavy rain and some wind, will I get more wet by going fast or going slow? If I move rapidly I certainly encounter more drops in a given space, but I arrive at my destination sooner. If I could make the journey, say a quarter of a mile, in one second, I would have to encounter all the rain between the two points. Would I encounter any more if I walked leisurely over the ground?

The Way of the World.

That many with the glad consent praise newborn remedies, especially if they pay a larger profit, no one conversant with the substitution practised in this respect will deny, and when you are told by interested parties that such and such a preparation is as "good or better"—than the great sure pop corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Just for a moment consider if your benefit prompts the advice, or if the small additional profit secured by the sale of inferior or poisonous substitutes lies at the bottom of the suggestion. We say, then, buy only Putnam's Corn Extractor; the safe, sure, and tested remedy for corns will be found in Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors.

GROWING LOVE FOR FROG MEAT.

During the summer months from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds of frog's meat are eaten daily in New York. They are shipped fresh to that market from Canada principally, in large half barrels. The love for frog meat is on the increase. Epicures and men of extreme wealth give exorbitant prices for them. The large green bullfrog is the chief kind sold. In Chicago they are called water chickens, because their flesh is white as that of a chicken when dressed properly.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

In spring the want of a restorative to tone up the general health is a common experience, especially among those constitutions impaired by age or disease. Prolonged cold weather, want of out-door life and sunshine, lower the vitality, diminish the red globules of the blood and interrupt the nutrition of the tissues. By promoting digestion and assimilation of food and securing increase of nerve force and muscular energy, the use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA will bring up constitutional vigor to its normal plane. 11-13t

DYNAMITE.

There is some current discussion over the word dynamite. All the dictionaries, except Webster's latest edition, give it the short y, as if pronounced dinnamite; but the popular pronunciation is die-na-mite, the first syllable being suggestive of the deadly nature of the explosive, and will undoubtedly prevail. At any rate all civilized people agree to pronounce the thing itself a truly diabolical invention.

A Great Discovery.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife has been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so, with the most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years."

THE CODE DUELLO.

It is a mortal offense in the Prussian Army for one officer to put on even by mistake the hat of another. A duel in which seventeen shots were exchanged and one of the combatants killed, was recently fought at Cologne on account of that breach of etiquette. Were the custom prevalent here the ground would run red with gore after an evening party or a hotel dinner on political convention days.

A kiss is a paroxysmal contact between the labial appendages attached to the superior and inferior maxillaries respectively of a man and woman or two women. The younger the parties are the more paroxysmal will be the paroxysm, and in case it be observed by the fond father of the paroxyzed young lady, there is also likely to be a perigee between the paroxyzer's pedalo junction and the phalangeal extremities of the metatarsus, tarsus, and other bric-a-brac depending from the old gentleman's right leg. The kiss itself is not the paroxysm. It is merely the vibrations of the superincumbent atmosphere resultant from the expulsion of the sweetness from each of the pairs of lips engaged in creating it.

Fifteen years ago a poor boy went from Brooklyn and journeyed to the vast, illimitable, changing West. Alone, penniless and friendless, he struggled with adverse fortune. Nights of anxiety followed days of care and toil, yet still he hoped and wrought; honestly, honorably, patiently, he earned and ate the bread of manly labor. Fifteen years of struggle and toil, and last week the local papers of Rock Rapids shouted to the world the glad news that he had caught a black bass weighing five pounds and three ounces. "Reckon I'll have to go, then," sadly mused the clerk, "cause I swore that if ever I got away from my dad I'd fight clear of rules." "He worked you by a rule, then, did he?" asked the merchant. "Yes, sir, he did; one of those three foot sticks, made outen hic'ry and bound with iron; I tell you, sir, I've been worked by that rule so much that it makes my back cry to have anybody mention rule."

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 12, 1885.

The Syndicate's Demands.

In its persistent "asking for more" the C. P. R. Syndicate has shown itself a veritable corporate Oliver Twist. That it is now making a fresh raid on the Dominion treasury there can be no doubt. In view of this fact, and in view of the certainty of Sir John and his obedient majority consenting to the demand, which, if it means anything, means millions, it may not be amiss to recall what fabulous amounts the Company has already received.

In 1881 the Dominion Parliament subsidized the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, agreeing to give it the portion of the line already built at a cost of thirty million dollars, twenty-five millions cash and twenty-five million acres of picked North-West lands, a total of fifty-five millions in cash, the Company to own the road when built. The estimated cost of the construction of the portion of the road to be built by the Company was $48,500,000. It will thus be seen that the bargain was a good one, for the Company would own a railway costing $78,500,000 and have 25,000,000 acres of land to the good, that would realize at least $3 per acre, all for an expenditure by the Company of $23,500,000.

But that was not enough profit for the modest gentlemen composing the Syndicate. Last session they were given, by the Tory majority of an indulgent and generous Parliament, thirty million dollars more, giving in security a mortgage on the road and the portion of the land that had not been disposed of. At that time Sir John brought his rather reluctant followers to consent to the "steal" by the assurance that this would positively be the last time of asking, and Sir Charles Tupper asserted that the loan was given to enable the Company to complete the line sooner than the date agreed upon, and he assured the House that the country should not lose a dollar by the loan, and the Company should make no further demands upon the liberality of Parliament.

How have these solemn official assurances been observed? This is how they are proposed to be violated and the public treasury further plundered. The Mail of Monday says:

"The company asks the Dominion Government to relinquish its lien for $30,000,000. This having been done, the company will issue 5-20 preference bonds to the extent of $30,000,000 upon the unencumbered road. The company will then hand $15,000,000 of these bonds to the Government, together with 7,500,000 acres of land, valued at $2 per acre, in consideration of its surrender of the mortgage for $30,000,000. The $15,000,000 of bonds remaining will be disposed of by the company, the proceeds being applied to completion and equipment. But to enable the company to pay off its floating debt, the Government will be asked to advance it for immediate use a sum of $1,000,000, which will be repaid out of the proceeds of the bonds thus sold by the company. Of the 7,500,000 acres to be transferred to the Government 5,000,000 acres lie within the railroad belt."

What is the meaning of this proposition, whose appearance in the Mail is evidently to prepare the country for its official submission to Parliament? It simply means that in consideration of $15,000,000 of the company's bonds, (worth in the market perhaps 40 or 50 cents on the dollar), and 7,500,000 acres of land, the Government shall give up its lien on the road and the lands that is the company would be given a road worth $78,500,000 and 17,500,000 acres of land. To give the company this, the country has paid a total of $89,000,000, and all it would get in return would be bonds of the road, nominally worth $15,000,000, but really not worth half that sum. Was ever a huger iniquity of the kind conceived? Is it possible that a free people like Canadians can submit to such rank robbery?

Where is this thing to end? There is no limit to the greed of the company, which seems bent on bleeding the country to enrich its members. Last year the company was given $30,000,000, to "hasten the completion of the line," as Sir Charles Tupper said. But what have they done? They have used eight millions of it in paying dividends to themselves on investments in a railroad not yet completed, not to speak of yielding a revenue capable of paying a dividend of $8,000,000. There does not seem to be any limit, either, to the concessions which the Dominion Government are prepared to make to the company. Last session the country had solemn official assurances that the $30,000,000 "steal" would be the last call on the Dominion purse. But this fresh outrage is proposed, and, no doubt in the world, Sir John will sanction it, his servile majority in Parliament will endorse him, and the universal Tory press will say, amen—a response which thousands of dollars distributed in pap, will make easy for them to utter. There is a limit, however, to the capacity of the country to stand such enormous drains on its resources. The people who earn their money by the sweat of their brow, will assuredly grow wearied of paying to further enrich officials of a company of which members are already able to build million dollar residences. The bread must be taken from many a mouth to pay the taxes that are lavished on the Pacific Railway Syndicate as liberally as if they were so much water.

Redistribution and the Franchise.

The Ontario Government have earned, and are earning, the title of a Reform Government, by introducing great reforms as rapidly as circumstances will admit. They have introduced a Redistribution and Franchise Bill, the one complementary of the other. The Redistribution Bill, being first introduced, may be first considered. This Bill recognizes the principle of an equalization of the population in the different ridings dealt with. No attempt to Gerrymander the ridings so as to "hive" the Tories, has been made, but as successful an endeavor as possible has been made to do even-handed justice. The municipal bounds of counties have been respected, and in no instance has this shameless feature of Sir John's gerrymander been introduced. Of course the Tory journals, for the sake of finding fault, pronounce it a gerrymander—Mr. Mowat's second gerrymander. Now, Mr. Mowat's "gerrymander," as his Redistribution Bill of 1875 is called, partook in no way of the nature of a gerrymander. The changes in the ridings affected by that Bill, instead of strengthening Mr. Mowat, brought him the loss of two supporters. But he desired to readjust the representation on an equitable basis at that time, as the Redistribution Bill now before the House aims to do. Unlike Sir John's famous gerrymander the present Redistribution Bill was not left till the last hours of the session to be smuggled through without opportunity for discussion.

The Redistribution Bill was made necessary by the Franchise Bill, which renders it necessary that the numerical strength of ridings should be equalized, since, with the extension of the franchise, population more than property will hereafter constitute an element which will affect the representation. The Franchise Bill at present under consideration of the Legislature is the redemption of a promise in that direction made at the Reform Convention in 1883. The Government went to the country with a policy of extending the franchise, and that policy was endorsed. As proposed, now, very many will be presented with the ballot who have heretofore not enjoyed the privilege of assisting at the election of representatives. The bill approaches as nearly to manhood suffrage as, it appears, it would be safe at present to go. Radical changes are not always steps in the direction of reform. The Government have proceed with caution and framed the Bill with great care. A summary of the provisions of the Bill, published elsewhere in this issue, shows that, while the extension of manhood suffrage has not been aimed at, there is such liberal provision made that any man with reasonable exertion may qualify himself as a voter. The Franchise Bill and its complement, the Redistribution Bill, are such measures as might be expected to emanate from a Reform Administration, whose aim has ever been to legislate for the interest of the people and to give liberal measures as fast as the circumstances warranted, trusting that the good sense of the most intelligent electorate in the world, would appreciate their action and endorse their course. This has been done in the past and the liberally framed Franchise Bill will extend franchise rights to all classes without distinction. The experiment of giving the franchise to farmers' sons has been satisfactory, and the Government have felt warranted by the success of that measure in giving the franchise to the sons of other classes, without distinction.

Taxation Increasing.

If the country can be made rich by plundering the pockets of the people, Sir Leonard Tilley seems to be inclined to push the experiment to the only limit it can reach, the ability of the taxpayer to disgorge. Referring to recent tariff increases, the Hamilton Times says:—"The taxes are going up. Sir Leonard Tilley has protected some industries to such an extent that the revenue has been lowered. Therefore he quietly raises the revenue duties. Here are some sample changes:

	Old duty.	New duty.
Dress or costume cloths, serges and similar fabrics	20 p.c.	25 p.c.
Wincys	20 "	25 "
Cutlery	20 "	25 "
Umbrellas, parasols and sunshades	25 "	30 "
China and porcelain ware	25 "	30 "
Earthenware and stoneware	25 "	30 "

Five per cent. may not be much of an increase in these days of high taxes, but it counts. A man beginning housekeeping wants a set of dishes. They would cost $4 if there were no duty. Had the Mackenzie Government remained in power, the cost with duty included would be $4.70. At the rate prevailing up to March 3rd, the price and duty amounted to $5. Now the price and duty will be $5 20. The increase of duty lessens the workman's income whenever his wife buys a dress, a parasol, a set of knives and forks. The more Sir Leonard takes the less is left for the support of the family. So long as the protective principle is admitted, the duties will grow larger. It is time to take a sharp curve.

The seat of Mr. George Hawley, the member-elect for Lennox in the Local House, was attacked, and he being unwilling to incur the expense of fighting the protest, aware that a single act of bribery by his friends would void the election, resigned the seat. Not content with this his Tory neighbours must annoy him to the fullest extent. The personal charges were pressed, and the result of the trial at Napanee the other day was to completely exonerate Mr. Hawley and mulct the petitioner in the costs. The Tories fear Mr. Hawley as a strong candidate, hence their frantic efforts to disqualify him.

Our Much-abused Member.

The saturnine representative of West Peterborough has a series of grievances. He has been studying politics for years with the object of taking high rank as a statesman, but events point to the conclusion that he will never be a wholesale statesman; he will rise no higher than a modest retail trader in political wares, even if he succeeds in soaring above the position of a political chapman. His first grievance is that his own party does not appreciate his eminent fitness for a political leader. He was given a show last session, but the experiment was a dismal failure. He was figuratively relegated to the back benches. This session he has again bobbed up serenely, but the reverses he has met, his failure to secure respectful attention for petty grumbles and penny-wise criticisms, must be exceedingly discouraging. His next grievance is that he has not been able to impress the dignity of his political importance upon the House. But he has had his revenge (for there is a slight leaven of spite in the mild-mannered member for West Peterborough). He has had a sweet revenge. The House has had to listen to his speeches. The acutest ingenuity can suggest no severer punishment. In the third place, our martyred representative has been abused by the newspapers. The flippant Globe was savagely lectured for having presumed to make a jocular reference to the member for West Peterborough. Now the Toronto World has bared it back for the stripes. In this wise: Mr. Carnegie has, the whole session, been preparing for a tremendous assault on the management of the Agricultural College, Guelph. He has apparently secured all the advantage from this institution which he personally desires. He has no more pupils to send there to be educated, and there is, consequently, no further necessity for it. He has, therefore, set his heart upon abolishing it, or at least crippling its revenues so that it will be useless. Last Friday he made a terrific charge upon it with a tremendous speech, which drove many members from the House and put his own supporters asleep. This is how the graceless World describes a speech which Mr. Carnegie has been preparing all winter and which was to cover a corrupt Government with confusion. The World says:

"For two mortal hours and a half he (Mr Carnegie) wh anged the House with his red right jaw, going into a variety of petty details of the management of the college. It was an awful infliction, and most of the members weakened under the monotonous flows of words interspersed with quotations from the public accounts, and sought refuge in the smoking-room, the "social club" and the library. The reporters' gallery were almost deserted and the game of nap in the reporters' room, which had been interrupted by the announcement "prayers are over," was vigorously resumed. And still Carnegie talked on of students and professors, barns and subsoiling, cattle, sheep, ewes, calves, blooded stock, dollars, dollars, 1880, 1884, public accounts, Prof. Brown, more dollars, expenditure, revenue, creamery, experimental farm, lambs, laboratories, bulls, etc., etc., until 6 o'clock arrived."

Now, it is in order for the editor to come to the relief of the politician and to denounce the World for its abuse of a member who only seeks to "do his duty to his constituents." A nice method, by the way, of show respect for the interests of his constituents, largely farmers, by seeking to cripple or talk out of existence the only institution in the Province maintained in the interests of the farming community. A nice way of doing his duty to his constituents by seeking to climb into the seat of the Minister of Agriculture in a Tory Cabinet, over the ruins of a College kept up solely for the benefit of his agricultural constituents.

Even Tory organs do not spare him. The Toronto News, the "running mate" of the Mail in the journalistic race, sits on the scrap-book orator. It says:

"Mr. Carnegie, M.P.P., talks too much with his mouth, and is rapidly acquiring the reputation of being the bore of the House. This is to be regretted, as he is an industrious and active member, and not without ability, and were he to restrain his inveterate propensity to talk interminably, could do his constituents and the Province good service. There is a great lack of able men in the Opposition ranks, and when Mr. Carnegie was elected, many supposed that he would be an acquisition to the House. But he is destroying his prospects of usefulness by such exhibitions as his speech on Friday last, when he devoted two hours and a half to a speech on the affairs of the Agricultural College, abounding in insignificant details and wearisome reiterations. The expenditure of the College will, no doubt, bear overhauling, but the impression left by Mr. Carnegie's harrangue was that the Opposition case was of the weakest, and the House was disgusted by his prolixity. The whole matter could have been amply and effectively dealt with in half an hour's speech. If Mr. Carnegie wants to retain any influence he must talk less and take a broader view of things.

Deputations to Ottawa.

The deputations are have gone again to Ottawa to beg the Government to give this district its rights in reference to a further grant for the prosecution of the Trent Valley Navigation scheme. Why should the Government put business men to the bother of combining in the form of deputations, to beg of the Government a fulfilment of their promises in this matter? If they meant to do anything they would do it without so much badgering and stirring up. The representatives of the district by taking an attitude of firmness in the interest of their constituents, have it in their power to do more than a dozen deputations. They have only to place the interests of the district before party interests and demand justice, to have their representations promptly attended to. The matter is in their hands, and to them the people look for a discontinuance of the policy of careless indifference which the Government pursue in reference to the important work of pushing the opening of Trent Valley Navigation. Nothing in the way of help can be expected from the Tory journals of the district. The Review, for instance, meekly and apologetically suggests "that much disappointment will be felt if nothing is done," and it proceeds to apologise for the blundering at Burleigh, and mendaciously asserts that "the accounts for the delay are conflicting." The accounts are not conflicting, and the Review knows they are not. The plain truth is that the delay is solely due to the Government's employment of an engineer, whose plans and specifications, as we have before pointed out, and on the best authority, were so misleading that the contractor would not go on with the work, and the government was apparently glad of any excuse for putting a stop to it. Little else can be expected from the manner in which the Department of Railways and Canals has been managed. During the latter part of Sir Charles Tupper's tenure of the portfolio, that gentleman was more intent on drawing his salary of $7,000 as minister, and in feathering his nest, in the snug berth of High Commissioner, than in looking after the interests of the country or of this district. Sir Charles had the ability to discharge the duties of the position but lacked the inclination. Hon. Mr. Pope, his successor, has neither the ability nor inclination. He is simply hanging on to office till he can sell his railroad to the Government for the Canadian Pacific Company. He cares no more for Trent Navigation and the Midland district than the False Prophet does—and knows about as much of it. We trust that the deputation that is now at Ottawa will do some plain talking, and not be put off with empty promises. The government, in bringing down the estimates, never hinted at an appropriation for the Canal, and the supplementary estimates will also be innocent of any reference to it, unless the Government is given plainly to understand, by both the deputations and the representatives, that the Midland District will stand no more nonsense on the subject.

Two Important Speeches.

In this issue we give in supplement form a full report of two speeches of great importance to the people of the Dominion and of this Province. That of Sir Richard Cartwright deals exhaustively with the finances of the Dominion, and exposes the fallacies of Sir Leonard Tilley in a masterly manner. That of Hon. A. M. Ross, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, is a crushing reply to the labored speech of Mr. Carnegie on his motion tending to cripple the revenue and impair the usefulness of the Agricultural College. Mr. Carnegie's attack on the only school in the Province maintained for the benefit of farmers, receives a fitting rebuke from Hon. Mr. Ross. We hope our readers will study both speeches with the care their great importance deserves.

Editorial Notes.

The official count of the votes cast for the Scott Act in Northumberland and Durham shows a majority of 2,187 for the Act.

Mr. Beaudry, who seemed to have a life lease of the mayor's chair of Montreal, has been defeated by Mr. Beaugrand. Mr. Beaudry was a Tory and conducted his civic administration on true Tory principles—his responsibility to the people was utterly ignored. At last his petty tyranny has become intolerable, and he has been deposed.

Among the notable deaths last week were Hon. Isaac Burpee, M. P., of St. John, N. B., who was Minister of Customs in Mr. Mackenzie's cabinet, and Mr. D. McCraney, M. P. P., for East Kent. The former was one of the notable men of the maritime provinces and will not be easily replaced. Mr. McCraney was for years an influential member of the Ontario Legislature, and his death causes a breach in the Reform ranks and a vacant chair in the House. East Kent is safe to elect, in Mr. McCraney's place, a supporter of the Mowat administration.

The Tories are indignant if it is hinted that the ruinous policy of the Dominion Government has driven settlers from the Northwest, and they brand as traitors all who dare make such an assertion. To show that there is an exodus from the North-west it is only necessary to quote from the columns of the Napanee Standard, a dyed-in-the-wool Tory journal. "Rev. John Scott, formerly of Napanee, a Presbyterian minister and a gentleman of the most rigid truthfulness and probity, whose "word is as good as his bond," at present a resident in Dakota, writes: "Since coming to the Red River in 1875, 30,000 Canadians have left the land of their fathers and have settled in Northern Dakota. Many of these came from Manitoba and the Northwest." Rev Mr. Scott appears to have been exiled himself, for in 1875 he settled in Manitoba. If it is wrong to say that the iniquitous land policy of the Dominion Government is ruining the Northwest how much worse is it to be the authors of such ruin.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says:—"The Ontario Liquor Act, or what is known as the Crooks Act, is one of the best systems of regulations that has yet been devised. It is founded on moderate and reasonable lines, and were it strictly enforced, as it should be, there would be nothing much to complain of in the liquor business. Mr. Gibson has introduced an amendment before the Local House, that ought to become law. At present, the hotel keeper is the only person liable for any infractions of the law; the proposed amendment makes the buyer equally liable with the seller. * * * With this amendment, the Crooks Act will be an admirable one, and temperate people would do well to support its enforcement. In this Act, power is given for the preventing the sale of spirits to drunkards. Let that power be applied. If the persons specially interested shrink from availing themselves of the law, they cannot justly complain of the consequences. Here is a good act, excellent provisions, and all the machinery for its enforcement. How is it the Temperance Societies don't make an effort to have the machinery put in active motion? When the temperance people are given a law that no one opposes, and everyone desires to be enforced, and they decline to turn a finger towards its enactment it is a poor encouragement to give them another law, immoral in conception, impossible in fulfilment, and to which half the people are actively and violently opposed."

Where can you do business so well as at Turnbull's? In his extensive establishment will be found fresh Carpets, Floor Oil Cloths, Lace Curtains, Cretonnes, Cotton Goods from the best Canadian manufacturers, Scotch, Irish and Canadian Tweeds, French and English Dress Goods and Trimmings, Silks, Satins, Velvets, Plushes, Laces, Feathers, etc. His efficient staff of Tailors, Mantle Makers, and Milliners pride themselves in sending out well finished work.

EXISTING EXEMPTIONS.

Opinions of Ecclesiastics as to Their Abolition.

In view of the agitation for the doing away with all exemptions from taxation, and especially of churches and religious institutions, we have sought the opinions of the ministers of the town on the subject, which will be found below. As will be seen the opinions are not all of a kind. Some had not fully thought over the subject and others had matured opinions to express:

REV. WM. BENNETT,

(Pastor of Springville Congregation)

Was not in favor of the abolition of exemption of churches used for worship. They improved the morals of the community and were a blessing worth more than the money derived from their taxation would amount to. But he was opposed to exempting property held by church corporations for any other purposes than those of worship.

REV. A. H. MUNRO,

(Murray-street Baptist Church)

Had apparently made up his mind on the subject. He expressed himself as not in favour of the exemption from taxation of the clergy of churches, of church property os of religious institutions of any kind. Benevolent institutions of an undenominational character and those, of course, belonging to the country or connected with its government he believed should be exempted from taxation. He believed that exemption was based on a false principle it was a remnant of the connection of church and state, and was really an indirect form of taxation for the support of religious institutions.

REV. ALEX. BELL,

(St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church)

Held, in regard to taxing churches, that the idea could not be entertained unless the state was prepared, as a purely secular institution, to refuse to recognize the existence an l authority of God. This it could not do, for the state exists by divine appointment and authority, and it is in duty bound to show respect to its head and founder by refraining from imposing burdens and restrictions upon the service of God by taxing places devoted to His worship. He therefore was opposed to the taxation of churches or their adjuncts, such as school rooms and grounds. As to the taxation of manses and pastors he would not, as citizen, interpose any objection.

REV. I. TOVELL,

(George Street Methodist Church)

Was opposed to taxing any place used for the worship of God. Churches were maintained for purely benevolent and beneficent purposes. They yielded no revenue and no pecuniary gain was derived from them. So long as this limit of the use of churches was adhered to, he believed that it would be wrong to tax them. But any property held by church corporations, for purposes other than those stated above as investments for speculative purposes should come under the same conditions as other real estate and be subject to taxation. He did not think that parsonages should be exempted, nor the minister's salary either. The minister, so long as he enjoyed and exercised all the privileges of the average citizen, should not seek to evade the responsibilities of one, and should therefore submit to taxation.

REV. THOS. MANNING,

(Charlotte Street Methodist Church)

Had not given the matter of exemptions any careful study, and his opinions were not strongly formed. All agree to exempt Government buildings. Now Government buildings were, he said, a necessity; trade and government could not be conducted without them. But churches and benevolent institutions were not necessary in the same sense. They were blessings freely bestowed upon society; they were free gifts to a country; they bring in no revenue to stockholders; they were maintained by charity and benevolence; and when it is reasonable to tax men for the privilege of being charitable and benevolent it will be reasonable to tax said institutions. Personally he was indifferent about the taxation of ministers. Their position is different from that of other men, and it would be no reflection upon the country if it continued to exempt them.

REV. MR. BRADSHAW,

(Rector of St. Luke's, Ashburnham)

Had not given the subject very close attention, but was of opinion that many of these exemptions were obnoxious and unjust, and ought to be abolished. From a return recently published by the Anti-Exemption Association, it was shown that in the city of Toronto, the exemptions (embracing real estate only), for the year 1884, amounted to $10,139,124, or about one-fifth of the whole tax-bearing property in the city! In one ward, St. George's, the exemptions amounted to more than one-half of the tax paying property in it!

In the consideration of this question it must be remembered there were many classes of property besides churches and parsonages which were at present exempt under the assessment act. All property vested in her Majesty, or for the public uses of the Provinces; the buildings and grounds of all universities, colleges, high and public schools, public institutions, such as lunatic asylums, reformatories; court houses, gaols and hospitals; the property of all public libraries, mechanics institutes and agricultural societies -these various properties were, he believed, exempt by statute. On the justice or injustice of such exemptions he was not prepared to express an opinion. But if it should be proposed to abolish exemptions on church properties, assuredly, denominational colleges ought to be included also.

Respecting the exemptions of all churches and places of worship and of the stipend of clergymen or ministers and their residences, it would in the end, he thought, be better if these exemptions were entirely abolished. He saw no really good or valid reason why such property should be exempt from taxation. As it is, the law gave opportunity for church officials to enter into business or speculation in church properties with a view to increase their revenues. This was unfair and unjust to other business men. Here the old Scriptural rule should be carried out, "Render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, and to God the things which are God's." Many religious corporations throughout the country hold real estate with the simple idea of speculation. This is perhaps, especially the case with one strong and powerful church organization, and the law which permitted it was manifestly unfair and opposed to all ideas of British justice.

If the members of Christian churches valued the house of God and its privileges, they should contribute their fair quota to the cost of municipal Government as levied on such property. If their ministers are poorly paid, the people should increase their stipends and not expect the State to make up for their neglect. There was no more reason in their refusing to pay taxes than there would be in their neglect to meet the church's gas account or coal bill. Let all such exemptions, he said, be done away with. No doubt there would be difficulties in carrying out such legislation, but surely an equitable arrangement was not impossible. That these exemptions will be abolished in the near future, he had no doubt. The political party which took the matter up and carried it to a successful issue in this province, would effect lasting good, and benefit themselves not a little.

RT. REV. DR. JAMOT,

(Bishop of the Diocese of Peterborough)

Expressed himself opposed to the taxation of churches, school houses and educational institutions generally, or of whatever institution is maintained with the result of promoting the general good of society. Religion or churches, for churches are required as a place of meeting, he said, tended to make the people better, who, if they had the fear of God in their hearts, would respect the law of the land. Thus, society in general would derive great benefit from the work of the churches, and governments would find in them powerful and zealous allies in the upholding of law and order. Aside from this consideration, His Lordship thought it would be an outrage upon the Deity that one little spot, consecrated to His service and the good of humanity, could not be kept sacred from the visits of the assessor and the tax-collector. Aside, also, from religious considerations, churches were, in a moral and social sense, absolutely essential to the well-being of society. It would be absurd for the Government to impose a tax upon institutions maintained by them by means of taxes, (general, or confined to a few individuals) for the exercise of their functions, and it would be equally absurd as well as unjust for them to impose a tax upon churches, which were most potent assistants of the state in the work it had to do. As to the taxation of schools, the latter were supported by a tax (direct or indirect) and it would be a contradiction to levy a tax to pay a tax. Besides, the taxation of churches would amount to a refusal on the part of the state to recognize a God, and would be placing a premium on infidelity and atheism and would encourage the impious and profane in their refusal to acknowledge the claims of a Supreme Being. By the abolition of tax exemptions the infidel would be a gainer, and the Christian, who supports the churches, would be doubly taxed. Dynamiters, socialists and communists would rejoice to see churches taxed, for they would see in such a fact the refusal to recognize a Deity, and have grounds for the hope of a triumph of their own diabolical doctrines, which acknowledge neither God nor the church—nor, indeed, anything good. The stability and existence of good government depended on religion, and to tax churches would be to place a ban on religion and acknowledge that governments did not need the aid of the church or of the incalculable moral forces it exercised. Even in a purely æsthetic sense, taxation of churches would be a mistake. They help to beautify a town; and if members of churches had to first pay the cost of erecting the buildings and then pay taxes on them, inferior structures and insignificant grounds would be erected and maintained. The same ideas would apply generally to schools and charitable institutions, which, by aiding the church assisted the state to maintain law and order and good government. Regarding the taxation of the dwellings of the clergy, His Lordship, while not advocating this, would be willing, personally, for the sake of peace, to submit to it to a certain extent, but he would insist on churches and their appurtenances, schools and charitable institutions being exempted from taxation.

FRIDAY, MARCH 6th.

This afternoon Mr. Carnegie shot off his elaborately prepared charge upon the management of the Guelph Agricultural College, and as might be expected, it proved a blank cartridge, consisting principally of scrap book wadding. He made a series of charges, small ones, of course, and bored the house full of oratorical perforations for 2 weary, dreary hours. He was effectively crushed by Hon. Mr. Ross. [The speech of Hon. Mr. Ross will be found in full in our supplement.]

NEWS FROM THE SOUDAN.

Gen. Wolseley's Address to the Troops at Korti.

LONDON, March ...—Gen. Wolseley telegraphs that his eyesight is unaffected and his health is perfect.

SUMMER STATIONS FOR THE TROOPS.

A Korti despatch says during the summer the main body of the British troops will remain in camp there, with headquarters at Dongola. The Mudir of Dongola's army will remain at Merawe with Gen. Buller's contingent. Two movable columns under Generals Dormer and Brackenbury will be stationed between Debbeh and Handak, in constant readiness for action. The wind now blows like a furnace.

ARRIVAL OF REINFORCEMENTS.

SUAKIM, March 10.—Six transports arrived yesterday with reinforcements and supplies.

The hostile Arabs are becoming alarmed at the number of ships arriving here.

A successful battle with Osman Digna will be necessary before the camp can be safely established.

THE SUAKIM EXPEDITION.

The advance of the Suakim expedition beyond Trinkitat is not considered probable before autumn. The main body will camp at Sinkat during the hot weather, on a site 3,000 feet above the sea, and within three days' journey from Suakim.

AN ADVANCE ORDERED ON KORTI.

A reconnaissance from Suakim today disclosed the presence of detachments of the enemy in different localities, aggregating 10,000. An Arabian paper says that the Mahdi has sent his lieutenant at Metamneh a reward of $5,000 for bravery, and has ordered him to advance upon Korti.

THE DEFENCE OF SUAKIM.

The following plan has been adopted for the defence of Suakim:—The Indian contingent will camp on the right of the city, the Guards on the left, while a semi-circle of redoubts, 400 yards apart, will be formed 1,800 yards from the inner line of defences, connecting with the latter. The water supply is abundant.

OSMAN DIGNA'S MENACES.

Osman Digna has sent a letter to the British commander here recounting Arab successes, announcing that the fall of Kassala is imminent, and warning the English that they will be defeated and driven into the sea if they venture outside the city. Osman has also sent a letter to the chief of the friendly tribe of Amerars now in Suakim, threatening him with death unless he rejoins the Mahdi's army, and telling him the British are doomed, as 7,000 dervishes have arrived to reinforce his (Osman's) army. There is a constant stream of transport steamers arriving here.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF TO THE MEN.

KORTI, March 8.—Gen Wolseley has issued an address to the soldiers and sailors of the Nile expedition. It reads: The queen desires me to express her admiration of your courage and self devotion. To have commanded such men is to me a source of the highest pride. No greater honor can be in store for you than that I look forward to leading you, please God, into Khartoum before the year is out. Your noble effort to save Gen. Gordon, through no fault of yours, was not a success. On the river and in the desert you have borne hardships and privation without a murmur, and in action have been uniformly victorious. You have done all men could do to save your comrade, but Khartoum fell by treachery two days before you could reach there. A period of comparative inaction was expected. The army was not formed with a view of the siege of Khartoum. We must content ourselves to prepare for autumn advances. You will, I know, face the heat and the work that remains for us to do with the same courage and endurance as heretofore. I thank you heartily for your actions in the past, and can wish nothing better nor ask nothing more for the future than the same uncomplaining devotion to duty that characterized your conduct in the other operations.

GERMANY ANNEXING ENGLISH TERRITORY.

Protests of the British Consul Unheeded.

LONDON, March 9.—The action of the German authorities in the Cameroons in hauling down the British flag at the English mission and sanitarium in Victoria, is believed to have been due to a misunderstanding as to the scope of certain negotiations between Germany and England. Count Herbert Bismarck, during his visit to London last January, induced Lord Granville to cede to Germany various slices of territory in West Africa, with a view of making the German colony of Cameroons more compact. Germany asked for the cession of Victoria colony, which was founded by the Baptist missionaries from England in 1858, but this was refused by Lord Granville. If the news received to-day from Madeira is true, it indicates that the German officials jumped to the conclusion that all the territory asked for had been ceded, and acted accordingly.

SENSATION IN A CIRCUS.

A Lion Tamer has a Fearful Struggle with one of the Royal Beasts.

PARIS, March 9.—At the Cirque d'Hiver last night, as Williams, the celebrated lion tamer, was putting eight lions through their leaping tricks in the cage, one of the lions bounded on him and seized him by the fleshy part of the back and thighs. A terrible struggle followed. The spectators, shrieking with alarm, broke into the ring. Many women and children fainted. The lion relaxed his hold, when Williams with extraordinary dexterity eluded a second attack and escaped from the cage. He fell unconscious, covered with blood.

No trace of the whereabouts of Dr. Moore, of Dorchester, has yet been discovered, in spite of the most thorough and vigilant search, and the belief that a foul murder has been committed is becoming universal in the district. Blodgett, the man who was arrested on suspicion of complicity in the murder, was honorably acquitted yesterday.

The latest despatches from St. Petersburg indicate that there is but a gloomy prospect of peace being long maintained. The war or military party is in the ascendant in Russia, and Lord Granville's demand for a withdrawal of Russian troops pending the settlement of the Afghan frontier has been met by an absolute refusal. England meanwhile is pressing forward her military preparations.

During the first sixty days of the session ending Saturday the expense of the Illinois General Assembly amounted to $104,000, and there is to show for this expense the passage of a bill appropriating $5,000 for the contingent expenses of the session, and $50,000 for the improvement of the Illinois display at New Orleans, with the incidental diversion afforded by the attempt to elect a successor to Senator Logan.

The bitter attack of United Ireland on the Prince of Wales has spurred the Loyalists into increased efforts to assure his Royal Highness a warm welcome on his visit to Ireland. Thousands of persons are signing petitions of various kinds to the Chamber of Commerce, urging that body to form a grand committee of reception for the Prince and Princess. The Nationalists are talking of getting up a monster procession, with banners bearing Irish emblems and bands playing national tunes. If this idea is carried out a disturbance between the opposing factions is almost sure to take place.

George Buck, alias E. Adams, who is now confined in Guelph gaol with Joseph Armstrong, alias R. Davis, on suspicion of being concerned in the robbery of a Toronto Jew pedlar named Max Simouski, in December last, near the village of Arthur, finding that Provincial Detective Rogers had made out a square case against him, has made a clean breast of the matter, and confessed the whole affair. The most important part of the confession is that the third man who was concerned in the robbery, and whom the detectives have hitherto been unable to trace, is Little, who is wanted in Toronto for shooting Constable Armstrong some weeks ago. Little is still at large, but his capture will shortly be effected. All the prisoners have a very bad record, and their gang has long been a terror to this section.

The students of McGill College, Montreal, are rejoicing at the prospect of having ere long the establishment of a dining hall. This will be a great convenience to the students, and will increase the social feeling among them. But many of the students hope that it will lead still further, and be the means of establishing a residence at the College. The arts faculty is to receive additional numerical strength, which will enable certain branches of the course to be taken up, and will also lighten the labors of the present professors. At the meeting of the Corporation the new Governor, Hon. D. A. Smith, offered to give at least $50,000 more if the Corporation would maintain separate classes for ladies and gentlemen. It is stated that he intends to give $100,000, in addition to the $50,000 he has already given.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of migration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

THE RED FLAG.

BY

M. E. BRADDON.

Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc. etc. etc.

"O, but I shall get stronger now that I have a motive, a settled purpose in life, a task to perform. You will see that I shall do so, Rose. Have no fear."

Her eyes brightened and flashed as she spoke—a hectic fatal light, Rose thought.

"I hope, whatever place you have taken, that the work is very easy," said the elder sister, after a pause.

"O yes, it is easy enough—very easy; in the open air mostly. You will see that my health will improve every day."

"I shall be full of thankfulness if I see that; and if the employment adds to your happiness."

"It will!" cried Kathleen eagerly. "It will make me very happy, if I succeed."

"Dearest, I never like to question you about yourself," said Rose, in a pleading tone, "for I know there are heart-wounds which should never be touched. But I should be so glad if you would tell me frankly, fully, what you are going to do?"

"I cannot, dear."

"Cannot! O Kathleen, is not that hard between such sisters as you and me?"

"All my life has been hard since the 21st of May."

"And I am to be told nothing?"

"Nothing more than I have told you already. I have taken upon myself an avocation which will oblige me to go out very early every morning; to be out sometimes at dusk. I want you to understand this, and not to be uneasy when I am away from home."

"I cannot help being uneasy. I am anxious about you every hour of the day. Why cannot you stay at home, Kathleen, and let me take care of you? I could get you work that you could do in your own room; sheltered, safe, protected from the pollution of the streets, from the hearing of foul language, from brushing shoulders with disreputable people."

"I hear nothing; feel no degradation. I think nothing, am conscious of nothing, but my own business."

"Is this business—respectable—worthy of a good Catholic?"

"Yes, it is respectable. There is warrant for it in the Scriptures."

Rose looked at her with acutest anxiety. That pale fixed face, the strange brightness of the eyes, suggested an exaltation of spirit, a state of mind which touched the confines of madness. And yet the girl's voice was soft and gentle, the girl's movements were quiet and deliberate. There was no wildness of gesture, no sign of actual unreason. Kathleen was terribly in earnest, that was all.

From that hour the girl's health seemed to improve; both mentally and physically there was a change for the better. Her eye had a steadier light; there seemed less of exaltation, of feverish excitement. Her whole being seemed braced and strengthened, as if by some heroic purpose. Yet there were times when the light in those steadfast eyes, the marble lines of the firmly-set lips, were almost awful.

"What a woman that is, that sister-in-law of yours!" said Durand's artist-friend, the graybeard who had been one of the witnesses at the double wedding. "That face would be magnificent for Jael or Judith, for Charlotte Corday or Salammbo. That girl is capable of anything strange or heroic or deadly. She has the tenacity of a Redskin."

Durand smiled a sad incredulous smile.

"Poor child, how little you know her!" he answered. "You clever men are so easily led away by a fancy. Kathleen is one of the gentlest souls I know. She adored her husband, and her grief at his death has turned her a little here," pointing to his forehead. "But she is incapable of any violent act."

"She is capable of a great crime in a great cause, as Charlotte Corday was; the gentlest of souls, she, till she took the knife in her hand to slay him whom she deemed the scourge of her country. I am not led away by fancies, Durand. Faces are open pages to the eye of a painter. I can read that one, and know what it means."

Philip took this for the illusion of an habitual dreamer, and attached no weight to the opinion. Kathleen had given them no cause for uneasiness since she commenced her "avocation." Her life passed with an almost mechanical regularity. She left the house every morning before seven—sometimes even before six. She had been observed to go out as early as five. She came home again at any hour between nine and eleven, breakfasted alone in her own sitting-room, did her housework, her little bit of marketing, and then slept or rested for an hour or two. Then, later in the afternoon, she went out again, to return after dark.

This was her manner of life, as seen by her sister and her sister's husband. They puzzled themselves exceedingly as to the nature of that employment which obliged her to keep such curious hours. They talked, and wondered, and speculated; but they did not venture to question her. She had entreated Rose to forbear; and Rose, who so fondly loved her, was content to remain in ignorance, seeing that the mourner seemed more tranquil, more resigned than before she began this unknown labor.

Yet they could not refrain from speculations and wonderings between themselves, the husband and wife, for whom life was free from all care save this one anxiety about the widowed girl.

Was her occupation that of a governess? Had she found two sets of pupils in some humble circle, where superior accomplishments were not demanded in a teacher? Did she go to one family in the morning, to another in the evening? This seemed a natural and likely explanation. But if it were so, why had she made a mystery of so simple a matter?

They could only wait and watch. They were too high-minded to follow or to play the spy upon her. But they watched her face, her bearing, when she was with them—which was but rarely now—and they waited for the revelation of her secret.

She would not make her home with them. That was Rose Durand's worst grief. If she could have had that beloved mourner beside her hearth every day; if she could have seen her bending over the little one's cradle, beguiled by the sweetness of his dawning intelligence; if she had but been allowed to soothe and console her sister, Rose would have been quite happy. She would have trusted to her own loving arts, and to the great healer Time, and she would have looked forward to a day when Kathleen's wounds would be healed.

But Kathleen hugged her loneliness as if it were the one precious thing left to her. She would not be tempted from her solitude in the two quiet rooms up-stairs. "I am tired when I come home from my work," she said one day, when Rose upbraided her with unkindness in refusing to spend her leisure hours in the Durand menage. "It would be no rest to me to be with you and baby, dear as he is. I want to be quite alone with my dreams of the past."

"They are not good for you, Kathleen, those dreams of the past."

"O yes, they are. They are my greatest comfort. Sometimes, sitting here in the afternoon sunlight, with a volume of Hugo or Musset in my lap, I almost believe that Gaston is sitting in that chair where you are now, by my side. I dare not lift my eyes to look up at him."

"Why not?"

"Because I should know then he was not there, and the spell would be broken. You don't know how real day-dreams are to me."

"Too real, Kathleen; such dreams as these lead to madness."

"Let me be mad, then. I would rather be mad and see him there, than sane and not see him. I would welcome madness to-morrow if I could believe that he was still alive—if there need be no lucid interval in which I should remember that he was dead."

"Kathleen, you frighten me to death!"

"Forgive me, dearest," the girl answered gently. "There is no cause for fear. You do not know how steady my brain has been, how regularly my heart has beaten, ever since I have had—employment—business to do—a purpose in life. Before, I felt as if I were wandering in a desert, under a midnight sky. Comets were blazing in that sky—shooting-stars darting their light, now this way, now that; but there was no star to guide my steps—there was no road across the waste. Now I feel as if I were traveling on a straight level road, with my guiding-star shining steadily before me; there is such a difference."

"You look so white this afternoon, darling. Have you worked harder than usual to-day?"

"Yes, it was harder to-day—very, very far!" Kathleen answered, with an absent air.

"You had further to go to your employment?" faltered Rose, looking at her wonderingly. "Is it not always in the same place?"

"Not always."

"That is very strange."

"Life is strange," answered Kathleen, "almost as strange as death. O Rose, my best of sisters, don't look so troubled about me. Believe me that all is going well with me. I am doing no harm. I am doing my duty. And all will come right in the end."

This was spoken with a fervor which in some measure reassured Madame Durand. She had never suspected evil of her sister. She knew that pure nature too well for doubt to be possible upon this score. Her chief fear, her ever-present dread, was for the soundness of the girl's reason, for the capacity of her mind to stand against the strain of a great sorrow.

Kathleen would not go to her sister's rooms, but Rose went to the widow's lonely home two or three times in every day; she would not be put off by Kathleen's desire for solitude. She went to her the last thing every night, and knelt and prayed with her; but Kathleen's lips were dumb—that spirit which had once been fervent in prayer was now voiceless. The widow knelt beside her sister with bowed head, but there were some of Rose's prayers to which she would not even say Amen.

"Why do you not join in the Paternoster, Kathleen?" Rose asked tenderly.

"Because I cannot join with all my heart. Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors. If I said that with my lips my heart would be the heart of a liar. There are some debts that cannot be forgiven, some wrongs that must be avenged."

"Vengeance belongs to God," answered Rose quietly. "And with Him it is not vengeance, but justice."

"That is all I want," said Kathleen. "Justice, justice, justice!"

And then she lifted up her face, which had been bowed upon her clasped hands until now, and prayed aloud:

"O God, Thou art my help and deliverer! O Lord, make no tarrying! The wicked walk on every side when the vilest men are exalted. As the fire burneth the wood, and as the flame setteth the mountains on fire, so persecute them with Thy tempest, and make them afraid with Thy storm."

CHAPTER XII.

FOUND.

The days and weeks wore slowly on; July came and passed, and it was mid-August. Paris was at its hottest. It might have been a city in the tropics. Thick white mists rose from the boulevards and clouded the evening air. The stones in the courtyards of hotels and great houses were baked in the sunshine. The very sound of water splashing upon the hot streets was rapture. The atmosphere was heavy with heat; and it seemed as if the low thunder-charged sky were a cast-iron dome which roofed in the city and suburbs.

That city, once called beautiful, still wore the aspect of devastation. The ruined houses still gave forth an odor of smoke and burning. The fierce meridian sun drew out the stench of charred wood. On every side were the signs and tokens of destruction. On every side one heard of loss, and sorrow, and death.

The herd of tourists went tramping through the city, staring, gaping, expatiating on the spectacle—disappointed somewhat that things were no worse. They had expected to find Babylon a heap; and here were her palaces and churches still standing, her spires and pinnacles still pointing heavenward, her domes glittering against the hot blue sky. The tourists were disillusionised, and felt they were getting very little for their money.

The mightier of the ruins remained as anarchy had left them; but here and there the work of reparation had begun. Trade was reviving. The markets had resumed their normal aspect, and food was to be had at the old prices. The theaters were beginning to reopen their doors. Restaurants and cafes had smartened themselves up to accommodate a floating population of travelers, taking this desolated Babylon on their way to fairer scenes. Again the clinking of teaspoons and the clash of glasses were heard on the boulevard. The petits crevees, the cocodettes, had emerged from retirement, or had come back from exile. Paris was Paris again; but a sorely impoverished, somewhat humiliated Paris.

Kathleen's life pursued its beaten round all this time. The oppressive heat of those August days did not deter her from her labor. Every morning before the shops were opened she was in the streets, neatly clad in her black gown and close black bonnet, a little market-basket on her arm, as of one who went upon a housewife's errand. In the dim early morning she walked to her destination—one of those two hundred and thirty-two workshops which she had written down in her list. Some of these were in the remotest corners of Paris, and many of her morning walks were long and weary; but she was careful to allow herself ample time for these long distances. She always studied her map over-night, and learned the names of the streets by which she had to go. She was thoroughly systematic in her work; and she had by this time acquired a wonderful expertness in finding her way, a wonderful knowledge of the great wide-spreading town. It seemed to her as if there were not a corner of Paris, not a nook or an alley, which she had not explored.

Sometimes her destination was some foul-smelling lane at Belleville, some dingy street near Montmartre. She went as far as Vincennes on one side, beyond Passy on the other. But whatever the distance, she went to her work with the same quiet patience, the same tranquil aspect. Nobody ever remarked her as an eccentric-looking person; no one ever saw wildness or exaltation in her manner. She walked quietly onward, at a moderate business-like pace, her little basket over her arm; her pale earnest face shaded by the neat little crape veil, tied closely round the small black bonnet; and she inspired no one's wonder or curiosity. A clerk's wife, catering for her little household; a sempstress going to her work. She might be either.

When she reached her destination, and stood in front of the curriers' workshop, her task became more difficult. She watched for the going and coming of the workmen at their breakfast-hour, between nine and ten o'clock. She had to observe without being observed. She hovered near the door of the restaurant where they took their soupe au fromage. She had to loiter in the street or the lane, without appearing to be a loiterer. This exacted all her powers as an actress; but, as every intelligent woman is instinctively an actress, she contrived to perform this part of her task so skilfully as to escape, for the most part, unquestioned and unremarked.

If there were shops in the street all her little purchases for that humble menage, which was not much better than genteel starvation, were made upon the spot. This gave her the opportunity of wasting time, and of making inquiries. It was so easy while buying a pear or a handful of plums at the little fruit-shop, or a roll at the baker's, to ask a few questions, in mere idle curiosity as it seemed, about the carrier's on the other side of the way. Was it a small or a large trade, for instance? How many workmen were employed—and what kind of men? Then if the shopkeeper was inclined to gossip, and was friendly, she could watch the men go to their work from the threshold of his shop, and hear his remarks upon them, and be sure that she saw the full complement employed there.

Now and again it happened that a workman was ill, or drunk, or idle, and did not go to his work; and then, after ascertaining this fact, she had to come back to the same spot again, once, twice, thrice even, to make sure of that one errant workman. For the man she wanted was one man among all the curriers of Paris, and to let one escape her might be to lose him.

She hunted her prey with the tenacity of a Red Indian.

The work was very slow work. August was nearly over, and she had not completed the third part of her list. The curriers' shops were scattered. It was rarely that she could do more than two in a day—one in the morning, when the men went to their work; one in the evening, when they left work. She was getting to be curiously familiar with the curriers of Paris, their ways and their manners; the restaurants where they dined or supped late in the evening, at long narrow tables in low dingy rooms, by the light of tallow-candles, and amid overpowering odors of cognac and cheese soup; the wine-shops where they swilled gallons of "little blue," or stupefied themselves with cheap cognac.

She learned a great deal; but in all this time there had been no sign of Serizier, no clue to the whereabouts of that one workman.

Now and then she ventured to accost one of these blue blouses, who answered civilly or brutally, as Fate willed. But, for the most part, they were civil, in their rough way. She told her little pathetic story of a brother, a currier by trade, of whom she had lost all trace since the Commune. His chief friend was a man—also a currier—called Serizier, and she thought it likely that, wherever Serizier were working, her brother would be working too.

Did monsieur happen by chance to know anything about a currier called Serizier? No, nobody knew of such a man. Some to whom she spoke remembered the name and the man in the day of his splendor—with a cocked hat, and a red scarf round his waist. There had been a passion for red scarfs among the Communards. Perhaps it was the color that charmed them, the hue of that blood which was to them as an atmosphere.

Those who knew all about Serizier's past career could give her no enlightenment about his present whereabouts, and she always made her inquiries judiciously, indirectly, putting forward that mythical brother as the motive of her questionings. She did not want to be known as a woman who had inquired for Serizier, lest the hunted should get wind of the hunter. And so she came to September, and in all the blue blouses, the heavy figures, and stooping shoulders, the toil-stained hands, the close-cropped bullet-heads, she had seen no sign of Serizier. How should she know him when she saw him?

Easily enough. First, she had his photograph, which she had discovered, after a diligent search, in a shop on the Boulevard St. Michel, among other heroes of the Commune. Secondly, she had seen him once in the flesh, and his face had impressed itself upon her memory in a flash, as if it had been photographed upon her brain. It was not a common face; it was original in its sinister ugliness, and she could recall every line in that bulldog visage.

She had seen him soon after the skirmish at Issy, when his laurels were yet green, and the street-arabs cheered him as he passed at the head of his regiment, in gaudy uniform, red scarf, waving plumes, clanking sword, on a horse which he could not ride, boastful, triumphant. It was in the spring evening, the clear cool light of declining day, when she stood on the quay, hanging on her husband's arm, and watching the soldiers go by.

Gaston told her all about Serizier. A brute, but a brave brute, he said, and good at training his soldiers—a man who was likely to come well to the fore, if the Commune could hold its own.

And so, with the evening sunlight on his face, Serizier rode slowly by, she watching him, open-eyed with wonder that such a brute face as this should belong to one of the people.

The face was as vividly before her eyes to-day as it had been that April evening. She looked at the photograph every night before she went to her rest. Let him disguise himself as he might, let him dye his skin like a blackamoor's, or hide cheeks and mouth and chin behind a forest of beard and whisker, he could never hide himself from her. His face was never absent from her mind.

So she went on with her work doggedly, hopefully, albeit there were times of fear—times when she recalled how little foundation there was for any certainty that Serizier was in Paris, or even that he lived. The man for whose going in or coming out she watched morning and evening might be far away in the New World, plotting and revelling upon the spoils of revolution, conveyed to him yonder by some faithful friend; or his corpse might have been huddled into one of those common graves which had yawned to receive hecatombs of nameless dead.

The Durands had both been curious as to the fate of Suzon Michel. It was known in the Rue Git le Cœur that she had been active amidst the atrocities of the Commune, a shining light in that fiery atmosphere. She was known to have carried the chassepot and the petroleum can, to have been busy amidst scenes of riot and death. There were some who declared that she was the petroleuse who had ridden, dressed as a vivandiere, at the head of that hideous procession in the Rue Haxo, when the priests and the gendarmes were led to the slaughter, less happy in their doom than the Archbishop and his companions, who were massacred within the walls of La Roquette. Certain it is that she had been seen more than once in a vivandiere's costume, and that she was known to be one of the fiercest of that hellish crew.

Some said that she had been shot down on the last of the barricades, yonder at Belleville; others declared that they had seen her in a gang of prisoners bound for Satory. No one regretted her; but there was a morbid curiosity in the Rue Git le Cœur, and two or three adjoining streets, as to her fate. Details of her last hours, seasoned with plenty of blood, would have been welcome.

The cremerie had been closed from the first day of the barricades, and had never reopened. A board in front of the shop announced that it was a louer presentement. Either la Michel was verily gone to give an account of her sins in the land of shadows, or she was keeping out of the way, lest she should be called upon to answer for her misdeeds before an earthly tribunal. This was what was said of her in the Rue Git le Cœur. Kathleen knew the popular mind upon this subject, and she heard Durand and Rose discuss the question on one of those rare occasions when she consented to join them at the neat little supper table. It was almost a festival for Rose when she could induce her sister to spend the evening with her.

"I always hated that woman," said Rose, speaking of Suzon Michel; "a bold bad woman, capable of any crime."

"A creature of strong passions, no doubt," answered Durand, "terribly capable of evil. But I do not know that she was quite incapable of good. These women who feel so strongly are as fitful as a summer thunderstorm; they will adore a man one day and murder him the next. But they have the power to love as well as to hate; they have strength for self-sacrifice as well as for crime."

"I do not value their love any higher than their hate," said Rose, who had never forgotten her early impressions about Suzon, never ceased to be jealous and suspicious of the woman who had dared to love Kathleen's lover; "their hearts and minds are all evil, their love is a snare. If she is dead, well—God give me charity—let her rest in her grave; if she is living, God grant that she and I may never meet."

It was only a few days after the evening upon which this conversation occurred that Kathleen had startling evidence of Suzon Michel's existence in Paris, at the very time when people believed her to be either dead or in exile.

Those first days of September in '71 were as sultry and thunderous as the last days of August. Indeed, it seemed as if the summer grew hotter as it waned. The sun shone with tropical splendor all day, and at eventide the atmosphere was thick with heat.

It was between eight and nine, after her evening watch in a street the Barrirre d'Enfer was over, that Kathleen went to a spot which she had visited in many a twilight hour, since she first gazed upon it in the dim early morning on the 25th of May.

This was the narrow side street in which she had seen the bloody traces of her husband's death, at the foot of the lamp-post. That dreadful spot was to her as his grave, and her coming hither had all the solemnity of a pilgrimage to a grave. The street was dull and solitary—a street of shabby houses, shabbily occupied by the working classes. It was a new street which had never attained prosperity, and three or four of the houses were empty, staring at the sky with curtainless windows, and boards announcing that they were to let. Here and there appeared a shop, but a shop which looked as if customers were the exception rather than the rule.

On this September evening the street was empty, save for a couple of women standing talking at a street-door, a little way from the lamp-post by which Gaston fell. The house facing this fatal spot was empty, had been empty ever since Kathleen had known the street. The windows were clouded with dust; the board announcing its vacancy had fallen on one side, and hung disconsolate. The proprietor had, doubtless, abandoned all hope of finding a tenant until the evil days had passed, and a new birth of prosperity had come about for this fair land of France. It was a dreary-looking house in a dreary street; a new house which had grown old and shabby without ever having been occupied.

Kathleen walked slowly up and down the street two or three times, coming back to the fatal spot, and standing beside it for a few minutes with bent head and clasped hands, and lips moving dumbly in prayer for the beloved dead. On the last time she saw a woman coming towards the same spot—coming as if to meet her, a woman who looked to her like a ghost. Yes, like one dead, who had come back to life purified and chastened by the pilgrimage through the valley of the shadow of death.

It was Suzon Michel, but not the Suzon of old. The fire in the large black eyes was quenched, the face had lost its brazen boldness, the rich carnation of sensual vigorous beauty had faded from the cheek. A pale grave face, with serious mournful eyes, looked at Kathleen, and, recognizing her instantly, blanched to the ashy whiteness of a corpse.

The women looked at each other in silence, and then each passed slowly upon her way. They met and parted without a word.

Two minutes afterwards, before she reached the corner of the street, Kathleen turned suddenly, and looked back, wanting to speak to Suzon Michel, to question her, she hardly knew wherefore or to what end. She thought of Suzon with horror and detestation; and yet they two had loved the same man: Suzon might know more of the details of Gaston's death than she, his wife, had been able to discover. She might know into what common grave his corpse had been flung, beneath what clay his bones were mouldering.

She turned, and the street was empty. There was not a sign of Suzon in the distance. Had she run ever so fast she could not have reached the end of the street. It was clear, then, that she had gone into one of the houses.

But which house? Kathleen loitered in the street for some time, contemplating those dreary-looking houses, trying to divine which of them had swallowed up Suzon Michel. Presently a woman came and stood at her door on the opposite side of the street. Kathleen went over to her and questioned her, describing Madame Michel, and asking if she knew of such a person.

The woman was only a lodger on the fourth story, and had not long lived there. She worked in a mattress manufactory a little way off, was out all day, and knew nothing of her neighbors.

IN THE SOUDAN.

Ended that strange career.
Long so victorious,
Slain by an Arab's spear,
Gordon the Glorious:
Stark under torrid skies,
Girdled with gloom,
Britain's best soldier lies
Dead in Khartoum.

Stewart falls bleeding, and
Earle is in glory
Steady, now! hand to hand,
Sweep all before ye!
Close up the shattered square,
Stand fast, who can!
Strike! while a hope is there
Left in Soudan.

Mothers of England, weep!
Weep, sons and daughters!
Weep for the brave who sleep,
Hard by Nile's waters!
Weep for your Burnaby
Dead in the van
Weep, ye, for all who lie
Cold in Soudan!

Winds of the desert sweep
Over them, lying
Locked in eternal sleep,
Death still defying.
Mammon and Avarice
Well may grow wan,
At thought of the sacrifice
Made in the Soudan.

Ave.

Full well I know the frozen hand has come
That mutes the songs of grove and garden dumb,
And chills and autumn's last chrysanthemums;

Yet would I find one blossom, if I might,
Ere the dark loom that weaves the robes of white
Hides all the wrecks of summer out of sight.

Sometimes in dim November's narrowing day,
When all the season's pride has passed away,
As mid the blackened stems and leaves we stray,

We spy the shelt'ring nook or rocky cleft,
A starry disk the hurrying winds have left,
Of all its blooming sisterhood bereft:

Some pansy, with its wondering baby eyes—
Poor wayside nursling—fixed in blank surprise
At the rough welcome of unfriendly skies.

Or golden daisy—will it dare decolate
The lion's look, to wear this gentle name?
Or blood-red salvia, with its lips aflame.

The storms have stripped the lily and the rose,
Still on its cheek the flush of summer grows,
And all its heart-leaves kindle as it blows.

So had I looked some bud or song to find
The careless winds of autumn left behind,
With these of earlier seasons' growth to blind.

Ah me! my skies are dark with sudden grief,
A flower lies faded on my garnered sheaf;
Yet let the sunshine gild this virgin leaf—

The joyous, blessed sunshine of the past,
Still with me, though the heavens are overcast—
The light that shines while life and memory last.

So, pictured rhymes, for loving readers meadt,
Bring back the smiles your jocund morning lent,
And warm their hearts with sunbeams yet unspent!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

BOTH FORGIVING.

"Well, Nettie, here I am! What is it you want to ask me?"

"I have heard a report that you are paying attention to a young woman in Woodville. Is it true?"

The girl spoke quietly, but there was a slumbering fire in her great black eyes which told a story of repressed passion.

The young man addressed changed color and winced under her steady look, but he made a pretence of answering lightly:

"So it is the same old story you have sent for me to come and hear. You are a jealous little piece, Nettie."

"Harmon, will you tell me the truth? I had much rather hear you speak out like a man, even if it breaks my heart, than to die by degrees while doubting you—and I do doubt you."

"Then, if you will be happier to know, instead of to imagine, the truth, here it is: I am going to be married to the girl in Woodville next Tuesday evening. She's one of the meek sort, and won't keep me in hot water by her jealousy, as you do."

Anger had evidently got the better of prudence in Harmon Hart's mind, or he might have continued to temporise with the girl who had been supplanted in his fickle fancy by the newer and perhaps more attractive charms of her rival.

Nettie's cheeks blanched, and she stood for an instant as though turned into stone. Then she pointed to the door.

"Go, false heart! Never let me see your face again! But know this: I will spoil your happiness, as you have ruined mine!"

Without a word the young man obeyed her; but, strive as he would, he could not keep his cheeks from blanching. He looked the despicable cringing creature that he was—for he who wins a girl's heart to break it always has the characteristics of a coward.

But, once out of Nettie's presence, the momentary feeling of uneasiness vanished, and he said half aloud:

"That's a good job over; she took it easier than I thought she would. All I have to do now is to hurry up the wedding-day, and set out for the west with Kitty. Her money will buy and stock a farm, and we'll live in clover. She's a good little thing, and not a spitfire like Nettie."

Kitty Nash was considered quite an heiress in the country neighborhood where she lived.

Upon the death of her father she had come with her mother to make her home at Meadow Farm with a childless old uncle.

She had six hundred pounds invested in Government securities, and upon her mother's death would inherit as much more. So mercenary feelings might have helped to cause the change in Harmon Hart's matrimonial intentions.

But Kitty rejoiced in his love, and was so bright and engaging in her ways, that each day tightened her chains about her lover, and by this very means prepared for him a surer punishment in the coming days. For Kitty was totally ignorant of the claims of Nettie upon Harmon, and, sweet-tempered as she was, there existed a strong undercurrent of firmness beneath her gay, light-hearted manner.

Then, too, Kitty was an unsparing critic of her own actions, having a most tender conscience about wrong-doing of any kind.

But Harmon rushed on to his fate. The wedding-day was set, the feast was being made ready, the minister was in his place, and the bride and groom had taken their positions before him.

Suddenly the sound of horse's hoofs sounded upon the gravelled carriage-sweep. They came fast and furiously, and then a messenger dismounted before the door, and striding in, said:

"I have an important message for the bride. It must be given her at once."

So, robed in her vestal white, Kitty received the letter, and paused to read it before the ceremony should proceed.

Then, with cheeks and lips as white as her dress, she turned to Harmon and handed it to him with the question:

"Is it true that you had no right to ask me to be your wife? Read that, and answer me as truly as though you were lying on your death-bed."

Harmon took the letter and ran his eyes over the uncertain writing. Cold chills ran through his veins as he read, for he felt that the threat contained therein was a genuine one. Thus the note ran:

"May the girl who has won the hand and the false heart of the man who has ruined my happiness, see before her my ghost every time she looks at Harmon Hart. My living form she cannot ever see, for before this is read I shall be dead and out of my misery.

"NETTIE STANTON."

"Harmon, is it true? Have you wronged the girl who wrote that letter?"

Slowly and reluctantly Harmon's answer came from his ashy lips. But Kitty's eyes would have seen the truth for themselves if he had denied it.

"I have done her wrong in this way, Kitty. I had promised to marry her. But she drove me wild with her jealous folly, and, oh, Kitty, I could not help loving you; you are the one to blame after all."

"Then I will be the one to teach you your duty. I shall never exchange another word with you after we part. Go to that unhappy girl and tell her you are sorry, and that you will prove yourself, even at this late period, a man of honor. Tell her, also, that Kitty Nash accepted your attentions not knowing that another had a prior right to you."

Without waiting for an answer from Harmon, Kitty turned to the minister and expressed her sorrow at his having been summoned on a bootless errand.

Then she left, holding herself proudly erect, and only showing the pain that was gnawing at her heart by the hectic flush which burned so redly upon her cheeks.

What passed after she had shut herself into her own room was only known to herself and to Him who sees the secret thoughts of the heart.

The sympathy of the community was with Kitty in the stand she had taken, and Harmon found himself punished by the avoidance of those who had heretofore been his friends.

Had he wished to obey Kitty's command with regard to Nettie, he could not have done so, for the girl had disappeared.

No one knew whether she had carried out her threat to destroy herself or not; but that was the general opinion in the neighborhood, and it was shared by Harmon, who, at last, driven to desperation by the coldness of his treatment, joined perhaps to the pangs of conscience, left the place, and was, after a time, no longer even thought about.

* * * * * * *

Two years later, upon one of the visiting-days at the hospital, a beautiful and stately young matron accompanied a party of friends through the wards. She herself was one of the lady-managers, and knew about all the different workings of the beneficent institution.

Her guests were from out of town; two of them being a bride and groom. The latter was her cousin, who had been ordered to the country the year previous, to recruit after a course of exhaustive study in his Alma Mater. He had been captivated by the naive sweetness of a young country maiden, and had succeeded in winning her love—not, however, without some trouble. For she had received one bitter lesson in life which had made her doubtful of mankind in general. But here she was with him, as pretty as a rose just bursting into blossom, and this was her wedding-trip.

"Katharine," said Mrs. Mellville, "I am sure you will admire one of the nurses in the —— Ward. She is a perfect picture in her nun-like garb, with her black eyes and red cheeks. But she is so quiet that one would think she must have met with a shock which had turned her into a beautiful statue of silence."

"You are growing absolutely romantic, Cousin Lizzie!" said Oscar Wrighton laughingly. "When did the change take place in you?"

"But she is as quick and efficient as though she lived and breathed only to give aid to the sick and dying," continued the lady, smiling at Oscar, but paying no other heed to his words. "Here she is now. But something must have happened; she looks strangely excited."

All eyes were at once turned towards the young woman specified by Mrs. Mellville.

She was indeed worthy of the encomium which had been passed upon her.

She was tall and slight, with large flashing black eyes and exquisitely cut features, which looked all the more sculpturesque for the plain white setting of her nurse's cap.

She was bending over a cot upon which lay a man whose life was evidently fast ebbing away; and, as Mrs. Mellville paused and spoke to her, her agitated face made it apparent that she had been recently moved by some strong emotion.

Mrs. Mellville was about to question her about the patients under her care, when a suppressed cry from the young bride attracted the attention of all.

Katharine had turned very white, and was clinging to her husband's arm, while her eyes were fixed upon the death-like face upon the pillow.

"Oh, Oscar," she said shudderingly, "it is Harmon Hart!"

With a tender "Never mind, Kitty; he is nothing to you now," her husband was about to draw her away from the spot; but like a flash had come an intuition of her personality to the nurse.

She fixed her eyes upon Katharine's shocked face, and asked gently:

"Are you she who was Kitty Nash?"

"Yes."

"Then Providence has brought you to this bedside at this moment. I am Nettie Stanton, and the man who wronged us both lies before us. He is dying. I have forgiven him freely. Will you also speed his parting soul?"

At this moment the patient opened his eyes and turned them first upon Nettie, then upon Kitty. But he closed them again with a groan.

"Kitty is here, Harmon," said Nettie softly, "and I have told her that I have forgiven you. I am sure she also cherishes no hard feelings towards you," turning her eyes upon Katharine.

But even as Nettie spoke a shiver passed over Harmon's white face, and he was no more.

Then, with lips as pallid as that of the dead, Nettie bent and kissed his marble forehead.

Harmon had been her first and only love, and now that he was dead she would remain his faithful mourner all through the rest of her life.

The two women who had thus strangely met beside that solemn death-bed, formed for each other a lifelong friendship.

Later on Nettie told Katharine how in her despair she had attempted to drown herself and had been rescued by a stranger, who had taken her to his home in an exhausted condition. How his wife—an earnest Christian woman—had cared for her tenderly, and had labored successfully to bring her to a knowledge of her Savior during the long illness which followed; and how she had risen from her sick-bed determined to devote her future life to doing good to her suffering fellow-beings—choosing for her sphere of action the duties of a nurse.

Delighted young husband—"What a treasure you are, my love. I thought you were so bound up in music and painting and embroidery and such things that you would not think of giving attention to such unpoetic things as meals, but here you have one of the most delicious plum puddings I have ever eaten." Blushing bride—"Oh! I do not forget that you liked nice things." "But getting me such a delicacy must have taken you considerable time." "Well, it did; but that was because neither Bridget nor I knew how to get it open." "Get what open, love?" "Why, the can the pudding came in."—Philadelphia Call.

Having lost the whole of both legs in the war, and subsequently living in poverty for twenty years on his pension, a Nashville man hit upon the idea of making a side-show curiosity of himself by attaching deceptive wax feet to his stumps and figuring as a freak of nature. He is now prosperous.

The value of the cocoanut as food is as yet but little understood. An instance of its use is found in the experience of two shipwrecked sailors. They were seven years on an island where their only food was cocoanuts and an occasional flying fish. They retained good health and gained in weight.

The latest novelty in bouquets was carried by the Princess of Wales at a ball after the races at Goodwood. It was of roses, and in the middle of it was concealed a miniature electric lamp, the light from which could be turned on at will by means of a little switch in the form of a lady's brooch.

Cafes, beer saloons, shops, stalls, etc., are proposed for Brooklyn Bridge. It is argued that by this means the bridge trustees could secure enough receipts to make up the present deficiency in the finances. If the plan be adopted visitors to New York may soon be able to see a modern reproduction of old London Bridge.

An ingenious farmer makes scarecrows out of old tin cans—tomato cans and the like—by rigging them up with a bit of old iron suspended in them like the tongue of a bell, and hanging them up in a corn-field, where the wind will set them ringing, making such an unusual and unexpected noise that crows will not dare remain in the field.

The rapid action of the "great pain cure," Polson's Nerviline, in relieving the most intense pain, is a matter of wonder to all who have used it. There is nothing surprising in its results, for it is made of the strongest, purest and most efficient remedies known in medicine. Nerviline cures toothache instantly; cramps in the muscles; neuralgia after two applications; rheumatism is at once relieved by its use; and the same may be said of all kinds of pain. Sample bottles, costing only ten cents, at any drug store. The large bottle only 25 cents. Polson's Nerviline sold by druggists and country dealers.

OF INTEREST TO WHEAT GROWERS.

Wheat growers and dealers in this country will be interested to know that Indian grain is likely to again enter into competition in European markets with the wheat sent from this continent. The latest official reports assert that the Indian crop for 1885 will be up to the average. In the Punjaub, the chief wheat growing district, "a bumper crop may be expected."

HIS BELOVED SLEEP.

A famous North Carolina clergyman, while preaching from the text, "He giveth his beloved sleep," stopped in the middle of his discourse, gazed upon his slumbering congregation and said: "Brethren, it is hard to realize the unbounded love which the Lord appears to have for a large portion of my auditory."

Return of the Voyageurs

On Sunday morning nine of the Peterborough wing of the Nile contingent arrived in town. They are all hale, hearty and sunburnt, and are full of wonderful stories of their experience in Egypt. They arrived too late for the reception prepared for them by the town. Since their return they have been the centre of groups of admiring listeners and are the heroes of the hour.

Liquor Licenses.

The Dominion authorities still persist in issuing liquor licenses, but it is plain that the dealers have lost confidence in the Usurpation act. The Dominion Inspector, Mr. Collins, informs us that only about half the number of Dominion licenses for the West Riding district is thus far applied for compared with last year fifteen will be the total. The Provincial license is the safer. The Ontario Government have decided to prosecute all dealers who sell under any other liquor license than that issued under the Crooks Act.

Obituary.

It is with great regret that we record the death of Mr. James Howden, which took place at his residence, North Monaghan, the Locks road, on Friday last. A few days ago he was moving about in the full enjoyment of his usually robust health On Monday last he was attacked with inflammation of the bowels, and so severe was the attack, and so rapid the progress of the disease, that on Friday evening he breathed his last. The deceased gentleman was well-known and highly respected in Peterborough, where he had built up a lucrative business. He was honored with a seat in the North Monaghan Council for several terms, retiring from municipal life in, we are informed, 1881. He was of a genial temperament and won and retained hosts of friends. His familiar figure will be much missed from our streets, but in the bosom of a large family, to which he was a kind and beloved father, death will leave the saddest blank, and his loss be most keenly felt. We extend them our hearty sympathy in their great affliction.

New Business Partnership.

By reference to our advertising columns the reader will notice that Messrs. W. F. Graham and A. J. Ritchie have formed a partnership for the handling of Agricultural Implements, succeeding to the business so long and successfully conducted by Mr. Wm. Graham, on Hunter street, opposite St. John's Church. Both members of the new firm are well qualified for the business they have entered into, and we can confidently recommend them to the patronage of the farming community. Mr. Graham has had an experience of ten years in connection with his father's business and thoroughly understands the wants of the farmers in the way of farming implements. Mr. Ritchie has also had a large experience in the business, being particularly conversant with the operating of self-binding reapers, now coming into such general use. We are sure the new firm will do a flourishing business and give every satisfaction, both in the matter of square dealing and also in providing the best implements in the market for their patrons. Give the new firm a call when you come to town again.

The Royal Arcanum

H. E. W. Campbell, of Boston, who has charge of the extension of the R. A. in Ontario, is visiting Peterborough to institute a subordinate council here. This is a benefit society similar in its objects to the A. O. U. W. and kindred societies. Beside its social and fraternal features the society guarantees a death benefit of four thousand dollars. We learn from Mr. Campbell that there are now twenty-nine councils of the Order in our Province, and that it is contemplated to institute the Grand Council of Ontario on the 25th inst.

A Boy's Bullseye.

In the southern show window of Messrs. W. J. Morrow & Co's grocery store, there is shown a well mounted head of a huge bull moose. The original owner of the head and horns was brought down in the woods in the Ottawa district by the rifle of Master James Fitzgerald, son of Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, P. L. S. This moose had a plentiful supply of horns - a veritable cornucopia. The head is a fine trophy of a boy's marksmanship; and, hanging on the walls of his hall, will in future be a tangible evidence of his shooting skill to be dilated on proudly to his children and grandchildren.

Curling.

Last Wednesday two Peterborough rinks met the Lindsay rinks on the icy field. The result was a victory for the home rinks. Dr. Boucher's rink and Mr. T. P. Attrill's rink scored 19 and 18 respectively, a total of 37. Mr. Flavelle's and Mr. McLennan's rinks scored 18 and 10 respectively, a total of 28, leaving Peterborough in a majority of 9. In the evening Port Hope and Peterborough tried conclusions, and the home team won another victory. Mr. George Brown's rink scored 26 and Mr. Geo. Dunsford's 20, a total of 46. Mr. G. Hall's rink scored 14, and Mr. E. Philp's 20, a total of 34. Majority for Peterborough, 12 points.

Roller Skating Rink.

The Roller Skating Rink, Water street, is growing in popularity. The patronage has so increased that the manager has found it necessary to order, (which he did on Tuesday) enough skates to bring the number, available for patrons, up to 120. This was considered a sufficient supply, and, when they arrive, the rink will be made even more attractive than it is at present. A band will be engaged to play regularly once or twice a week. The rink is being well patronized at present, as many are learning to skate on rollers. It is managed in a manner to secure the confidence of the public, and no doubt a prosperous career is before it.

Matrimonial.

We are pleased to learn of the marriage of Mr. W. F. Graham of Peterborough to Miss Gordon of Coloma, Michigan. The interesting event took place on the 25th of February in Michigan. The new couple went south on a wedding tour and returned to town on Friday evening last. They will become permanent residents of Peterboro'. We welcome them both, and wish them many happy years of wedded life. We object on principle to the marriage of cousins; but when it comes to our "American cousins," we approve, especially if such excellent taste and discrimination as that shown by Mr. Graham, are exercised.

Medical and Surgical Emergencies.

On Thursday evening last Dr. Clarke lectured in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on this subject. His lecture was full of interest and, besides a large amount of general information on the subject of human anatomy and physiology, gave plain and practical directions as to dealing with the sudden attacks of illness and with accidents such as all are subject to. Directions were given how to stay the flow of blood from wounds, and how to distinguish venous from arterial blood. Asphyxia from hanging, drowning or coal gas was dealt with, and treatment in case of poisoning indicated. Poisons were described as either alkaline or acid, and generally speaking, one was an antidote to the other. The lecture was most attentively listened to, and the lecturer received the thanks of the audience, given through Dr. Fife, who occupied the chair.

Lecture.

The Rev. A. H. Munro will deliver a lecture in the Murray-street Baptist Church on Thursday, March 19th, at 8 p.m., on the subject, "Models from Life for Life." Proceeds in aid of the Baptist Church funds. The rev. gentleman is a fluent speaker, a profound thinker, and there is no doubt that all who have the privilege of hearing him next Thursday night will be well pleased. Rev. Mr. Munro delivered the above lecture in Port Hope, and respecting it the Guide says: "One of the ablest and most eloquent lectures ever delivered before a Port Hope audience was given by the Rev. A. H. Munro on the above subject ("Models from Life and for Life") in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, on Friday evening, to an intelligent and appreciative audience. The reverend lecturer was frequently applauded during the delivery of his masterly address. It would be impossible for us to give anything like an outline of the lecture, so cramped is our space, but suffice it to say that the address was one of the finest we have ever had the pleasure of listening to.

Parlour Concert and Social.

On Thursday evening last a delightful parlour concert and social were given at the residence of Mrs. J. C. T. Lacey, Downey street. The attendance was good and the social success was charmingly supplemented by the presentation of an excellent programme. The following is the programme: - Instrumental duet, "La Malle des Indes." Miss Stratton and Miss Fairweather; solo, "The British Lion," Mr. Geo. Morgan; duet, "Maying," Mrs. Chambers and Mr. K. G. Loch; recitation, "The Polish Boy," Mr. R. J. Sailsbury; solo, "Mrs. Lofty and I," Miss Stephens; solo, "My Mother's Hands," Mr. J. F. Holden; solo, Miss Mabel Chambers; solo, "The Midshipmite," Mr. Geo. Matthews; solo, "Jessie's Dream," Mrs. VanEvery; recitation, "The Maniac," Mr. R. J. Sailsbury; solo, "Good Company," Mr. Geo. Morgan; solo, "Mary of Argyle," Mrs. Chambers; "God Save the Queen." In addition Miss Walsh gave several instrumental pieces during the evening. During an interval in the programme refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Lacey did everything in their power to contribute to the enjoyment of the company, who will long have pleasant memories of Mr. and Mrs. Lacey's hearty and graceful hospitality. This was the second of a series of socials held and to be held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church. Both have been models of what parlour socials should be.

Inspection.

Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Officer, is inspecting officially the bakeries and confectionery establishments in the town. While we feel that these establishments in Peterborough have nothing to fear, still, on principle, inspection is considered necessary in the public interests.

Stock Shipments.

Messrs. Dencon & Roseborough shipped to Montreal on Saturday last a car-load of fine cattle, and, on Tuesday, a mixed car of horses and cattle. These gentlemen do a large business in this line and give our farmers a chance to dispose of their surplus stock at good figures.

A New Era in the Dry Goods Trade at the "Golden Lion."

This season's importation well worthy of your inspection. Fair VanEvery & Co. are daily opening their New Spring Goods for every Department. Their Grand Exhibit this season will surpass their former efforts and eclipse everything for Variety, Quality and Cheapness.

New Spring Stock.

We call the attention of our readers to the fact announced by Mr. Joseph Griffin, in our advertising columns, that he is now receiving his spring stock of boots and shoes. This presents an excellent opportunity for the public to provide themselves for the spring season, when it is especially necessary to be well shod. That Mr. Griffin's boot and shoe store is the place to go will be at once apparent to any one calling on him. His stock will be found to be unusually varied and attractive, and the prices will be found astonishingly low.

Victims of Government Promises.

On Tuesday evening the deputations to stir up the Government in regard to the Trent Valley Canal went to Ottawa. Mr. Strickland, Warden, represented the county; Lakefield was represented by Mr. Isaac Garbutt, sr., and Mr. Moore, and the town by Messrs. Geo. A. Cox, Jas. Stevenson, J. Carnegie, M.P.P., and John Garvey. The town members might put in a word for the postoffice while they are at the Capital. It is singular that the Government, which is so squarely pledged to building the Trent Valley Canal and the postoffice, should require to have its memory jogged so frequently.

Greate Concerte.

"Ye Bille o'fare" for the "Old Folks" concert is being prepared, and will soon be presented for your inspection in very readable shape. This entertainment promises to be the event of the season. A choir of about fifty including the principal singers in most of the town choirs, have been practicing for some time past. The singers and all who take part in the entertainment will be dressed in the costumes of one hundred years ago. Some of the old, old songs, hymns, and anthems will be sung, in fact the whole programme is an unusually good one. As an instance of the popularity of these unequalled entertainments, a concert of this kind was given in Toronto last May, in aid of a Sunday School fund, and long before the concert came off, every seat was taken, and the concert had to be repeated. Programmes printed in the old English, on old fashioned tinted paper in pamphlet form, with the words of all the songs, &c., are being printed, and may be obtained as soon as ready in the bookstores.

Special Visit to Peterborough.

Last month the Surgeons from the celebrated International Throat and Lung Institute 173 Church street, Toronto, were visited by over 500 sufferers who examined and tested the wonderful Spirometer as invented by Dr. M. Souvielle of Paris, ex-Aide Surgeon of the French army, which conveys medicines directly to the seat of disease. All who examined the Spirometer express themselves highly satisfied and were surprised at the powerful effects produced. Thousands of invalids are being cured every year of the worst forms of Catarrh, Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, Enlarged Tonsils and Loss of Voice. Weak Lungs are strengthened and Consumption arrested in its rapid progress. The large number of patients under their care enable them to bring their price within the reach of all.

The Surgeons will be at the Grand Central Hotel, Peterborough, Wednesday and Thursday, March 25th and 26th 1885.

Saved Army Anniversary.

On Thursday evening last the Saved Army celebrated the anniversary of their advent into this town by holding a banquet and jubilee. During the day large numbers arrived from Port Hope, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Warsaw, all determined to make this celebration a success. The tables, which were well filled, and which everyone seemed to enjoy, presented a very enticing appearance. At 8 o'clock an adjournment was made to the Opera House, where the jubiloe was held. The hall was well-filled. The chair was occupied by Mr. Robt. Weir, delegate for this station. A large number of officers and friends were on the platform, among whom were the following:—Gen. Lindsay, Mr. G. B. Sproule, Capts. Munt, Pengilly, Wyatt, Lathwell, Piper, McGregor and Clarke, Lieut. Boyler, Mr. H. Fowler, Lindsay, Dr. Thompson, Bobcaygeon, and the Misses Bolster and Stephens, of Cobourg. A well-selected programme was presented and gone through in a very creditable manner. The singing of Miss Bolster, Miss Stephens and Capt. McGregor was particularly good, and the same may be said of the Lindsay warriors, who were encored and cheerfully responded several times. The recitation, "David's Lamentation," given by Mr. Werden, was also beautifully rendered and listened to with rapt attention. An address by Gen. Lindsay, with singing and prayer, brought the programme to a close. The receipts netted a handsome sum.

A Peterborough Warrior.

The Winnipeg Sun has the following reference to a former well known citizen of Peterborough. "Colonel Kennedy was born in Peterborough, Ont., in the year 1839. His father was one of the oldest pioneers of that town. At an early age the colonel started in life as a contractor and builder, but subsequently abandoned this occupation to study law, remaining in the office of D. W. Dumble, barrister, for about two years. In 1870 he abandoned the idea of becoming a lawyer, and joined the Red river expedition under Wolseley. Previous to this he held the rank of a captain and adjutant of the Fifty-seventh Battalion of Peterborough. Arriving at Fort Garry he remained with the standing force for two years, and then retired, retaining the command of the Winnipeg Field Battery. In 1872 he was appointed registrar, which position he has held since that time. He was in command of the Field Battery until quite recently, when he retired to take command of the Winnipeg Rifle Battalion, which he was to a large extent instrumental in organizing. In the early history of Winnipeg the colonel was a member of the Northwest Council. He was mayor of the city during the second year of its incorporation, and was returned the following year—1876. Col. Kennedy has done a great deal towards advancing the educational interests of Manitoba and is a member of the Board of Education. He was instrumental in organizing the Manitoba contingent for Egypt, which is said to have tendered such good service to Lord Wolseley in his mission."

New Educational Institution.

Peterborough Business College.

It is conceded on all hands that the education that fits a young man most thoroughly for the performance of the actual duties of life is, by all odds, the most useful. It will, therefore, be a pleasant announcement to our citizens, when we state that Mr. D. J. Bannell Sawyer, of Ottawa, has lately completed arrangements for the opening in Peterborough, early in April next, of a first-class Business College. This gentleman is especially well-fitted for the successful management of such an educational institution. By virtue of five years' experience as a teacher in the Ottawa Normal School, he possesses, in an unusual degree, the rare art of imparting instruction. This art has received a practical character, with respect to the Business College, which Mr. Sawyer is about to institute, from his having taught two years in a Business College in Ottawa. Besides, his general qualifications are shown by his being the author of an excellent system of Penmanship, and of a system of Shorthand. He has also published Studies For Real Life, which possessed so great merit that His Excellency the Governor-General, Lord Lansdowne, consented that the work should be dedicated to him. Mr. Sawyer is an Undergraduate in Science, of the University College of Ottawa, and for seven years edited a well-known educational journal of this province. The College premises will be the rooms over the Bank of Commerce, which Mr. Cox has begun putting in readiness. Mr. Sawyer is furnishing them with every appliance which mature experience has shown to be necessary for the imparting of a thoroughly first-class business education. The fact that several persons have, without solicitation, given their names as students, augurs well for the success of the Peterborough Business College. The several departments are, - Finance; Shorthand and Typewriting; Telegraphy; Pen Art. An efficient staff will be appointed, among them Mrs. Sawyer, who holds a Normal School Provincial certificate. For many reasons it is important to the town that such an institution should be cordially supported. It will add to the population of the town by attracting as students many persons who will be more or less permanent citizens. It will afford an opportunity, for those living in Peterborough, to secure an excellent commercial education without incurring the expense of leaving their homes and going abroad for the purpose. It may also, perhaps, save the Collegiate Institute from the expense involved in employing an extra teacher, as is now deemed necessary. In every way the institution in question will be a most desirable addition to our educational facilities; especially, when the Principal, Mr. Sawyer, is so well qualified to conduct it in a manner to command the support and encouragement of the Province. The town is to be congratulated upon having been chosen as the site of an institution of such practical importance, and one which will, we are sure, reflect credit upon the place. We have no doubt that it will receive a hearty welcome and substantial support from our citizens. We take it as a pleasure that we are allowed to be the first to welcome Mr. Sawyer and the Peterborough Business College, and to wish him and it all the success so essential and important an educational enterprise deserves.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Ruttan, of Napanee, was in town on Monday on business connected with the Medical Council of Ontario.

Mr. G. M. Stewart, with the Ontario Bank here, left on Tuesday, on a three months leave of absence, for Denver, Colorado, for the benefit of his health.

Mr. Jas. Emmerson, formerly with the Metropolitan Grocery, but now of Muskegon, Michigan, has been in town during the past week on a visit.

Mr. H. H. Smith has been appointed Dominion Land Commissioner in the room of the late Aquila Walsh. The scene of his duties lies in the Northwest.

Mr. James Little, photographer, has returned from his long visit to the North-West in excellent health, and is devoting himself with renewed energy to his business.

Miss Hughes, daughter of Mr. J. L. Hughes, Downey street, left on Saturday last for London, where she will reside in future, with the family of her brother-in-law, Mr. Sharp.

Mr. P. McIntyre, of Otonabee, started on Monday evening by the Grand Trunk for San Jose, California. He goes to look after the business of his late brother, who was foully murdered by robbers about a year ago.

We notice in the Battle Creek (Mich.) Sunday Morning Call a complimentary notice of Mr. P. Paquin, V.S. (formerly of the firm of Crevier & Paquin, here), on the occasion of his departure for Kansas City, where he will pursue the practice of his profession. Mr. Paquin is also veterinary editor of the Michigan Grange Visitor.

On Wednesday Mr. Joseph Lousley, of Apsley, arrived in Peterborough on his way home from Montreal. He has been there four months, undergoing treatment for a diseased ankle. Last spring he injured his ankle and necrosis, or death of the bone, set in. The Montreal surgeons advised amputation, and the diseased member was taken off midway between foot and knee.

"Life and Times of Wiclif."

Rev. W. C. Bradshaw will deliver his deeply interesting lecture on the "Life and Times of Wiclif," in St. Luke's, Ashburnham, on Tuesday evening, March 17th. This lecture will be well worth hearing. Don't neglect it. Admission 15 cents.

Buyers on the Market, Beware.

Last Saturday a lady in town bought a quantity of produce on the market and paid for it at the time. It was not delivered. Farmers, it appears, are not all honest, and buyers should, when paying for goods before delivery, get the name of the seller, so that if dishonest, he could be dealt with by law.

Waste not your Wealth.

Parties who take out Dominion licenses for the sale of liquor, are simply throwing away money for a license that will not protect them. The Provincial Secretary for Ontario has issued a circular to Inspectors, instructing them to ignore the Dominion Act, and to refuse all fees from persons taking licenses under it. Persons holding Dominion licenses only, will be prosecuted and punished for selling liquors without license.

Brief but Destructive Fire.

On Wednesday about noon a fire broke out in the upholstering rooms in the third story of Mr. D. Belleghem's furniture warerooms. The firemen were promptly out and succeeded in quelling the flames before much damage was done to the building. The big stock of finished and unfinished work in the rooms at the time, was between fire and water, entirely ruined. The water, pouring through the other floors, made it necessary to remove every piece of a stock of thousands of dollars worth of furniture from the second and first floors. The citizens did splendid work, and the furniture was shifted with as little damage as possible. It was, however, badly injured by water. Mr. Belleghem's loss is heavy, but, at this writing, it cannot be reduced to figures. Counting actual damage to stock and interruption of business, it will be serious. The insurance is $200 on stock and $600 on building in the Western, and $2,000 on stock in the Northern. We offer our sympathy to Mr. Belleghem, and feel sure that his vigorous enterprise and the friendship of the public which his square-dealing has created, will help him to soon overcome the misfortune.

GORDON OF KHARTOUM.

(Written for THE EXAMINER.)

Mongst the sainted Christian soldiers
Is writ another name,
All worthily inscribed upon
The scroll of endless fame.
In you many mansioned Dwelling
Hath been filled another room,
An inheritance eternal for
The hero of Khartoum.
We gaze upon the history,
Contemplate well the strife
That fills the pages of the book,
Of that now finished life.
So purely lived, unsullied, and,
Convinced it was his doom,
He strove the slave-trade to uproot,
That centres at Khartoum.
What tho' in blood his sun hath set,
And lurid clouds surround,
The lesson taught us may we learn
With which his deeds abound.
That honest, earnest, effort made
In striving to redress,
The woes of mankind suffering,
Is better than success.
That satisfies the sordid mind
With temporary good.
O may the precious seed he sowed,
And watered with his blood,
Be reaped by unknown millions
He strove to elevate,
To bless with Christian liberty
From their degraded state.
Duty's call he never slighted,
But faithfully obeyed;
In the trenches of Sebastopol
His service first was made;
But when the olive branch of peace
Was o'er the nations waved,
On the Russo-Turkish frontier he
All risks and hardships braved,
But soon a wider field of work
Our hero sought and found,
When fame's loud trumpet took his name
And filled earth with the sound.
He freed fair China from the hordes
Of murderous Tai Ping,
And drove them from the wasted land
Back to their own Nanking.

To Afric's central regions, that Lacustrine, grand plateau
Where glittering Nyanzas stretch
Beneath the tropics glow,
Our indomitable hero went,
Beneficent, and mild,
In great humanity's just cause
To calm the savage wild.
And wond'rous well the task performed:
With love he ruled and strength
Bestowing justice to the tribes
O'er all its breadth and length.
But greater thought his soul inspired,
For it his life he spent
To blot the slave trade from the soil
Of that vast continent.

Another call he hears again,
His country's own command,
Then crossed the Nubian desert o'er
Two hundred miles of sand;
Thro' enemies unnumbered he
All unescorted came
And with one comrade manned the town
Which shares his endless fame.
He manned indeed their feeble hearts
Whose little courage fled,
And filled them with inspiring hope.
Them e'en to victory led.
But foes in myriads did surround
And leaguered with their might
The city he so bravely held
In cause of truth and right.
But months of patient watching past
And fighting day by day
While for his rescuers he gazed
And wrestled with delay.
Till traitors, bribed, the town betrayed,
A martyr's welcome doom,
He held the fort 'gainst, foros, thro' fraud
He died in dark Khartoum.
What tho' our hero's corse sleeps not
In Westminster's proud fane,
Or 'neath the dome of high St. Paul's
Dust turns to dust again;
Within their sacred precincts both
In poet's or monarch's tomb
A nobler heart rests not than his Who garrisoned Khartoum.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

The Lakefield contingent of the deputation to Ottawa, in the interest of the Trent Valley Canal, returned last week, quite satisfied that the Burleigh Looks are to be pushed next summer.

CONCERT.

The concert held in the P. C. A. Hall, on the 12th inst., under the auspices of the C. P. Church, and was got up by Mr. W. J. Wallace, proved a complete success in every way. There was a full house and an excellent programme. Receipts nearly $50.

GONE WEST.

Mr. Thos. Casement and family left the village on Tuesday last, for Dakota.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The Board met on Tuesday evening, the 10th. All members present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The following accounts were presented and ordered to be paid:

W. Reynolds, 254 Cords Wood, at $3.30	$81 60
Andrew Wilson, 2 Cords Light Wood	5 00

The communications in reference to sending delegates to Millbrook and Lindsay, to discuss the advisability of getting increased grants to town and village schools were received.

It was moved by Mr. W. J. Wallace, seconded by Mr. T. Gordon, that the account of Mr. Thos. Casement for services as returning officer at the late school election be not paid, as he would be disqualified thereby. Carried.

Dr. Armour asked for the yeas and nays, which were taken as follows: Yeas—Messrs. Wallace, Dench, and Gordon. Nays—Dr. Armour.

The consideration of the rules for the guidance of the board, in conducting its proceedings, was postponed till the next meeting.

The Board adjourned,

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met pursuant to adjournment March 2nd 1885, all the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. A by-law appointing overseers of highways, pound keepers, and fence viewers passed its several readings and was signed and sealed. The time allowed Mr. Lewis Davies for removal of timber on the 15th Con. line from Little Mud Lake to Buckhorn Lake also Mr. Jas. G. Davies for removal of timber on 16th Con. line from Buckhorn Lake to the west side of Lot 23 was extended for 5 years. The time for Mr. M. S. Dean to remove timber from roadway west of Communication Lots opposite Lot 11 and part of Lot 10 was extended for 5 years, unless the roadway is sooner required, in which case Mr. Dean to remove timber at any time upon the Council giving reasonable notice of the same. The sum of $2050 was appropriated to roads as follows. To the north division of the Township $550 and to each of the other divisions $375. The Council agreed to pay Benjamin McIlmoyl $2 per week for the support of Mr. Kitchener, from first January. The Clerk was instructed to prepare a by-law to detach the south west quarter of Lot 23 in the 5th Con. from S. S. No. 6 and attach the same to S. S. No. 4. The Council then adjourned to meet on the 30th March.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

What a flood of music swells
From your throats, wedding bells.
And what happiness it tells
To the world.

We learn that our townsman, Mr. James Miller, has taken unto himself a wife, in the person of Miss J. Bryce, of Keene, and that now they are off on their wedding tour. Long may they live and merry be.

We understand that Mr. J. McIntyre intends having his last and grandest carnival of the season on Friday first. Come one, come all, both great and small, and short and tall.

Great coats are in demand just now. We think that thing "zero" has something to do with it, as it has got somewhere about 10 or 12 degrees above the weather.

An old and respected citizen of Allandale died on Tuesday morning, in the person of John Trotter, at the ripe age of 78. His remains will be placed in the vault at Peterborough till spring.

A meeting for the purpose of organizing the township for the Scott Act canvass was held in Keene Town Hall last Wednesday, and good work done. A central committe, and six sub-committees, of five members each, one for each polling sub-division, were appointed to look after the canvass; the sub-committees doing the local work. The canvassers are already in the field and are making great progress. It is arranged to have a series of public meetings in various parts of the township next week. We can only give the date of the one at Villiers school house, which will be held on Tuesday evening, 24th, at 6 p.m. Several good speakers will be present, and at the end parties will be invited to ask such questions as they may wish to have information upon.

APSLEY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

We are now getting regular March weather, with its high winds and snow drifts.

Feed for cattle is getting very scarce in this part of the country, and we fear that the farmers will lose some few head before the grass is fit for pasturage.

We were delighted to see our old friend, Mr. R. Bateson, in the village the other day, his jovial good natured face is enough make you happy, whether you wish it or not. He is travelling through here with Fanning Mills and Pumps, for Forsyth & Co., of Peterborough, and judging by the loads he brings up, must be doing a rushing business.

On Thursday afternoon about half past four, smoke was seen issuing in large volumes from beneath the eaves of the roof of a house owned by J. McIlmoyle, now occupied by Mr. Peyton Shewen. The fire was discovered to be in the store adjoining, now used as a school-room, where it must have been smouldering for some hours, between the celling and upper floor round the cylinder of the stove-pipe. On opening the door a large portion of the celling fell with a crash, when one could discern nothing but flames and smoke. The only working pump in the village suddenly went dry, and only for the quantities of snow which were showered on, which finally subdued the flames, the main part of the village would have, in all probability, been consumed. Very great praise is due to all who assisted to put it out, we believe the building is insured. Mr. Shewen had no insurance on the furniture destroyed.

OTONABEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Council met pursuant to adjournment at Keene, 16th of March, 1885. All the members present; minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. On application of William Lang, Esq., he was granted cedars to make a crossing opposite his place. Mr. Alex. Turner, on application, was allowed to place a fence across the allowance for road between the 10th and 11th concessions, opposite lot No. 21, and to keep up same during summer season. The treasurer was directed to pay Mrs. Edwards $12 for keep of John Trotter, also to James Armstrong $14 for keep of George Carlyle. The remainder of the sitting was occupied by the council in discussing a by-law to authorize Overseers of Highways to take gravel and other material for making and repairing roads and bridges, and also making out lists of overseers of highways, pound keepers, fence viewers, etc. The Clerk was directed to engross such by-laws for next meeting of the council. Council adjourned to meet on the 20th of April next.

BRIDGENORTH.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Cecilia Jane, second daughter of Mr. M. S. Dean, Bridgenorth, which took place on Thursday last, after a very short illness. Miss Dean was a very amiable young lady, and will be greatly missed by her many friends and acquaintances, by whom she was highly respected, and who will ever associate kind remembrances with her name. The funeral, which took place on Saturday, was largely attended. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

While Mrs. Wm. Udy was returning from church on Sunday, March 8th, she fell and broke her arm.

A fruit social in aid of the Sunday School will be held in the Line Baptist church on Thursday evening of this week.

Scarlet fever has made its appearance, but up to the present only one person has taken the disease.

BENSFORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Two destructive fires occurred last week at Wallace Point, the first a dwelling house occupied by Mr. Hunter, was burned on Monday morning and on Wednesday morning the frame dwelling belonging to Mr. Greer. The latter building was only erected last summer and was occupied a few weeks, having no insurance.

An important sale of farm stock and implements will be held on Friday afternoon 20th on lot 14 near here. The stock and implements were the property of the late Hugh O'Heir. Joseph Barnard will be the auctioneer.

Messrs. J. Muncy, T. Donaldson and J. Lightfoot purchased last month from Mr. Graham Cavanville a fine horse, Parole, for which they paid $1,105

A FINE FASHION PAPER.

The American Bazar, New York, for March, just received, is a brilliant number of this popular ladies' paper. Its fashion illustrations are superb, its literary contents excellent, and its whole make up clean and interesting, in short it is emphatically a paper suited to the home circle. All this makes it amply worth its almost nominal subscription price of One Dollar a year, but, not satisfied with giving so much for so little its proprietors offer a choice from a list of premiums which is really wonderful. As a sample, 37 complete stories by best writers, 65 pieces of popular music (words and notes), or a dictionary that retails for One Dollar, etc. We advise our lady readers to send 10c. for a sample copy and see it for themselves.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Regular Session.

A regular meeting of the Town Council was held on Tuesday evening, March 17th. Present, Mayor Cox in the chair, Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNaughton, Kelly, Green, McClelland, Yelland, Douglass, Rutherford, Menzies, Kendry and Hartley.

After routine,

COMMUNICATIONS

were received

From John Halpin, through Mr. J. O'Meara, solicitor, demanding damages to the amount of $1,000 for injury to his business caused by the condition of Hunter street bridge. Finance Committee.

From F. M. Haultain, asking charity for one Portsmouth.

From J. Johnston and others, asking to have the name of street changed. Referred to councillors of No. 4 ward with power to act.

From Wm. Ross, tendering an offer of $950 for the market tolls.—Referred to the Market committee.

From Wm. Croft, in reference to compensation for loss caused by excessive license for billiard tables. Received.

From Mrs. Joshua Buller and Wm. Logan asking remission of taxes.—The former was granted, and the second referred to the Court of Revision.

From J. Tully and C. Brealy, asking leave to erect a shed over the creek in Snowden's yard.—Referred to Building committee.

From J. H. Roper, President of the Peterborough Horticultural Society, soliciting of the council a grant of $300, to assist in beautifying Court House Park.—Received.

From W. H. Law, asking the council to remit five per cent. additional on taxes unpaid on Dec. 1st.—Court of Revision.

A number of accounts was presented and dealt with.

COURT HOUSE PARK.

Mr. J. H. Roper addressed the council in reference to beautifying Court House Park. He stated that the County Council would give a lease of the park for 21 years and make a grant of $75 per year. The Horticultural society had considered the matter, and proposed laying out the park and adorning it with walks, flowers and fountains. One gentleman, he said, had offered to furnish a fountain, and the Water Works would supply water. The society expected that the council would give $300, and the former would aid the project according to its ability. He detailed the importance and necessity of such a place of resort. In answer to Mr. Rutherford he stated that the Society did not propose to do anything with the Central Park. Ultimately a new fence would be placed around the Court House Park. The public would be freely admitted, subject to regulations for preserving the beauty of the grounds from wanton injury.

Mr. Stevenson said the place had for years been an eyesore and a source of disagreement. He had appealed twice to the county council on the matter. He was ashamed of the lack of such a place as a decent park when strangers came to the town. The Society proposed to get a competent man to lay out the grounds, and the county council had agreed to the utilization of prison labour. As to a fountain, he (Mr. Stevenson), and Mr. Cox would see that a fountain was provided. (Applause.) He agreed with Mr. Roper in suggesting that the council appoint a committee to act with the Society. He hoped the council would deal with the latter in a liberal spirit.

Mr. F. J. Lewis endorsed what had been said, and he thought the council as well as the citizens generally were interested equally with the Horticultural Society.—The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

FINANCE.

Mr. Davidson, chairman, presented the report of the Finance Committee, recommending the payment of the following accounts:—

Metropolitan Grocery	$50 25
Geo. Stethem	6 50
J. R. Stratton	18 33
R. Pidgeon	2 25
R. B. McKee	10 26
M. Millar	6 57
Protestant Home (John Mills)	48 00
Protestant Home (Willie Miller)	50 00
Co. Peterboro' (conveying prisoners)	2 28

The committee further recommend that the petition of constables Pigeon and Adams be referred to the Committee on Appointments. The report was adopted.

MARKET.

Mr. McClelland, chairman, presented the report of the Market Committee recommending that the same arrangement as that of last year be continued with the present lessee of the market tolls. Report, together with the communication of Mr. Wm. Ross, referred back to the committee with power to act.

STREETS AND BRIDGES.

Mr. Cahill, chairman, presented the report of the Street Committee, recommending that the following tenders for supplying lumber for streets and bridges for the current year be accepted:—That of Mr. W. H. Kelly for pine lumber, at $8.55 per thousand, and that of Mr. Alfred McDonald for cedar at $9 per thousand, and that both be required to enter into an agreement for the due performance of the respective contracts. Report adopted.

LICENSE LAW AMENDMENTS.

Mr. Davidson, in introducing a by-law to repeal a by-law passed last year, separating the sale of groceries and liquors, to come in force this year, said that in view of the probability of the passage of the Scott Act, it was not worth while to put dealers to the trouble of making the change for so short a time.

Mr. Rutherford said the matter should be referred to the License Committee.

Mr. Douglass and Mr. McNaughton supported the by-law.

Mr. Cahill pointed out that by declining to repeal the by-law, the town would lose revenue, because dealers would take out Dominion licenses, and the Ontario Government would refuse such license fees; and Mr. McClelland pointed out that the Inspector had no power to issue a license till the applicant had conformed with existing municipal by-laws, and he advised the council to take advice before proceeding further.

Mr. Menzies favored referring the matter to the committee, as the enforcement of the by-law would be an injustice to dealers.

Mr. Yelland showed that dealers had had over a year's notice to dispose of their stock, and Mr. Kendry spoke in a similar strain.

Mr. Cahill in reply to Mr. McClelland said the council certainly had power to repeal a by-law it had power to pass. Enforcing the separation by-law would not decrease the consumption of liquor, while it would be a hardship to ratepayers who had contributed both by way of taxes and license fees to the revenue of the town.

On motion the by-law was referred to the license committee to report at the next meeting of the council.

BILLIARDS.

Mr. Menzies said excessive billiard licenses had deprived the town of a large amount of revenue, while billiards under cover of "clubs" was played as much as ever, and his motion to reconsider the license by-law as far as it refers to billiards, and to make the license fee the same as that of 1884, was referred to the License Committee to report at the next meeting.

STAND PIPES.

On motion of Mr. Hartley, seconded by Mr. Kendry, the Fire, Water and Light Committee were instructed to take the proper steps to have the stand pipes erected as provided by the agreement with the Water Company last year.

PREPARING TO OCCUPY.

On motion of Mr. Davidson, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, the Building Committee was instructed to have plans prepared for the fitting up of the Bank of Toronto buildings for corporation purposes.

SAVING COSTS.

On motion of Mr. Yelland, seconded by Mr. Douglass, Mr. Beavis and the constables were instructed to act as the collector's bailiffs to save costs to taxpayers.

The council adjourned till next Monday night.

OBITUARY.

FRANCIS C. BEST.

The death of Francis Best will be felt deeply by the wide circle of friends which his many social and personal good qualities created. Resulting from a cold, contracted about two years ago, a disease of the bronchial tubes fastened itself on him, and finally developed into consumption. The best medical attention proving vain, a change of climate was tried, and the young gentleman spent about nine months in Colorado. This, too, failed, and he returned home a few weeks ago and, rapidly sinking, on Wednesday morning of last week he passed away. He was an estimable young man, worthy of the general esteem he enjoyed.

ROBERT MCCAMUS, CAVAN.

On Saturday, March 7th, Mr. Robert McCamus, a veritable landmark of the township of Cavan, passed to his rest. Born in Cavan, Ireland, in the opening year of the century, he was 85 years at the time of his death. In 1820 he came to Canada, settling in the township to which he and those who emigrated with him, gave its present name. Nineteen years ago his wife, Isabella McNeil, departed this life. Deceased was an industrious and successful farmer, and has long ceased from work and enjoyed the fruits of his industry. Of a family of four, there survive two daughters and one son, and their descendants, among whom is Mr. Robert Fair, (of Fair, VanEverey & Co.) whose grandfather Mr. McCamus was. Mr. McCamus was in life highly respected; he was a genuine and liberal friend of the poor, and in various other ways made the world better for his being in it. He was among the last of a sturdy stock of pioneers, who conquered the wilderness and made out of it happy homes.

CECILIA JANE DEAN.

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Cecilia Jane, second daughter of Mr. M. S. Dean, which sad event took place on Thursday last, after a brief illness. The young lady was attacked with inflammation of the liver, and so severe was the visitation that it only required 36 hours to do its deadly work. The deceased was an amiable and popular young lady, and her sudden calling away has cast a deep gloom over a community in which she was universally loved and respected. Her father, Mr. M. S. Dean, is well-known throughout the county, and in his affliction he will receive the sympathy of the hundreds that know and respect him.

MRS. JOHN GARVEY.

Among the sudden summons to the world of spirits, is that of Mrs. John Garvey, who departed this life on Wednesday morning of last week after an illness—inflammation of the bowels—of less than two days. She was attacked on Monday evening, and on Wednesday morning about one o'clock, death claimed her. Peculiar sadness attaches to the circumstances of her death from the fact that she leaves behind her a family of seven small children, hardly old enough to appreciate the irreparable loss they and their father have sustained.

ADAM SCOTT, MILLBROOK.

On Tuesday last Mr. Adam Scott, a former well-known resident of Peterborough, passed to his last rest, at the age of nearly 70 years. Deceased was a son of the late Adam Scott, of this town, who built the first grist mill in this part of the country, on the present site of Denne's Mills. Adam Scott, jr., was, like his father, a millwright, and built in succession, Cottingham's Grist Mills, Omemee; the Cavan Mills; Scott's Mills, in Manvers; and mills at the head of Rice Lake. He was a resident of Peterborough over 50 years ago. He married a sister of Mrs Samuel Dickson, of this town. He was well known throughout the whole Newcastle District. For the past 20 years he has lived in Millbrok. His last illness, of only a week's duration, was inflammation of the lungs.

THE LATE ORMISTON DIXON.

The New York Sporting and Theatrical Journal, in its issue of March 7th publishes the following notice of the death of the late Mr. Ormiston Dixon:—

"Ormiston Byron Dixon, the ventriloquist, professionally known as Orm. Dixon, died at his home in Peterborough, Ont., on Sunday morning, February 15, of consumption, superinduced by a severe cold contracted while playing an engagement at the Lyceum Theatre in Chicago in January last. Acting upon the advice of physicians he prepared to make a southern tour but after filling five nights at Indianapolis his lung trouble became so aggravated that he was obliged to cancel his engagements and return home arriving in Peterborough on February 10. Despite the efforts of skilful physicians, and that loving care which only near relations can bestow, he passed from earth.

"Orm. Dixon was born at Brighton, Ont., December 31, 1856. His father, since dead, being a Collegiate principal, it may be supposed that Orm's intellectual training was all that could be desired. Very early in life he possessed the power of mimicry in a remarkable degree, and could reproduce any sound once heard. He discovered his ventriloquial power by accident, and took great pleasure in practising and developing it. Upon leaving school at the age of seventeen he applied himself to learning the drug business. The confinement in that business became distasteful to him and he quit it after four years to study medicince. This he relinquished to try his fortune in the world of amusement, being convinced that the stage was his natural sphere. As is generally the case, he had many difficulties to overcome at the outset, and his early ventures amounted to flat failures. Being possessed of great pluck and perseverance, he gradually overcame all obstacles. The circle of his fame widened, and after fighting manfully he found himself in the front rank of his profession. The metropolitan as well as the provincial press showered praises upon him and he became a great popular favorite. His untimely death cut short what was destined to become a brilliant career.

"The Journal having enjoyed a professional acquaintance with the dead ventriloquist, can speak of Orm. Dixon's sterling qualities both as a man and a performer. He was at once the dignified, polished gentleman, and the genial, warm hearted, and agreeable companion. He loved his art, not because he himself was a thorough master of it, but for its own sake, and would have worshipped it just as warmly had another been as capable of illustrating it. The maple leaves of Canada will cast their graceful shadows upon the grave of a true hearted, generous man whom all loved. At the time of his death Mr. Dixon had in preparation a book calculated to thoroughly teach the art of ventriloquism, embodying a short sketch of his life and a number of press notices."

NEWS FROM THE SOUDAN!

The Traitor in Whom Gordon Reposed Confidence

Arrested on a Charge of Conspiracy.

ALEXANDRIA, March 15.—Zebehr Pasha, whom General Gordon implicitly trusted and wished to make Governor of Khartoum, has been arrested on a charge of being implicated in treasonable conspiracies against the Khedive. His residence was searched and many documents proving that Zebehr was in a secret league with the Mahdi were found. The prisoner has been confined aboard a British frigate, which is under sailing orders. He will be IMPRISONED ON THE ISLAND OF CYPRUS.

Zebehr has been practically a prisoner for the past two years. His wealth, mainly acquired in the slave trade, was confiscated and he was allowed a quarterly stipend on condition he should not leave Alexandria without the Khedive's consent. General Gordon pleaded that Zebehr should be restored to power in the Soudan and said the ex-slave king was the only man who had enough nerve and prestige to keep the Arabs in subjection. General Gordon had encountered Zebehr during his former service in Egypt and had incidentally who had been left as a hostage, and whose life became forfeited through an act of treachery on Zebehr's part. When General Gordon was sent to Khartoum last year, both he and Zebehr seemed to have ignored the past, and it was another of Zebehr's sons who safely escorted General Gordon from Korosi to Abu Ham. It has been discovered that Zebehr has been in continual correspondence with the Mahdi both before and since the capture of Khartoum. Several other arrests, including some prominent notables, are expected.

HANGED ONE OF ZEBEHR'S SONS,

FIGHTING AT SUAKIM.

LONDON, March 16.—The most recent telegrams from Egypt show that the scene of fighting has been shifted to Suakim, and that while General Wolseley sits in ease at Korti Sir Gerald Graham is likely to have a chance of showing his generalship. Gen. Wolseley's friends believe that he is remaining at Korti in the hope that the luck that has befriended him on so many occasions in the past may give him a chance of retrieving himself before the autumn campaign.

HARASSED BY THE REBELS.

SAUKIM, March 15.—The garrison here continues to be harassed by the rebels. Last evening the Arabs attacked the outposts, wounding two sentries. The fire was returned spiritedly. It is believed the Arabs lost heavily.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH OSMAN DIGNA.

Gen. Ewart has arrived. Work on the Saukim and Berber railway has begun. Osman Digna has offered to give money and stop his night attacks if the British return the body of his standard bearer. The firing last night was the heaviest and most continuous the British have been subjected to here.

FENIAN DEPORTATION.

The Leaders Likely to Proceed to the States.

DUBLIN, March 15.—The expulsion of the Fenian leaders from France has occasioned a good deal of indignation in Fenian circles in Dublin. Their probable destination is also a subject of much speculation. Switzerland, the paradise of plotters, is closed to them; it is understood that they have been notified that they cannot make Belgium an abiding place; and in Italy they would receive no cordial reception, so that it looks as if they will have to cross the Atlantic to find a foothold from which they can breathe out defiance and dynamite. If the States should be selected as the future home of the exiled Fenians, it is believed here that Head Centre Stephens will not form one of the party. The Irish Fenians believe him to be a traitor, and in America there are hundreds who would be ready to send the ex-Head Centre to keep company with the approver Carey. Stephens' connection with the Irish movement, which was begun in 1858, and which developed into extensive enlistments and private drillings in 1864 is not forgotten. That worthy was captured by the British Government, November 11, 1865, and escaped from gaol on the 24th of the same month. Richmond gaol, in which he was confined, is so secure that a mouse could not escape without assistance, and that Stephens did not owe his liberation to the friends of the cause is clear from the fact that he was the only one freed, while his compatriots were equally within reach of rescue. There are, besides, other circumstances which point to the belief that Stephens was aided in his escape by the Government, and that he purchased his liberty by furnishing the authorities with information that he alone could have given.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC.

Official Outline of the Company's Proposition to the Government.

MONTREAL, March 16.—Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, the legal adviser of the Canadian Pacific, said to-day that the directors of the road were about to make a proposition to the Government to the following effect:

(1) That the lien of the Government upon the line and all its belongings for the $30,000,000 loan, be changed into first mortgage bonds for $30,000,000.

(2) This done, that the Government accept lands in lieu of $15,000,000 of these bonds, the remaining $15,000,000 of bonds to be disposed of by the company, and the proceeds applied to the completion and equipment of the line.

"By complying with this offer," said Mr. Abbott, "the Government will not have to contribute any more money. Every dollar realized by the sale of the bonds will be applied to the completion of the road and its equipment, thereby enhancing the security. This will also advance the price of the stock, as the Government will have no preference. PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 19, 1885.

Metropolitan Tabernacle Pulpit.

A Sermon by C. H. Spurgeon, at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Newington.

Heaven Below.

"They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters." Revelations vii. 16, 17.

Let us think of this felicity, that we may be comforted in the prospect of it. All this is already enjoyed by tens of thousands of the redeemed. Some of those who were very dear to us on earth, whose faith we desire to follow, are now for ever with the Lord, and this is their joyful portion "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat." Our comfort lies in the sweet reflection that we are journeying to this goodly land. We are like to one who hath in his hand the guide-book of a country to which he is journeying; he finds in it fair pictures of the scenery of the land and the architecture of the cities, and as he reads each page he says to himself, "I am going there! This is what I shall soon behold!" It would be a wretched thing to have such a book in one's hand and to be entering upon a life-long banishment from home and the home-country. Then should we have to say, "This was my country once, but I shall never see it again. Fair are its skies and lovely are its vales, but mine eye shall ache in vain to gaze upon them. I am exiled for ever from my own dear land!" It is not so with us who are believers in Christ: our faces are towards Immanuel's land, the land which floweth with milk and honey, and we have a portion among the blessed; a mansion is being made ready for each one of us, and we have this promise: "Go thou thy way till the end be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." Rejoice, then, beloved, for if your portion on earth be slender, if your condition here be sorrowful, if your trials multiply, if your strength declines, yet it is but a little while and he that will come shall come, and shall not tarry.

But I want you to do this morning, and by God's grace I think we shall accomplish it, a little more than receive comfort. I long that we may "sit together in the heavenlies" even now. It seems to me that this world, if Christians lived as they should do, would become a nether heaven. The true Christian life, when we live near to God, is the rough draft of the life of full communion above. We have seen the artist make with his pencil or with his charcoal, a bare outline of his picture. It is nothing more, but still one could guess what the finished picture will be from the sketch before you. One acquainted with the artist could see upon the canvas all the splendour of colour peeping through the dark lines of the pencil. Now, I want you to-day to see "the patterns of things in the heavens." We have much of heaven here; at any rate, we have the Lamb who is the glory of the eternal city; we have the presence of him that sits upon the throne among us even now; we have if not the perfect holiness of heaven, yet a justification quite as complete as that of the glorified; we have the "white robes," for "the blood of the Lamb" has washed them even now; and if we have not yet the palm branches of final victory, yet, thanks be to God, we are led in triumph in every place, and even now "this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

I. Keeping to the text, however, I want to speak, first, of THE PERFECTION OF THE PROVISION which is enjoyed in heaven—"They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat." This is the perfection of the provision.

I must, by your permission, go a little further back to make my description of this provision more complete. Notice the last sentence of the fifteenth verse: "He that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them." In the reading we interpreted according to the Revised Version, which gives a more correct rendering: "He that sitteth on the throne shall spread his tabernacle over them." The glorified dwell under the shadow of God. It is for this reason that "the sun shall not light on them, nor any heat," because they dwell in God. Oh, what a dwelling-place that will be! You and I are often like Noah's dove, sent out flying over a weary waste, and finding no rest to the sole of our foot; but they dwell in the ark for ever. We go in and out and find pasture, but in that going in and out we are sometimes troubled; up yonder they "go no more out for ever," but eternally behold the face of the King, and for ever dwell at God's right hand, where there are pleasures for evermore. Oh what a joy this must be in heaven, to be always within the circle of the eternal presence, which is always seen, always unclouded, always enjoyed! Such a dwelling means transformation, for none can dwell with God but those who are like him, free from sin, and perfect in holiness.

Next we are assured that they shall have all their necessities prevented. "They shall hunger no more." To be supplied when we hunger is the mercy of earth: never to hunger at all is the plenitude of heaven. God shall so fill the souls of his redeemed that they shall have no longings: their longings shall be prevented by their constant satisfaction. That which they enjoy will be more than they ever desired to enjoy, or ever imagined that they could be capable of enjoying. Imagination's utmost height never reached to the exceeding bliss and glory of the world to come. The saints confess in the glory that it never entered into their hearts to guess what God had prepared for them that love him. Heaven shall exceed all the desires of God's people; they shall not, even with their enlarged capacities, be able to wish for anything which they do not already possess; so that they shall hunger no more, in the sense that they shall never pant for more than they have.

They shall have done with the desires which it is right for them to have here—desires which intimate their present imperfection. Here it is their duty and their privilege to long after perfection, to be sighing and crying for a perfect deliverance from every shade of sin; but they shall not sigh and cry for this in glory, for they shall be without fault before the throne of God. None of them shall cry, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death? This on earth is one of the most deeply spiritual of cries, never heard from any but those whose sanctification is greatly advanced. None will ever utter that bitter exclamation but men like Paul, to whom the slightest speck of sin has a horror about it akin to death itself. Fanatical persons talk about being perfect; it is the talk of blind men: but those whose eyes have seen the Lord abhor themselves, and sigh and cry over what other men call failures, and mistakes, and infirmities. To them their heart sins and unseen faults are things to weep over; they have sharp hungerings and piercing thirsts after complete likeness of Christ. This likeness the saints possess before the throne; and they shall not thirst any more, even after this best and most desirable of attainments, since they shall enjoy it to the full.

Further, as we read we discover a third blessing, namely, that every overpowering influence is attempered; "Neither shall the sun light on them." What if by that "sun" is meant the full glory of God! If you and I could be introduced into the divine presence at once and as we are, the first result upon us must be a swoon, and the second must be death. We are not able to endure the blaze of Deity as yet; its glory would cause a sunstroke to the soul. We might well cry with good Mr. Walsh, "Hold, Lord! Hold! Remember I am but an earthen vessel, and I cannot as yet hold much of thee." We are not prepared to endure the Lord as our Sun, in meridian splendour. In heaven they are able to endure the immediate presence of God, not only because of the Mediatorship of Christ, through whom the glory of God shines with tempered splendor upon the saints, but also because they themselves are strengthened. From all this earthly grossness quit, they are enabled to stand in that light to which no mortal man can now approach. To us even "our God is a consuming fire" while we are here; but in the saints there remaineth nothing to consume. The light of God is not too bright for eyes that Christ hath touched with heaven's own eyesalve. The vision of the Infinite is not too glorious for those whom the Lord has prepared to be with him and see his face. What John of Patmos could not bear, the weakest saint in heaven can endure, not for an hour, but for the whole stretch of eternity. Blessed, indeed, are they who shall behold the King in the ivory palaces above!

When it is added, "Nor any heat," we learn that injurious influences shall cease to operate. By our surroundings here we are troubled with many heats. The very comforts of life, like warm weather, tend to dry us up. A man may have gold, a man may have health, a man may have prosperity and honor till he is withered like the heath in the desert in the day of drought. Unless a dew from the Lord shall rest upon the branch of the prosperous he will be parched indeed. We have need of grace whenever God gives us blessings of a temporal kind. But no heat of that sort shall happen to saints in heaven: they can be rich, and honored, and perfectly beautiful, and yet under no temptation to self-exaltation. Here the heats which are around us tend to fever us. Our fellow-men grow hot about this and that—the pursuit of wealth, the triumph of party politics, the honor of a family, and so forth; and we are all apt to feel the common ague. Within ourselves, heats arise: unhealthy and unholy heats.

See, then, the perfect provision which is made by Christ for his saints above, and listen while we try to show that this same provision, in a modified way, lies to our hand even now. Come, beloved, do we not dwell in God? Do we not sing, "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations"? If any of you believers have wandered away from your resting-place, whose fault is that? Has not the Lord given you himself to be your perpetual pavilion? Has not Jesus said, "Abide in me"? Have you not sung in that sweet twenty-third Psalm, "I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever"? What more do you want? The Lord hath spread his tabernacle over you; you abide under the shadow of the Almighty.

A child of God in communion with Christ would not lift his finger to possess a world, nor wink his eye to see all the pomp of kings, nor move a step to enjoy all the honours of rank, nor rise from sitting at Jesus' feet to learn all the wisdom of philosophy. He is already filled; what can he have more? The best of the best has fallen to his portion, and shall he change it: No; like the olive tree, he saith, "Should I leave my fatness, and go to be promoted over the trees?" And with the fig, he cries, "Should I forsake my sweetness and go to be promoted over the trees?" He that eateth of the bread which Jesus gives him shall never hunger more after a painful sort. The husks of carnal joy have no attractions to the son who banquets at his father's table.

"Neither shall they thirst any more;" they shall feel that the Lord Jesus is such an all-satisfying, all-sufficient portion that their desires can go no farther. I have sped across the sea with flying sails, bidding each gale waft me according to its will, hoping that I might somewhere find a port. Restlessly have I hastened to and fro, and been tossed up and down, the sport of every wave. My spirit was sped on and on through fair and foul, never abiding long in one stay. Happily there came a day when I found a fair haven. Down went my anchor; it took fast hold and held my barque. Under the lee of Calvary I found rest. Now blow ye winds, or cease to blow as shall best please you. I stir not out to sea again. In the fair haven of the love of God in Christ Jesus shall my spirit abide for ever. If we could but reach this resolve, dear brethren, and hold to it, we should have no more anxieties and longings; we also should hunger no more, neither thirst any more.

And now, beloved, if you are being daily fed by Jesus and are dwelling in God, the light of the sun, as to temporal prosperity, will do you no harm. You may be rich, but you will not trust in uncertain riches; you may be famous, but you will be as humble as if you were obscure; you may be learned, but you will sit at Jesus' feet; you may be indulged with all kinds of worldly prosperity, and yet these things will not prove a snare unto you. "Neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat."

Those who dwell in God are not now parched with inward heat. We notice people of God who are anxious and fretful, and cause a great deal of misery for people round about them by always worrying, fidgetting, and being in a state of nervous excitement. But holy souls, who abide in Christ, take everything calmly. You can remember such persons, both men and women;—whatever happened they remained unmoved, patient and cheerful. Great losses came in the course of business, but the brother did not lose his balance; sad bereavements came, but the sister did not repine If the believer endured a sharp affliction, his chief concern was that the Lord would sanctify it to him: if people persecuted or slandered him he was not surprised, for he expected to be hated of the world when he became a follower of Jesus. If he prospered, he did not get into a heat of pride, and begin to crow over everybody else like a cock on his own dunghill. In patience he possessed his soul. God's good gift of the Holy Spirit comforted and strengthened him. He could say, "My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed: I will sing and give praise." "Neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat." How much of mischief comes to the human body through its heats! The doctor looks hopeful when our blood grows cool again and the fever ceases. The best cure for the fever of the soul is to be made to dwell under the shadow of the Almight and to be fed by the Lord Jesus Christ; for that sacred shadow, and that health-giving food, prevent the burning sickness from coming near the chosen of the Lord. "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday. A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come near thee." Safe, calm, happy, restful shalt thou be: thy soul shall dwell at ease, and with the meek thou shalt inherit the earth.

II. Now will you give me your heart's attention while I touch a noble string, and that is, THE DESCRIPTION OF THE PROVIDER. "For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters" You see this is the reason for all the provision and enjoyment: the verse begins with the word "For," signifying that this is the cause of all the felicity of the blessed, that the Lamb doth feed and lead them.

Who is this that feeds them? It is the Lamb. I wish it were possible for me to communicate to you the enjoyment my own soul has had in meditating upon this blessed word "The Lamb," as it stands in this connection. Does it not teach us, first, that our comfort and life must come from our incarnate Saviour—the Lamb? The expression is very peculiar: it is a figure, and no figure; a mixed metaphor and yet most plain and clear! It is written, "The Lamb shall shepherd them." This is an accurate interpretation. How is that? A shepherd, and that shepherd a Lamb! Here is the truth which the words contain,—he that saves is a man like ourselves. He that provides for His people is Himself one of them,—"For which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." A lamb is a member of the flock; but in this case the Lamb is the shepherd of the flock: a shepherd who is also a lamb must be the most tender shepherd conceivable, the most sympathetic and brotherly guardian that can be. When a man is shepherd to sheep he should be compassionate, but he cannot be so tender as if he actually partook of their nature. In our case our shepherd is to the full a partaker of our nature: we are men, and our shepherd is a man.

Beloved, our soul's support, our spiritual meat, lies in this, that the Son of God is a partaker of flesh and blood, and is one of ourselves. He that sits upon the throne is our kinsman, a sharer in our nature, a brother born of adversity—why surely this heavenly truth is manna from heaven, the food of saintly souls. The Lamb is their hope, their comfort, their honor, their delight, their glory.

Does it not mean more than that? "the Lamb" surely refers to sacrifice. Only run your eye back a verse or two, and you have the key of the expression, "they that washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." He, then, that feeds his people in heaven is the sacrifice, the atonement, the expiation. In heaven they glory in the cross. Each one sings "He loved me and gave Himself for me." The glorified drink the deepest draughts of delight from the fact that God was made flesh, and that in human flesh He offered perfect expiation for human guilt. Brethren, these two fountains are here as well as there: come, let us drink of them; let us prevent our thirst by the water of the well of Bethlehem, and by streams from the smitten rock.

He is also our sacrifice: "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." What rest came unto our hearts when we first understood the meaning of that word—"Behold the Lamb of God which takes away the sin of the world!" Continue to behold Him, and all our feverish heats will be abated, and your hunger and thirst of spirit will be gone.

Jesus is so meek and lowly that you may approach to Him at all times, and He will manifest Himself to you. He is tender and gentle, and never makes Himself strange unto His own flesh. Sitting at His feet you shall find rest unto your soul. "Neither shall the sun light on you, nor any heat."

The character of our Lord, then, brings our spirit all that it needs: but yet this is not all: the text speaks of "the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne" as feeding them. Think of that, the Lamb in the midst of the throne. Can you put these two things together, a sacrifice and a throne? That same Saviour who opened His veins that He might cleanse us from sin now wears the imperial purple of the universe. He that stooped to be made sin for us is now Supreme Sovereign, King of kings and Lord of lords. Think of that and be comforted. Our Representative is glorified. Our covenant Head, our second Adam, is in the midst of the throne. God the Father hath exalted the Mediator to the place of power and honour and rule. Our Saviour hath all power in heaven and in earth. Sometimes when I think of my great King and Captain exalted to so glorious an estate, I feel that it matters nothing what becomes of me, His poor follower. The sun of persecution smites not when He is seen as God over all blessed for ever. Hunger is not hunger, and pain is not pain, for such a loved one. In blissful sympathy with the unutterable delights of Jesus, we are happy at our worst, feeling that if Christ be rich we are not poor, and if Christ be happy we are not disappointed. His victory is our victory. His glory is our glory. Feel this union with your enthroned Lord, and you will begin to be in heaven.

The "midst of the throne" seems to signify also that Jesus has become the very centre of all things. "Unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." He is lifted up, and all men are drawn to Him. He is the great central sun, and all other lights revolve about Him. He is the heart of the eternal purpose, the hinge of history, and the climax of revelation. He reigns in the midst of heaven, even as at this day upon earth He is in the midst of two or three who are met together in His name. Our joy is like that of the just made perfect. In this delight we unite with the general assembly and church of the first-born. Jesus on the throne is to our hearts and songs the central person, and the centre shall never be removed, neither shall the gathering of His people be scattered.

Thus you see who it is that feeds the saints in heaven, and I desire you to feel that if you are to be fed and comforted here below, it must be the same great Shepherd of the sheep, in the same character. There are no stores for you other than those which are in the hands of Jesus, in whom all fulness dwells; there are no comforts for you except as they are given from the throne where the Lamb is reigning. Turn ye away, my brethren, turn ye away from all the frothy novelities of modern thought, and the vain inventions of man, and behold the crown of your adorable Lord, the Lamb of God's Passover, the Lamb who shall overcome all the powers of evil and stand in the midst of the throne. Dwell on the literal, historical incarnation of the Son of God; believe in His literal death, in His actual substitution, His complete and perfect atonement; dwell on His rising from the dead, and His ascent to the right hand of God, and never doubt that He is now the supreme object of heaven's adoration, the Lord of all things that are or shall be, sure and certain to be in the latter days exalted above all principalities and powers, and every name that is named. If we can but live on these truths, and delight ourselves in them, we shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on us, nor any heat, but even here we shall find living fountains of water, and tears shall be wiped from our eyes.

III. I finish by giving a hint or two only upon the the third point: that is to say, THE MANNER OF THIS PROVIDING. We have considered the provision in its perfection, and the Provider in His glorious character, now let us see how this provision is given to the saints, for in the same manner is it brought to us.

In two ways the saints in heaven enjoy it,—the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them. Go over this, and think first of the feeding of them. The Greek word is "shall shepherdize them." In heaven Jesus is a shepherd ruling over all his flock with a happy, genial, sympathetic sovereignty, to which they yield prompt and glad obedience. There the Lord Jesus cares for His people immediately and personally. He Himself bestows upon them all that they require. Here he has undershepherds, and he hands out the food by our poor instrumentality; and, alas, sometimes we are found incapable, or forgetful, and the flock is not fed: but it is never so in heaven, for the Lamb Himself maintains the pastorate, and acts the shepherd in a manner which none of us can emulate. What saith the prophet Micah? "And he shall stand and feed in the strength of the Lord, in the majesty of the name of the Lord his God; and they shall abide: for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth."

Up yonder Jesus still communes with them very closely, else were it not written, "The Lamb shall feed them." I remind you again of what we have said: He feeds them, therefore He is their Shepherd; yet still it is the Lamb that feeds them, therefore He is one with them; as if He fed with them, as if their food was His food, and His food their food, and they were one with Him in all respects. But what must fellowship with Christ be in heaven! What must it be to be for ever one with Him in His glory! That is bliss above conception. He shepherdizes them, He Himself does it, and therefore they are supremely blessed. Now do you not think we can enjoy some of this to-day? Do you question it? What does the tenth of John mean, if Jesus is not the good Shepherd of His sheep at this day? Read it through when you get home. What does the twenty-third Psalm mean? Is that psalm for another world, or for this? Does it not say, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters?" Why, one would think from the look of your doubtful face that it ran thus—"The Lord has forgotten to be my shepherd. He has given me over to the wolf. He has driven me into a wilderness, and left me among the dark mountains. I perish in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is." It is not so; we must not think it so, for even here our great Lord is our Shepherd, and He careth for each one of the flock.

Then it is added, "He shall lead." That is another work of the Shepherd, to lead His flock,—"He leads them to living fountains of waters." You may read it, "He shall guide them to fountains of waters of life;" it is but a variation of the same thought. Now, even in heaven the holy ones need guiding, and Jesus leads the way. While He is guiding, He points out to His people the the secret founts and fresh springs which as yet they have not tasted. As eternity goes on, I have no doubt that the Saviour will be indicating fresh delights to His redeemed. "Come hither," saith He to His flock, "here are yet more flowing streams." He will lead them on and on, by the century, aye, by the chiliad, from glory unto glory, onward and upward in growing knowledge and enjoyment. Continually will He conduct His flock to deeper mysteries and higher glories. Never will the inexhaustible God who has given Himself to be the portion of His people ever be fully known, so that there will eternally be sources of freshness and new delight, and the Shepherd will continue to lead His flock to these living fountains of water. He will also cause them to drink of the river of His pleasures, so that they shall be full of bliss. Can we not grasp a little of this to-day? If we will but follow Christ we may drink of the water which He freely gives to all who believe in Him, even as He gave to the woman of Samaria. "I cannot see any joy," cries one. No; but Jesus will lead you to it. "Oh, but I read my Bible this morning, and I did not get anything from it." That may be; but if Jesus had been there and led you to the fountain, you would have been refreshed. How the texts open up when Jesus touches them! You are like Hagar; you have laid your child down among the shrubs to die; you are perishing of thirst, and yet if you would but listen you might hear the plash of the falling waters just behind you. You only need the Lord to speak and open your eyes and you will see rich supplies, for the living fountain is near at hand. Go you to the Saviour to-day, and say, "Lord, lead me to living fountains of water. I drank years ago, and I have been drinking all along, but Lord I want deeper draughts. I desire to know more and love more." Jesus will lead you. He will do it now, and and when he does so you will realize to the full how like this earth may be to heaven above. Let us commit ourselves like sheep to our great Shepherd. Come, ye wanderers, return to the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls. You that have been in Him these many years and fed in His pastures, come near to Him and follow Him yet more closely, and your eyes shall be opened to see new rivers of delight where all seemed dry. You shall find in the valley of Baca a well, and drinking of it you shall go from strength to strength, till every one of you in Zion appeareth before God. How long will it be, O ever-blessed One, till we behold thee? Even now the day breaketh!

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the hundred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a meeting of the Council of the

will be held on Monday, the Sixth day of April 1885, at the hour of half past seven o'clock in the evening, for the purpose of passing a By-law for stopping up the road allowance established by By-law No. 65, passed by the said Council on the twenty-sixth day of December 1879, which said road allowance is particularly described as follows:—Commencing at the intersection of the west rail of the Midland Railway track, with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, at a distance of ninty links more or less Westerly from the West side of the said original allowance for road, thence Northerly along the said rail three chains and sixty links more or less to the intersection of said rail with the West side of said allowance for road, thence Northerly along the West side of said original allowance for road, three chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonabee, the described line to be the East side of said new road, and the new road to be sixty-six feet wide. And for opening in lieu of the said road so stooped up, the original road allowance, which was stopped up by the said By-law, the said road so stopped up and now proposed to be opened, being described at follows: Commencing on the West side of the said Concession road, at its intersection with the North side of Church street, in the said Village of Lakefield, thence Northerly along the West side thereof, six chains and forty links more or less to the allowance for road along the river Otonobee, thence Easterly along the said river road, one chain and thirty links more or less to the East side of said Concession road, thence Southerly along the East side thereof six chains and seventy links more or less to the North side of Church street, thence Westerly along the North side of Church street, to the place of beginning.

All persons claiming that their lands may be prejudicially affected by the stopping up and opening of the said road allowances, are entitled to be heard in person or by counsel at the said meeting of the council, upon their petition in to be so heard.

Dated at Lakefield the 18th day of Feb. 1885.

Our Provincial Parliament.

How Our Local Lawgivers are Employed.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

MONDAY, MARCH 9th.

After routine to-day Mr. Broder introduced his buncombe motion respecting the granting of pensions to the veterans of 1837-38. He argued that it was a matter for the Provincial Governments to attend to, and one which claimed their serious consideration.

Several members spoke for and against the motion, and, after recess, Hon. O. Mowat reviewed the subject under discussion at considerable length, pointing out that those who volunteered those, also, who rebelled were equally patriotic, and alike entitled to their gratitude. The resolution, however, involved a pledge of a money payment, and it was by no means clear to him that the Province was the right Government to apply to. This was a matter of national concern, and as such should be dealt with by the Dominion. He concluded a long and able speech by moving the following amendment:

"That all the words in the motion after the first word 'that' be omitted, and instead thereof there be added, "This House cordially recognizes the loyalty of the services of the volunteers of 1837-38, who responded to the call then made upon them by the lawfully constituted authorities, and recognize also the the services rendered to the Province through the efforts of the reformers of the same period, who secured to the people of Canada the blessings of pure constitutional government; and this house deems it inopportune to make any declaration that might excite hopes and expectations which this House might not be in a position to fulfil."

Hon. G. W. Ross moved to add to Mr. Mowat's amendment—

"But this House, however, would be remiss in its plain duty if it did not avail itself of the opportunity to place on record its high and grateful appreciation of the services of those other volunteers who in 1866 loyally and cheerfully rallied to the defence of this Province against the lawless hordes of intruders who then threatened our shores with invasion."

This was carried unanimously.

Mr. Meredith then proposed to strike out the portion of the amendment proposed by Mr. Mowat, and add to the amendment by Hon. G. W. Ross the following words:—

"And this House feels that this may be done without impugning the conduct or motives of those who by constitutional means contended for those things which they thought best for the country."

The Speaker ruled that this amendment could not be put, as it would strike out a portion of the amendment which the House had already declared in favour of.

A long discussion ensued, and at the end the Speaker stood by his ruling and submitted the question to the House, when his ruling was supported by 37 to 28.

Finally, after a long and very animated discussion, on the motion of Hon. C. F. Fraser, the debate was adjourned, the yeas and nays being the same as above—37 to 28.

TUESDAY, MARCH 10th.

The big splurge for which the Opposition has been preparing was made to-day. After recess Mr. Ross, Minister of Education, moved the adoption of the agreement giving three publishing firms a monopoly for ten years of the publishing of school readers authorized by the Educational Department. Three firms were given the exclusive right of publication. They paid to the Government $7,500, and accepted the new agreement as extinguishing any claims they might have against the Government by virtue of prior arrangements. A profit of 33½ per cent. should be sufficient for the retail dealers. The total expenditure in connection with the preparation and issue of the books was about $18,000. The Government would receive from the publishers $7,500. They had wood engravings valued at $7,000. The cost to the people of Ontario was, therefore, but $2,000 or $3,000, and by the future sale of the electrotype plates even this small amount would eventually be returned to the Province. They had given the country for this expenditure the best books and the cheapest books ever put into the Public Schools of Ontario.

After several other speeches, in which those on the Opposition side exposed the weakness, futility and frivolity of their charges against the Education Department on the "reader question," a vote was taken on Hon. Mr. Ross' motion for the House to confirm the bargain with the publishers, and it was carried by 40 to 30. Thus the pet scandal of the Opposition received its death blow.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11th.

After a number of bills had been advanced a stage, in reply to Mr. White, Hon. O. Mowat said there was no chaplain in the Central Prison. The duties were undertaken by Archbishop Lynch and the Ministerial Association. Prisoners confined in dark cells were not allowed to attend public worship.

Mr. White's motion for a return showing in detail all moneys expended since January 23, 1883, in the preparation and prosecution of the Boundary case was carried.

Hon. G. W. Ross, in reply to Mr. Fraser, explained that those towns supporting High Schools separated from counties for municipal purposes had separated of their own volition. They were relieved from taxation for county purposes, and it would therefore be unfair to expect the counties to contribute to support of such High Schools.

It is impossible to slake Mr. Carnegie's thirst for returns. He has moved for further returns (among which is a return of the number of dogs which have died) respecting the management of the Model College and Experimental Farm, and the papers were ordered to be brought down.

After recess Mr. O'Connor's Bill relating to Mutual Insurance Companies came up for consideration. Hon. C. F. Fraser strongly opposed the changes proposed to be made in the law. He pointed out that every mutual insurance company in the Province had expressed hostility to the measure. He argued the importance of the contention that if the Bill became law it would cripple very many of the mutual insurance companies and probably destroy not a few of them. He therefore urged that the House should accept the amendment he proposed when the Bill was up for its second reading, providing that across the face of every premium note should be conspicuously written in ink of a color different from the body of the note, a plain statement that it must be sued at the head office or the nearest agency of the company, and his amendment to that effect was adopted on a division.

THURSDAY, MARCH 12th.

In the House to-day a number of Bills were read the third time, among them being Bills respecting wages; to confer on notaries public the powers of commissioners The House then went in Committe on Mr. Ross' Public School Bill, when the Speaker left the chair at 6 o'clock.

After recess, a vigorous discussion arose on the 11th clause, which provides that municipal councils shall require their assessors in preparing the annual assessment roll to set down in separate columns the number of children between the ages of five and twenty-one, and also the number between the ages of seven and thirteen years. The object of the clause is chiefly to ascertain what proportion of children affected by the compulsory provisions of the Act fail to attend school. Mr. Meredith strongly opposed the clause as calculated to make the Education Department unpopular. Other members objected to the labour and expense the adoption of the clause would entail. The Minister of Education defended the proposition, and in order to test the feeling of the House, Mr. Meredith finally moved that the clause be struck out. The vote resulted favourably to Mr. Ross. Mr. Wood and Mr. Merrick voted for the retention of the clause, and Mr. Ferris against.

A number of clauses were disposed of, no material changes being made, although animated discussions were had on various clauses; and especially on that relating to the duration of third-class certificates. It was urged by a number of members that such certificates should be valid for six years, and by others that they should be valid throughout the whole Province. The general feeling of the Committee, however, was that such extension of third-class certificates would neither be in the public interest nor in the interest of the teaching profession.

The Committee rose and reported, and the House adjourned.

FRIDAY, MARCH 13th.

After routine, Hon. O. Mowat, in reply to Mr. Meredith, said that although the Bill to incorporate the Niagara Park Improvement Company had been withdrawn, the Government had still under consideration the advisability and propriety of preserving the natural beauties of the Falls and neighbourhood.

The Bill to amend the Act respecting the Agricultural College, was passed through Committee.

When consideration of the Public School Bill was resumed in Committee of the Whole, Mr. Meredith, Mr. Creighton, Dr. McLaughlin, Mr. Wood and others took exception to the proposed alteration in the basis of the superannuation fund.

Mr. Ross proposes that those now desiring to cease paying into the fund may do so, and that those continuing to contribute shall make an annual payment of $8 instead of $4, as formerly, and that they shall receive in return, in addition to the sum contributed and the interest thereon, $1 for each year they have paid into the fund. The general feeling of the Committee was, that superannuation should be entirely abolished as rapidly as possible, but that any scheme looking to the gradual extinction of the fund should carefully protect the rights of present contributors. The clause was debated at considerable length, and was finally allowed to stand.

The clause permitting Boards of Trustees to limit the holidays to four weeks was struck out, Mr. Ross himself voting for the elimination.

After recess the House went into Committee of Supply. A discussion arose in reference to the grants to Agricultural Societies. The point especially urged was that in the older settled districts these grants are no longer necessary, and that it would be most advisable to devise some scheme by which a larger proportion of the grant would be given to Societies in the newer districts. The Minister of Agriculture pointed out it would be no easy undertaking to revise the conditions of the grant in order to accomplish the object suggested.

Mr. Merrick and Mr. Sol. White objected to the expenditure on Forestry. Mr. White was equally certain Mr. Phippe' report was no good. Hon. A. S. Hardy defended the work of the Forestry Commissioner as most valuable to the country, and reminded the Opposition that they were not always so hostile to Mr. Phippe.

Mr. Wood made a courteous explanation in reference to certain charges he had made against the Belleville Deaf and Dumb Institute last session. He had visited the Institute during the recess and found that his strictures were not justified by the facts. He therefore desired to retract and to express the high appreciation of the work the Institution was doing. Similar appreciative testimony to the efficiency of the Institute was borne by Mr. Sills.

The Opposition quarrelled with the expenditure for coal, and Hon. A. M. Ross, in the course of the discussion, humorously reminded Mr. Meredith that there was a duty on coal.

Families that require mourning will find at Turnbull's Jet Cashmeres and a good range of Silk Crapes, just received. Also Crape Millinery made up on short notice, neatly trimmed.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1883. 48-52t

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

In and Around Our Legislative Halls.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

MONDAY, MARCH 9th.

To-day Mr. Mulock introduced his Fishery Act amendments, and the bill was read a first time.

Hon. Mr. Blake said he understood that tariff changes, proposed only in the budget speech, had been enforced, and Hon. Mr. Bowell said only that part of the new tariff that referred to cigars had been so enforced.

Mr. Small's bill to reduce the capital of the Federal Bank passed its third reading.

Hon. Mr. Pope, in reply to Hon. Mr. Blake, stated that in the working of the Intercolonial Railway for January 1885, there was a deficit of $15,000, and for January 1884, a deficit of $28,000.

Sir John in reply to Mr. Blake stated that the Government had decided to appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court on the validity of the License Act, to the Privy Council.

The debate on the boundary question this evening resulted very satisfactorily. Mr. Rykert started out by asserting that by the judgment of the Privy Council Ontario had not been awarded territory enough and that Mr. Mowat had given up the case of his Province before the Privy Council. Mr. Dawson, another Ministerialist, who followed him, took quite a different view. He said that Ontario had got too much, that the judgment of the Judicial Committee was wrong, and would have to be referred back for amendment, and that the case of the Dominion had been lost through the incompetency of the counsel employed by the Federal Government to look after their interests before the Privy Council. These men he said, could not understand much about the question after only a few weeks' study. He spoke highly of the resources of the territory awarded to Ontario, and gave Mr. Mowat great credit for the great energy and ability he had shown in fighting for the rights of his Province. In short, Mr. Dawson's speech was a complete and crushing answer to the pettifogging assertions put forward by the member for Lincoln, and no member of the Opposition felt called upon to interfere. Mr. Dawson's remarks reflected very severely on Mr. McCarthy, Mr. Robinson, and other legal gentlemen who were engaged as counsel against Ontario in the argument before the Privy Council.

In answer to a motion made by Mr. Blake for a statement showing the rate at which ten million dollars of Canadian Pacific Railway shares, formerly pledged for a loan of about $4,950,000, were sold, and the net sum realized by the Company therefor, a letter from Mr. Drinkwater was brought down today, stating that the stock referred to was sold on the 28th October last at 43, or $4,300,000, less brokerage and exchange, the net amount realized being $4,211,294.

TUESDAY, MARCH 10th.

Mr. Jamieson, in the absence of Mr. Robertson, (Shelburne), introduced a bill to amend the "Scott Act." He said that the Bill embodied several amendments which were agreed upon by the Legislative Committee of the Dominion Alliance for the suppression of the liquor traffic as necessary to the effective working of the Scott Act. The first clause of the Bill, by providing that publication in the Official Gazette of the Order in Council by which the Act is put in force, shall be notice to all the Courts, magistrates, and others enforcing law; in other words, that it should not be necessary as at present to produce a copy of The Official Gazette in every prosecution under the Act. Unless this amendment were made, there were likely to be many cases of failure of justice. The second and third sections of the Bill referred to the sale of liquor for medical purposes. At present liquors cannot be sold under the certificate of a medical man in greater quantities than one pint. It was proposed by this Bill to leave the quantity it the discretion of the medical man, and at the same time to provide for the punishment of medical men who granted certificates colourably when not necessary, and thus frustrating the law. Section four was intended to remove the legal objection which might prevent the collection of fines. Section five was intended to correct a clerical error. Section six proposed to amend Section 165 of the Liquor License Act of 1883, and to obviate a difficulty caused by a decision of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, which held that the enforcement clauses of the Canada Temperance Act were repealed by the McCarthy Act. This decision was certainly not in accordance with the intention of Parliament, and therefore the Bill now before the House provided that these clauses should not be so repealed, but should remain in force. The people of Canada had shown themselves in favour of the Scott Act, and it was the duty of Parliament to make the Act as effective as possible.

The debate on the budget was resumed by Messrs. Tupper and Charlton. The manner in which the latter dealt with the public debt was lucid and forcible. The comparisons he made between the financial condition of Canada and that of the United States and other countries showed how delusive and absurd were the comparisons made by the Finance Minister.

Sir Charles Tupper as High Commissioner is a costly ornament. The Government last year paid $42,000 for a house and furniture for him. Sir Charles drew $6,266 of salary as Minister of Railways, through the Bank of Montreal in London; Sir Charles drew $4,643 as travelling expenses, charged to emigration; Sir Charles was paid $812 letters of credit cheques, charged to public works, $703; salary as High Commissioner, $1,048; removal expenses from Ottawa to London, $836; travelling expenses, $350; contingencies and stationery, $4,000; indemnity, $1,000. Total amount of money drawn from the Dominion treasury last year by Sir Charles Tupper for house, furniture, salaries, expenses, etc., $61,020. This is the sum that the High Commissioner cost Canada last year.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11th.

The time of the House was for a long time to-day taken up with motions for returns, etc.

Sir Richard Cartwright, in moving for copies of orders in Council relating to the retirement of the 5 per cent. consolidated loan of the 1st of January last, said it was a matter for regret that the Finance Minister went to England to negotiate his loan last summer when he was so hampered with the $30,000,000, Canadian Pacific Railway loan as to be unable to take advantage of the low interest in placing a loan on the market. With better management on the part of Sir Leonard Tilley, matters might have been different. He went into the English market with his hands tied. The failure to float a domestic loan was also against him. How the Finance Minister was to get over the difficulty it was hard to say, and it was very doubtful if he would persuade the holders of our 5 per cent loan to change them for a short loan. Such loans were not viewed with favor on the English market. It was fallacious to imagine to pay off these with moneys due from the Canadian Pacific in 1891. The Finance Minister made a large blunder when he did not make arrangements to meet the loan accruing in October or November last, and therefore have sustained the credit of the country, which was now at a low ebb.

The Committee on Bankruptcy met this morning and considered several clauses relating to the discharge of insolvents. It was agreed that a discharge should only be granted on condition that three-fourths of the creditors representing four-fifths of the amount of claims should give their consent, and that this should exclude privileged claims and those made by members of the insolvent's family. No discharge is to relieve the debtor from claims due to farmers

THURSDAY MARCH 12th.

After the passing of nearly forty motions for returns, the Budget debate was resumed by Mr. McLelan, who was followed by Hon. D. Mills. He said the country was not likely to get a reciprocity treaty so long as the present tariff was in force, and if the theory on which the tariff was based is right reciprocity would be a misfortune. The national policy had delayed the period when a treaty could be successfully negotiated. He claimed that in Australia, the colonies which had free trade succeeded better than those which had a protective tariff. He attacked the duties on breadstuffs and coal. If the Yankees paid duties on these articles, why did the Government not make the Chinese pay duty on tea? Nova Scotia would prefer to deal with the eastern states rather than Ontario, as the present agitation there proved. The emigration from Canada which, during Mr. Mackenzie's time, was 22,000 a year, was now forty thousand. He complained that he was unable to find the oilcloth factory which the factory commissioners had located in London. Other members continued the debate and the House adjourned.

FRIDAY, MARCH 13th.

Mr. McLelan, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, tried to explain his statement that the Mackenzie Government had not laid a rail on the Canada Pacific before they left office. Mr. Mackenzie showed the statement was an absurd untruth, and his statement is confirmed by public documents.

Mr. Foster resumed the budget debate. He made a strong National Policy speech. He touched on the disaffection in the Lower Provinces, and said the movers were all Grits. He wouldn't say that all Reformers were annexationists and secessionists, but all of that class were Reformers.

Mr. Davies following, said some annexationists of past times were now the colleagues and friends of Sir John Macdonald. He mentioned Sir John Rose, Sir Alex. Galt, Sir Leonard Tilley. He said the Conservatives had promised to make good times by legislation. He wanted to know why they didn't do it.

Mr. Woodworth followed with a vigorous defence of the Government policy.

It is reported that Mr. George Stephen has addressed to Sir John Macdonald a letter stating that unless the Government at once grant assistance to his Company the work of construction on the Canadian Pacific Railway will be stopped. This, it is expected, will be sufficient to induce Sir Leonard Tilley and other Tories who object to granting further relief to yield. Indeed, it is possible that Mr. Stephen's letter was inspired by Sir John himself. Mr. Stephen has also intimated that it will be impossible to complete the whole road by the 1st July, 1886, in accordance with the conditions upon which the loan of last session was granted.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 19, 1885.

The Friend of the Workingman.

Behold what a matter a little fire kindleth. In a recent issue THE EXAMINER, in a modest little paragraph, commented on the fact of young Mr. Tupper sneering at the workingmen as the "lower orders." Now, Mr. Tupper, jr., is hardly worth wasting more powder on, but the Kingston News, in coming to his defence, asserts that we "ought to know that the Conservatives have been, and are and are likely to continue to be, the best friends and allies of these same workingmen." Without pointedly disputing this assertion, which, perhaps, in one way, is literally true about election time, we shall only esteem it a favour if the News would furnish some proof of its assertion. Has their friendship been shown by using the workingmen as allies in 1878 and 1882 and outrageously breaking all their promises made at these times of giving the workman plenty of work at high wages, and that continually? Has the Tory friendship been shown by making the workingman pay burdensome taxes on everything he and his family consume—and the harder the times the higher the taxes? Witness the additions made to the tariff this session by Sir Leonard Tilley, whereby the articles chiefly used by the workingman is honored with an addition of 5 per cent. to a tax of 25 per cent., thus reducing the buying power of his dollar to 95 cents, as compared with last year, or to 87½ cents as compared with Mr. Mackenzie's time. Is this friendship shown by the head of the Tory party scoffing at the misery of unemployed workingmen and refusing to listen to their pleas for assistance and turning his back on them, as Sir John did at Montreal? Is it shown by the Tory Government using the wrung-out taxes of the workingmen to pay the passages of foreigners imported to rob the Canadian artizan and laborer of whatever crumb of employment can be picked up in a time of labor famine? Is Tory friendship shown to the workingmen as a class, when the Government utterly refuses to help the labourers who are kept out of their wages, earned on the Canadian Pacific Railway, though they can lavish millions on the Company itself? Is friendship shown by the Government's neglect to pass a Factory Act to protect the tender children forced to work in factories from the tyranny of manufacturers whom the precious N. P. has made monopolists and exacting task-masters? Is this friendship shown by the Tory Government encouraging the importation of Chinese cheap labour, and allowing the spoon-eyed rat-eater to shoulder the white workman out of the labour market? Is their any friendship exhibited in the heartless remark made in Parliament by Sir John, when he said there "was plenty of employment in Canada for any man not too lazy to work?" What does the mechanic, to whom his enforced idleness and the misery of a family, with the head out of a job, is a torture worse than galley labour, think of this friendship? What do many a thousand gaunt, half-starved labourers, whose fruitless searches for a job have been a harder day's work than swinging pick and spade, think of the heartless, taunting lie of the leader of a party which will crawl to the workingman, when an election is due, and gives them more kicks than half-pence in the interval? If Tory friendship for the workingman is shown in none of these ways, the News will please enlighten us to the true form of its exhibition.

A Transparent Fraud.

In the usual run of Governmental red tape, we have just received a valuable blue document—the "Report Relative to Manufacturing Interests in Canada." It is the outward and visible sign that Messrs. Blakeby and Willis have earned their modicum of pap and prepared a worthless, one-sided, unreliable puff for the N. P. The ostensible reason of their employment at $10 per day and all expenses paid was to show on paper—what was not evident in fact—that the N. P. was a great benefit to the country. It was a trial of the N. P. by its own judge, jury and witnesses. The report is an astonishing document and goes to show what politicians are capable of doing to make political capital. Of course, these gentlemen make it appear that, but for the N. P., our manufacturing industries would have perished. To illustrate how valuable is the information collected and published at a cost of thousands of dollars, the report referring to Peterborough, which we know something about, may be considered. It is fair to assume that it is a fair sample. For instance, Mr. Blakeby, in recording our manufacturing industries places the number at eleven and proceeds to state that there were only six before the N. P. came into operation. Now, anybody that has been a month in town knows this is utter rot. Not only is the number entirely wrong, but the inference that the N. P. has called into existence six industries not in existence in 1878, is also false. Of the six specified, all were in existence before the N. P., and the only claim they can possess to being new establishments lies in their having passed into other hands or being under different management. The reliability of the report is shown further by the absurd statement, in effect, that there are only eleven manufacturing establishments in Peterborough. There is no mention of Belleghem's and McFadden's furniture factories, W. McKee's furniture factory, with an annual output of $20,000, Wright & Peyton's and Owens' pump factories, Hamilton's (Deacon's) broom factory, Star's aerated waters factory, Wm. English's canoe factory, Paterson's, Hesson's and Lundy's tanneries. No mention either is made of either Britton's or Kingdon's coopersages, Calcutt's Brewery, nor of the different planing mills, nor of the prosperous carriage factories, of which there are four or five in town. The pulp works, which rose and fell under the N. P., is altogether ignored. Our saw mills are entirely overlooked, as well as Matthews & Son's pork packing establishment, and our flouring mills, whose export business is a big item among our industrial outputs, also gets the go-by. However, it makes little difference whether the humhunter of the Government mentioned these industries, but it shows that as an index of the working of the N. P. the report is worse than useless, it is utterly unreliable and misleading. The thousands of dollars the Government has spent to work up an election cry is, as far as any public benefit is concerned, a sheer waste. Mr. Blakeby's object, judging from the way he dealt with this town, must have been simply to earn his pay as easily as possible. The way he "shows up" Peterborough's manufactories, indicates that he must have got his information from the hotel porters or, which is worse, from the Census Returns. The report is a transparent fraud.

The British Lion and Russian Bear.

The present difficulty between Great Britain and Russia is one of boundary, involving the possession of the "key of India." It has been causing trouble for a long time. Years ago an agreement was arrived at that the Turkomans should be under Russian protection and the Afghans under British. The Turkomans and Afghans agreed to this arrangement, but they cannot agree as to where the boundary of their contiguous territory should be. About a year ago the Afghans occupied Pendjeh, an advanced post close to the frontier, whereupon the Russians encroached fifty miles nearer Afghanistan. Sir Peter Lumsden, representing British interests, protested in vain; Russia refused to recede unless the Afghans evacuated Pendjeh. For the past quarter of a century Russia has been stealthily and steadily pushing her frontier closer to India. The possession of Herat in Afghanistan seems to be her heart's desire. Herat has extraordinary advantages as a stronghold. The great high roads from Kabul, Teheran, Balk, Bokhara, Khiva, Meshed, Seistan and Kandahar all meet in it. It has a splendid climate, and lies in a fertile valley. What is of most importance is that it is surrounded by the greatest earthworks ever seen, the origin of which, like the origin of the place itself, is lost in remote antiquity. The town, which is a small square, is surrounded by an earthen parapet, if one may call it so, which measures 250 feet at its base, and is fifty or sixty feet high, and surrounded by a wall nine feet thick at the base and eighteen feet high. In addition to this there is a wet ditch forty-five feet wide and fifteen feet deep. The Persians tried to capture it in 1838 under a Russian leader, Borowski, but were beaten off by the Afghans under Eldred Pottinger. In 1856 the Persians occupied it, also under Russian inspiration, but were compelled to evacuate it the following year, under pressure of British invasion of Persia itself, in which the Persian army was ruined in a single engagement.

The latest news on the subject is that an arrangement has been come to between Great Britian and Russia to the effect that neither is to make any further advances towards the Afghan frontier. But Russia has often made similar promises and broken them with the greatest facility. Her unfaith is notorious and seeing that, in the present temper of the British Government, a breach of faith in the present instance, would almost certainly result in the outbreak of hostilities. Therefore since war is possible, it may be of interest to enquire which of the two powers is the better prepared for war operations. Great Britain certainly holds the vantage ground. She has in India a large army, and could, at short notice, put nearly 100,000 well equipped soldiers into the field. There is a system of railways in northern India reaching to the borders of Afghanistan, and, in case of an outbreak, troops and munitions of war could be rapidly pushed to the front, an immense advantage considering the strategetic points that abound in Afghanistan, the possession of which, by even moderate garrisons, would prove an insuperable barrier for a time, at least, to any force Russia could bring into the field. On the other hand the immense army of Russia is widely distributed over her immense domains, and, necessarily with a government essentially a military despotism, large garrisons have to be maintained at numerous points. Russia will also have great difficulty in moving forward her army. From Moscow to Herat it is 2,500 miles. There is it is true a railway from the Caspain Sea to Askabad in Turkestan, 390 miles from Herat, but this passes through a country of recently subdued and hostile tribes, and it would take an army to guard the passage of the Russian army over it. Besides Russia's finances are in a deplorable state. She cannot borrow money at less than 6 per cent., and with the English money market closed to her, she would have hard work to get it at all. Should, then, the worst come to the worst, and war ensue, the friends of civilization, liberty and progress, need not have fear that Great Britain, which has been their champion for a thousand years, will not come triumphant out of the ordeal.

The "Readers" Question.

All summer the Tory organs have been working up a case against the Minister of Education, to be prosecuted this session by the Opposition. But when the time came the courage of the latter oozed away, and they opened not their mouths. In the course of business Hon. Mr. Ross brought up the subject, in moving the resolutions to confirm the bargain made by the Department for the publication of school readers. Hon. Mr. Ross made a splendid speech, in which he clearly vindicated the course he had pursued and left the crippled criticisms of Opposition journals and members without a leg to stand upon. He pointed out the desirability of having only one authorized series, and showed that every detail of the bargain with the publishers was in the public interest. The Opposition critics feebly essayed to make out that the exclusive arrangement with the publishers was a monopoly. But there can be no monopoly. Mr. Ross took care of this by fixing a maximum price that could not be exceeded, and not only that, but, if, at any time, it appeared that the readers could be published for a less sum than the price fixed, that price would be reduced. The arrangement is better than any former one, for under the old system of competition, rings were formed and the prices of the readers raised. Now such a thing is impossible, and we have a series of readers of the greatest literary merit, thoroughly Canadian in their character and composition, being prepared and published solely by Canadians for Canadians, and the cheapest readers in existence. The entire series will cost only $1.35—just four cents more than the cheapest of the old series Gage's—while they are in every way as to matter, printing, binding and durability, greatly superior, besides containing 224 more pages. The type used is larger and plainer than that of any former series. The paper is of a better quality and the pictures that illustrate the matter have been engraved expressly for the new readers. The best educationists in Canada and the United States have passed their opinion on the new readers, and they are unanimous in testifying to their great excellence as school books, and pronounce them marvels of cheapness. Such as the books are now, they will remain; for the Department's contract permits an agent of the Government to have access to the publisher's premises at any time, so that the Government can inspect the preparation of the book at every stage, and see that the contract is kept. On the appearance of the publishers' attempting to scamp the work, the contract may be cancelled. Thus, we have as good a series of school readers as any country in the world, well and plainly printed, strongly bound, and at a price cheaper than similar books can be produced anywhere else. The public will be greatly benefited by the adoption of the new series; and while the best interests of the public are consulted, it is not of much account what disappointed political croakers say or do.

The Exchange Bank Outrage.

The criminally careless and reckless action of the Finance Minister, Sir Leonard Tilley, in the Exchange Bank matter, while involving a direct loss to the country of $300,000, also shows the mischievous methods the Tory Government are prepared to practice, regardless of the interests of the country at large. Sir Richard Cartwright very properly brought the matter before the House, and Sir Leonard's explanations were like the turnings and twistings of a thief trying to explain away the palpable evidences of his guilt. In the first place the Exchange Bank in the matter of insolvency was in the spring of 1883 in a most rotten condition. It had only capital, nominal or actual, of $500,000, and even this small amount of capital had been largely wasted by bad and criminally careless management. It was an open secret that the suspension of the bank was only a matter of a short time. The business of the bank had been wretchedly mismanaged. All these facts Sir Leonard was aware of, or if he did not know them it was because he was wilfully ignorant. The resignation of the President of the bank without explanation showed that something was wrong, and the directors dared not, for fear of injuring their own interests, give currency to their fears and suspicions. It was at this time when the business of the bank was practically "running" itself that Sir Leonard in compliance with political pressure, the entire board of directors, being followers of Sir John, advanced a loan of $200,000 without security, and another of $100,000 on security, nominally such. Under the circumstances the loan of $300,000 only served to give further play to the reckless mode of managing the business of the bank, and, of course, in due time the crash came, and the country is out $300,000. The loan was a political job of the rankest odour. The members of the board were, as has been said, supporters of Sir John, and bad as this would make them, the evil conditions are intensified by the fact that all but one endorsed Sir John's action in the Pacific Scandal. Throwing away the people's money to the amount of $300,000 on a worse than rotten bank, is bad enough, but it is worse that the Tory majority in Parliament should condone the action and justify the perpetrators. This is but a type of the manner in which the finances of the country are mismanaged by the present government. There is waste, waste, waste, and frightfully reckless extravagance in every department. Instead of endeavouring to bring the expenditure down to something like the level of the revenue, Sir Leonard adopts the expedient—easy to him but hard on the people—of putting on more taxes. Since 1878 the rate of taxation has gone up with spasmodic jumps, according as the extravagance of the Government and the rapacity of the hangers on, who are rewarded by the government, suggested the necessity. A terrible day of reckoning is coming for these criminal incompetents, and a terrible day of awakening is coming to the people who permit such a state of things to continue.

In the matter of money, contrast the Cartwright with the Tilley rule. In five years the former reduced the controllable expenditure of the country by $1,382,075. The Tory party in the five years, from 1868 to 1874, increased the controllable expenditure 130 per cent. After five years of economy the Tories returned to power, and since 1878 they have increased the controllable expenditure by $4,352,797. The contrast is too plain to require further comparison between Tory and Reform financial methods.

South Monaghan.

As was observed by a report in our last issue, of a public meeting held at Baillieboro, the inhabitants of South Monaghan are in earnest in their endeavour to secure closer commercial relations with Peterborough. South Monaghan's interests will be much better served by her obtaining access to Peterborough, than by remaining in her present position, with Port Hope for her market town. The market of Peterborough is greatly superior to any other market in the Midland District. And it would be also to the advantage of Peterborough to secure the trade of a rich agricultural township like South Monaghan. Indeed, the benefit would be mutual, and will warrant both parties concerned in taking all proper means to bring about the closer union contemplated. For electoral purposes South Monaghan is a part of this county, and it would be a good thing for both town and township if it could be made to have more intimate municipal relations. We have no doubt, that if the people of the township would appoint a deputation to confer with the County Council of Peterborough at the June session, some arrangement as to the equalization of assessment satisfactory to the township could be arrived at. The diverse financial condition of the several provinces was a great bar to the consummation of the Confederation, but it was successfully overcome. Financial obstacles, almost insuperable, it was thought, interfered with the union of the Methodist bodies. But these were overcome, and there is nothing to forbid the hope that if the township of South Monaghan and Peterboro' county could bring about a dispassionate consideration of the subject, terms mutually satisfactory might be agreed upon.

Editorial Notes.

The Toronto World, referring to Messrs. Carnegie and Creighton, says:—"They only offset any headway Mr. Meredith makes. * * * If Mr. Meredith ever succeeds to power it will not be on the merits of the, now, Opposition."

The Stratford Beacon, referring to Mr. Carnegie's speech on the Agricultural College, says:—"He made a rambling and bitter speech, and indulged in his usual exaggerated charges against the Institution." Mr. Ballantyne said:—"He had no hesitation in characterizing the attack on the College as unfriendly, unfair and untruthful."

Sir Leonard Tilley is a heartless and incorrigible tyrant. He is not content with raising the price of flour and coal by taxation, but has gone so far as to come down on another necessary of life. He has largely increased the duty on cigars and cigarettes. The voters affected thereby will doubtless make him smoke for it.

The Protective policy as applied by the Tory party was to check the exodus of Canadians to foreign countries and, by keeping Canada for the Canadians, make them contented to stay at home. But in this respect it has been a flat failure. During the five years of Hon. Mr. Mackenzie's regime, the emigration of Canadians was 2,500 per year. During the six years of the N. P. regime, it has been over 8,000 per year, or a total of 490,000.

Last Monday was a cold day for Conservatives in the Supreme Court. That Court gave decisions on the appeals in connection with the West Northumberland and Levis contested election cases, unseating both members, Messrs. Guillet and Belleau, both Conservatives. Mr. Guillet has to thank Roddy Pringle, who is a daily recipient of the Dominion Government favours and pap, for the loss of his seat. It was Roddy's little "bet" that did the business.

The Trent Valley Canal deputation has gone to Ottawa and returned—not "rejoicing and bringing their sheaves with them," but bringing back the "promise" that the work will be further prosecuted as soon as the finances of the country will admit of it. Regarding the way Sir Leonard Tilley is making ducks and drakes of the public funds, that is a very safe promise for the Government to make. The prospect for the completion of the canal has been "promising" for a long time.

The Mail wants to know what conscientious convictions would lead the members of the Mowat Government to resign—the latest means suggested by desperation to make "Mowat go." If they had, like the average Tory, a conviction that office was the latter's birth-right, their habit of doing justice to all classes would lead them to at once resign and allow Creighton to collar the cash, Carnegie to boss the Agricultural College cows, and Meredith to give away the Province to the Ottawa oligarchy.

At the opening of the Toronto Spring Assizes on Monday, the first case called was Queen vs. Bunting, the latter charged with bribery and conspiracy. To still further shirk the trial, Bunting's counsel applied for a special jury, which, seeing that Mr. Bunting is a special sinner, he evidently thought his due. This dodge was but a continuance of the delays that the criminals concerned in the plot to bribe a parliament, have all along attempted to create. If they were innocent they would wish for as speedy a trial as possible.

GOING FOR THE CONSPIRATORS.

SENATOR ALEXANDER'S SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST SIR JOHN MACDONALD AND SENATOR MACPHERSON.

An Ottawa telegram says: The Wilkinson-Bunting conspiracy case came up in the Senate to-day, Friday. Sir Alexander Campbell moved the second reading of his Land Transfer Bill, when Mr. Alexander said that the success of the Torrens system would depend upon the selection of proper registrars in the Northwest—not registrars who have been employed for a lengthened time in bribing electors of Ontario, and who had further been detected trying to corrupt members of the Provincial Legislature, in order to bring about the overthrow of the present, upright and excellent Government of Ontario and Attorney-General Mowat. "There is not" said Mr. Alexander, "in the whole history of Canada, a fouler stain upon the honor of the country than the Bunting-Wilkinson conspiracy, and the men who were detected in that affair were only instruments in the hands of others." He (Mr. Alexander) believed he expressed the public sentiment of Ontario when he charged Sir John Macdonald and Sir D. Macpherson with being implicated in the Bunting conspiracy. Sir Alexander Campbell wanted to suppress Mr. Alexander's speech and prevent its appearance in the official reports, but finally was induced to reconsider the matter.

SOUTH MONAGHAN BRIDGE QUESTION.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Since Mr. Riddell has got South Monaghan and the proposed bridge on some concession line due north of George street, Peterborough (see last issue of THE EXAMINER), and has only pointed out one error in my last letter, namely, three Councillors on the deputation. Although I had my information from a member of the deputation, I will concede that point, and try to get South Monaghan back to the original location on the north side of Rice Lake; also do all in my power to help to get a new bridge, which every person acquainted with South Monaghan knows would be a great convenience to the east part of the township. 'Tis true a straight line is the shortest, and that a bridge at the proposed site would shorten the distance to Peterborough for the east side of South Monaghan, and that those interested should use every legitimate means to get one, is conceded by every ratepayer in this township.

It is also true that I have always said that I would do all I could to help to get one, and I say so still; but at the same time it never entered my mind that any attempt would be made to do away with the Wallace Point bridge. It has been held out as an inducement for South Monaghan to join the County of Peterborough, and that the county would build another bridge. If Peterborough town and county are willing to do that for the trade of South Monaghan, why not give largely to another inter-county bridge and keep both roads open, because the keeping up of both bridges would be no more to both counties than one would be to the county of Peterborough. I have it on good authority that the counties of Northumberland and Durham have not been asked to assist in building another bridge.

Having secured the appointment of a deputation to go to the County Council at Cobourg I will say no more on the subject at present, but will confine myself to the difference between the two roads. In the first place the Wallace Point road will always be the road for general traffic, the road being gravelled two thirds of the distance from lot 1 concession 4, South Monaghan, by Wallace's Point to Peterborough, traversing a ridge parallel with the river nearly the whole distance, and, by its elevation, always will be a moderately dry and level road.

While the proposed bridge will only be a local bridge and the road leading from it to Peterborough is comparatively a new road and will require a large amount of money to make it a good road for heavy loads, also there would be a new road to make south from the proposed bridge to the 4th concession, a distance of one mile over hills, or else run east to strike the old Cobourg road; in that case the distance would not be much shortened, while it is generally conceded that it would be the cheapest to use the old site all things considered. Mr. Riddell says that I must not be alarmed, that the township is not committed to any sum.

Neither do I think it will be, but such a statement is misleading and should not have been made without having the assurance that it would be made good. Again he wants to know how much was received for toll on the Wallace Point bridge for any one year; $200 rent and swing attended. Could Mr. Riddell promise that amount in toll for the new bridge while Wallace Point bridge is running, I think not. Neither did the company ever think of getting the bridge off their hands until after it was injured by the flood, but was making preparations to complete the 2½ miles of road.

Also that the bridge was only in the company's hands after it was injured in April until the 27th of June, and for the delay in repairing the bridge I refer him to the report of the County Council.

Mr. Riddell says that a new bridge could be built for very little more than it will cost to keep the Wallace Point Bridge in repair for the next ten years. Such is not the case, because the approaches are good, the piers are all good and were built of the best timber, and from below low water line, of the best of sawn cedar, which will be good for years to come. Timber of the same quality could not be got in this section now at any price, and surely it will cost no more to keep the roadways in repair than another bridge of the same length.

Again, this bridge was given over to the counties without any remuneration to the company whatever, only in consideration of its being kept in repair. If the counties can not afford to have two bridges, then, I repeat, that the Wallace Point bridge will accommodate the most people, irrespective of the obligation of the counties to fulfil their agreement with the company.

I remain, yours, etc.,
THOS. WILLAN.

THE LECTURE BUSINESS.

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Please give me a small space in your good journal this week to make a few remarks upon—to say the least of it—a very strange paragraph, which appeared in the columns of your contemporary, the Times, of the 11th of March.

It is headed: "Medical and Surgical Emergencies," and purports to be a synopsis of a lecture on the above subject, delivered by Doctor Clarke of your town, before an audience in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms.

According to said synopsis of the Doctor's oration he took occasion to spread himself in the following manner:

"He said that at present it was with anatomy as it was in the early and middle ages with religion. In the early times the clergy endeavored to shroud religion in mystery, and now the majority of physicians are doing the same thing with the knowledge of the human system."

Well, well! Now, Mr. Editor, after taking an extra breath, I proceed to put a few questions to the learned little Doctor, who, according to the above quoted utterance, evidently considered himself the only honest physician on earth. With Doctor's quarrel I have nothing to do, but I cannot refrain from saying en passant that some of Doctor Clarke's colleagues must have opened their eyes very wide when they read the article from which I have just quoted.

Will Doctor Clarke be so kind as to inform us when, where, and how "the clergy of the early and middle ages endeavored to shroud religion in mystery?" Even one curious old wish would serve to give some color to his most astonishing statement, thus the Doctor will "come." If he can, I for one will be glad to hear of it. It would clear my mind of the suspicion that the Doctor himself has been "endeavoring to shroud some things in mystery."

Again, according to Doctor Clarke the majority of physicians are trying their hand at the same "mysterious shrouding" business as regards "knowledge of the human system." Ha, ha! and thus vile gang of tricksters known to the world as physicians, and in whom every body trusted and confided even as Doctor Clarke, himself, when he was sick—at last found out in the midst of their mystifying tactics! And the startling information, that they are "mysteriously shrouding" their "knowledge of the human system," is now for the first time communicated to the whole human race through the medium of Doctor Clarke's grandiloquent address in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms a few evenings ago.

Apart from the gratuitous insult flung in the face of the profession, of which the Doctor is himself a member, I would like to ask him when, where and how the "majority of physicians have shrouded in mystery a knowledge of the human system?" Please answer this question, Doctor, or stand convicted of having borne false witness against your brethren. When a man, standing on a public platform, makes a statement such as that referred to, it is generally supposed he has some facts at command to support it. By all means let us have the facts, Doctor.

I would also ask further. Who taught Doctor Clarke, himself his "knowledge of the human system?" Was it not physicians? And in their earnest endeavors to give him said knowledge, did they "shroud it in mystery?"

The teaching of Anatomy and Physiology in our Public Schools was next advocated and insisted upon. Now I say, and thousands will, and do say with me, that those subjects should not be taught in our schools; they are not taught and in consequence the minds of our innocent little ones are not debased, corrupted and demoralised. Those subjects cannot be properly taught without the aid of drawings, pictures and diagrams of the human body. Now I ask, what parent, solicitious for the welfare of his child, would send that child five days per week for years to a school-room, whose walls were blazoned with diagrams and engravings which young eyes should never rest upon, nor young minds be allowed to dwell upon, and which in so doing could only result in the production filthy and licentious thought. No, no! the morality of our age instinctively recoils in horror at the bare idea of it. Any Christian parent would prefer to see his children never receive an education than to expose their young and innocent minds and hearts to the pernicious influences of a proposed system of instruction, the tendency of which would be to the propagation of immorality.

Thanks, Mr. Editor, for your kindness, and with a promise to return to this subject again.

I am, Yours,
VERITAS.

DR. CLARKE'S LECTURE REVIEWED.

On the 5th, inst., Dr. Clarke, of Peterborough, delivered a lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms, and in the report of the Peterborough Times he is credited with the following utterance:

"He said that at present it was with anatomy as it was in the early and middle ages of religion; in the early times the clergy endeavoured to shroud religion in mystery, and now the majority of physicians are doing the same thing with the knowledge of the human system."

This is the Doctor's statement, and we, wish respectfully, to call his attention to the very groundless and extraordinary charge which is here made against the medical profession.

No medical gentleman ever thought of concealing a knowledge of the human system from anybody. There is no earthly motive to induce him to do so; but on the other hand every body will admit that it would be a decided advantage to medical men if the people had a thorough knowledge of the human system; for then they would more readily appreciate the difficulties which the physician has to contend with in the treatment of disease. But the doctor's views in this matter are not only erroneous, they are also impracticable. Suppose, for instance, that I send for a physician holding such views, to visit my family in sickness, then in order to give us a knowledge of the human system, he would have to deliver a lecture on anatomy and physiology. Would not such a course, adopted by any physician lead us at once to conclude that he was a pedantic fool or an arrant knave.

But in truth when Dr. Clarke made this sinister assault on the medical profession, he had an axe to grind. He merely wanted to ingratiate himself with the people by traducing his fellow practitioners, and we must say that in resorting to that stratagem the doctor paid but a very poor compliment to the intelligence of his audience; for he was there pandering to a vulgar taste for slander against the medical profession, which is only to be found in the lowest grades of society, and the doctor must have assumed that his little thrust at the medical profession would meet with the approval of his hearers.

The whole fraternity of travelling quacks, who infest the country, and humbug the simple out of their money, vie with other in slandering the "regular" profession—from the liver-pad man on the market square, down to the sham East India man, who, every night, in the Opera House, extracts the people's teeth and empties their pockets, to the tune of Yankee Doodle. These men and all their brood push their nefarious art by first slandering the medical profession. We are not surprised at this, because the only stock in trade which these people have is slander, and they present this before the people with all the practical mendacity of the itinerant charlatan, or the low cunning of a gypsy fortune teller. We have said we are not surprised at all this, for nobody expects anything decent or honorable from the quack tribe. But we confess we are amazed when a member of an honorable profession adopts the vile tactics of the roving quack, against his own colleagues.

THE SCOTT ACT IN LAKEFIELD.

Though we are not disposed to emulate Moses Oates in his prophetic powers, yet we cannot but anticipate a rousing victory for the Scott Act in Lakefield. The first meeting on its behalf here, certainly augurs well, judging by the large attendance and warm interest shown. In the absence of the convener, J.C. Sherin, John Hull Esq. was called to the chair and ably fulfilled its duties. And Mr. T. G. Bone was appointed secretary for the meeting. A resolution was introduced by Rev. Mr. Johnson, seconded by Mr. J. Chapin that "a committee be appointed to arrange and prosecute the work of submitting the Scott Act to the voters of Lakefield." In accordance with that resolution, about 20 staunch and sterling men were nominated. By request, Messrs. G. Galvin, Rev. Mr. Johnson and the Secretary gave short addresses and explanations of the provisions and enforcement of the Scott Act. There is no doubt that when the Act is fully known, there will be a hearty endorsement of it here, for Lakefield will not take a back seat when the interests of morality are at stake.

OTONABEE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I am informed that an occasional correspondence appears in the Peterborough Times from Otonabee, under the heading "Greystock Gleanings," and as I have been accused of writing them, will you kindly give me space in your columns to state that I never wrote any correspondence to the Times from Otonabee or any other part of the county. I regret that I should be even "thought of" as the correspondent.

Yours truly,
M. MCCLELLAND.

AN ELEGANT LOT OF PERCHERONS.

A friend of ours who has had the pleasure of a visit at Elmwood Stock Farm, Scipio, N. Y., John W. Akin, proprietor, informs us that he has a finer lot of Percheron horses than he has often met with. They are uniformly clean limbed, symmetrical animals of good action and disposition, yet no more than one should expect when they understand that Mr. Akin with his critical ideas of what constitues a perfect horse, attends personally to the selection of each animal in the Old Country, and he is by no means easy to please, having ridden for days together without finding a horse that answered the requirements of his judgment. As might be expected, Mr. Akin captured eight first prizes at the New York State Fair at Rimira last fall, with half a dozen seconds in same classes. Michigan Farmer.

THE WAR CLOUD.

England Still Making Preparations for War.

Hostilities Only Temporarily Averted.

The Czar Sanguine that Peace Can be Maintained.

LONDON, March 16.—Sir Peter Lumsden has been ordered to impart to the Ameer and to the commander at Herat the terms of the agreement between Russia and England to maintain the military status quo. Members of the Commons heard Gladstone's announcement of the agreement between England and Russia with a general sense of relief, the agreement affording a reason to hope that war will yet be averted by diplomatic means. It is believed Sir Peter Lumsden has the Afghans sufficiently under control to prevent a collision between the outposts. Prominent Conservatives assert that the agreement will not prevent Russia massing troops on the border of debatable territory, and object to the Russians being allowed to remain even temporarily on the territory claimed as belonging to Afghanistan. Lumsden has received touching his course in the event of a dangerous Russian advance. He is nearly six days' march from the nearest telegraph station. It is believed he will send officers to Herat to organize the Afghan troops while he assumes a position not necessarily war-like at Robat Pass. The Ambassadors of France, Germany, Italy and Turkey had lengthy interviews with Granville yesterday. The arrangements between England and Russia announced by Gladstone yesterday afternoon resulted in the decision of the Cabinet not to insist upon the withdrawal of Russian troops from the outposts during the deliberations of the joint commission.

CERTAIN DISCRETIONARY POWERS

Baron de Stael yesterday protested against the preparations for war now being made in England and the demonstrations upon the Indian frontier, which he said were calculated to lessen the chances of an amicable settlement. De Stael to-day informed Granville that he the Egyptian convention. The Marquis of Huntington stated in the Commons that there was still cause for great anxiety regarding the relations between Great Britain and Russia.

LONDON, March 13.—The Standard says the agreement between England and Russia leaves the essence of the difficulty untouched. Matters must have been bad when such an agreement was paraded as a diplomatic gain. Many consider this pause in the situation a prelude to surrender.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 13.—The Czar during an informal talk with several diplomats at the Imperial levee last night said, "I cannot conceive that any but the wildest dreamers could think that I would declare war against England. Our ends can and will be attained, but it will be by the gradual power of civilization—not by force."

SIR PETER LUMSDEN AT HERAT.

TEHERAN, March 15.—It is reported that Sir Peter Lumsden has arrived at Herat, and that the Afghans are actively fortifying the city. Small bodies of Russians hold the wells and roads between Sarakhs and the Murghab river. There are several hundred Cossacks near Puli Khatung, which is the most southerly point nearest to Herat occupied by the Russians. The Russian forces occupying Merv consist of a battalion of infantry, a regiment of dragoons, and some Cossacks. At Askabad there are 8,000 troops. A Russian brigade and convoy of military stores are en route from the Caucasus to Askabad. The Afghans here believe an alliance between England and Turkey would alienate the Turcomans from the Russian authority.

HURRYING FORWARD RUSSIAN TROOPS.

An Askabad letter, dated Feb. 24, says: Troops and stores are going forward daily en route for Merv. The soldiers are previously blessed by the priests, who tell them to fight valiantly against the Czar's enemies. Civilians and military men openly discuss the likelihood of the declaration of war against England. Great excitement prevails. It is stated 16,000 troops have been ordered to Merv. The work on the railway from Kizilarvat to Merv is being pushed with the utmost rapidity. Great difficulty is experienced in inducing workmen to go to Merv, as they fear they will be killed by the British or Afghans. A letter from Sarakhs, dated March 2, states five battalions of Russian infantry and three batteries of artillery are en route from Bokhara to Merv, and that a small party of Cossacks recently attempted to traverse the Zulfikar defile, but were prevented by force.

A MUSSULMAN DEPUTATION.

BOMBAY, March 15.—A Mussulman deputation on Friday asked the Governor to urge the British Government to maintain firmness in resisting Russian aggression. The deputation promised England material and moral support.

INDIAN TROOPS.

CALCUTTA, March 15.—The Government has suspended for this year the discharges of soldiers eligible for the reserve force, and also transfers from the army in India to the reserves. The Calcutta Government is about to send a battery of mountain guns, and a battery of heavy artillery, and 3,000 Snider rifles, with 250 rounds of ammunition for each, as a gift to the Ameer of Afghanistan.

ACTUAL HOSTILITIES REPORTED.

It is reported an actual collision has occurred between the Russians and the Afghans. The Government is reticent.

TURKEY TO REMAIN NEUTRAL.

VARNA, March 15.—It is reported Russia has been sounding Turkey in reference to a Russo-Turkish alliance, and that the Porte has replied Turkey will remain neutral.

Rupture, Breach or Hernia.

THE TRUE PHILOSOPHY OF MEDICATION is not to dose for symptoms, but to root out disease. It is a most searching without being a violent remedy for Constipation, Biliousness and Indigestion. And Lord and Lady Spencer will do the honours of the mansion in his absence. No addresses of welcome are to be delivered by the local corporations and societies of tradesmen.

A SANGUINARY ENCOUNTER.

Attempt to Rescue an Imprisoned Desperado.

SPRINGER, N.M., March 16.—A desperate encounter between officers and outlaws occurred here to-day. Last Sunday a noted desperado named Bill Todd was arrested and gaoled. He telegraphed the fact to Dick Rogers, leader of one of the most desperate gangs of outlaws in the whole South-West. This morning Rodgers appeared with a number of followers, went to the country gaol where Todd was confined, and attempted a rescue. The officers opened fire from within, to which the outlaws replied. A desperate battle followed. The attacking party finally withdrew, leaving three of the party, Dick Rodgers, Ed. King, and Red River Tom, dead in the street.

DAIRY SALT For the purpose of supplying my numerous Butter customers thro' the County, with a superior article of Fine Salt for Dairy purposes, I now offer a Salt, which I heartily recommend, at $1.00 per hundred. I know of no salt, English or Canadian, of better quality.

PLASTER CAYUGA WHITE, in bags, one hundred and fifty lbs. in each. Buy the best Plaster.

The following speaks for itself:—

Ontario School of Chemistry, Toronto, March 16th, 1881.

W. H. MERRIT, ESQ.—

My Dear Sir,—In accordance to your request, I have obtained Average Mercantile Samples of Land Plaster from dealers in Toronto, and beg to report as follows:

	Cayuga White.	Owasco Grey. (Ft. Hope.)	Paris Grey.
Calcium Sulphate (Fertiliser)	77.18	52.00	54.00
Carb. Lime and Magnesia (Useless)	trace	15.27	15.01
Iron and Alumina "	trace	1.50	1.60
Insoluble Matter "	1.27	8.75	15.60
Water and Organic Matter "	21.55	22.48	13.60
	100.00	100.00	100.00

The insoluble matter consists of clay and sand, being the residue left after boiling with hydrochloric acid. Yours obediently, THOMAS HEYS, Analytical Chemist.

The above analysis adds theoretical proof to the practically known fact that Cayuga White is 25 per cent purer than any other Land Plaster on our market.

OILCAKE This popular Feed I offer at a LOW Price. Special figures given to purchasers wanting quantities. Will be glad to quote prices to Secretaries of the different Grange Societies. FLAX SEED and FLAX SEED MEAL.

BACON LONG, CLEAR, AND CUMBERLAND CUT. Stock Large and Prices Lower than for years past.

EGGS I am now prepared to take any quantity of Eggs at highest market price. Cash always paid.

My general business in Flour, Feed and Coarse Grain, still receives careful attention. I have recently made extensive alterations in my shop, and having taken the next store, have now all my stock together. Farmers will now find my premises very convenient for handling Salt, Plaster, and all bulky goods.

N. B.—Oats taken in exchange for Oatmeal, 14 lbs. to the bushel.

HALL'S

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

THE RED FLAG.

BY
M. E. BRADDON.
Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc. etc. etc.

There was no one else in the way to answer an inquiry. And, after all what good could come of any meeting between Kathleen and Suzon?

"She hates me, and I do not love her," thought Kathleen. "But she is strangely altered. I thought Rose was right when she called her a creature altogether evil, a soul given over to wickedness. Yet to-night her face had a softer look; the unholy fire seemed to have gone out of it, as if the face and the soul had been alike bleached and chastened by suffering."

The days and weeks wore on, and the mornings and evenings grew brisk and cold. That curtain of sultry heat was lifted; the dome of white-hot iron was taken off the city, which no longer seemed like a cauldron seething and bubbling over subterranean fires. The white vapors of summer floated away from the streets and quays, from river and woods and gardens. It was October, and the leaves were falling from the poor remnants of trees in the mutilated Bois, that lovely wood which had been hewn down and converted into an abattis. Autumn had come, and Kathleen's work was still uncompleted, still went on; the worker patient, secret, dogged, never for one moment abandoning her purpose, never losing faith. Not till she had seen every journeyman currier in Paris would she falter or waver in her work. Then it would be time to say, "I have deceived myself; Serizier has left Paris;" and then it would be time to think of following and hunting him down in the place of his exile, be it far or near, in the Old World or the New. Sea or land should be as nothing to her in that search—distance and time as nothing. She felt as if she were the spirit of vengeance, a disembodied soul, free from those fetters which make humanity feeble.

Day after day she went to her task—monotonous, dreary, full of weariness for mind and body; and yet she knew not weariness. That iron purpose within her buoyed her up and sustained her. The spirit conquered the flesh.

There were days when she felt ill, very ill—sick to death almost; but she flung her illness aside, as if it had been a garment that embarrassed her movements, and went out to her work. Her white face in those days evoked the pity of strangers.

"A poor creature that ought to be in the hospital rather than in the streets," thought the passers-by. "Not long for this world," said one. "There is death in that face," said another.

Other days there were when all her limbs seemed one great aching pain; yet she crawled down the steep old staircase and into the dim morning streets; and, like an old horse which begins his day stiffly and feebly, and shuffles himself into a trot under the goad of the whip, she gathered up her strength for the journey, and quickened her pace as she neared her goal.

Not one day did she miss in all those toilsome weeks. Happily there were the Sundays, blessed intervals of respite and rest, which gave her new strength for the coming six days.

On these quiet Sabbaths she rested all day long, lying on her bed like a log, hardly moving hand or foot, reading a little now and then, but, for the most part, resting—only resting—in a state of apathy, which was little more than semi-consciousness.

Again and again the Durands urged her to go out with them on the Sunday, to get fresh air, change, a little innocent gaiety, a few hours of forgetfulness in some pretty rustic spot. They offered to take her to Asnieres, to Bougival, to Marly le Roi.

In vain.

"I have a good deal of walking every day," she said. "I like to rest—only to rest—on Sundays."

She did not tell them that the agony of weariness was sometimes so acute towards the close of the week that nothing but this long day of total inertia could have enabled her to resume the round of toil.

"But you never go to mass now, Kathleen," said Rose, with gentle reproachfulness. "You used to go regularly to the dear old church yonder," with a little motion of her head towards Notre Dame.

"Used—yes. But he was alive then, and I went to pray for him. Now—no. I could not kneel and pray in a church. Not yet, not yet. There is a cloud of blood that swims before my eyes when I try to look up to heaven."

October was passing. It was the middle of the month—the 16th—and still no sign of Serizier. Her day's work was over, and Kathleen was walking slowly, with downcast eyes and drooping head, along the Rue de Galande, in the dusk of evening. She had been watching for more than an hour in front of an obscure workshop at the end of the street. There was a Belgian name over the door. She had seen two men leave the house, one a workman, the other a man of somewhat superior appearance, who looked like the master. The workshop was small, poor-looking; and, according to her knowledge of the trade, these two men would be in all likelihood the complete staff. But she made up her mind to go back next morning to watch the men going to their work, and to make inquiries as to the number employed. She never struck a workshop off her list until she had made herself mistress of her facts.

Suddenly, in the autumnal dusk, she looked up, startled by the rattling of an empty truck over the rough stones of the roadway. She looked up, and found herself face to face with a man in a ragged blouse, wheeling a truck.

The man was Serizier.

She had not one moment of doubt; not a passing shadow of hesitation clouded the clearness of her mind. This was Serizier.

She had seen him last in the pomp of his warlike accoutrements, plumed hat, clanking sword, and sabretasch, red scarf, breast bedizened with gold embroidery, chin and lip shrouded by a heavy military moustache, erect, audacious, arrogant, lording it over an admiring crowd.

To-day the man was clean-shaved; he seemed to have grown smaller, as if bent double with a load of ignominy, shrunk into his sordid inner self, lessened morally and physically by the loss of plumes and gold lace, and the insolence of successful audacity.

But Kathleen was not the less sure of his identity. Those restless shifting eyes, more unquiet than ever now that the man had fallen to the level of hunted criminals—those evil-looking eyes were not to be forgotten. It was he.

Cold and trembling, Kathleen tottered, and reeled against the wall. For a few moments her eyes were dim, and her brain was clouded, the passionate beating of her heart was almost unbearable; then, collecting her senses with a supreme effort, she turned and followed her prey, keeping at a respectful distance, and in the shadow of the houses. She saw him wheel his truck into a little yard belonging to the currier's workshop—watched him come out again and go into a wine-shop on the other side of the street, where he sat drinking and talking with another blue blouse. Kathleen stood outside in the dusk—as she had stood outside many such a window in the course of her evening watches—and studied the man's face by the light of the flaring candle, which stood in front of him, as he hobnobbed with his friend.

Yes, her patience was rewarded. She had found him—the assassin of the defenceless. The man to whom tears and blood had been as strong wine, for whom power had meant the power to slay and to burn. This bull-dog-visaged workman, crooning over his pipe, talking with bent brow and angry eyes, this was the murderer of the Dominicans and of Gaston Mortemar.

She went straight to the office of the Commissary of Police of the Quartier de la Gare; but by this time it was ten o'clock, and too late for her to be admitted to an interview with any of the officials. She was told to return in the morning, when she could see the chief officer. She was there again when the office opened, saw Monsieur Grillieres, and told him her story.

The intelligence was welcome, for Monsieur Grilliieres, misled by erroneous information, had already made more than thirty useless investigations in search of Serizier. Monsieur Grilliieres started instantly, accompanied by two inspectors; but on arriving at the Rue Galande he was told that the Belgian currier had left the night before. He and his workmen had moved the stock-in-trade—some of the things had gone away in a van, some in a truck. The last truckload had been wheeled away at midnight.

Where had he gone?

Nobody knew exactly; everybody had some suggestion to offer; the ultimate result of which statements and counter-statements, assertions and contradictions, was that the Belgian currier had been heard to say that he was going to establish himself in the neighborhood of the markets.

Thither Monsieur Grilliieres started in hot haste, and searched every shop occupied by a currier, leather-seller, or morocco manufacturer, but to no purpose. He found no one resembling Serizier among the hard-handed sons of labor smelling of leather. He began to despair, when towards five o'clock in the afternoon, crossing a street which abutted on the corn-market, he saw a van standing near a door—a van full of bundles of leather, dressed skins, and currier's implements. A man was unloading the van, and carrying the contents into the house near which the vehicle waited. Grilliieres went into a shop where he saw a man who looked like the proprietor.

"You are a currier?" said the magistrate.

"Yes, monsieur."

"I am a police magistrate, and I must beg you to answer my questions."

"Willingly, monsieur."

"How long have you lived in this part of the town?"

"Since last night."

"Where were you before?"

"Rue Galande."

"How many workmen do you employ?"

"Two; the man who is unloading the van, and who has been with me fourteen years; the other who has been working for me only a fortnight, and who is now in my workshop on the third floor of this house."

"What is his name?"

"Chaligny."

"His name is not Chaligny," answered Monsieur Grilliieres. "He is Serizier, and I am here to arrest him."

Grilliieres went up-stairs, followed by his two men. On the third floor there was a door half-open, and in the room within they saw a man sharpening his knives. The man looked up, and, seeing a stranger, was seized with an instant suspicion, and stretched out his hand to snatch up a shaving-knife, the first instrument of defence or attack which offered itself. But Monsieur Grilliieres threw himself upon him. "You are my prisoner," he said.

"Why do you arrest me?" cried the man. "My name is Chaligny."

Duprat, one of the police-officers, had been immured as a hostage at the prison of La Sante during Serizier's reign of terror. He recognized the ci-devant colonel at a glance.

"You are Serizier," he said; "I remember you perfectly."

"Yes," answered the other doggedly. "I am Serizier. The game is up, and I know what I have to expect. But if I had seen you fellows on the staircase just now, you should not have taken me alive."

He made no resistance, and was taken to the police-office, where he himself dictated his deposition. Thence he was transferred to the Prefecture. Thence again, after the usual formalities, he was sent to the Depot.

"My affairs are settled," he said to his custodians. "I have done enough to get my head washed in a leaden bath; but it's all the same to me. I regret nothing; I only did my duty."

Colonel Serizier was right in his prophecy. His doom was to be the leaden bath; but the law's delays are tedious, and the murderer arrested in October was not to be despatched until the following February.

CHAPTER XIII.
ATONEMENT.

Kathleen's mission was accomplished. There was no more for her to do. She went back to the Rue Git le Cœur, broken in spirit and in body. She lay on her bed, and it seemed to her that her life now was one long Sunday, a time of apathy and dumb, dull rest—l yless, hopeless. There was nothing more for her to do in this life. She had given the victim over to his executioners. She was told that the end was certain. There could be no pardon, no commutation of the law's last penalty for such a wretch as Serizier. France would rise up with one loud cry of vengeance were there any puling for mercy here.

The slow days wore on—dull gray days; storms of wind, driving showers, anon the fogs of November floating up from the neighboring river—and still Kathleen lay on the bed or the sofa, helpless, prostrate, as some pale flower that has been torn from its stem and flung aside to wither. Rose had brought a doctor to see her; but he did not even profess the ability to cure.

"There is nothing organically wrong," he said. "Your sister must have had a very fine constitution to survive, what she has gone through. It is a case of extreme weakness, loss of appetite, sleeplessness—things that tell without actual disease. If you could get her away into the country, fresh air and change of scene might do something; but she is too weak to be moved."

"We will take her away directly she is strong enough to go," said Rose.

The doctor thought that time would never come; but he held his peace, took his fee, and departed.

Rose and Philip watched the fading life in that quiet room on the upper story as devotedly as if the thread of their own lives had been intertwined with it. But their tenderness, their little plots and expedients, were all useless. They could not lure Kathleen from her solitude, or beguile her into forgetfulness of her grief.

"While I was watching for that man I forgot everything, except the task in hand," she said; "I lived and breathed only for that. My brain was burnt up with one fiery thought; and in those days I hardly grieved for Gaston—I hardly knew how much I had lost; but now I think of him, and brood upon him all day long."

"But if this goes on you will go mad, or die," said Philip, standing beside her sofa, looking down at her with honest earnest eyes, full of affection; "and that will break Rose's heart. Remember how she has reared you and cared for you! To her you are more than a common sister. She has been to you as a mother; and you owe her filial duty.

"Let her ask me anything, except to live," answered Kathleen. "I cannot live without him. O, she must let me go—in charity she will let me go—where I shall be at rest for ever, as he is. She has you and the little one. She can spare this broken life."

"But she cannot spare you—nor I, nor the little one; and it is your duty to live for our sakes. Your natural grief we would respect, Kathleen; but this inordinate grief, this obstinate despair—"

"Had he died a natural death, I would mourn for him as other widows mourn for their husbands; I would bow to the will of God. But he was murdered."

"And you have brought his murderer to justice. Is not that enough, Kathleen?"

"I wonder whether I shall live to hear his sentence, to know that he has suffered a murderer's doom?" she murmured; and then she turned her face to the wall, and would talk no more that day.

Rose and her husband began to despair. It seemed to them that Kathleen's vital power was ebbing day by day, gradually, imperceptibly. The loss of strength was only indicated by the facts of her daily life. Last week she had risen early every morning, and had swept and dusted her rooms, with only a little help from Rose, who was ever on the watch to aid and comfort her. This week she could only crawl about a little, dusting Gaston's books with tremulous hands, arranging and rearranging his desk or his bookshelves, with a fluttered nervous air. A little while ago she had lain on her bed or her sofa all day, as if in mere purposeless apathy. Now the time had come when she lay there from sheer weakness, broken down, fading before their very eyes.

They had gradually schooled themselves to bow to the rod. They began to talk to each other about her as of one foredoomed, unspeakably precious, inasmuch as she was to be with them but a few weeks—perchance but a few days. They talked sorrowfully, yet with resignation, of a future in which she was to have no part, save as a sweet sad memory.

"How fond she would have been of you, my angel," said Rose, prattling mothers' tender prattle to the baby on her knees, "if she could but have lived to see you grow up!"

One day, when the invalid up-stairs had sunk so low that it seemed as if she could hardly last to the end of the week, Philip Durand came past the little cremerie, which had once been Suzon Michel's, on his way home. It was between four and five, and already dusk, and he was startled to see the door of the shop open and a light within.

While he stared, wondering whether a tenant had been found for the deserted house now that trade was looking up a little, Suzon herself emerged from the darkness within, followed by a man who blew out a candle, and came into the street, carrying a bunch of keys. The man was landlord, who had been making an inspection of the premises with the old tenant.

"Come, Madame Michel," he said, as he locked the door on the outside, "you cannot do better than take down the shutters to-morrow morning; no one will do so well as you in that shop, and now that business is brisk everywhere, you may make a better trade than ever. I shall not raise your rent—"

"O, but monsieur is so generous!" cried Suzon ironically; "everybody knows that rents are going up in Paris."

"Well, I say it shall be the old rent."

"I'll think it over," said Suzon: "but it will be at least a week before I can decide. Certain it is that I must do something; one cannot live upon one's savings for ever."

"It was a suicide to shut up such a shop as that, except for just the week of the barricades. But you are not half the woman you were, Madame Michel; the air of your present abode cannot agree with you."

He wished her good-evening and trotted away, fingering his bunch of keys. Two minutes afterwards she met Philip Durand face to face.

"Yes, she was changed. The woman of the people, the amazon, the petroleuse, was curiously subdued and softened. Some chastening influence had subjugated her vehement nature, and altered the expression of her countenance to a degree that was almost a transformation.

"Monsieur Durand!" she exclaimed, with a startled look; and then she said quietly, "I am a stranger in this neighborhood now. It is like coming back to an old life. How is your wife?"

"She is very well."

"And her sister—Madame Mortemar?"

"She is—dying."

"Dying! That is a strong phrase."

"It is the truth. We have done all that care and love could do, but she is slipping away from us. I have no hope that she will last to the end of the month."

"What is her malady?"

"A broken heart."

"Ah, that is more common than doctors believe! Has she never got over the loss of her husband?"

Suzon had turned to accompany Philip, and they were walking side by side towards the Rue Git le Cœur.

"Never."

"I suppose, though, she is glad that Serizier was taken the other day?"

"She was glad; it was her own work. She only lived to bring the murderer to justice and that being accomplished, it seemed as if the mainspring of her life was broken."

"She brought him to justice!" cried Suzon. "What do you mean?"

"Simply what I say; Serizier's arrest was brought about solely by my sister-in-law; she watched and waited for him, day by day, for three months. It was she, and she only, who brought him to his doom."

"I read in the papers that it was a woman, but I thought it was a jealous woman—some discarded mistress, perhaps. And you say that it was she—that lily-faced girl—she who tracked the murderer to his hole?"

"She, and no other."

"And she is dying?"

"Yes, she is dying. The task weakened the sources of life; body and mind were alike exhausted by the long patient effort—unshared, unknown by those who loved her—and now a broken heart has done the rest."

"She shall not die!" cried Suzon, with a voice so loud that it startled the passers-by, who turned and stared at her; "no," she went on hurriedly, breathlessly, "if there is a God in heaven she shall not die. If there is no God, well, then this earth is a shambles, and the innocent have no friend. She shall not die!"

"What can you do to save her?"

"Give her something to live for, give her so strong a reason why she should live that the tide of life will flow back to her veins, the weary heart will beat strong with hope and love."

"You are mad!"

"No, I am not mad. Go and get a fly. Can she be moved, do you think? Could she bear to be driven a little way?"

"God knows. She is as weak as an infant!"

"O, only go and get the carriage. We will manage it, we will carry her. Go; I have but to whisper in her ear, and she will have the strength of a lioness. Bring the carriage to the door yonder; I will run on and see your wife."

Durand thought she must be mad; but her earnestness, her energy were electrical, and he obeyed her. In a case so hopeless any gleam of hope was welcome. There was some secret to be told, some revelation coming. He scarce asked himself what, but hurried off to engage the first prowling fly he could find.

Suzon ran up-stairs to the third floor. She listened at the door of Kathleen's sitting-room. There was a faint murmur of voices within, and she entered without knocking.

Kathleen was lying on the sofa near the fireplace, her wasted cheek white as the pillow on which it rested. Rose sat by her, bending over her, talking to her in low murmurs. The room was dimly lighted by a lamp on the mantelpiece.

Suzon went across the room and knelt by the invalid's side.

"It is I, Suzon Michel," she said, "the woman who once hated you, but who has since learnt to pity you, and who now honors you. Is it true that you tracked that wild beast to his lair? that when all the police in Paris had failed to find him, you hunted that tiger down?"

"Yes, I found Serizier. They say he will be shot."

"Sacre nom, yes, he shall be shot. The women of the Place d'Italie—the people who lived in fear and dread of him, to whom his name was a terror—they will not let him escape, now the law has got him. Madame Mortemar, will you come with me? I want to take you to my home, yonder, close to the spot where your husband fell."

Kathleen started up into a sitting position. It was like a sudden awakening to life, as if some magic wand had been waved over her, magnetising the feeble clay.

"What!" she cried, "you live there! I thought it must be so, that night. Yes, yes, take me to the spot where he fell. Let me see it once more—once before I die. To me it is as sacred as a grave. I cannot go to his grave," she added despairingly.

"Dear love, you are too weak to stir," pleaded Rose tenderly, with her arms about her sister's wasted form.

"She is not too weak to come with me. She should come if she were in her grave-clothes. You can come with us—you can help me carry her down-stairs. Your husband will have a fly ready. Yes!" cried Suzon, running to the window, "it is there, at the door below. Bring some brandy in a bottle—wet her lips with a little first. A warm shawl, so," wrapping it round her as if she had been a child. "You are not afraid to come, are you, my little one? I have good news for you at the end of the journey."

Her impetuosity evolved a corresponding energy in Kathleen, who was tremulous with excitement. Rose understood that there was new life at the end of this sudden journey. Yes, there was a revelation at hand, about Gaston. She kept herself calm and steady while those two others were on fire with excitement. Between them she and Suzon Michel carried Kathleen down-stairs to the fly, the three women got inside, Kathleen wrapped in thick shawls. Philip got on the box beside the driver; in a crack or so of his whip they were rattling into the Boulevard St. Michel.

It was a longish drive to the Place d'Italie; but, urged by Suzon, the man got over the distance very quickly. The dull side-street looked unspeakably dreary in the wintry gloom, the lamps burning dimly, the windows showing little light—signs of failure and poverty on every side.

The fly stopped before that empty house which Kathleen had noticed in the summer gloaming. The board was still hanging above the door, the windows were all blank and dark; but Suzon opened the door with her key, while Durand lifted Kathleen out of the vehicle.

"Carry her up-stairs, following me," said Suzon; "but she and I must go into the room alone. You others must stay outside."

"It is not a trap, is it?" asked Rose, frightened. "You mean her no harm?"

"I mean her all the good in the world, and she knows it," answered Suzon, holding Kathleen's hand, which feebly pressed hers in response to those words.

They stopped at the door of the back room on the first floor, Suzon first; then Philip, with Kathleen carried on his shoulder; Rose in the rear, but pressing close against them, lest there should be danger ahead.

Kathleen slipped from Durand's arms, and clung to Suzon Michel, as the latter opened the door. The two women went into the room together, and Rose and her husband were left outside.

There was one instant's silence, and then a wild shriek, a shriek that might be terror, grief, or joy. One could not tell what it meant, outside the door.

Rose was in an agony. She would have dashed into the room, but Philip held her back.

"Let them be for a few moments," he said. "Mortemar is alive. The mystery can be only that—alive, and shut up in this house, under watch and ward of that woman."

Two minutes after, the door was opened by Suzon, and the Durands went in. The room was comfortable enough within, desolate as the house looked outside. The furniture was humble, but neat and decent. There was a fire burning in the grate, a lamp on the table.

In an easy-chair in front of the fire sat a man with his leg in splints from the hip downwards. He was pale to ghastliness, and had the look of one who had but begun the slow progress of recovery from a sickness nigh unto death. His hair and beard were long, his hands thin to transparency.

"Yes, it was Gaston Mortemar, and his wife was kneeling at his feet, kissing the wasted hands, murmuring sweetest words, nestling her head in her bosom, ineffably happy.

"I give you back your dead," said Suzon solemnly. "He was left for dead when I picked him up and brought him in here, shot through shoulder and hip and leg with half a dozen bullets. The surgeon I brought to him said it was a hopeless case; but for the sake of surgery, as an amateur, he would try to cure him. For two months he lay in instant danger. For seven weeks he was mad with brain-fever—fever that came from the pain of his wounds. I have nursed him through all. The surgeon will tell you if I have been a faithful nurse. And now I give him back to you, not healed, but on the fair road to recovery; although he will be lame all his life, poor soul; but that does not count in a writer, does it? He will be all the greater with his pen if he has less temptation to roam."

Vital Questions!!!!

Ask the most eminent physicians

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, child-like refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly

"Some form of Hops!!!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu!!!"

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

"Mandrake! or Dandelion!!!!"

GENERAL GORDON.

(Written for THE EXAMINER.)

Far away in distant Khartoum,
Beneath the Oriental sky,
Lies a noble, Christian hero—
For such men can never die.
He was fighting for his country;
Long he held that city fast;
But like Arabs turned to traitors,
And our hero fell at last.

When the city gates were opened
For the enemy to come
With their swords and spears and bayonets,
And the famous English gun,
Brighter gates than those of Khartoum,
In a city, with a crown,
Opened for the Christian soldier,
And he laid his weapons down.

There to rest beside the river,
From the strife of the blue Nile.
In that fair and peaceful country,
Free from tumult, care or guile.
May we each be ever ready
For death comes at any hour—
Like the noble General Gordon.
Watching on the battle tower.

Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been spared. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption."

A GRANGE OPINION.

The Master of the Dominion Grange, at the opening of the annual session took strong ground against the monopoly policy of the Dominion Government. He contended that it was against the best interests of the people to hand over huge tracts of the country to cattle ranch and other speculators, and maintained that "all the public domain that is fit for cultivation should be made easy of access to those who have no homes, and should not be bartered away to monopolists or sold to corporations and capitalists for speculation."

HIS LAST OATH.

L'Etandard states that a curious story is being circulated by the priests in Montreal relative to a miracle which is said to have taken place in Acton Vale some twelve days ago. A man while threshing grain swore very badly. On some bystanders remonstrating him he replied: "If there is a God let Him punish me." He was at once seized with paralysis, and was fixed in the position in which he stood. Not only so, but he became rooted to the ground, and could not be removed. His neighbors had to cover him with rugs to prevent him being frozen, and although they offered him food he could not take it. It is further reported that Mgr. Fabre is to visit the place, presumably to try and restore him.

The "Favorite Prescription."

Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. It is known as the "Favorite Prescription." Under its administration all the pelvic organs are strengthened, and the woman becomes that embodiment of health and beauty which God intended her to be.

FAMOUS FIDDLER AND FATHER.

Hans Pali, the gypsy violinist, who recently died at Pesth, was the husband of four wives and the father of thirty-four children, and his funeral was attended by more than 10,000 people; but it is not mentioned whether this popular outpouring was a feeling tribute to his superiority as a fiddler or a father.

Demonstrated.

Sometimes it costs hundreds of dollars to convince a man; very often less is required, but in the case of Polson's NERVILINE, that sovereign remedy for pain, 10 cents foots the bill, and supplies enough Nerviline to convince every purchaser that it is the best, most prompt and certain pain remedy in the world. Nerviline is good for all kinds of pain, pleasant to take, and sure to cure cramps and all internal pains. It is also nice to rub outside, for it has an agreeable smell, quite unlike so many other preparations, which are positively disagreeable to use. Try it now. SPOILING HIS CHANCES.

A few days since a wedding breakfast was given by a substantial farmer blessed with five daughters, the eldest being the bride when a neighbor, a young farmer, who was honored with an invitation, thinking, no doubt, he ought to say something smart and complimentary upon the event, addressing the bridegroom, said: "Well, you have got the pick of the batch!" The countenances of the four unmarried ones, as may be imagined, were a study.

TO BE LOOKED AT BROADLY.

Any public document, no matter how brilliant and logical the writer of it may be, can be picked to pieces if it is measured by a six-inch rule. "ME TOO."

A few days after Dicken's death an Englishman, deeply grieved at the event, made a pilgrimage to Gad's Hill, and as he was having some refreshment at the famous John Falstaff inn, near at hand, the effusiveness of his emotions prompted him to take the waiter into his confidence. "A great loss, this, of Mr. Dickens," said the pilgrim. "A great loss to us, sir," replied the waiter, shaking his head, "he had all his ale sent from this house."

A COURTEOUS CAT.

A member of the Zoological Society says: "I once had a cat who always sat up to the dinner table with me, and had his napkin round his neck, and his plate and some fish. He used his paw, of course, but he was very particular, and behaved himself with extraordinary decorum. When he had finished his fish I sometimes gave him a piece of mine. One day he was not to be found when the dinner bell rang, so we began without him. Just as the plates were put round for the entree, puss came rushing upstairs and sprang into his chair with two mice in his mouth. Before he could be stopped he dropped a mouse onto his own plate, and then one onto mine. He divided his dinner with me as I had divided mine with him.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.

The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood, cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, Ont., February 20th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shaker Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scorfula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists, Price $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

The Missing Link.

"Krao," the so-called "missing link" whose history and appearance have considerably exercised scientists and amused the curious in Europe, arrived in Philadelphia yesterday morning in charge of George Shelley, who accompanied Carl Bock, the traveler, to Siam three years ago, when the child was captured. Mr. Shelley sat last night in an upper room at the Bingham House with "Krao" beside him, and discoursed learnedly and voluminously on his little charge. The child, who is believed to be between 8 and 9 years of age, was neatly dressed in a terra-cotta gown, red stockings and buttoned kid shoes. Heavy silver bracelets adorned her hairy arms and a cord, interwoven with gold thread, encircled her waist. Though the nose is flat, and the face and forehead are covered with black hair of varying length and closeness, the child is saved from repulsiveness by her remarkably large, dark, gentle, and intelligent eyes, and her general expression of sense and good nature.

"Krao," says Mr. Shelley, was captured with her parents in January, 1881, in the wilds of the Laso country, in Northern Siam. All of the tribe that have been seen are completely covered with hair. In their natural state they live in trees, are destitute of clothing, and almost without language. Their food is fruits, fish and nuts. They have few implements, and do not possess the knowledge of fire. The name "Krao" is simply the Siamese for ape.

Mr. Shelley, who is a believer in the Darwinian theory, while not pretending that Krao and her tribe supply the only link between man and the higher apes, holds to the idea that these curious people are allied to the chimpanzee in many physical points, with much resemblance to civilized man in intellect. He instances as Krao's ape-like characteristics the following facts: She has thirteen dorsal vertebræ and thirteen pairs of ribs, instead of twelve, as in man. She has pouches in the mouth where she still stores nuts and sweetmeats. Her cranial measurements correspond with those of the higher apes. Her ears and nose are without cartilage. Her fingers are abnormally flexible. The hair on her body grows in directions that characterize the Siamese hirsute growth.

Krao, since her captivity, has learned to read, write and speak English, and has also acquired some knowledge of German. From a wild, untaught little savage, she has developed into a docile, affectionate, and remarkably intelligent child. She still has recollections of her wild life in Siam. The child last evening wrote her name in full, Krao Farini, with a pencil, in a large, round, copy-book hand, picked up a handkerchief with her toes, and good-naturedly opened her mouth to show where she had stored away nuts in her curious, ape-like pouches.—Philadelphia Press

"Courting-Sticks."

In early New England days, as far back as the middle of the eighteenth century, when hospitality was a practice as well as a virtue, there was in most houses only one large assembly room, and there the family and all the guests and chance callers gathered on winter nights about the blazing fire of logs. We know that youth was youth and love was love, and young men were timid and maidens were shy, and courtship went on in those days. How was courtship possible in this common room, where every word was heard and every look taken notice of? We read in the admirable volume on the recent centennial of Long Meadow, Mass., by Prof. Richard S. Starrs, of that town, in the winter evenings for the convenience of young lovers, since there was no "next-room," courting-sticks were used; that is, long wooden tubes that could convey from ear to ear sweet and secret whispers. Was this an invention peculiar to Long Meadow?

It is a charming picture that this calls up of life in a Puritan household, this tubular love-making, the pretty girl (nearly every girl is pretty in the firelight of long ago) seated in one stiff high-backed chair, and the staid but blushing lover in another, handling the courting-stick, itself an open confession of complacence, if not of true love. Would the young man dare to say, "I love you," through a tube, and would he feel encouraged by the laughing, tender eyes of the girl when she replied through the same passage, "Do tell!" Did they have two sticks, so that one end of one could be at the ear and the end of the other at the mouth all the while? How convenient, when the young man got more ardent than was seemly, as the flip went round, for the girl to put her thumb over the end of the tube; and stop the flow of soul! Did the young man bring his stick, and so announce his intention, or did the young lady always keep one or a pair on hand, and so reveal both willingness and expectation? It was much more convenient than the telephone, with its "hello" and proclamation to all listeners at each end of the line. Lovers can make love with anything, even with a telephone, the successful courting of a deaf person (for there is one word that nearly every one likes to hear), as we know, can go on through a speaking-trumpet; but these courting-sticks seem to us the ne plus ultra of tender communication—when a third party is present. They would be very useful now at large parties, where there is such a din and babble that one can only court a pretty girl at the risk of bronchitis or laryngitis. Sometimes in the jam you cannot get near the girl; but with a long courting-stick you could wile her away from her too ardent admirer. This invention seems to us worthy of revival for many reasons, and we should be glad of any further information in regard to it. Civilization in its progress drops a good many things that ought to be retained.

A Dog's Offended Dignity.

An old setter once displayed such vanity that it was immediately seized upon to compel him to obedience. He would follow the members of the family whenever they went out, no matter how troublesome his presence might be. One day the children tied a ribbon-bow on the tip of the dog's tail. Everybody laughed at his comical appearance, which so mortified the poor setter that he retired under the sofa and sulked for an hour. The next day the family were going to a croquet party and the dog seemed bent on accompanying them. It occurred to one of the young ladies of the party to try the effect of a ribbon-bow. It was tied on his tail, and immediately he rushed into the house and hid under the sofa. When they returned he was on the doorsteps on his haunches as if concealing something, and refrained even from wagging his tail, lest the hated bow should be seen.—Youth's Companion.

There lives in Forsyth, Ga., an old gentleman who is now in his seventy-ninth year. He was converted in 1837, licensed to preach in 1840, and has been preaching ever since. He never served on a jury, never was sued, never saw a horse race nor a theatre, never saw a game of cards, never saw a dance, not even at a corn shucking, nor was he ever drunk. He has twelve children and lives a happy, peaceful life.

A famous dealer in the best wines of Burgundy, having an idea that the watery portion of the wine is best done away with, has taken to artificially freezing his stock. He thus withdraws a certain percentage of water in the shape of ice from his wine. The crop of ice thus removed, as soon as it melts, becomes fetid, showing some elements of queer decomposition. The freezing process doesn't seem to affect the quality of the wine except for the better, as regards soundness, body and color.

Ram Chandra Bose, the native Indian Methodist, in an address at Round Lake, explained the mythology of his name. "A huge giant," he said, "with 100 heads and 1,000 arms, lived in the island of Ceylon. But his 100 heads did not make him a good man, for he had a bad heart, and delighted in great cruelties. This giant also cruelly oppressed the gods in all the regions around. Vishnu was finally importuned, with great weeping, to interfere and save both gods and men from the cruel oppression of this horrid giant. The prayer was granted, and the god became incarnate and led a host of monkeys to the home of the wicked giant, who was overcome and slain. This incarnation of Vishnu was called Ram Chandra."

Sarah Althea Hill, of the famous lawsuit against Senator Sharon, is of medium height, well developed, with a lithe, trim figure. She gives at first sight the impression of a woman who is abundantly able to take care of herself, and yet the expression of her face and her attitudes are very womanly, as though she lacked confidence and were appealing for support. Her features are regular, her face oval. She is neither blonde nor brunette, with dark brown hair, which is allowed to fall in graceful waves over her full round forehead. Her most attractive feature is the full brown eyes. Her nose is clear cut, and her mouth is also resolute in the habitual compression of her lips; but this is somewhat belied by a slight droop at the corners, as though an originally fine will had been overlaid by a strain of voluptousness which weakened and coarsened it. Her whole manner shows nervousness and vitality.

The School Bulletin has a lively cartoon on the prevalent cramming process in education. Around a large square iron receiver, into which a bald-headed, spectacled pedagogue is ramming with a long stick books marked "arithmetic," "geography," "grammar," and a multitude of other studies, and on one side of which stands another old sinner turning a crank, are seated several so-called pupils with tubes in their mouths drawing knowledge from the great source before them. Their heads are ten times as large as their bodies, and the expression on their faces bears a striking resemblance to that of idiots. In the foreground is another of these creatures. His head, which resembles a block, is marked "graduate," and under his arm he carries a diploma. He does not look as though he knew enough to put salt on his potato.

When, two years ago, the compulsory educational law was passed by the French Legislature, the clause inserted in the bill respecting children who received elementary instruction in their own homes raised a good deal of protestation. In virtue of this clause parents whose children attended no school were to be examined annually, in order that it might be ascertained that they were not permitted to grow up without the instruction suitable to their years. Conservatives, and all who disapproved of the "laicization," of schools, declared the measure adopted, which is applicable to all classes of society, to the rich parents as well as to the workingman, to be arbitrary and intrusive, and heads of families were invited to refuse to comply with the law. For a time, however, it was not enforced, but now a circular just issued by the Prefect of the Seine fixes the date of the examination and the mode of procedure.

Political enthusiasm sometimes leads people to extreme lengths and entails some hardships on them in consequence, but it is not often that it results as it did in the case of Mr. Puckridge, who is described as a "gentleman in good position." Mr. Puckridge was an enthusiastic partisan in the Sandwich election in 1880, and could scarcely find sufficient means to express his devotion to his principles. His party colors were yellow, and besides wearing a yellow suit he thought it would be a brilliant idea to have a yellow dog as a companion. It so happened that his favorite pup was not of this extremely common color, and he essayed to correct nature's mistake by the use of dye. The ochre did not agree with the animal, and, after suffering much agony, the dyed dog became a dead dog. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals prosecuted the politician and had him sentenced to six weeks' hard labor. While appealing the case the gentleman took refuge in France, but a few days ago, on the occasion of his first visit home, he was arrested and "sent up" to serve his term.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Waterbury American relates the following as having recently occurred on a Connecticut railroad: "A woman, well dressed and intelligent, boarded a train with three children, whom she placed on the seat in front of her. They were neatly dressed in holiday attire and were evidently bent on a day of fun at the picnic grounds. She paid her fare to the conductor and turned her attention out of the window when he looked inquiringly at the children. When he asked about them she turned and said indifferently: 'I don't know; they are not mine.' The little ones were uneasy, and one of them, a pretty little girl, had a look of grief and surprise on her face that was pitiful to see. She turned around, and, as the woman said 'They are not mine,' she threw her arms over the seat and cried out, despairingly, 'Why, I am, mamma.' The conductor passed on, too indignant to think of his fare. 'Madam,' he said, 'I hope you are ashamed of yourself for disowning your own children for a matter of thirty cents.' She gave the little girl a bitter scolding, and when they got off at the grounds they did not look happy."

Prompt Payment.

We notice in both the Free Press of London and the London Advertiser a card of Thanks for the wonderfully prompt manner in which the Ontario Mutual Life Insurance Company settled a claim of $8,000, on the life of James Watson, of that city. Only 13 days elapsed from the day of death till the issue of the card of thanks. Such prompt business tact and principle as shown by this speedy settlement cannot fail to commend itself to the thoughtful insuring public. We would recommend the intending insurer to consult J. O. Snider, the Ontario's agent here, before insuring elsewhere.

New Furniture Warerooms.

The public will be interested in being informed that Mr. W. McKee has opened a retail branch of his wholesale furniture business. The warerooms are situated on Water street, in the shop under the Roller Skating Rink, and will contain a superb stock of every kind of furniture usually to be found in such an establishment. By extending their patronage to the Roller Rink Furniture Shop, the public will be rewarded by securing first-class goods at very low prices. Ordered work will receive special attention. The fame of McKee's wholesale furniture business reaches from Brandon to the Bay of Fundy, and we re sure that every corner of the county will speedily discover the advantages of his retail department.

Old Folks' Concert.

A concert and entertainment that will vividly reproduce the songs and costumes of 100 years ago, will be given in Bradburn's Opera House on Thursday evening, March 26th, 1885. At this grande concerte there will be sung many of ye songes of ye olden time, as well as hymns and anthems, by a bande (called in ye new-fangled speech, a chorus) of over three score voyces. All ye syngers will appear in ye costumes of 100 years ago—quainte habite and gownes, powdered wigs and queues. In addition there will be embraced in the splendid programme prepared, vocal and instrumental music, solos, duets and choruses. The great preparations made, and the talent engaged, make it safe to pronounce the Old Folks' concert the entertainment of the season. Cardes to admit to ye Playe House on ye nights of ye concerte, will cost 1s. 3d., or 2s. 6d. for kepte seats. Ye latter may be secured at ye Harpsichorde Shope of Master D. Smarte.

"To and Fro in London."

John R. Clarke will deliver his celebrated lecture on the above subject in Bradburn's Opera House, on Friday evening, March 27th. As a lecturer Mr. Clarke has a wide and brilliant reputation. Wherever he has delivered his "To and Fro in London," he has given satisfaction and delight, and the press is unanimous in the praise of the lecture. A favorite way of showing commendation is to compare it to John B. Gough's most eloquent efforts. Having been left an orphan on the streets of London at 7 years of age, Mr. Clarke, as bootblack, newsboy and tap-room singer, gained a personal knowledge of London the great, and his interesting recitals hold the hearer's interest from beginning to end. Of his lecture, the Chatauqua Herald says:—"There has not been a more remarkable man on the Chatauqua platform this year than John R. Clarke."

Rev. D. Cushing, of Rochester, N. Y., says:—"Your To and Fro in London ought to introduce you to the best audiences all over this country. I see no reason why it should not be put beside Mr. Gough's best efforts in our best lecture courses."

Saginaw Courier says:—"As good as Gough at a story."

Bay City Tribune says:—"Nothing like it since Gough was here. It is a series of [illegible] transitions from beginning to end." [illegible] Press says,—"We deemed it an [illegible] pleasure to hear this great Chatauqua effort, and declare every man, woman and child should hear this man of eloquence."

Works Like a Charm

Mr. D. Smart's patent truck for moving pianos works like a charm. Four large new pianos were received yesterday, and by the aid of this truck, were moved by two men with the greatest ease. It has also been tried in several private houses, and the ladies are delighted with the smooth and easy manner with which the once dreaded job of moving a piano was accomplished.

Ticket and Express Agency.

In our advertising columns will be found the announcement of Mr. Alex. Elliott, Ticket agent of the C. P. R. here, and also agent of the Dominion Express Company. Any one having to travel over this line, or to ship goods by the C. P. R. should be sure to call on Mr. Elliott. We can insure them courteous treatment and obliging attention to their business requirements. We have no doubt Mr. Elliott will push the business of the company to its utmost capacity.

A Sad Suicide.

Last Friday Mrs. Robert Pue, of lot 14, concession 1, South Monaghan, committed suicide by hanging herself in the cow house. She escaped the watch set over her and when her husband went to look for her, he was horrified to see her lifeless body suspended by a rope noosed about her neck, the other end attached to a beam. The deceased lady was between 65 and 70 years of age. The deceased was determined to end her life. A few days previously she made an attempt to end her life in the same cow house in a similar manner, but was discovered and cut down when nearly dead. Since then she has been watched, but on Friday she eluded her keepers and carried out her purpose.

Mr. Earl's Lecture.

On Thursday evening there was at the Y. M. C. A. Hall the regulation small audience, that has marked the series, to hear the lecture of Mr. B. Earle, on the subject, "The Poet Reflects the Age." Rev. Mr. Manning occupied the chair. The speaker introduced his subject by sketching the national type of the various countries of Europe, showing what an effect natural and climatic surroundings had on the mental temperaments. The characteristics of a people were reproduced in their literature. The period of Chaucer was first dealt with, when the development of a natural unity had been effected. Chaucer's poems were full of the chivalric spirit of his age, and were a reflection of the national forces then in existence. To Chaucer succeeded a degradation of the political liberties and social status of the people, and this age was barren of literary creation. The Elizabethan period of English literature with its wonderful literary products, was coeval with great deeds and events that marked the national life. It was the age when Kepler's and Galileo's great discoveries, the opening of a new world by Columbus, the victory over the Armada and the spread of the Bible in the vulgar tongue, exercised such mighty influences on the world. This age had called forth Shakespeare and a race of intellectual giants. Without the great dramatist the age was the most illustrious period in the history of English literature. Milton was described as the last of the poets of the period. He represented the loftiest Puritanism which the poet had in his poems reflected in all its phases—its developement, its flourishing and its decadence, and he had reflected the age and himself as no poet of any time had done. The lecture was a most successful vindication of its title, and a hearty vote of thanks for the able and instructive lecture delivered, was tendered Mr. Earle, after which Rev. Mr. Bradshaw pronounced the benediction. It is unfortunate that lectures of the merit of this should be honored with such meagre attendance.

Royal Arcanum.

On Thursday last a council of this order was instituted in Peterborough by Mr. H. K. W. Campbell, Deputy Supreme Regent, of Boston, Mass. The following officers were elected:

Past Regent	J. R. Stratton
Regent	Rev. W. C. Bradshaw
Vice-Regent	Dr. R. P. Boucher
Orator	D. W. Dumble
Secretary	R. E. Wood
Collector	W. A. Stratton
Treasurer	B. Shortly
Chaplain	J. Stratton
Guide	R. H. Rogers
Warden	H. C. Winch
Sentry	F. T. Jameson
Trustees	Geo. Edmison, T. O. Rush, C. D. McDonald.

The above council will be known as Peterborough Council, No. The order of the Royal Arcanum has been established some seven or eight years, and has now a membership of nearly 60,000. In Ontario there are 29 councils, and a grand council for the Province will be formed this month. The objects of the order, briefly stated, are:—1. to unite fraternally all white men of sound bodily health, and good moral character, who are socially acceptable, and between twenty-one and fifty-five years of age. 2. To give all moral and material aid in its power to its members, and those dependent upon them. 3. To educate its members socially, morally and intellectually; also, to assist the widows and orphans of deceased members. 4. To establish a fund for the relief of sick and distressed members. 5. To establish a Widows' and Orphans' Benefit Fund, from which, on the satisfactory evidence of the death of a member of the Order, who has complied with all its lawful requirements, a sum, not exceeding three thousand dollars, shall be paid to his family or those dependent on him, as he may direct.

The latter clause is, of course, the main object of the Society. Payments are made on a scale of graded assessments, according to age. Peterborough Council will meet semi-monthly. Any of our citizens desiring to become members of the Order can obtain all the information they require from any of the officers named above.

Presbytery of Peterborough.

The Presbytery of Peterborough met in the First Presbyterian Church, Port Hope, on Tuesday afternoon. The town ministers were in attendance.

GENTLEMEN will find at the "Golden Lion" full lines of Scotch Tweeds, Worsteds Furnishings, Dress Shirts and Underwear. Tailoring a Specialty, and a first-class Cutter at your command.

The Grand Junction Suit.

The argument in the suit—Grand Junction Railway vs. Peterborough—adjourned from the Toronto Assizes, was made at Osgoode on Saturday, and judgment reserved. Mr. E. B. Edwards appeared for defendants.

Sale of Clothing

at the Auction Mart, opposite the Review office. A large consignment of Clothing, in Men's and Boys Suits, with instructions to sell by private sale at half price. Call and see them.

Curling.

On Thursday, the Campbellford and town Curlers took a friendly turn at the rink. The visiting rinks scored 4 and 13 respectively, and the town rinks, 20 and 22, giving the latter a majority of 25.

Royal Arcanum.

A meeting of the Peterborough Council of the Royal Arcanum will be held this Thursday evening in the Otonabee Lodge Rooms, Clurton's block. Members will please take notice and endeavour to be present.

Auction Sale.

Mr. C. Stapleton will sell by public auction on Tuesday the 24th of March, the Farm Stock, Implements, etc., belonging to Mr. W. Pearson, on what is known as the "Hammond Farm," in the township of Smith. Sale at 12.30 o'clock.

Embarking in Business.

Mr. Frank Clark, for a number of years in the employ of Mr. John Clarke, Simcoe street, has bought out a jewelry business in Warkworth, and left on Thursday morning to take possession and begin operations. Mr. Clarke has a well deserved reputation of being skilled in his business, and will, we are sure, work up a good business.

St. Patrick's Day.

This day passed very quietly in town. The weather was more like Christmas—cold enough to freeze the knobs off a blackthorn stick. The day was duly recognized at St. Peter's Cathedral. High Mass was said at 10.30, Rev. Father Conway, celebrant. The special musical services by the choir were very happily rendered, and the entire ceremonial was most impressive.

Athletic Association.

At a meeting held on Monday evening the matter of organizing an Athletic Association was discussed, its formation decided on, and a committee, composed of two each from the different clubs in town, was appointed to attend to the details of organization of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association. The matter of securing common athletic grounds and establishing a gymnasium and club rooms were also considered.

Journalistic Progress

We inadvertently omitted before to note the evidences of enterprise and progress shown by our respected cotem., the Woodstock Sentinel-Review. This journal has added to its plant and machinery a good supply of new type, a gas-power engine, a folder and a new Campbell press. The Sentinel-Review is typographically (with one exception) the neatest paper published in Canada; it is conducted with ability, and is, in all respects, a first-class weekly newspaper, well worthy of the popular appreciation and prosperity which its new departure evidences.

Roller Skating Rink.

The Water-street Roller Skating Rink is daily growing in popularity. In order to give increased facilities for practising and learning the art, the management has decided to reduce the price for the mornings. Hereafter, in the forenoon, skates will be furnished free to those paying the ordinary admission fees 10 cents for ladies and children; 15 for gentlemen. The new stock of skates is on the way, and as soon as they arrive the nights on which the band will play will be announced. Preparations and practice are going on for a canival, to be held in two or three weeks.

A Sad Home-Coming.

About a year ago, Mrs. Geo. Addison (Miss Bella Cumming, daughter of Mr. William Cumming, Collector of Taxes), left Peterborough a happy bride, for her future home in the Northwest; to-day her lifeless remains are on the way home to Peterboro'. The poor girl died at Winnipeg on Monday night. We have received no particulars of her last illness. The remains are being brought to Peterborough for interment. The young wife whose life has been so suddenly ended, was well known in Peterborough, and beloved by all who knew her. Her sadly sudden death is a great shock to her relatives, who have the heartfelt sympathy of their numerous friends in their melancholy bereavement.

The Toronto "World."

The Toronto World is advancing. For the past week or so it has been printed from a splendid new Bullock Perfecting Web Press. This is as it should be. First-class brain products should be disseminated by first-class printing presses. The World is something unique in the way of journalism. It revolves in an orbit of its own, far above the disturbing influences of political attraction. When, however, the N. P. is conjunction, it wobbles a little from its course, towards the Tory party. It is a bright, crisp, caustic, first-in-at-the-death, accurate, readable, little journalistic multum in parvo, for a cent—just as good as it can be without being Grit. Roll on, little orb and wear out your new press with an increasing edition.

FAIR, VANEVERY & Co. have imported a most complete assortment of Mourning Goods, ranging from the new Crepe Epingle, Jet Cashmeres, French Silk Crapes, &c., to the more artistic Black Crape Bonnets, Capes, &c., in their millinery department.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Barnham, Simcoe Steet. 18-tf

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Peterborough Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society Holds its Annual Meeting.

On Thursday evening last the annual meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the Murray-street Baptist Church. The attendance was exceedingly small, especially when the undenominational character of the Society and the immense importance of the Society's objects are considered. Mr. W. C. Nicholls, the President, was detained at home by illness, and, in his absence, Dr. Fife was placed in the chair.

After Scripture readings and prayer by Rev. Mr. Torrance, the Secretary, Mr. Jas. Stratton, read the of the Committee, as below:

Your Committee regrets to have to report:—That during the year just ended very little progress has been made. This may be accounted for in part from the fact that the special friends of the Society were so engaged in business, church building, etc., that they could not devote that time to the work of the Society which it deserves and requires, if success is to be secured.

One of the great difficulties your Committee has to contend with is the difficulty of procuring collectors. For three years the members of the Committee canvassed the town and were successful. During 1883 and 1884 the members were not able to spare the time from their business, and have not therefore raised as large sums as the preceding years. This year a collector was appointed by the President, who is to receive a percentage, but up to last week no great progress had been reported. Your Treasurer's report will enable you to understand the financial aspect of the case. While doing so little at home, we dare not draw comparisons with the work of the parent society, or even with other portions of this Province. We trust, however, that better times are approaching, when men will not be so engrossed in business, that the Bible Society shall be neglected. The Bible and its promises are the only sources of spiritual progress and consolation, the true source of our civilization, and the only hope for civilizing and Christianizing the nations.

Your Committee in retiring, according to the usual custom, beg leave to recommend that the following gentlemen be the officers and Committee for the current year:—

PRESIDENT—Dr. R. Bell.
VICE-PRESIDENTS—All Ministers of the Gospel.
SECRETARY—Joshua Collins.
TREASURER—J. H. Roper.
COMMITTEE—Dr. Fife, John Lockhart, J. W. Flavelle, John Erskine, R. Kingan, W. W. Johnston, John Carnegie, R. Tully, John McClelland, W. A. Morrow, Geo. A. Cox, W. Cummins, John Walton, J. Stratton, S. Curtis, W. C. Nicholls.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. STRATTON,
Sec. of Com.

Peterborough, March 12, 1885.

The Secretary explained that, owing to the business engagements of the members of the Committee, it had been found impossible to attend to the solicitation of subscriptions, and Mr. Rossiter had been employed on commission. In addition to the amount collected by him, as mentioned in the Treasurer's report, there were about $49 in the collector's hands ready to be handed over to the Treasurer. The report was, on motion adopted.

Rev. Mr. Munro gave a brief address. He pointed out the wonderful proofs that daily presented themselves of the Bible being the word of God. The entire course of human events and actions connected us with the Bible. It was the centre of all attraction to the minds of men. He detailed in a most interesting manner the archæological explorations, that were taking place in different parts of the East and the Holy Land. Many interesting discoveries had been made and every discovery tended to throw light on the Books of the Prophets, making plain what before appeared obscure. The record on Chaldean tablets of great antiquity confirmed the narrative of the Bible. The more learning, scientific research and investigation there was applied to the test of the truth of the Bible, the more brightly the proofs of its inspired origin appeared.

Rev. Mr. Tovell proceeded to point out what an important and potent auxiliary the Bible was to the efforts of the church in the work of evangelizing the world. It aided the work of the missionary by being his forerunner and ally in the great work. He showed that all churches should rally to the aid of the British and Foreign Bible Society. That Society, in addition to the aid it gave the church, brought the Bible within the reach of the poor. It had issued since its organization 200 million copies of the Bible, and nine million pounds sterling had been spent on its objects. The Bible had been translated into over 300 languages and dialects. Five thousand copies of the Holy Scriptures were printed and bound, ready for circulation every day. He made a strong appeal to all Christian people to liberally support the Bible Society.

A vote of thanks to the speakers, moved by Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. Cox, was unanimously passed.

Turnbull has already received all the Latest Spring Shapes in Hats and Bonnets. For New Millinery try Turnbull's.

Special Visit to Peterborough.

Last month the Surgeons from the celebrated International Throat and Lung Institute 173 Church street, Toronto, were visited by over 500 sufferers who examined and tested the wonderful Spirometer as invented by Dr. M. Souvielle of Paris, ex-Aide Surgeon of the French army, which conveys medicines directly to the seat of disease. All who examined the Spirometer express themselves highly satisfied and were surprised at the powerful effects produced. Thousands of invalids are being cured every year of the worst forms of Catarrh, Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, Enlarged Tonsils and Loss of Voice, Weak Lungs are strengthened and Consumption arrested in its rapid progress. The large number of patients under their care enable them to bring their price within the reach of all.

The Surgeons will be at the Grand Central Hotel, Peterborough, Wednesday and Thursday, March 25th and 26th 1885.

PICTURESQUE CANADA.

THE EXAMINER Book-bindery has received numerous private commendations for the excellence of its work which has given invariable satisfaction, and we publish below the hearty endorsations by the press, of public opinion on the work finished for different publishers:

EXCEEDINGLY WELL BOUND.

The Cobourg World speaks after this manner:—"We have received from Mr. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER bindery, our two volumes of Picturesque Canada. They are exceedingly well bound, in half morocco, with gilt edges, and appropriately embellished sides. We have seldom seen better specimens of binding: and if all Mr. Stratton's work is like that, THE EXAMINER bindery will not fail for want of patronage."

CANNOT BE SCREAMED

We clip the following from the Port Hope Times. It speaks for itself:—"Some time ago we entrusted our numbers of Picturesque Canada to Mr. J. R Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER, to bind, and expected they would be fairly well bound, as Mr. Stratton does everything well he undertakes. On Tuesday last, we had the two volumes returned to us, and we were surprised at the excellent workmanship, which could not be surpassed by any establishment in the Dominion. Those of our readers, who have not yet given their numbers into the hands of the binder, cannot do better than send them to Mr. Stratton, whose prices are low, and the work we are sure will please every one. The covers, lettering and gilding are a fitting and creditable accompaniment to the magnificent typography of the work. Mr. Stratton will pay the express charges both ways on all orders from Port Hope."

FIRST CLASS IN EVERY PARTICULAR

The West Durham News, Bowmanville, thus speaks: "Parties in this vicinity wanting Picturesque Canada bound, should leave their orders at this office. We have had ours very neatly bound, in gilt, at the EXAMINER Bookbindery, Peterborough, at nearly one half less than the rates charged in other places for the same work. The job is first-class in every particular and is a credit to the Bindery. Samples can be seen at this office."

EXCEEDINGLY HANDSOME.

Exceedingly handsome books are the Picturesque Canada bound for the proprietor of The Post at THE EXAMINER book bindery Peterborough. The book is in two volumes, black Russia leather, cloth and gilt edges. THE EXAMINER bindery is just now making a specialty of this class of work in addition to all other lines of commercial binding. The books were examined by a large number and all were very much pleased with the appearance and evident thoroughness with which the work had been executed.

BEAUTIFUL AND LASTING

The Omemee Herald says:—Some days ago we received from the Peterborough "EXAMINER" bookbindery our volumes of Picturesque Canada, bound in a most beautiful and lasting style. Persons who have examined the binding and general finish of the work pronounce it equal, if not superior, to any work of the kind turned out of city offices. Any of our readers wanting to get binding of any kind done can call at the Herald office and examine the work turned out of the EXAMINER bindery.

Fatal Tree-Felling Accident.

Last Friday afternoon Otonabee was the scene of a sadly sudden accidental death. James Manogue, a young man, was, with others, engaged in felling timber on the farm of Mr. Wm. Crowley. As the tree on which he was chopping went down, it struck and carried with it a dead "stub." Not being on the lookout for the latter, the unfortunate young man was struck by it—a long, projecting knot, which had been worn sharp by the weather, penetrating his skull directly on top to the depth of three or four inches producing instant death. The body was carried to the nearest house, and his comrades, hoping against hope sent to town for Dr. O'Shea and a priest. The former and Rev. Father Guay went to the scene. Dr. O'Shea found his expected patient dead, in fact he had died on the scene of the accident, but he examined the nature of his injuries and concluded that death had been as instant as it was painless. A careful inspection revealed not even a scratch on any other part of the body than the head. The deceased was a strong, vigorous young man, aged about 25 years. It is understood that he belongs to Chandos, and that his mother lives not far from Apsley.

Ready for Business Already.

We are glad that Mr. D. Belleghem's loss by fire and water in the recent fire at his premises was covered by insurance. His huge stock of furniture, that at the time was removed with such care as to not much damage it, has been restored to its place in his warerooms, and he is again ready for customers. For the next two weeks the whole of this fine stock, owing to its being slightly damaged, will be sold at less than cost. The damage, which is more apparent than real in the majority of cases, will detract very little from the wear of the articles, and till Belleghem has another fire—which day we hope is far distant the public will never have such an opportunity for securing unheard-of bargains.

THOSE petite models in the windows of the "Golden Lion" represent one of the styles of dresses being made by Miss Johnson from Fair, VanEvery & Co's. elegant assortment of Dress Goods, comprising every material and shade. Their Grand Exhibit of French costumes (with trimmings to match), Black and Colored Silks, Mervielleux, Check Silks, Stripe Silks, Cashmerette Cloths, Zephyr Ginghams, Organdies, Reversible Plaids, Brocades, Muslins, &c., surpasses everything for Quality and Cheapness.

Miss Mary Campbell, Elm, writes: "After taking four bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I feel as if I were a new person. I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for a number of years, and tried many remedies, but of no avail, until I used this celebrated Dyspeptic Cure." For all impurities of the Blood, Sick Headache, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Costiveness, etc., it is the best medicine known.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—In the smoking room of the House in Toronto a day or two since, Mr. Carnegie expressed his wonder at all the members of the legislature being so much down on him. Since you may know more of Mr. Carnegie in Peterborough than is known here, perhaps you could supply a reason for the unpopularity of the member for West Peterborough.

INQUIRER.

Toronto, March 23rd, 1885.

The brevity of life and lack of space forbid the making of an answer in detail. In a word, however, it may be said that a man, utterly devoid of gentlemanly respect for the feelings of others; who visits all, whose minds do not run in the same narrow groove as his own, with scurrilous invective and bilious abuse; who bores his fellow members with speeches as dry as the dust of the Pharaoh's, cannot expect to be the hero of the House, the darling of the corridors, or the pet of the smoking room.

THE INCANDESCENT HOWL.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I notice in your down town contemporary, the Review, of the 21st inst., a local item headed, "A New Application," in which the writer speaks in glowing terms of the use made of the "incandescent light," by one Mr. Sovereen, during his harangues to a yelling multitude in the Opera House every night.

The writer discourses learnedly about "insulated wires," and an "infantine dynamo," etc. Everything about the article goes to show that it was inspired. We are told that the aforesaid wonderful "wires" "led up the Doctor's back over his head, to a brilliant and dazzling orb fixed on his forehead." It will strike very forcibly the mind of any intelligent man that many people would require an "incandescent orb" fixed on their skulls, before they can be seen or appreciated notably this person using it in the Opera House, and all those who purchase his wares. I would recommend Mr. Sovereen to supply one for every one of the empty skulls in his audience, and then, O gracious! what a constellation we would have in the Opera House!

But apart from all this I wish to say, what every educated man knows, that the incandescent light is not new to professional or scientific men, and that its application to the extraction of teeth, examinations of the throat, ears and nostrils, etc., is not a "new application." It is known and so applied in the great hospitals of Germany, France and Great Britain, and in New York, Philadelphia, and other great centres of learning, and by members too—don't you forget it—of the "regular" profession.

The Review man says it is "new." No blame can be attached to the writer of said article as no doubt it is "new" in the Review office, as well as to the intelligent (?) crowd who nightly gaze with open-mouthed wonder at the incandescent specimen of humanity on the stage.

In writing the above I simply state facts well-known to every man who has received a college training—just ask any of our clergymen, civil engineers or medical men, and any one of them will tell you all about it. It is manifestly stupid to represent such a thing as "new," when it is well known and thoroughly understood, and for a considerable time, by the vast majority of educated men, and is a subject of wonder only to the uneducated.

The present system of illuminating our fair town by electric light is simply a modification of the theory upon which incandescence is based. This is strictly true—bogus advertisements and long-winded bombast and blatherskite to the contrary, notwithstanding. Do you catch on, Mr. Sovereen? Good evening.

Thanks Mr. Editor; I hope you will pardon me for not continuing this subject any further, as I am in a hurry to go down street to well—ah—Mr. Millar's, I guess, and buy an axe.

TRUTH.

DR. CLARKE'S LECTURE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—It seems necessary to call attention to one or two errors in the newspaper reports of an address I gave before the Y. M.C.A. a short time ago, as they have given rise to some amusing interpretations and still more amusing deductions.

What I said was, that man's physical nature is now as great a mystery to the vast majority of the world as his spiritual nature before a complete revelation was given, and that this ignorance was the fertile cause of medical imposture. It is a radical error in civilization that the young should be instructed so much in the higher branches of learning and so little in the constitution and functions of their own frames, upon the energy, endurance and correct adjustment of which depend their health, happiness and prosperity in this life and possibly their destiny in the future. So far from retarding, doctors have been the first, both to desire and to supply this education as far as possible.

Another mistake of more importance, which has not been noticed, was in making me say that all poisons are acid or alkaline. Some are, but certainly not all. The most powerful, as prussic acid or strychnia, have a feeble reaction and require other than chemical antidotes.

Yours, etc.,

J. CLARKE.

"MODELS FROM LIFE FOR LIFE."

Rev. Mr. Munro's Eloquent Lecture on the Subject.

Last Thursday evening there was, in spite of the bitter weather, a good attendance of the public in the Murray-street Baptist Church, to listen to the lecture delivered by Rev. Mr. Munro on the above subject. Rev. Alex. Bell conducted preliminary devotional exercises, and Mr Geo. A. Cox, who occupied the chair, introduced the lecturer.

Rev. Mr. Munro introduced his subject by premising that there were, at least, three books worth reading twice the Bible, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and Shakspere. The brilliancy of the latter was not undimmed by faults—the sun had spots. His mind was a faithful mirror of nature and human life. The character of Sir John Falstaff, as brought out by Shakspere, was cleverly analyzed. He was a compound of evil with a considerable admixture of good. Shakspere had made his vices so grotesque and ridiculous as to make them repugnant. When, after a life of vicious fidelity to Prince Henry, the latter cast him off, Falstaff realized the sad results of a wasted life. Falstaff's character was true to nature, it was no fancy sketch. He was a type of a class "men of splendid genius, whose brilliancy was sometimes assumed to be a compensation for their vices. In turn the characters and careers of Richard Brindsley Sheridan and Theodore Hook, two men of transcendant brilliancy and intellectual power, were described in eloquent language. It was shown how this great power had been prostituted, how their genius had been dimmed by debauchery, and the sad ending of their lives, which closed in destitution and misery, showed that the most exalted intellectual powers could not relieve them from reaping the melancholy harvest of a wasted life. These men, as well as great men generally, were not examples for imitation, not models for life that we should adopt. Humbler walks of life and spheres of action supplied better models. Examples were given of humble heroism to which no extraordinary gifts and grand ability lent their aid. Our impulses for good did not receive the greatest stimulus from within. All progressive emulation came from without—it was not evolution. The speaker here made an interesting degression, and in a bantering vein refuted the absurd tenets of the evolusionists. Gradual civilization could not take the place of example. No savage people ever became civilized of themselves, but when they came in contact with—felt the influence of the example of civilization, they learned the great lesson. The history of man's civilization could be traced back successively to the Romans, Greeks and Hebrews, and so on back to Adam. What was true of the race was true of the individual—all true inspiration of a higher life came from without the examples of great men and women. The present century was more fruitful in heroes and heroism than any other, as evidenced by dauntless exploring expeditions and fearless missionary ventures, represented by such men as Livingston, Burnaby and Gordon. Heroism was not dead. Did not missionaries take their lives in their hands, and when they fell did not others take their places? When England was in trouble, were not her sons everywhere ready to help, and the harder the fight the freer the offer of service? Instances of heroism were pointed to in William of Orange, Wolfe Kitto and Charles Lamb. Failure was no real failure if it developed the latent heroism of our natures. The speaker closed a delightfully interesting instructive and thoughtful address by eloquently exhorting Canadians to take full advantage of their opportunities. Canada was to be what her sons and daughters choose to make it. A union of individual effort and co-operation, while the ground work of the country's material prosperity, should be joined to the practice of that righteousness that exalteth a nation. A hymn by the choir, and the benediction by Rev. Mr. Bell closed the pleasant evening.

PICTURESQUE CANADA.

THE EXAMINER Book-bindery has received numerous private commendations for the excellence of its work which has given invariable satisfaction, and we publish below the hearty endorsations by the press, of public opinion on the work finished for different publishers:

EXCEEDINGLY WELL BOUND.

The Cobourg World speaks after this manner:—"We have received from Mr. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER bindery, our two volumes of Picturesque Canada. They are exceedingly well bound, in half morocco, with gilt edges, and appropriately embellished sides. We have seldom seen better specimens of binding: and if all Mr. Stratton's work is like that, THE EXAMINER bindery will not fail for want of patronage."

CANNOT BE SURPASSED

We clip the following from the Port Hope Times. It speaks for itself: "Some time ago we entrusted our numbers of Picturesque Canada to Mr. J. R. Stratton, of the Peterborough EXAMINER, to bind, and expected they would be fairly well bound, as Mr. Stratton does everything well he undertakes. On Tuesday last, we had the two volumes returned to us, and we were surprised at the excellent workmanship, which could not be surpassed by any establishment in the Dominion. Those of our readers, who have not yet given their numbers into the hands of the binder, cannot do better than send them to Mr. Stratton, whose prices are low, and the work we are sure will please every one. The covers, lettering and gilding are a fitting and creditable accompaniment to the magnificent typography of the work. Mr. Stratton will pay the express charges both ways on all orders from Port Hope."

FIRST CLASS IN EVERY PARTICULAR

The West Durham News, Bowmanville, thus speaks: "Parties in this vicinity wanting Picturesque Canada bound, should leave their orders at this office. We have had ours very neatly bound, in gilt, at the EXAMINER Bookbindery, Peterborough, at nearly one half less than the rates charged in other places for the same work. The job is first-class in every particular and is a credit to the Bindery. Samples can be seen at this office."

EXCEEDINGLY HANDSOME.

Exceedingly handsome books are the Picturesque Canada bound for the proprietor of The Post at THE EXAMINER book bindery Peterborough. The book is in two volumes, black Russia leather, cloth and gilt edges. THE EXAMINER bindery is just now making a specialty of this class of work in addition to all other lines of commercial binding. The books were examined by a large number and all were very much pleased with the appearance and evident thoroughness with which the work had been executed.

BEAUTIFUL AND LASTING

The Omemee Herald says: Some days ago we received from the Peterborough "EXAMINER" bookbindery our volumes of Picturesque Canada, bound in a most beautiful and lasting style. Persons who have examined the binding and general finish of the work pronounce it equal, if not superior, to any work of the kind turned out of city offices. Any of our readers wanting to get binding of any kind done can call at the Herald office and examine the work turned out of the EXAMINER bindery.

FORESTRY DEDICATION.

Rob Roy Court of Foresters opened their new hall by the impressive dedicatory services of that order on Tuesday evening last, 17th inst. D.D.H.C.R. Watson, of Peterborough, ably discharged the chief duties appertaining to the ceremony, who was efficiently assisted by visiting Foresters from Peterborough. The whole proceedings were very imposing and of an interesting character, and were witnessed by a large number of friends of the order in the village. Mr. Jas. Kerr, C. R. of Rob Roy Court, gave a pithy and explanatory address to the audience, all of whom were highly entertained by the dedication.

FORESTERS' CONCERT.

At the close of the dedication ceremony a grand concert was held in the Town Hall, which was filled to its utmost capacity. The programme provided a rich musical and literary treat. The Peterborough contingent, who took such a prominent part in the evening's events, did remarkably well, and all spoke highly of the vocal powers of Miss Watson, as well as of the instrumental ability of Mr. F. Clark. That part of the programme occupied by the Norwood vocalists was also very efficiently filled, and received a fair share of the encomiums of the audience. The proceeds of the concert amounted to about $50.

THE SCOTT ACT.

The first shot in the Scott Act campaign has been fired here with very gratifying success. On Wednesday evening of last week a meeting, attended by a large and influential body of the electors of Norwood, was held in the Town Hall, and organized a branch society for the purpose of assisting in the coming struggle between those favorable and those opposed to the Scott Act. Dr. Ford was elected president, J. A. Butterfield, treasurer, Jas. Meikle, secretary, and the resident ministers and Messrs. W. E. Roxburg, Thos. Burke, Wm. Eaton, John Finlay, Hugh Spence, T. M. Grover and W. H. Stephenson, with the elected officers, were appointed a committee to make the necessary arrangements to assist in working up the campaign in this vicinity. At a meeting of the committee held on Friday afternoon last, Mr. Jas. Meikle and Mr. Thos. Burke were appointed canvassers for the village, and it is said they are able to state that over half of the ratepayers of the village have readily consented to sign the petitions. On Wednesday evening last Miss Bowes, of the Women's Temperance Association, delivered a lecture here, which was well attended, and has also formed a Women's Temperance Association for this village. The work goes bravely on, and no doubt will be successfully carried on to the end.

NARROW ESCAPE.

On Thursday evening of last week as the express was coming westward it collided with a farmer's sleigh at the crossing about three miles east of Norwood, smashing the sleigh to pieces and slightly injuring the occupant, Mr. W. McMullen, of Belmont, it is alleged that the train failed to give the necessary warning on approaching crossings.

OBITUARY.

For the past two weeks Mrs. John Vosburg, of this village, has been a patient of the Toronto General Hospital, where she had been attending for the purpose of having a tumor removed from her by surgical operation. On Wednesday of last week the operation was successfully performed, but unfortunately she only survived a few days the removal of the tumor. Her body was brought to Norwood by her sorrowful husband on Tuesday morning last. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Vosburg in his sad bereavement. In the deceased the community loses a kind and benevolent friend, and the church to which she belonged, a most consistent member. Her funeral took place on Wednesday and was very largely attended

LAKEFIELD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

RUNAWAYS.

On Saturday last while the Rev. Mr. Thomson was driving from Selwyn to Lakefield his cutter capsized, and the horse ran away, breaking the shafts. On the Sunday following, Rev. Mr. Farncomb had a similar mishap, the horse jumping over the fence, when an effort was made by some parties to stop it. Nothing more serious than broken cutters resulted.

SCOTT ACT.

The petition to have the Scott Act submitted is being circulated for signatures.

THE RINK.

The skating and curling rink has been closed for the season.

CHURCH MATTERS.

The Rev. Mr. Clarke preached his farewell sermon on Sunday morning last. The Rev. Mr. Jameson, of Perrytown, preaches the church vacant Sunday morning next.

CONCERT.

Miss Rose Clarke gave her concert in the P. C. A. Hall on Friday evening. There was a good programme and a fair audience for such a cold stormy night.

KEENE.

OLD FOLKS' CONCERT.

On Monday evening, March 30th, there will be presented in the Town Hall here, one of the most unique, interesting and entertaining concerts ever given in this part of the country. Wherever given these old folks' concerts have drawn immense houses, and given the greatest delight. The concert in Keene will be given by the choir of the George street Methodist church, Peterboro', strengthened by detachments from the other choirs of the town. The members of the chorus for this concert, who will number 60, will be dressed in the costume of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. They will appear in wigs, powdered hair and queues, and in the quaint costumes of over a hundred years ago. A splendid programme will be presented, among which will be sacred hymns and tunes, and songs sung as early as 1679. This concert will, from its originality, novelty, excellence and entertaining features, mark an era in the history of Keene and vicinity. All who fail to attend it will deeply regret the loss they will have sustained, when their neighbours after attending it, tell them how greatly they enjoyed the rare treat of the "Old Folks' Concert," to be given in the Keene Town Hall on Monday evening, March 30th. Admission 25 cents.

SELWYN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

During the past two weeks special Evangeliatic Services have been held in the Methodist Church of this place. The meetings are under the control of the pastors of the Church, Rev. Messrs Wm. Johnston and S. J. Thompson who are very ably assisted by Mr. G. H. Marsh of the Canadian Evangelization Society. This gentleman has shown himself to be thoroughly qualified by gifts, grace and fruit for the work in which he is so continuously engaged. We understand he has been engaged in special evangelistic work about four years, and his rousing appeals to the unconverted come with a power to the hearts of men hard to be resisted. Best of all at Selwyn the work began and converts were made from the first night of his coming here. He not only sows the seed of sound gospel truth but manifestly reaps the same with great joy. Homes have been made glad and many hearts rejoice and thank God for his coming to Selwyn.

THE SCOTT ACT.

The Scott Act was adopted in three municipalities in Ontario on Thursday and defeated in Missiquoi county, Que. In the city of St. Thomas, the measure was sustained by 754 to 743—a majority of 11. In Elgin county the majority for was over 1,600; in Lambton, there was a favorable majority of over 2,000 with 21 places to hear from, which are expected to swell the total majority to 3,000. The antis were successful in Missiquoi, their majority being 40. The Act will not come into force in the constituencies where it was endorsed on Thursday till May 1886. Up till date, the prohibitory enactment has been carried in 59 out of the 70 municipalities in which a vote has been taken. Welland and Haliburton and Toronto, the Selfish are the only counties in which those in favor of the Act are not organized.

What is a Monopoly?

The word monopoly is associated in the mind with the legal and artificial monopolies of the last three centuries. Such, for instance, as the Dutch East India Company, which, having the entire product of the Spice Islands, would destroy a portion of the crop rather than lower the price by bringing the whole to market. The workings of all these old monopolies were opposed to the public good, as they were operated in the maintenance of high prices. In England, under the successors of Henry VIII, they had become so numerous and grievous, that by act of James I, all monopolies were abolished excepting the right to patents. To this has since been added, in England and America, the government monopoly of the postal service.

Yet, all railroads are monopolies in a certain sense and to a certain extent; that is to say, they are without practical competition between certain points. The use of the word monopoly, however, as applied to railroads, should be qualified by the word natural. Natural monopolies are such because, under the free and equal operation of the laws of nature and of the nation, they monopolize the business by doing it more satisfactorily, more economically, and more expeditiously, than it can be done by any other means. Insomuch as they fail in this, they are not monopolies. There should not, then, be associated with the idea of natural monopolies the old and well-grounded hatred that existed against legal monopolies. The latter, under the operation of special laws, were operated for the benefit of the few; the former, under the operation of general laws, are operated for the greatest good of the greatest number. There seems no better illustration of the change which has taken place in the meaning of this term in the popular mind than its present application to free competing corporations; and that one, among the prominent measures of reform proposed by the "anti-monopolists," is the absolute destruction of all competition through the operation of the entire railroad system of the country by a great government monopoly.

Combination and consolidation being the spirit of monopoly, are supposed, in the public mind, to be opposed to the common good. But they contain the actual substance of natural monopoly, which is such from its merits and benefits, and not from privilege.—Gerrit L. Lansing, in Popular Science Monthly.

Hard Worked Soldiers.

Our little army, the greater part of which is always "in the field" in the vast west, is called upon, besides much marching and often hard fighting, to do much hard work or manual labor, and also much menial service. These last two features destroy all soldierly feeling and esprit du corps, rendering the men sullen and discontented. Take the following as an example, habitually witnessed in the army. After a long day's march, with musket on his shoulder, forty rounds of ammunition in his cartridge box, and a day's rations of pork and hard tack in his haversack, the soldier reaches camp and longs to rest his weary limbs after putting up, with his mates, the little tents and bringing his share of wood for the camp fire. This is done cheerfully. But there is no rest for him. The sergeant calls for details of half a dozen men each to put up the tents for the officers, another detail to unload the officers' wagons and another to bring an ample supply of wood for each officer's tent fire, and also wood and water for the officers' cook. In the meantime the officer for whom the soldier performs these gratuitious services, and who bore no musket, ammunition or rations through the broiling sun, and who materially reduced the fatigues of the march by alternately riding and walking and thereby remaining comparatively fresh, sits on his stool sipping his toddy in sight of the tired soldier. To refuse to perform these "menial" duties, the soldier would incur the risk of being tied to a wagon wheel, or to be bucked and gagged or, in the mildest case, to get an extra guard and be subjected to all sorts or unpleasant treatment. Again, a soldier is called upon to do too much hard manual labor. He must be, or is made to be, also a carpenter, machinist, wagon-maker, axeman, etc. Hundreds of so called "forts," consisting of officers' and soldiers' quarters, quartermaster and commissary storehouses, stables and guardhouses, have been built by soldiers, some of whom receive a few cents "extra pay" daily, while the majority are detailed as "fatigue parties," without more than their scant soldier pay. There have been built thousands of miles oads through the wilderness, and bridges as well, by our pioneer soldiery, who are often sadly overtasked.

A nurse in an insane asylum says: "We outlive quickly all fear of our patients. For we know by a peculiarity in the eye of each one when a dangerous outbreak is at hand; and finally we reach so callous a stage that the sane people outside seem for the nonce lunatics, while the maniacs seem sane."

NEWS FROM THE SOUDAN.

General Graham Advancing His Entire Force.

Sickening Scenes on the Recent Battle Fields.

LONDON, March 23.—The situation in the Soudan is very serious, and news of Gen. Graham's encounter with the main body of Osman Digna's command, which will take place within a day or two, is anxiously awaited. The Arabs around Suakim have all the indomitable courage of their race, and in addition have experience, gained by constant encounters with the sorties from Suakim. They are proving a much more formidable foe than their brethren in the interior, encountered by Gen. Stewart and Gen. Wilson. Gen. Graham has hot work before him.

LONDON, March 23.—Messrs. Armour & Co., of Chicago, have been given an order by the British Government for five million cans of meat for the army in Egypt. It is calculated that seventy thousand cattle will be required to fill the contract.

KASSALA STILL HOLDING OUT.

Massowah advices say the rebels reinforced from Berber attacked Kassala, but were repulsed. The Governor of Kassala states he can hold out for some time, and will burn the town rather than submit.

THE FIGHT IN THE HASHEEN VALLEY.

Gen. Graham telegraphs to Gen. Wolseley that the result of the operations has been to establish a strong position commanding the Hasheen valley, and protecting the right flank and line of communication. In the recent operations against Tamai all portions of the force worked admirably and gallantly on very difficult ground, covered with high thorn bushes, and occupied by an agile and determined enemy, showing that the troops are able to master the Arabs in any position.

THE BRITISH LOSS.

SUAKIM, March 22.—The British lost 21 killed in Friday's engagement, including 17 Indians, and 42 wounded including 16 Indians.

FORMING ADVANCED ZAREBAS.

The troops in the zareba at Hasheen yesterday morning shelled and dispersed the rebels collected on the adjacent hills. The whole force, except the Guards, will advance at daybreak this morning. They purpose constructing zarebas at points seven or eight miles from the camp. The Berkshire regiment and the marines will be left to garrison the zarebas, the remainder of the troops returning to this place.

SURPRISED BY THE ARABS.

While the detachments of English and Indian infantry were making a zareba, seven miles south-west of this place to-day, they were suddenly surprised by a rush of Arabs who had been massed and concealed in the defiles west of Hasheen. The English formed a square as quickly as possible, but the camels, mules and horses were driven back in confusion on the troops, causing a stampede, and amid clouds of dust the Arabs penetrated the south and north of the square. Meanwhile the marines and the Berkshire regiment, who were on the east and west sides of the square, maintained a continuous fire, holding the enemy at bay, while a charge of cavalry and the fire from the guns at the Hasheen zareba checked the onslaught of Arabs, which, at the onset, threatened a serious disaster to the British. General Graham reports the English losses, so far as known, two officers and twenty-two men killed, 38 men wounded. The losses of the engineers and transport corps and Indian troops are not reported.

A SICKENING SCENE.

The troops are engaged dragging the bodies of the slain Arabs to the leeward of the zareba. A sickening scene is presented. Dense heaps of rebel corpses and native camp followers are mingled with the carcases of 500 camels. The ground is strewn with rifles, spears and shields.

GENERAL GRAHAM'S PIPE LINE.

General Graham has received the pipe line apparatus to furnish his army with a full water supply during their march to Berber. He will start on Tuesday to make the permanent advance necessary to secure such occupation of the country as will permit of the construction of the railway between Suakim and Berber.

THE AFGHAN QUESTION.

India's Defenders Prepared for Active Service.

Lord Dufferin Loses no Time in Parleying The War Cloud Threatens to Burst Gen. Roberts to Command the Indian Forces.

CALCUTTA, March 23.—There are 50,000 men in India ready for service at any moment. The military authorities are confident of their ability to repulse an attack on Herat without assistance from England, but they consider England might send enough troops to end forever the Russian menace. It is intended to send 25,000 men to Pishin, where the weather is cool.

Gen. Roberts will have command, and the Duke of Connaught and Gen. Macpherson will act as divisional generals.

There is great enthusiasm among the Sikhs, and recruits are coming forward by hundreds.

It is believed that England will send 15,000 men as a permanent increase to the Indian garrison.

VARNA, March 23.—Russia and the Porte are negotiating for a neutrality treaty in the event of war between England and Russia.

THE VICEROY AND THE AMEER.

Lord Dufferin has departed for Rawalpindee to attend the conference with the Ameer of Afghanistan concerning the frontier dispute.

The Governor of Massachusetts has signed a Bill providing that no liquor shall be sold except by inn-holders to registered guests between 11 p. m. and 6 a. m.

D. Sullivan, Malcolm, Ontario, writes: "I have been selling Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for some years, and have no hesitation in saying that it has given better satisfaction than any other medicine I have ever sold. I consider it the only patent medicine that ought more than it is recommended to cure." Unprincipled persons are selling imitations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Do not be deceived.

Tabernacle Sermons.

Discourse by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

SUBJECT: THE BLOOD.

Text: 1 John i., 7. "The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth from all sin."

(It was Communion Sabbath, and 189 new members were received, making the membership 3,218.)

This is a memorable day in the Brooklyn Tabernacle. On other days we throw out the Gospel net. To-day we haul it in. On other days, as the Lord's servants, we carry out the invitations to come to the King's feast. To-day we sit at the banquet. On other days we go out to fight the battles of the Lord. To-day we shout victory. To many of you has the promise been fulfilled, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy." I congratulate the Church of Jesus Christ upon what has been accomplished through the prayers and the earnest efforts of the people. But the glory of this scene is not for any human instrumentality. The victory of Agincourt was so great that after the battle the king commanded the chaplain to read the psalm of David in which occur the words, "Not unto us, Oh Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy name, give glory;" and when the chaplain came to that phrase, the king got off his horse, and all the cavalry dismounted, and the entire army prostrated itself upon the face, and re-echoed the voice of the chaplain, crying, "Not unto us, Oh Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy name give glory." Here have been great victories of grace. God has gone forth from conquest to conquest. It has been a great battlefield, in which Jesus Christ hath won a triumph, and it seems to me it is time for the hosts of earth and the hosts of heaven to come down on their faces, crying, "Not unto us, Oh Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy name give glory." Nearly nineteen centuries ago there appeared one Jesus. Publius Lentulus, in his letter to the Roman Senate, describes Him as being of stature rather tall, with hair the color of chestnut fully ripe, smoothe to the ears, and then flowing and curling down over the shoulders. In the midst of the forehead, says the writer, a stream or a partition of the hair. His beard the same color, the beard very full but not long. Eye gray and clear. The nose and the mouth fashioned as no description on earth could represent them. His face without spot or wrinkle, and a lovely red. His posture one of gracefulness and symmetry beyond description. So the letter to the Roman Senate describes Him. But He must die. The French army in Italy found a brass plate containing a copy of Christ's death warrant, that death warrant signed by John Zerrubbabel, Raphael Rabboni, Daniel Rabboni and Capet. When other victims have been taken to execution there has been danger that the mob would rescue the victims. There is no prospect of that in this scene, for the mob are against Him. From 9 A. M. to 3 P. M. Jesus hung a-dying. It was a scene of blood. We are so constituted there is nothing so exciting as blood. If a child has fallen in the street his bitter cry does not effect us so much as the crimson dripping from the lip. Going through a dark hall, if we find finger marks of blood on the plastering, we say, "What dreadful deed has been done here?" The whole scene of Calvary was a scene of blood. Blood dripping from the thorns and nails. Blood rushing from the temples. Blood soaking the garments. Blood gathered in a pool beneath the cross. Oh, there is one crimson word in my text that arouses all our sensibilities, stirs all our emotions, and brings before us the most tremendous scene of the centuries—just one crimson word: "The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth from all sin."

First, it was royal blood. In this country with our democratic preferences, we pretend to despise royalty, but let some foreign potentate come to this land, and if he is King of some insignificant island, all the people turn out to gaze upon him. When the Prince of Wales visited this country some years ago hundreds of thousands of people came out and huzzahed in the streets because some day he would probably wear a crown. It is considered a great honor to have in one's veins the blood of the house of Stuart, or the blood of the house of Hapsburg; but I have to tell you to-day that the blood that rushed from the cross is more royal blood. It is the blood of a King—the King of earth and heaven. The honors of Henry were so great they were divided up among different reigns, and it was Henry I. and Henry II. and Henry III. and Henry IV. and Henry V. The honors of the name of Louis were so great in France that these honors were divided up among different names, and it was Louis I. and Louis II. and Louis III. But I can say in regard to our King, it is Christ the first or Christ the last, and Christ the only. The king is dying. You remember the thrill of excitement in all the world when a few years ago the Czar of Russia was about to expire. He was known to be in his last sickness. The bulletins went out from the palace gate every hour: "The King is better." "the King is worse," "the King was delirious last night," "the King slept well," or "the King is dying." "the King is dead." The bells tolled it and the flags signaled it, and the telegraphs flashed it. I have to tell you that Christ our King is sick in his last sickness. He is breathing the last groan. His body is shivering with the last anguish. The King is dying. The King is dead. But if a Roman surgeon had stood over the cross and had known enough to half analyze one drop of that falling blood he would have found it in the same plasma, the same disk, the same fibrine, the same albumen as characterized the blood of others. In other words, it was unmistakably human blood. That is a man hanging on the cross. It is sometimes said that the Unitarians make too much of the humanity of Christ. I reply the Unitarians make too little. When I see Jesus hanging upon the cross all my sympathies are stirred. If He had belonged to a higher order of beings, if He had been angelic in His nature, I could not so much have understood why we sympathize, but He is bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh, and heart of our heart, and we may imagine something how the spikes hurt Him, and how hot His temples grew, and what sickness seized His heart, and how countenance and city and mob swam away from his vision, and something of the meaning of that cry for help which has made the blood of all ages curdle, "My God, my God, why has thou forsaken me!" Oh, it was royal blood, and it was human blood.

I go further and tell you it was a brother's blood. If you go down the street and you find a stranger maltreated, you are indignant, you rush upon the scene, you say: "You villains, what do you mean by maltreating this man? I never saw him before, but you have no right to run upon him in this way." But suppose you are going down the street and you see a group of desperadoes and you find that they are running upon your own brother. You rush upon the scene and say to them: "That is my brother, away with you, touch him if you dare." You throw away your life between your brother and these desperadoes. I have to tell you this one hanging on the cross is your brother. They struck Him, they mocked Him, they spit upon Him. How do you feel about that? How do you stand that indignity to your brother? Do you not feel as if you could put your back against the cross, and put your back against the suffering form of the Lord Jesus Christ, and then take some good sword and with it hew down the desperadoes that assail Him? But you cannot rescue Him; you cannot bring Him from the cross. He is dying and He is dead! And there is something else I will say about it. Shall I tell you the whole truth? I will. You slew Him. I charge the first sin upon myself, then I charge it upon all who hear me to-day. Our sins, our follies, our wickedness put Him to death. Our transgressions were the nails, the thorns, the spikes, the vinegar, the mockery, the darkness. I charge it first upon myself, then I charge it upon you. Fratricide! fratricide! A brother's blow! And we slew Him!

Another remark I want to make in regard to that blood, and that is, it was substitutionary. Our sins cry to heaven for vengance. Some one must die. Who shall it be? "Let it be me," said Jesus. You were drafted for the last war. You provided a substitute. He went out and he was slain at Lookout Mountain or at Gettysburg. He died for you. You have a large debt to pay and you cannot meet the obligation. A friend of great wealth comes in and pays that debt. He is your substitute. Now you see what I mean when I say that Christ's blood was substitute. He fought our battle, He died our death, He paid our debt, He suffered our agonies. The blood of Paul, which soaked the dust of the guillotine, the blood of Hugh McKail, that simmered in the fire, the blood of the high-souled martyrs that reddened the mouths of the lions in the Colosseum, are worth just as much to you as the blood of Christ, unless you realize it was expiatory, substitutionary for you, and in that respect differing from all other blood. Well, if all this be true, then come and get our sins pardoned. I do not invite you to a private confessional. I do not invite you to whisper your offence in my ear, for I am like yourself. I need the same pardon and the pulpit is on a level with the pew, and if the grace that saves you is requisite in any case, it is requisite in my case. So I do not want your confessional. I do not want you to tell the story of the offence of your life to me. Just where you are seated, or where you are standing, take the blood cleansing, take the blood pardoning. First of all, that old sin. You say, "What do you mean by that?" I mean that sin five or ten or twenty years old. You know what I mean. That sin which has accumulated, because sin is like a debt, it is added unto by the interest, and then it is ten times what it once was, that old sin unless it has been pardoned, because of all the opportunities you have had of having it pardoned ever since. Now that old sin, how are you going to get rid of it? Does that sin present its dun at the doorway of your soul? Does it say, "Pay me what thou owest?" Does it propose to sell out? Does it propose to bring you into incarceration? How are you going to get rid of that old sin? Bring all your bonds and mortgages and certificates of stock and all your government securities. Bring them all and let me count them. Not enough. Bring all the clever things you ever did, bring all the clever things you ever said. Let me count them. Not enough. Bring all you have. But you say, "I have brought it, I can't pay this debt, I can't meet this obligation." Then you must die? No, the blood, the substitutionary blood, the brother's blood, the royal blood, can wash it all away. I know that circumstances sometimes aggravates one's transgressions. If a child unwittingly does wrong you easily forgive him, but we have done wrong and we know we were doing wrong. Every time a man sins conscience rings the funeral bell. We may pretend not to hear it, we may put our fingers in our ears and try to go away from that sound, but having transgressed, although we may have our fingers in our ears, we will hear the word coming, "The wages of sin is death. The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The way of the transgressor is hard." When you or I do wrong, when we have said that which we ought not to have said, when we have done that which we ought not to have done, we knew it. Now here is a man who twenty years ago knelt at a Methodist altar and gave his heart to God, or in some Presbyterian Church professed faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. He went on seemingly in the right way for some time. He then went back to the world. He is a back-slider. Is he happy? There is no nest of scorpions outside of hell so dreadful as the nest of scorpions in the backslider's heart. Oh, where is that broken down family altar you once built? Where is that closet of private prayer you once had? Common sense tells us if a man comes so near Christ that he feels the throb of His love and then goes back to sin again, he must have a bitter cup to drink, and the thunders that drive him away will roll and roll with the accumulated wrath of God omnipotent. And yet, my text swings a circle of pardon all around the sins of that backslider. Fires may not be able to burn them out, hoofs may not be able to stamp them out, hammers may not be able to pound them out; but here is blood that can wash them out. So I can come to the man in this house who is the worst man here, I can come to the man in this house who declares he is the worst man on earth, and I can preach the Gospel with just as much confidence to him as to this man who has all his life preserved his integrity. Oh, the broadness of this Gospel that says, "Whosoever, whosoever!" However far you have wandered away from God you can come back, though you have gone through all the sins of the catalogue. "Whosoever, whosoever will, let him come." "Oh," says some man in the house, "all that is very true for immoral people, but I have been a moral man all my life, and I don't need the gracious pardon." Have your thoughts always been right? Would you like to have the thoughts of the last fifteen years written out and presented before the eye of the world? No. And if you would not want the thoughts of the last fifteen years all written out before the eye of the world, certainly you could not stand the Divine scrutiny. Now, there is my right hand, and there is my left hand. You see the one just as plainly as the other. Well, now, the sin of the heart and the sin of the life are as plain before God, the one as the other, and a thought to Him is just as plain as an action. Ah! you need the pardon of the Gospel. You say you have never committed that, and would not have done as this man did, and would not, as this man, have gone astray in this direction, and as that man in another direction. Why, my brother, whether you know it or not you have gone astray in many directions. You say you have never committed murder. How do you know? Have you ever hated anybody? Yes. Then you are a murderer. The Bible says so. Christ says so. "He that hateth his brother is a murderer." So, my brother, you are not so pure as you thought you were if you say you have no sin to be forgiven. You say you have never committed theft. I do not suppose you have ever wronged your fellow-men, but you have taken an hour of a day from God and devoted it to wrong purposes? If you have, you have been guilty of robbing God. It is a mean thing to steal from God. The Bible cries out, will a man rob God? Yes, you have robbed Him. Now, let us come to confessional, and let us acknowledge that we need the mercy and the pardon of God. We all need it; there is not an exception. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. There is none that doeth good, no not one." Just let me blow the trumpet of resurrection, and let the sins of the best man in this house, all the sins of his past life, come up. I blow the trumpet of resurrection in the life of the very best man in this house, and all the sins of his life come up. Let the larger sin of the hundred be captain of the company, and let the greater sin of the thousand be colonel of the regiment, and let the mightiest sin of his life command the forces, vast as those of Xerxes, vaster, vaster. All the sins of that man's life coming down upon him. One man against a million transgressions, what chance has he? Where in the round of God's mercy is there any help for us? Rise, you scar, and whelm the host. Strike, you lightning, and consume the foe. The wave rolls back from the beach and says, "No help in me." The lightning sheathes itself in the midnight scabbard of the black cloud and says, "No help in me." Yonder I see the rider on the white horse. Make way for the courier. He swings his sword. It is the captain of salvation coming to our rescue. Fall back my sins. Fall back, my sorrows. All transgressions of my heart and life are utterly scattered, and I cry, "Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" Oh, what a Christ He is! Do you wonder that men and women have died for Him? Do you wonder that Margaret, the Scotch girl, would not give up her Lord when fastened down to the beach of the sea, and the persecutors thought as the waves rolled on she would give up her Christ? But, fastened down to the beach when the tide was out, she continued in prayer until the tide came up, came to the ankles, came to the girdle, came to the shoulder, came to the lip, and with her last utterance she said: "My Lord, my God, He has been so good to me, I cannot surrender Him now, though the waves may go over me—my Lord, my Christ, my pardon, my peace," and the waves rolled over her. Do you wonder that men and women and children have died for such a Lord as this? Oh, do you not want His consolation as well as pardon? How many of you have had misfortunes and trials and you want this Christ. Oh, when those unto whos bosom we have breathed our sorrows are snatched away, Christ's heart still beats, and when all other lights go out we see coming out from behind the cloud something that we cannot at first tell what it is, but it gets brighter and brighter, and we find it is the star, the star of hope, the star of consolation, the star of Jesus. Oh, there are different kinds of hands. There is the hand of care that opens hard on you, and there is the hand of bereavement that snatched your loved ones away from you, and there is the hand of temptation that strikes you back into darkness; but there is a hand so different from all these, and it is so kind, and it is so gentle. It is the hand that wipeth away all tears from all eyes—it is the hand of Jesus. Do you not want Him? Would you not like to have that pardon to-day which I offer indiscriminately to all in this house? Would you not like to have His comfort? As at the sea beach we join hands and go down and bathe, and let the waters roll over us, and we feel great exhilaration, I wish we could by scores and hundreds and thousands to-day just join hands and wade down in the great Atlantic of God's forgiveness—not standing on the margin paddling the ripples with our feet, but wading clear down in the sea and letting the crimson billows roll over us. Oh, you must have this Christ. If you reject Him, all these gaping wounds will plead against you, and they will haunt you through eternity with the thought of what you might have been. Oh, take your feet out of your Brother's blood. Do not go down condemned for fratricide and regicide and suicide. Do not do it: Better for thee that Calvary had never borne its burden, and better for thee that those living lips had never uttered an invitation, if rejected all you go down into dissolution and darkness, your hands and feet bedabbled with the blood of the Son of God. Oh, dying but immortal man. Oh, judgment bound hearers, repent, believe and live. How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation? Oh, there will be a password at the gate of heaven. I see a great multitude coming up, and they say, "Make way, open the gate, let us in; we were honored on earth, and we had a great position in the world and we want a great position in heaven." But the gatekeeper says, "I never knew you." Here come another throng. They say, "We did a great many magnanimous things, we endowed colleges, we established schools, and we were celebrated for our philanthropies. Open the gate now. Let us come in and get our reward." A voice from within says, "I never knew you." But here come up a great throng, thousands and tens of thousands, and they knock at the gate. They say, "We were wanderers from God and we deserved to die, but we have heard the voice of Jesus." "Aye!" says the gatekeeper, "that is the password—Jesus, Jesus, Jesus! Lift up your heads, ye everlasting gates and let them come in."

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "29 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 20, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

MONDAY, MARCH 16th.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Mowat, the full amount of sessional indemnity was ordered to be paid to the widow of the late Mr. McCraney, and the bills for the incorporation of Stratford as a city, and to amend the Act respecting Ontario Agricultural College, were read a third time.

Mr. Ross (Huron) moved the second reading of the Bill amending the Act for the protection of sheep. The Bill provides for the apportionment of damages among owners of dogs killing sheep according to evidence.

After recess the House went into Committee again upon the Bill to consolidate and amend the Public Schools Act. A sharp passage at arms occurred between Mr. Fraser and Mr. Meredith upon the objection raised by the latter that a qualification of a candidate for school trustee should require that he either be a native born or naturalized subject of Her Majesty.

Mr. Fraser doubted whether any good object would be served by the amendment. There were many citizens of foreign birth and citizenship who would make excellent school trustees and devoted a large amount of attention to such matters.

Mr. Mowat called attention to the fact that the present system had worked successfully for 40 years. Mr. Ross announced that in view of the arguments brought against the superannuation fund clause, the Government had decided to maintain the old rate of subscription, $4 per annum. In future, however, no new name will be added to the list, but in the case of any person who has contributed, they may withdraw half their contributions immediately if they choose, or at any time they choose to retire. Those who retire from the profession altogether will retain their former privileges. An amendment to reduce the fees paid by non resident pupils to 25 cents was voted down, Mr. Ross showing that the proposed fee of 50 cents was still below the average cost per pupil per annum.

The Bill relating to the bribery money in the Speaker's hands was referred back to Committee for verbal amendments.

The House then went into Committee on the High School Act. Mr. Meredith moved in amendment to clause 13 that no Order-in-Council, passed under the Act, will in future become operative unless and until ratified by the Legislative Assembly. Lost.

Mr. Meredith raised objection to the clause which gives to the Separate School Board the power to appoint one of their supporters as a representative on the High School Board. Mr. Ross supported the clause, which carried.

The remaining clauses carried and the Committee rose, and the House adjourned at 11:30.

TUESDAY, MARCH 17th.

In the Legislature to-day, after routine, the Public Fisheries Bill was referred back to Committee of the Whole for verbal amendment, and Mr. O'Connor's Act to amend the Mutual Insurance Companies Act passed a third reading as amended in Committee.

Mr. Ross (Huron) moved the House into Committee to consider certain proposed resolutions: 1. That it is expedient to provide that for the debts owing to this Province by municipalities in respect of debentures heretofore delivered by such municipalities to the Treasurer of this Province on account of the municipal loan fund, including interest at the rate of 5 per cent., to be computed from the dates of the several defaults in payment, according to the tenor of the said debentures.

Mr. Hardy moved the second reading of the Redistribution Bill, and stated that it had been determined to give an additional member to Muskoka and Parry Sound.

Mr. Meredith then went into figures endeavoring to show that the Bill was more inquitous than the celebrated Gerrymander Bill of the Dominion Parliament passed in 1882. He announced that he would divide the House on the second reading.

Mr. Balfour, in a speech of nearly an hour in length, made an efficient reply.

Mr. Widdifield showed that the present Bill was a most equitable measure, and that it was received by the country generally in excellent spirit.

He was followed by Mr. Gibson (Hamilton), who expressed himself dissatisfied with the provisions of the Bill, inasmuch as nothing was said about giving Hamilton another member, and he could not agree with the Government that rural populations should be better represented than the urban. At a future stage of the proceedings, he would move that Hamilton should be given an additional member.

The second reading was carried by a majority of 11.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18th.

After routine business to-day, Hon. C. F. Fraser rose to move the adoption of the resolutions of which notice was given some days ago, regarding the erection of new Legislative and Departmental Buildings. He explained the previous steps taken in the matter of new buildings, and referred to the vote of the House, declaring the necessity for the erection of these buildings. The essence of the Government proposition was that the House should sanction the expenditure of $750,000 instead of $500,000 formerly voted for the purpose. The expenditure of $750,000 could be met in this way. The property at present occupied could be disposed of at the least at $300,000. The property in connection with the Legislative Buildings, situated near the Asylum, is valued at $150,000; thus $450,000 could be raised without a single effort. The balance, $300,000, could be taken out of the funds owed by the Dominion Government, which sum would be at the disposal of the Province before long. Hon. Mr. Morris was glad to support the Government in this matter. Mr. Meredith could not go so far, and considered an expenditure of $25,000, in the shape of an iron proof addition to the present buildings, for use of the Crown Lands Department should be sufficient. He also opposed the location of the buildings in the Queen's Park, but that part of the Upper Canada College Buildings could be utilized, the usefulness of that institution being gone. Hon. T. B. Pardee strongly supported the proposition. He pointed out the importance of affording adequate protection for the records of the Province, especially of the Crown Lands Department, and the absurdity of the proposal to erect a new building on the present site to bring the meanness and shabbiness of the present structure into still bolder relief. Mr. Wood, North Hastings, emphatically approved of the erection of new buildings. Mr. Clarke pointed out that the Council of Toronto had almost unanimously endorsed the selection of the Park site, and claimed that the view of the Council was largely the view of the city. Mr. Waters supported the proposition, and took occasion to compliment Mr. Fraser warmly on his able and economical management of the Public Works Department.

The vote resulted in the adoption of the resolution of the Commissioner of Public Works by a vote of 50 to 26.

A Bill giving effect to the resolution was then read the first and second time.

After recess some discussion took place in reference to the proposed local railway at Niagara Falls. The Bill was read a second time on a division.

Mr. Baxter's Bill respecting the study of anatomy was referred to a special committee.

Mr. Wood, in the second reading of his Bill concerning Sabbath observance, supported it with a strong speech denouncing the running of trains and street cars, amusements of any kind, steamboat excursions, etc., on Sunday.

The Bill was read a second time on a division.

Mr. Ferris' Bill relating to the cost of election trials was read a second time.

THURSDAY, MARCH 19th.

Mr. Mowat's Bill to simplify the transfers of real estate was read a second time to-day after a full exposition from the mover and some remarks from the mover and some remarks from others of a deprecatory kind, about centralizing registration. The Bill provides for registering not only fee simple and mortgages, but long leases, and provides a guarantee fund to recoup parties who may suffer from mistakes or frauds on the part of the registrars. Mr. Mowat said a great deal of property in Toronto and York, to which the measure is for the present confined, would be at once brought under it, one gentleman having informed him that he would register to the extent of $200,000. Mr. Meredith advocated the abolition of the law of dower and giving the wife a larger interest in the estate of her intestate husband, but the Attorney-General would not assent to so great a change at present.

A Bill amending the Public Health Act, giving larger powers to the Provincial Board of Health to deal with epidemics, was read a second time, though not without protests against apparent encroachments on the functions of municipal councils.

The greater part of the evening was spent in Committee on the Redistribution Bill, which was reported with slight amendments. The discussion on the various changes proposed was long and desultory, but rather good humored on the whole. The extension of the franchise makes it very uncertain which party will benefit most by the two measures.

FRIDAY, MARCH 20th.

The reports of committees upon the Anatomy, the Joint Stock Companies and the Election Trials Bills were presented to the House this afternoon.

Mr. Mowat introduced a Bill to promote the detection of crime; also a Bill to respecting municipalities in Muskoka, Parry Sound and Thunder Bay, which were read a first time.

The House went into Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill to amend the Division Courts Act as amended in Committee. The Bill, as originally introduced, was amended by providing for payment of a share of rent of the court, building, etc., by the outlying municipalities attached to the district. Mr. French moved that a clause be added giving to the Division Courts jurisdiction in suits where both parties have made an agreement in writing that such should be tried by Division Court. The amendment was lost, as was also one by Mr. Ferris to strike out the clause providing for the payment of solicitor's costs in defended cases. The Bill was reported to the House as amended.

The Redistribution Bill was passed through Committee, a clause being added to enable the new member to be elected for Muskoka to take his seat at the next session. The remaining clauses of the Bill do not come into force until the expiration of this Parliament.

After recess the following Bills were passed through Committe, with minor amendments: Respecting the city of London and the town of London East; to confirm the incorporation of the Bishop of the diocese of Algoma: to simplify titles and to facilitate the transfer of land.

An extensive stock of English, Irish, Scotch and Canadian Tweeds to select from at Turnbull's, and a First-class Cutter ready to execute all orders promptly.

Vital Questions!!!!

Ask the most eminent physicians

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly

"Some form of Hops!!!!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu!!!"

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

"Mandrake! or Dandelion!!!!"

Hence when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable,

And compounded in Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed, which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail women, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients

"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years, and given up by physicians, of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs, called consumption, have been cured.

Women gone nearly crazy!!!!!

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness, and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula.

DIDN'T DO HIM JUSTICE.

A citizen was taken to his home by three friends whose combined efforts succeeded in placing him against the wall just inside the front door. There they left him.

Presently his wife looked down from the head of the stairs and said:

"Oh, you are home, are you? Been drinking, of course. I wonder you don't stay out all night drinking."

"M' dear," he replied, "y' don' do me justis. Some (hic) men s hay out a nigh' (hic) drink'n', but I know when I've had 'nough.

A Wonderful Discovery.

Consumptives and all, who suffer from any affection of the Throat and Lungs, can find a certain cure in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Thousands of permanent cures verify the truth of this statement. No medicine can show such a record of wonderful cures. Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now gratefully proclaim they owe their lives to this New Discovery. It will cost you nothing to give it a trial. Free Trial Bottles at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store. Large size $1.00.

THE FATAL FIRE DAMP.

Two hundred and seventeen miners were imprisoned by an explosion of fire damp in a colliery at Campharsen, near Saarbruck, Germany, Thursday morning. At a late hour but 30 had been rescued. It is feared the most of the others were suffocated.

The latest reports state that 98 bodies have been recovered. There are still 102 men and boys unaccounted for. It is almost certain that all who are now in the mine are dead.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Taylor & McDonald's.

A RUSSIAN SCARE.

The British Columbians are alarmed lest the complications between Great Britain and Russia should result in war. The Victoria Colonist asks: "Is it not a fact that the Russians have a fleet at Vladivostock, which in 25 days after the declaration of war might be firing shot and shell into the midst of this ambitious young city?" Our contemporary demands that a strong fleet shall be concentrated at Victoria for the defence of the waterways of the Province.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

In and Around Our Legislative Halls.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

MONDAY, MARCH 16th.

Nova Scotia is on hand with a demand for "better terms."

In answer to Hon. Mr. Blake, Sir John stated that Manitoba desired Imperial legislation to confirm the Boundary award. Also in answer to Mr. Blake, Sir John said that no offer had been made by the Government to send Canadian troops to the Soudan in aid of England. In the face of this, Sir John's jingo utterances in England, to the effect that Canada was ready with 40,000 troops, may be set down as bibulistic buncombe.

A debate arose on a motion of Mr. Cook for a copy of the memorial presented to the Government by the County Council of Simcoe, praying for a refund of bonuses granted by the different municipalities of that county to railways that have been declared by Parliament to be works for the general advantage of Canada. This brought up the whole question, which of late has occupied so much attention throughout Ontario, the Conservative members from the Province feeling bound to try to defend themselves for refusing to aid the movement, and the Government for refusing to grant the refunds requested.

There was a lively discussion on the subject, and the Government supporters in Ontario turned traitor to the just demands of the Province, and at length Hon. Mr. Pope, acting Minister of Railways, settled the question by curtly stating that it was impossible to give any aid as asked. Thus Ontario, through the treachery of her representatives, will have to lie under the injustice of having granted millions to aid local railways, only to have them gobbled up by the Dominion Government.

TUESDAY, MARCH 17th.

When the orders of the day were called, Mr. Shakespeare complained that British Columbia had been slighted by the Government in neglecting to obtain statistics from that Province respecting its manufacturing industries. Sir Leonard Tilley said he was desirous of obtaining the Factory Commissioners' report by the 1st of January, and time could not be given to send to British Columbia to ascertain its position. Mr. Blake said it was probable the Government was so much engrossed with considering the importations of Chinese that manufacturing was overlooked.

Mr. Burns resumed the Budget debate, and made an effort to meet the arguments and facts presented by Mr. King respecting the injury caused by the National Policy in New Brunswick.

Mr. Casey followed Mr. Burns, and exposed the many fallacies the latter had advanced. He had never heard it contended before in the House this session that farm produce had been increased in price by the National Policy. The facts were so patent that this was not the case that it was a surprise to hear it now advanced. He showed by a comparison of prices of cereals in Canada and the United States that the contention was absurd. He read from Sir John's speech at the Amphitheatre in Toronto, that the promise had been held out that the farmer, laborer and mechanic would be better off, and he asked why the promises made had not been fulfilled. He referred to the fact that the Government, in their anxiety to assist the manufacturer, were now, by legislation being discussed, injuring the farmer. Woolen rags were being added to the list in order to aid in the manufacture of shoddy cloth, which would take the place of a better article, and prevent the sale of the farmers' wool. Yet the Government professed to be desirous to aid the farmer while now actively engaged in destroying his wool market. A number of other phases of the question of protection were discussed.

In honor of St. Patrick's natal day there was no evening session of the House.

The Senate does not appear to realize that it exists in the nineteenth century, or that it is amenable in any sense to public opinion. With a stupidity born of antiquarian intellects, and a desire to punish those who have lately let in some light upon their actions, the press were to-day thrust out of their accustomed places in the Senate Chamber by the Sergeant-at-Arms, acting under instructions of Speaker Miller. It was believed by the press gallery that the Sergeant had blundered when he wrote on Saturday last saying that hereafter the press representatives would be excluded. To test the question several of them went as usual into the place occupied by them, but were immediately ordered to leave, and were escorted out by the Sergeant.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18th.

In the Commons to-day Mr. Mulock's Bill to amend the Acts respecting controverted elections, Mr. Bourbeau's Bill to give priests and ministers as well as doctors the power to issue liquor certificates under the Scott Act, and Sir H. Langevin's Bill respecting works on navigable waters constructed under the authority of Provincial Acts, were read the first time. A question was answered respecting Canadian exports, showing that the decrease was over half a million.

Mr. Allen's Bill to extend the jurisdiction of the Maritime Court of Ontario, and Mr. Cameron's to enable persons charged with misdemeanours to testify, were read the third time.

Mr. Wilson's motion for papers respecting the recoupment of the Ontario Government and the Ontario constituencies for the money spent in assisting local railways since declared Dominion works was passed. Mr. Curran's Insolvent Bill, Mr. Charlton's Bill to make seduction a criminal offence, and Mr. Orton's Farmers' Banking Bill were read the second time.

Mr. McCarthy's Bill to take from the Minister of Agricultural the final power to decide in patent cases, aroused a long and lively debate. Finally Mr. McCarthy withdrew the Bill on the understanding that the Government should introduce a Bill empowering the Minister to take evidences in these cases on oath.

THURSDAY, MARCH 19th.

Sir John Macdonald rallied sufficient courage to-day to introduce the Electoral Franchise Bill. It is the same bill promised seven years in succession, and now introduced for the third time. Heretofore it has not got beyond the first stage, where it has been allowed to lie dormant on the order paper, owing to remonstrances made against it by the Premier's own friends from several Provinces. In introducing the bill to-day, no explanation was offered by Sir John regarding any of its provisions. Mr Blake pointed out the ill policy of introducing, without a word of explanation so important a measure on the seventh week of the session.

Sir Leonard Tilley introduced a bill to amend the acts relating to the constitution of the Treasury Board. He said it was proposed to increase the number of members of the Board to six, in order to give the several Provinces representatives on it, and to make the Secretary of State a member of the Board.

Mr. Blake criticised the purpose to add to the members on the Board, and said that generally such boards were used as screens, and the bigger the board the greater the screen.

The Budget debate was resumed by Mr. Casey. After discussing the failure of the duties on wheat and flour to accomplish their purpose, he took up the Factory Commissioners' report, and exposed its unreliability by instancing gross errors or falsifications regarding the industries of the city of St. Thomas. He read from the Conservative organ of that town an editorial appeal for a policy which, instead of bringing immigrants here at great expense, would distribute the thousands of unemployed of the cities who could not exist on the fitful work obtained in the factories, and place them upon farms in the Northwest.

FRIDAY, MARCH 20th.

Mr. Blake again to-day, as a question of privilege, inquired why it was that the writ for Levis had not been issued. That of Northumberland was immediately dispatched on the receipt of the Speaker's warrant, but, although the vacancies were created simultaneously, the Levis writ was being held back until the constituency could be manipulated to enable a Government supporter to be returned. Mr. Blake demanded that the Government should do its duty and issue the writ for Levis without delay.

The debate on the Budget was resumed by Mr. Jackson, who was followed by Mr. Vail and others. Mr. Cockburn moved the adjournment of the debate, and thus held the floor. The Government supporters are determined (no doubt under government inspiration) to prolong the debate to make an excuse for not bringing down government measures, which are in a very backward condition.

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 26, 1885.

Corruption in Canada.

The Ottawa Free Press speaks out plainly in reference to the existing political corruption in Canada, and circumstances forbid us saying that the language used is much too strong: "Since the days Walpole, no parliament has ever met on British soil so notoriously corrupt as the parliament now meeting in Ottawa. Since the days of Walpole no administration has been in power so undeniably corrupt as the present Macdonald government. It is the boast of Sir John Macdonald's friends that he personally never profits by the wholesale jobbery and bribery practiced by his administration; but it is a boast which, if it were not true, would only add one individual to the sum of Tory iniquity. What profits it to the people of Canada if Sir John remains virtuous himself but allows a profligate distribution of the public revenues and domains, to take place among his supporters! Canada is to-day governed by organized corruption and systematic spoliation. The public lands and vast possessions of timber limits are being squandered recklessly among not merely the supporters of the government outside Parliament; but among those inside. Indeed, members whose loud mouthed professions of independence are constantly heard, emboldened by the general struggle for spoils they see going on around them, actually assail and rebuke the administration because they cannot obtain the precise "limits" they covet. The circumstances that the Government supporters no longer supplicate these grants, but demand them, may be accepted as an index of the prevalence of the vice. How much longer will it be before a purer administration honors Canada in the eyes of the world, and before the taxes are so imposed as to press proportionately heavier upon the rich than the poor man?"

The Senate Sensation.

That moribund aggregation of political refugees, the Dominion Senate, consisting principally of laid-by-the-heels politicians of the Tory stripe have been distinguishing themselves, and furnishing further evidence of their obstructive uselessness, and furnishing one more excuse for their payment off and discharge. They are fossiline remains of another age. Not content with being an expensive wart on the body politic, they must needs, in their fatuous senility, endeavour to bring back literally the days of the Star Chamber. They now decree that the reporters of the press be excluded from their deliberations. On Tuesday the Sergeant-at-Arms ordered the reporters out of the Senate chamber, by direction of the Speaker. Only the Globe and Mail were to be allowed to be represented, and on conditions that none but a toady Tory organ like the Mail would submit to. What right have the Senators to keep their deliberations a secret or to have them presented in the distorted and garbled form in which the organ of the dominant party therein would present them? For a long time the people have been making puzzled inquiry as to the use and necessity of such an institution. The use is apparent enough. The senators are placed in the senate—the great majority of them—by Sir John to register the legislation he may see fit to enact. They are useful to balk and bar beneficial legislation which Sir John may find it impolitic to defeat in the responsible chamber. Who can point to a useful act ever done by the present senate? Instances of what they didn't do are abundant enough. They didn't protect the people from the monstrous blunder implied in sanctioning the Pacific Railway contract. When Sir John's Usurpation License Act was presented for ratification, it was rushed through the senate without even the formality of reading. And the men who thus play fast and loose with the public purse and the public interests, compose the political cemetery that presumes to say that their deliberations shall not be reported for the public journals. The Montreal Gazette asserts that this action is calculated to bring the Senate into ridicule. That would be supererogatory; these venerable gentlemen have for years brought themselves into ridicule. It would be a laughing matter were it not in their power and will as a Tory registration machine, to do so much harm—if the body was not so expensive a one. But it is difficult for the country to laugh at the Senate's folly and Senate frivolty, and at the same time pay some $150,000 a year for the merriment. Their last action will make more slender than even the hold which they have on existence. They have made a grave mistake, and they will wake from their doting dreams to find that they are existing in the nineteenth century, when the people will neither permit Star Chamber methods, nor the body that attempts to put them into practice. The Senate is as much out of date and behind the age as a Peterborough farmer, who would revert to the use of a wooden plough to sow his grain or a sickle to reap it.

Mr. Meredith's Support.

The following, from the London Advertiser shows how illy qualified in the matter of ability, not to speak of policy, is the the opposition led by Mr. Meredith, to become successors to Hon. Mr. Mowat and his cabnet, when the long postponed day of his going may come:

"A good deal has been written about the weakness of Mr. Meredith's support in the House, but it is doubtful if any person who has not attended a session of the Legislature can have any accurate idea of how utterly weak in point of legislative ability the Tory Opposition in the Assembly really is. Mr. Meredith and Mr. Wood, of North Hastings, are men of respectable ability, but it stops there. Mr. Merrick has not fulfilled the promise of his youth. He has degenerated into a faultfinder of very small proportions. Mr. Creighton is a pleasant person out of politics, but he is hopelessly incapable of discussing public questions on a level with the members of the Government, or, for that matter, with many private members on the Government side of the House. Mr. Carnegie, from whom so much was expected, has developed into a distinguished failure. He has become a kind of abbreviated Burr-Plumb, simply tolerated by his own side of the House, and openly pitied by the Liberal members. He is not at all the same man he was at the opening of the session. He has found men opposed to him capable of promptly detecting and exposing his financial fallacies and reckless misstatements, and as his faculty for wild assertion was his chief claim to distinction, deprived of this prerogative, he is indeed a harmless and useless man. Mr. Clarke, of Toronto, is a parlor politician, and is chiefly remarkable for his faculty for obtruding old jokes upon the House. As to Mr. Ermatinger's usefulness as a legislator, anyone desiring information on the point will have to ask Mr. Ermatinger nobody else is competent to give an opinion. Mr. Morris tired himself out years ago, and now seems to be engaged in trying to tire other people out. These are the chief Opposition talkers, and presumably their best men. There is not a good finance committee for a city corporation in the whole collection, and until the material comprising the opposition is vastly improved, it is hopeless to expect that the people of Ontario will consent to place their affairs in charge of a government formed out of its members."

Gentlemanly Journalism.

Our down-street contemporary, though it is of the organs of the "party of gentlemen," has a glib facility of forgetting what should be expected of it, or, in fact, of any respectable journal in its treatment of public men. Its language in speaking of political opponents is invariably coarse and abusive, but occasionally it sets itself the congenial task of exceeding itself in this respect. In an article, under the title of "Voting Down the Judges," the Review strikes out with vicious animus, using, with the freedom which long custom enables it to employ, such expressions as "personal corruption," "deliberate falsehood," and so forth. In alluding to Dr. Dowling's case, it is asserted that he committed "perjury to hide his guilt." Now, this is strong language and such as no respectable newspaper would use on its own responsibility—unsupported by the decision to that effect by some judicial tribunal. It is no wonder that Dr. Dowling resented such a calumnious charge. It is no wonder that his Celtic blood was so stirred up that, in the heat of passion, he felt impelled to inflict personal chastisement on the member for West Peterborough, one of the responsible managers of the Review. Had it not been for the interference of Dr. Dowling's friends, who restrained him till the heat of his passion was over, Mr. Carnegie would have discovered, at the expense of the integrity of his personal beauty, that it is not safe to vilify and abuse a man, whether through the columns of a journal controlled by him or on the stump. He has had experience that the latter source of abuse and slander is not a safe one, and but for better counsels prevailing he would have learned last week that attempting to fix a charge of perjury on a fellow member cannot be done with impunity. One would think that the Review would begin to see that the abusive and scurrilous tone current in its columns is disgusting even its own political readers, who do not care to have their children's manners and morals corrupted by reading even in the editorial columns of a party paper, language that every gentlemanly instinct would suggest the suppression of. But it seems there is a certain amount of bile to be worked off into abuse and a certain amount of mud to be flung, and until the accumulated supply of our contemporary's substitute for argument is worked off, there can be no hope of reformation.

Ontario Forest Preservation.

The Mowat Government has invariably shown itself alive to the public interests and especially those of the farming community. In no way, perhaps, is this interest seen to better advantage than in the movement tending to the preservation of the forests of Ontario. The fact that the importance of the subject is not fully appreciated does not lessen in any way that importance, which affects every class of the community. The Government has been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. R. W. Phipps as Conservator of the Forests of Ontario. Entering con amore and with his wonted energy into the task, Mr. Phipps has invested his reports on the subject with a literary culture and interest that make pleasant reading on a topic that would otherwise be merely dry and statistical. This year's report deals principally with forest preservation in Ontario, and former arguments are presented in a stronger light to show the vast importance of checking the rapidly progressing deforesting of the Province. The work has now gone so far that the climate, rainfall and fertility of the soil have been decidedly affected. One need not be very old to be able to recollect that, within his memory the climatic changes have been great. The winters are becoming yearly more severe in their character. The summers are dryer and hotter—in fact the diminution in the amount of rainfall and the protracted periods of drouth add an anxious element of uncertainty to farming operations, that did not enter into farming calculations a few years ago. Many can remember when certain streams, now mere spring rivulets, once gave power almost the year round to drive large mills and factories. The forest has been removed and the moisture which its depths retained, to be gradually given out, flow rushes away at once in freshets, carrying with it, in its rapid course, much of the soluble fertility of the soil; or rapid evaporation answers the same end. The belts of forest that used to protect the wheat crops are now gone, and fierce winds sweep over wheat fields, exposing the plant to drying winds and the up-heaving effects of alternate frost and thaw. These are among the results that follow the destruction of our forest and as the work goes on the effects, of course, become greater. It is known that treeless countries are, as a rule barren and unfruitful; and where this condition has been attempted to be remedied by planting to forest, the success has been great. There are few, however, that will deny that the rapid destruction of our forests is a great evil; but the difficulty is to work the people up to a practical realization of the fact and to secure the general co-operation in forest preservation and reproduction. Without this, general good cannot be accomplished. If every land owner in Ontario had Mr. Phipps' last report and would read it intelligently, there is no computing the good that would follow. At present we can do no more than allude in general terms to the subject. It is, however, of such great importance that we shall take occasion to again delight ourselves with a closer allusion to the last Forestry Report. In the meantime we would advise all who can do so to procure a copy of the "Forestry Report of 1884," compiled at the instance of the Government of Ontario, and read it carefully. The author will cheerfully forward copies, free of cost, to addresses that may be furnished him. Address: Mr. R. W. Phipps, 233 Richmond street, Toronto.

New Parliament Buildings.

On Wednesday the House went into committee on a resolution for the erection of new parliamentary buildings, carrying by a vote of 50 to 26, a motion providing $750,000 for that purpose. Mr. Mowat has done wisely in devoting this much of the surplus for this proper and necessary purpose. It would be dangerous to keep the money on hand indefinitely. In the ordinary, or extraordinary, by present appearances, course of events the Conservatives may sooner or later succeed to power, when no doubt the money, if still on hand, would be squandered even as they have wasted the patrimony of the Dominion. Once in good, substantial buildings, the country has that amount at least safely out of their clutches. Mr. Meredith, of course, is anti-provincial or nothing, and for the sake of making party capital opposes the erection of New Parliamentary Buildings in Toronto. He advocates repairing the present brick barns to make them do. Either he is intensely economic, (and that is not a Tory characteristic) or he wants the buildings to hang over, so that their construction can furnish "jobs" in the remote event of his gaining power. But as a matter of economy, repairing the present structures, or, rather, ruins, is inadvisable. Yearly repairs are required to an amount that would in great part pay the interest on the cost of new buildings, which will be a credit to instead of a disgrace to the most progressive and important colony of the British Empire.

A Decided Difference.

There is a marked difference between the legislative methods of the Ontario Legislature, under Reform control, and of the Dominion Parliament, under Tory guidance. The Local Legislature is pretty well through with its work. The Government measures have been brought down promptly, well matured and ready for the full discussion they received. A large number of private bills has also been disposed of. The legislature has its work well in hand, and the public interests have been throughout sharply looked after. On the other hand, the situation at Ottawa is decidedly the reverse. The House is still engaged with the Budget Debate, and the Tory members are unnecessarily spinning it out to cover the neglect of the Government in bringing down its measures. The Dominion Government will delay these measures as long as possible to make the lateness of the session an excuse for stifling discussion. There is hanging in the back ground somewhere a government measure for the relief of the Pacific Railway, and that will be postponed till the last moment, then sprung on the house, discussion, choked off, rushed through the house and sanctioned by the obsequious Senate without even reading the preamble. Judged by the past all this is more than possible, it is altogether probable.

Like Several of the Others.

Senator Alexander was cruelly sarcastic in the Senate the other day when saying:—

"With regard to the remarks which fell from the Minister of the Interior I scarcely took the trouble to listen to them, because I know of my own knowledge, and the House knows, that he was a pronounced advanced free-trader all his life until he entered the Government of this country. It is possible we may have on some future occasion a two hours sermon on the subject of loyalty from the hon. gentleman, whose name was removed from the militia list in the year 1849 by Lord Elgin, because of his annexation proclivities."

"We believe," says the Ottawa Free Press, "the Minister of the Interior is Sir David Macpherson. Surely a member of a protectionist Government cannot have been a free-trader, or a gallant knight who vaunts his title, ever an annexationist rebel? What unpleasant memories Senator Alexander has the knack of reviving."

Tuesday's Globe had this interesting reminiscence: This is an eventful day in the history of the Legislature. A year ago this morning there was jubilation in the Tory camp, there was joy in the office of Mr. Meek, and satisfaction and hope of future reward deep down in the heart of Mr. Wilkinson; but alas when the evening came all was changed. Mr. Mowat related a tale in the House that ruthlessly crushed all these glowing hopes, and threw the Opposition into consternation, and Mr. Wilkinson and Mr. Kirkland into prision. To-day therefore, must be a day of mourning in the Opposition ranks at Toronto, and in Ministerial circles at Ottawa there will not be less gloom.

Editorial Notes.

It is expected that the Ontario Legislature will adjourn next Friday.

The writ has been issued for a new election in West Northumberland, to fill the vacancy caused by the unseating of Mr. Guillett by Roddy Pringle. Mr. Guillett has again been selected by the Tories, and Mr. W. Kerr, Q. C., is the Reform Candidate.

Hon. Senator Simpson died at the Russel House, Ottawa, on Saturday morning, at the age of 71 years. He was a Liberal in politics, and one of the leading Reformers of the Province. He was made a senator in May, 1867. His death causes a vacancy in the senatorial representation of this district.

The old ladies of the Senate at Ottawa seem inclined to have a monopoly of gossip, by resolving to conduct their maunderings with closed doors. If they would put up the shutters finally and forever they would not be missed except as to the item of their cost in the Public Accounts.

The Mail and other Tory organs are considerably excited over the alleged severity of Central Prison discipline. Is it possible that there is any connection between this anxiety and the fact that the Bribery Conspirators are to be tried at the Toronto assizes in a few days?

Canada for the Canadians is a fine motto. The Tory Government at Ottawa have imported another Englishman who has been give a desk in the Privy Council officewithout examination. The Civil Service at Ottawa has become a refuge for young Englishmen who have not brains enough to earn their living at home, and who are sent to Ottawa to prey on the public chest and keep Canadians out of office.

The Ottawa way. Although, according to the report of the Minister of Agriculture, there was a falling off last year of 20,200 in the number of immigrants, still there is an increase of several thousand dollars in the expenditure on this service. This does not, of course, cover the expenses of our high-priced high commissioner, Sir Charles Tupper, in England, in connection with immigration.

Sir John's efforts in the direction of legislative union are beginning to bear fruit. One of his supporters, Mr. McCallum, of Monk, has publicly declared his conversion. He has declared himself in favour of a legislative union and the abolition of the Provincial Legislatures. The Conservative members are becoming candid. Possibly they will throw off the mask altogether before next election, and appeal to the country as Legislative Unionists.

The Election Law vigorously administered is a two-edged sword—it cuts both ways. Recently in the county of Lennox, noted for its systematic bribery, several parties without political distinction, have been fined $200 and costs each, for bribing the electors. Justice like this will put down the practice; but, till the receiver of bribes is punished equally with the giver, the justice is one-sided. The briber could not commit the crime without the bribed being a party to it.

The poor man and his family who feel the burdensome oppression of the coal and bread tax, can appreciate Sir Leonard Tilley's consideration for them, when he puts precious stones, such as diamonds, rubies, etc., on the free list, and proposes to increase the tax on flour. It will be a great boon to the poor man's wife, who struggles to get enough to pay taxes to a beneficent government, and to feed and warm her family, to be able to buy her diamonds free of duty.

O Tilley, that diamonds should be so cheap.
And bread and coal so dear!

The presentment of the Grand Jury at the Perth Assizes points out that over one-half of the prisoners now in jail at Stratford are "vagrants whose only crime was poverty." There appears to be a good deal of "crime" of this description in the country just now. At Yorkville police station, Toronto, there were forty-six vagrants in confinement a night or two since, not one of whom had enough money in his possession to pay for a bed or a meal. High and mighty Sir Leonard Tilley, says the Hamilton Times, would have had a different report to make in regard to the condition of the country's workers, if he had cared to inquire.

The Toronto World says:—"The Minister of Education had no easy task on hand in the defence of his school reader contract, but he handled his difficult case with great care and dexterity. Many of those who differed from him on the question of policy, were quite frank in admitting that his speech was an exceedingly effective one. It was the first opportunity he has had, since entering the Ontario Assembly, of making an ambitious Parliamentary effort, and he showed to the satisfaction alike of friends and opponents that he is possessed of debating powers of no mean order. The Ministry may fairly be congratulated on the support he brings to their ranks, the House on the addition he makes to its debating capacity, and the Opposition on having one more foeman worthy of their steel."

Mr. Meredith and his following in the Local Legislature did not think much of the men of 1837, who struggled for and won for Canada Responsible Government, and overthrew a nest of self-seeking political serpents, the Family Compact. All the Tories, however, don't think so slightingly of the political liberties we enjoy, and of their authors. A rigid Tory newspaper, the Irish Canadian, says:—"The gallant few who sowed the seeds of Responsible Government—must ever be revered for a lofty patriotism that would ennoble any age or country. By their heroic sacrifices they laid the foundations upon which our liberties have been erected: among their legacies was the dead body of Family Compactism, reserved for another generation to cover up and put out of sight for ever."

Respecting the Globe, the Monetary Times says:—"The annual report of the Toronto Globe Printing Company presented at the recent meeting, shows a healthy condition of affairs. Within two years the present management has cleared off the company's floating indebtedness, which amounted to nearly $60,000. The year's receipts from advertising total up close upon $150,000, while the circulation, we are told, shows a considerable increase." The Globe's success is a matter for congratulation. The causes of it are not far to seek. It represents the popular ideal of a newspaper. Its news is prompt, full, reliable and comprehensive. Its frequent special articles on subjects of living interest and reminiscence, anticipate the wants of the public scarcely defined, before filled. It is ever arrayed on the side of morality and the right. Actively loyal to the best interests of Canada, it is essentially the people's champion. Its course wins public confidence, which in turn begets patronage, and the secret of its financial success is out. In stemming the tide of selfish political evil, that threatens the land, there is no more potent force in Canada than the Globe.

PLASTER CAYUGA WHITE, in bags, one hundred and fifty lbs. in each. Buy the best Plaster. The following speaks for itself:—

Ontario School of Chemistry, Toronto, March 16th, 1881.

W. H. MERRIT, Esq.

My Dear Sir, In accordance to your request, I have obtained Average Mercantile Samples of Land Plaster from dealers in Toronto, and beg to report as follows:

	Cayuga White.	Owego Grey. (Pt. Hope.)	Paris Grey.
Calcium Sulphate (Fertilizer)	77.18	52.00	54.00
Carb. Lime and Magnesia (Useless)	trace	15.27	15.01
Iron and Alumina "	trace	1.50	1.60
Insoluble Matter "	1.27	8.75	15.60
Water and Organic Matter "	21.55	22.48	13.80
	100.00	100.00	100.00

The insoluble matter consists of clay and sand, being the residue left after boiling with hydrochloric acid. Yours obediently, THOMAS HEYS, Analytical Chemist.

The above analysis adds theoretical proof to the practically known fact that Cayuga White is 25 per cent purer than any other Land Plaster on our market.

OILCAKE This popular Feed I offer at a LOW Price. Special figures given to purchasers wanting quantities. Will be glad to quote prices to Secretaries of the different Grange Societies. FLAX SEED and FLAX SEED MEAL.

THE NORTHWEST TROUBLE.

Sir John's Pet Rebel Stirring Up the Half-Breeds to Revolt.

Louis Riel is, again fomenting serious trouble, and, in the words of a sensible contemporary, "as things now are the North-West only needs a leader to revolt." Riel has been busy for some time, and his work must be telling when the people in the affected parts are calling for arms and protection. Sir John should look after his old friend, but it is to be hoped that he will not "wish to God he could catch" the disturber and at the same time send him, as on a former remarkable occasion, the wherewithal to safely take and keep him out of harm's way. The erstwhile "red-handed murderer" may be but repeating his old tricks in the hope that they may in all cases and in every respect have the same results.

TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

The latest particulars from Winnipeg state that the Ninetieth Battalion was suddenly ordered, on Tuesday night, to be ready to start for the scene of the rebellion next day. One hundred men leave early in the morning, and the remainder in the afternoon. The Field Battery, consisting of 40 men with two guns, will also start in the afternoon. The total forces will number about 350 men. General Middleton is expected to arrive here on Thursday and overtake the expedition on the road. The exact cause for the sudden ordering out of the men is not known, the authorities being very reticent. It is rumoured here that a collision between the rebels and Mounted Police has occurred, and some of the latter shot, but this is not confirmed.

MORE ALARMING NEWS.

A Battleford despatch late at night says a detachment of police under Major Crozier and Col Irvine were expected hourly from the junction at the South Saskatchewan. This would mean that Fort Carleton had been abandoned to the rebels. The insurgents are stated to have about forty white men imprisoned in a church building at Duck Lake, and five assistants, the telegraph operator, two merchants named Waters and Mitchell, and another. The report says the rebels are being joined by several bands of Indians. It is reported that the Dominion Government has appointed a commission to confer with the malcontents, but this action is seemingly too late to avert trouble.

INDIANS FLOCKING TO RIEL'S STANDARD.

OTTAWA, March 24. The latest news from Prince Albert is mostly alarming. It is said that the Indians are flocking to Riel's standard from all quarters. The Government agents and missionaries stationed at Calgary and Battleford have been ordered to go among the Crees and Blackfeet Indians and endeavor to prevent these tribes from joining in the revolt. Major-General Middleton left for Winnipeg to-day to take command of the expedition that will leave there for Prince Albert at once.

The reports from Winnipeg of the notorious Riel's second rebellion have created great excitement at Montreal. Sir John Macdonald and his followers are roundly blamed for the whole trouble, and it is publicly stated that Riel is only doing this on the suggestion of parties down there to blakm ail the Government out of a few thousand dollars. Hundreds of volunteers here are eager to go to Manitoba, but Riel and his gang, they intend, if they catch them, not to give them as Sir John did in 1870, funds to fly the country.

The outbreak is, pure and simple, the result of the neglect of the Government to consider the grievances of the Half-Breeds. Not only is Dominion Government apathy, indolence and mis-government retarding the settlement of and injuring the interests of the country, but is actually driving the people into rebellion.

THE AFGAN AFFAIR.

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS.

A despatch from Allahabad, India, states that Earl Dufferin met Gen. Sir Donald Stewart, commander-in-chief of the forces, on Tuesday. Lord Dufferin sanctioned the mobilization of two army corps of twenty-five thousand men each, which are to be sent to Pishin with a reserve of 10,000 men. Gen. Stewart will have supreme command. Gen. Roberts and Gen. Hardinge will each command an army corps. The Duke of Connaught will be given one of the divisional commands. Supplies for six months are being sent to Pishin. Gen. Stewart has started for Rawul-Pindi to mature his plans. Lord Dufferin will start for Rawal-Pindi Wednesday. It is expected the whole force will advance at the conclusion of the meeting between Lord Dufferin and the Ameer of Afghanistan. The greatest rivalry prevails among the regiments for active service. The monitors in Bombay harbor are being equipped on a war footing.

WHICH WILL DECLARE WAR FIRST?

Although the London Standard of Wednesday morning says for a positive fact that no alarming despatch has been received from St. Petersburg, it is known that not only is such the case but that it is simply a question which will make the declaration of war first. Both England and Russia are trying by every subterfuge to outstrip the other in the preparations. Instructions have been sent to Plymouth and every other military port to have all men-of-war ready at once, and Lord Dufferin is preparing for the concentration of all immediately available troops with a view of at once throwing them into Afghanistan, and of making a display before the Ameer.

If it Were Possible to get the testimony of the multitude who have used The Shaker Blood Syrup for spring debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that The Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value than any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried in and know whereof they speak. In presenting The Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so often humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by those unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of The Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

Mrs. A. Nelson, Brantford, writes: "I was a sufferer from Chronic Dyspepsia for eleven years. Always after eating, an intense burning sensation in the stomach, at times very distressing, caused a drooping and languid feeling, which would last for several hours after eating. I was recommended by Mr. Popplewell, Chemist, of our city, to try Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspetic Cure, and I am thankful to say that I have not been better for years; that burning sensation and languid feeling has all gone, and food does not lie heavy on my stomach. Others of my family have used it with best results."

FAR-FAMED HERAT.

Traditions From the Creation of the World.

The Fortress a Modern Wonder.

It may not be uninteresting to take a glance at famous Herat, which has once again loomed up before the sight of the world across the bone over which the Lion and the Bear are growling. Herri, as it was anciently called from its contiguity to the Herri Rood River, has a history beyond the pen of accurate history, and, according to Afghan traditions, it had an existence close to the time when the world was miraculously evolved from chaos. In the Zoroastrian annals of the "Vendidad Sade," it appears as "Hariwa" or the country of the Aryans, and as the founder of the Gebir or Fireworshipper faith is supposed to have lived contemporaneously with Moses, it follows that its ancient inhabitants may have been contemporaneous with the patriarch Abraham when he was grazing his flocks among the deserts of Mesopotamia. There seems to be no reason to doubt that Alexander the Great encamped in Herat in the famous campaign which Xenophon describes in his Anabasis, and that it occupied a certain Oriental magnificence contemporaneous with that period of Grecian romance when the names of Bacchus, Semiramis, and Hercules became so fulgent as to shine down through the centuries to the present day. In the East there exists a tradition that the Afghans are really of Israel—a tradition to which colour is lent by the remarkably strong Jewish type of feature that characterizes the Afghan race—and that it was that Israelitish tribe which gave outward splendour to Herri as a city. Whatever truth there may be in all this, it is certain that Herat raised its battlements in the mists of antiquity, and that where the trading provindah now leads his camels through its tortuous, narrow streets to-day Aryans lived and died who have since given their cognomen to a conspicuous division of the human race.

While Herat possesses immense interest historically, it occupies a geographical importance of such a nature as has for many centuries made it the central point for furious fighting among tribesmen and nations. Again and again it has been made the focus for Persian fury and ambition, and it is only by continual hard fighting that it now remains in the hands of the Ameer of Afghanistan. When England obtained, by hard fighting, the dominant control of Hindostan, she fully recognized Herat as one of the points d'appui from which an enemy might threaten that dominance, and hence it became the fashion to name the city

"THE GATE OF INDIA."

Situated picturesquely upon a spur of the Hindoo Koosh range, and surrounded by a bewildering network of deeply irrigated rice fields—so bewildering that cavalry operations are made impossible with any freedom of action—Herat is at the same time powerfully fortified artificially. Recent Russian travellers have averred that nowhere in the East is the art of canalization carried out so thoroughly or on so vast a scale as it has been in the Valley of Herat, where the waters of the Herri Road are utilized to the utmost extent. This state of circumstances naturally makes Herat a valuable basis of supplies for any army that may be fortunate enough to obtain possession of it. It is, therefore, no wonder that Herat has become a singularly important point of Central Asian commerce, roads forking from it into Persia, to Kaboul, to Kandahar, to Beloochistan, and northwards through the Merv oasis and Turkestan, more especially that part of Turkestan which is known as Bokhara. The city is nearly quadrangular, with faces about a mile long, and the high inner wall of defence is pierced by four gates pointing towards the different great cities with which it has communication. Thus, for instance, the great gates in the celebrated walls of Delhi were known as the Lahoree Gate, the Cashmere gate, and so on. The stupendous earthwork upon which Herat is built has been being, according to Sir Henry Rawlinson, the great English authority on Eastern matters, 250 feet in width at the base, 50 feet high, crowned by a wall 25 feet high, and 14 feet wide at the base, and supported by no fewer than 150 circular towers, which again are protected by a ditch 45 feet wide and 15 in depth. There have been disputes about the true strength of the fortress. In 1846 General Ferrier, of the British army, gave it as his opinion that the place was only an immense redoubt which a European army could reduce in twenty days, but it is significant that in 1837, with the assistance of two English engineer lieutenants, the Heratees successfully held at bay for ten months a Persian army of 35,000 men supported by 50 pieces of artillery, which were in many cases directed by expert Russian officers.

THE WONDER OF MODERN TIMES,

Herat is 370 miles from Kandahar, 550 from Kaboul, 215 from the sacred city of Meshed in Persia, 400 miles from Kerman, and 600 miles from Ispahan, while from the borders of India it is not more than 500 miles.

The City of Mexico is said to be gradually sinking into Lake Texcoco. Measurements made by Humboldt about the beginning of this century gave the lake a depth of 16 feet 10 inches, while now it is not more than 6 feet 8 inches. It is also established that the bottom of the lake has risen uniformly one and one-half inches a year during the last twenty years, and it is now only nine feet below the level of the principal streets of the city. One result has been the impediment of the drainage, and a consequent large increase in the death rate. In 1789 a drain 12 miles long, 100 to 130 feet deep, and 200 to 300 feet wide, which occupied 100 years in construction, was completed, but its usefulness has now been seriously impaired, and it is proposed to spend large sums of money in draining the lake dry in order to save the city from destruction.

IMMIGRANT SLEEPING CARS.

THE GRAND TRUNK BUILDS A NEW AND A HANDSOME ONE.

One of the Grand Trunk's new "immigrant colonization cars" is at present at the depot, and attracts considerable attention. It was built at the Great Western Grand Trunk workshops, Hamilton, and is throughout, a very handsome structure. It is intended exclusively for immigration traffic, and to those who intend to make fresh homes for themselves in the far West, the comforts it affords during a long journey of say, two thousand miles, will prove a welcome change from the upright seats of the old cars upon which passengers were compelled to stiffly sit both day and night. The woodwork is ash, beautifully stained and embellished, and the appointments, as far as regards light, heat and the supply of water, are all that could be desired. The seats become at night by unrolling, convenient sleeping quarters, while there are also sleeping berths overhead on the Pullman car principle. Of course they are bare, the immigrants providing the necessary clothing. No extra charge is made for the use of these cars, of which it is intended to build several more, to be ready for the opening of the immigration season. This particular car proceeds to the West on the 18th inst.—Montreal Daily Witness, March 14th.

The news from the colliery districts of Yorkshire, England, is very gloomy. A special despatch says the masters are cutting down wages in all directions, and strikes will be of no avail to the workmen, as the masters are overstocked and a stoppage of work will be at present beneficial to them. Great distress prevails among the colliers and their families.

HALF BREEDS IN ARMS.

Louis Riel's Agitation Assumes Serious Proportions—He Defies the Authorities.

A St. Paul, Minn., despatch says:—It has been learned that the state of affairs at Prince Albert is much more serious than reported. It is stated in private advices from Winnipeg that the telegraph wires have been cut at Prince Albert, and the operators are imprisoned by Riel.

The militia in Winnipeg have received orders to hold themselves in readiness for transportation to the scene of trouble, and North-west Police are already moving inward from all quarters. There is said to have been fighting at Carlton, a few miles west of Prince Albert, and that the force of North-west Police there has been shut up in the barracks and is now besieged.

Further despatches from Winnipeg say that advices from Prince Albert and Carlton show that the rising of the Saskatchewan half-breeds is a most serious affair. They have been joined by large numbers of Indians. The combined insurgents have taken possession of all the Government stores at Carlton, and have made prisoners of officials, and even threaten the fort there. Over one hundred mounted police have gone from Swift Current to the seat of the trouble. More will start out from points west. The Government telegraph has been cut west of Humboldt, and the despatches have to be brought to that point by messenger.

Louis Riel, according to another authority, has thrown off the mask, and now openly defies the Queen's authority. He says he has the half-breeds and Indians entirely under his control. He says the North-west police force is a mere nothing, and that their authority shall not be respected.

Some one recently wrote to Kossuth asking him to help him obtain payment for a large sum to which the Hungarian revolutionists became indebted to him in 1848. Kossuth has answered him in a letter full of a certain, frank, pathetic dignity. The ex-Dictator who once boasted that he had held the fortunes of the house of Hapsburg in the hollow of his hand, tells his correspondent that he is absolutely unable, not from lack of will, but from lack of means, "to render help to you or any man in distress." Kossuth expresses his regret that the nation which had taken on itself so many obligations to which it was not bound should have neglected to pay its lawful debts; but he declares that he himself is absolutely poor. T. W. Webb writes to Notes and Queries: The little church of Craswall, in Herefordshire, close to the site of a Cistercian abbey of that name, and lying under the great wall of the Hatrel or Black Mountains, which form the Western frontier of Wales, has recently been restored by the incumbent, Rev. C. L. Eagles, to whom I am indebted for the following illustration of the ancient state of ecclesiastical affairs in that very remote neighborhood: "On the north side of the church is an old cock-pit; an old man who died in 1869, aged 96, told me he had been at many a cock-fight there. 'People did come from all parts, and after service did fight the cocks. Ah! People did come to church in them days.' There were stands of gingerbread at the time of fighting, and people came from Clifford, Dorstone, the Hay, and even Talgarth—a little town nine miles or more distant. The pit remains as a memento of the past."

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied you CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

THE RED FLAG.

BY

M. E. BRADDON.

Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc. etc. etc.

"Bless you! May God bless and reward you for your devotion!" cried Kathleen.

"Bah! There is no question of blessing or reward. I have been a wicked woman. I kept him like a bird in a cage, and I let you think him dead, and I told him you had perished on the last day of the barricades, and I let him mourn for you. He was helpless, in my power, and I lied to him and cheated him. But I snatched him from the jaws of death; the surgeon who has attended him will tell you that. I dragged him into this empty house, dragged him away just as the last batch of Serizier's bloodhounds were turning the corner of the street, whooping for more blood; and I kept him here, closely guarded, hidden from all the world, except the surgeon, who believed that he was my brother. He could tell no tales, poor fellow, for it is only within the last three weeks that he has been in his right wits."

Gaston's head was leaning forward against Kathleen's, the husband's haggard brow against the wife's wasted cheek. Both faces were the image of death, and yet radiant with a new-born life—the sublime light of happy love.

"She told me you were dead, Kathleen,' he murmured.

"Forgive her, dear. She saved you, and I have avenged you. O my love! my love! God is good. He has given you back to me, out of the grave."

"How did you manage to occupy this house, and to keep your existence here a secret?" asked Durand.

"There was no difficulty. I was not without means. I went to the landlord, and offered him half the rent of the house for the use of two or three rooms at the back. The house had been unlet a year and a half—the street is a failure—so he was glad to accept my offer, and the board was left up over the door to avert suspicion. The people who saw me go in and out took me for a caretaker; nobody asked any questions. I had a van-load of furniture brought here after dark from my rooms at the cremerie, and I made things as comfortable as I could for my patient. If he had any knowledge of those dark days he would know that I nursed him faithfully. For six weeks I scarcely knew what it was to sleep for an hour at a stretch. I had a mattress at the foot of his bed, and I lay down now and then like a dog, and slept a dog's sleep, with my ear on the alert for the first groan of pain."

"God bless you!" cried Kathleen, taking her hand and kissing it.

"You are a strange woman," said Durand; "but let no one say that you are wholly bad."

"I was a devil in those days of the barricades. I was mad like the rest of them, maddened with the thought of all the wrongs that we canaille have suffered from the beginning of the world. Yes, from the days when Herod put John the Baptist in prison, and cut off his head, to keep faith with a princess who danced. I was drunk with blood, like the rest of them. But in six weeks of watchfulness and watching one has time to think; and, in the silence of the night, sometimes, I used to wonder whether it was good for a woman to be an esprit fort, whether it was not better to be cheated, even, and to believe in some one up yonder, who can set the riddle of this world right when He chooses—some hand turning the great wheel of destiny yonder behind the clouds. No, Monsieur Durand, I am not all evil."

It was not till the end of the year that Gaston was well enough to be removed to the Rue Gît le Cœur, and, in the mean time, he and his wife occupied the rooms in the empty house near the Place d'Italie, with that good-natured busybody, Madame Schubert—generally known as c't bonne Schubert—to take of care of them. Suzon Michel went straight from the house where those two whom she had held apart were lost in the bliss of an unhoped-for union, and gave herself up to the police. The account against her name was heavy, and payment in full was exacted. She was despatched with a gang of Communards on board a rotten old ship bound for Cayenne, and in the unutterable miseries of that dreadful voyage she was like an angel of mercy to her fellow-sinners. And at the convict settlement the petroleuse, the amazon, became the nurse and ministering angel of the fever stricken wretches in the prison hospital, a source of comfort and of hope to many a dying captive, till the deadly climate did its work, and the pestilence struck her down as it had stricken others—a woman young in years, but old in strange and sad experience; a sinner, but not without hope of pardon.

The dark days of November and December were blissful days for Kathleen. Health and strength returned to her as if by magic; and in a week after her restoration to happiness she was able to help in waiting upon her husband. Another week and she would hardly allow Madame Schubert to do anything for him. In the third week she was walking to and from the printing office of Gaston's old journal, which had been resuscitated under a new name, as The Friend of Freedom, and the proprietor of which was enraptured to receive "copy" from the brilliant pen of his old contributor, given up as lost to literature for ever.

Yes, those were happy days. That poor shattered leg of Gaston's had shrunk and shortened, and he would go limping along the road of life to the end of his days; but his mind was clear and vigorous as ever, and his heart was content. During the enforced quiet of those December days he made a vigorous beginning upon that scheme of a novel which he had mentioned to Kathleen on their wedding-day. But he did not keep his work secret from his wife, as he had threatened. He garnered up no surprises, being in too much need of her sympathy to sustain his belief in himself.

He read the day's portion aloud to Kathleen at night, the last thing, when that good old Schubert, who insisted upon coming every day with her market-basket, smelling of les Halles Centrales, to cook and attend upon them—when Maman Schubert had taken her modest little nip of eau de vie, put her arm through the handle of her empty basket, and wished them good-night for the sixth or seventh time. Then Kathleen perched herself upon the arm of her husband's chair and nestled her head upon his shoulder while he read his manuscript. It was a love-story, full of passion and fire, and Kathleen felt that it must make a mad, a furious success. Nor was she far out in her reckoning, when a man, whose pen has grown bold and brilliant in the work of a literary journeyman, whose memory has garnered the experience of a youth and manhood spent in the very whirlpool of metropolitan life, and who has read and dreamed and thought superabundantly in his leisure hours and his wanderings to and fro—when such a man girds up his loins and says, 'Enough of the hard facts of life now I will give myself full play in the garden of fancy," the chances are that he will write a grand novel.

Serizier was condemned to death on the 17th of February 1872, by the sixth council of war. He appealed against this sentence, setting forth the service which he had done to General Chanzy, on the 19th of March '71, in defending him against the revolutionary mob. It was rumored in the neighborhood of the Place d'Italie that Serizier would not be executed; whereupon an unprecedented agitation arose among the people. The inhabitants of the neighborhood, remembering the agony of terror under which they had lived on account of this man, signed a petition demanding that no commutation of the extreme sentence should be accorded to the late chief of the 13th Legion, and entreating that, as an example and a just expiation, he should be executed in front of the prison over which he had ruled, and on the very spot where he had presided over the massacre of the Dominicans.

This strange request could not be granted; but Serizier's crimes were of too black a dye to admit of mercy. He and his lieutenant Bobeche were shot on the plain of Satory.

Gaston Mortemar's novel was published in the following autumn, and obtained a more brilliant success than any book that had appeared since Madame Bovary. There was a fire and a freshness in the style which made the appearance of the story a sensation, an event; and Gaston saw himself released for ever from the tread-mill routine of a third-rate newspaper, a man with place and name in the ranks of literature, free to write what he liked, and secure of publisher and public. And as the years wore on—years of peace and prosperity—those two households of the Durands and the Mortemars were undarkened by so much as a passing cloud. Industry, honor, and domestic love ruled in each menage, and there was no break in the union between the sisters; albeit, Durand and Rose remained constant to their town quarters in the Rue Gît le Cœur, while Gaston and his wife transferred their household goods to a dainty little villa at Passy, where the husband could write in his garden among the birds and flowers, while his young wife guided the footsteps of her yearling baby up and down the little grassplot.

The carved-oak sideboard was bought by Sir Richard Wallace, and Durand's fame as a craftsman and artist was safely established from that hour; and so, where there had been cloud there was sunshine, where there had been storm there was perfect and holy calm.

Among the most profitable industries along the Hudson river is that of honey making. One expert beekeeper has 1,200 hives, gives employment to eight men and send every year about $30,000 worth of honey to New York.

Little Billy Simpton is aged about ten. Not long since the Simpton family was increased by still another little boy, and a friend of the family meeting Billy, said to him: "So you have got another-buby at your house. He is a right smart little fellow, ain't he?" "Humph!" sneered Billy, turning up his nose; "how many smart boys do you expect us to have in our family?" —Texas Siftings.

The Kimball House in Atlanta will cost $750,000. A striking feature will be its roof. This roof is inclosed on all sides with a parapet wall set back from the edges. It will be handsomely tiled. Part of the roof will be covered with a beautiful garden, and the whole flooded with electric light. A platform will be erected at one end and open-air concerts given nightly. Three immense passenger elevators will carry the people to the roof. A first-class cafe will be established there.

The papers credit to the present Marquis of Queensbury the rules of the prize ring which bear his name. The author of those rules has been dead many years. The present Marquis who made a fool of himself recently in an English theater, is a man under forty years of age, a brother of Lady Florence Dixie, the well-known English traveler. Like his grandfather, he is regarded as "a hard character," though his father, coming between the two, was a man of exemplary life.

"Miss Smith has quite a number of followers, Jones." "Yes; she has plenty of beaux. She's handsome, rich, witty and amiable; quite a prize, I should say." "Why don't you make an effort in that direction? You used to be quite a favorite with her." "Hush; it's all right. I expect to cut them all out in time, but I'm laying low, as it were. I want to be considered the dark horse in the race. See?"

"No," said Fogg meditatively, "I don't fear what may come to me in another world; it is the act of dying that fills me with a sort of nameless dread. I don't like the idea of crossing the dark river; I always was afraid of water you know." "You shouldn't let that worry you," replied Mrs. F.; "you'll have a splendid chance to dry your clothes when you reach the other side."—Boston Transcript.

A tree in Milford, Mass., to which George Washington tied his horse in about 1760, was recently cut down and will be converted into momentoes. Although not a very large tree, it is estimated it will produce about 750,000 canes, several hundred armchairs, about the same numer of lounges, four score of bedsteads, and 1,000 pianostools. The rest will be converted into toothpicks and umbrella-handles.

There is no use denying that the Georgia "electric girl" possesses phenomenal strength, and certain persons only make themselves ridiculous when they pronounce her a fraud. She has 'raised' a $3,000 mortgage on her father's farm; and, when it is remembered that it takes a whole church congregation several years to 'lift' an $800 mortgage on their house of worship, her feat strikes us as being superhuman.—Norristown Herald.

As a gentleman passed through the hotel corridor the other day, he heard a lady scream "shut the door quick, there's somebody coming." She had put on her bathing suit for a trial trip in her mother's room, and was horrified that a man should see her in that fix. An hour later she and her friend were lying on the beach, the waves washing over them at every throb of the sea, and she was writing her name in the sand with her toes, while her merry laugh sounded above the roar of the sea.—Seaside Letter.

City boarder—The breakfast was not what I expected. I don't like coffee without cream or milk, and you had neither butter nor eggs on the table. Honest farmer—Well, yaas, that was a kind of miscalculation, you see. Sometimes we happen to run short of butter and eggs and milk at night, and then can't have any for breakfast; but we allers has plenty for dinner. City boarder—I don't see how that can be. Honest farmer—Well, you see the train from the city don't get here till after 10 o'clock.—Philadelphia Call.

Those who remember the wooden cogs and screws of the cider mill of the olden time would open their eyes at the process of cider-making in New England now. By means of a grinder, as many bushels can be grated in a minute as there are horse-powers used in operating the machinery. An elevator carries the apples to the hopper as fast as they can be used up. The pomace falls directly upon a platform, and when the cheese is complete the platform revolves like a railroad turntable. The cider is strained through racks and cloths. Tanks in the basement are provided for catching the juice, and by means of a pump it is brought into its various receptacles.

CHAPTER I.

ETHEL'S SECRET.

The sun poured down in a glorious flood of light and warmth, as a young girl swung indolently in a hammock slung between two trees, so thickly foliaged that the sun only fell through them in quivering patches.

The girl's head was supported on one arm, her fair, lovely, innocent face was turned upward, her large violet eyes fixed dreamily on the green canopy above her.

On a seat near was her attendant, a bright-eyed well-looking, dark-haired Frenchwoman, who, reading a French romance, covertly smuggled in, more than once put her hand over her mouth to hide a yawn as she glanced at the occupier of the hammock.

A faint sigh from the latter gave her courage to speak, and she said:

"Ah, mademoiselle, you find it dull, and no wonder. This comes of having a young stepmother."

The girl started back into consciousness, for an instant she hardly caught the meaning of the words uttered.

When she did, she answered, smiling:

"I can't say, Pauline, that Grey Towers is very amusing. I wish papa had let me remain in Paris."

"What, mademoiselle, at the pension! Well, certainly it was more lively than here; still, it had its drawbacks.

"But you—you, mademoiselle, ought to be in London, enjoying all the parties, fetes, balls, and theatres. You're nearly nineteen, mademoiselle, and ought to have been out and presented last season, only her ladyship didn't want a young stepdaughter to eclipse her."

"Hush, Pauline! you must not talk like that."

"But it's true, mademoiselle. My lord marries again a young wife, so you are kept at a French school, and then at Grey Towers with the baby heir, when you ought to be seeing and being seen.

"Tiens mademoiselle! if you had been presented last season, you would have been engaged—perhaps married by this."

"Nonsense, Pauline!" said the girl with a laugh, though a pink flush suffused her cheek, which she raised her arm to conceal. "I'm in no haste to see London. I'd rather have gone to Madame Valemy's again in Paris."

Pauline said nothing, but expressively shrugged her shoulders.

"Did you say, mademoiselle, you wanted that lace put on your mauve silk to-day?" she asked.

"Yes."

"If, mademoiselle, you do not then need me, I will go now and do it."

"Certainly, Pauline. You need not stay."

The lady's-maid walked away, over the grass through the trees.

As Pauline entered Grey Towers, she was met in the hall by an elderly stately lady, the guardian of the young heir, an infant, and the chaperon of Ethel Breamore, the daughter of Lord Breamore, of Grey Towers.

"Where is Miss Ethel?" asked the stately old lady.

"In the hammock, madame, near the copse."

"Ah, she finds it cool, no doubt;" and the lady passed on to the drawing-room.

Meanwhile Ethel had dropped back into her reverie, but had hardly done so when she was again aroused, this time by a slight rustle in the neighboring bushes.

Half languidly, half curiously, she altered her position to see the cause; then with a slight cry she sat up, perceiving a gentleman emerge into the little shady grassy glade.

He was a foreigner—an Italian—slenderly made, carrying himself with an easy grace; his features were handsome, delicately cut, his hair dark, as was the moustache shading the round sensitive chin; his eyes were dark, lustrous, and earnest.

"Paolo!" ejaculated the girl.

"Ethel, my queen!"

He approached doubtfully, but Ethel Breamore, with a radiant joy animating her fair face, lightly sprang from the hammock to the ground, and made a step towards him.

In a second the Italian was by her, clasping her to his breast, to which she nestled, earth, in her eyes, converted suddenly into Paradise.

"You do not drive me from you, then, my queen?" he whispered. "You have not forgotten?"

"Forgotten!" and she raised her eyes, smiling, to his handsome face. "Is it possible, Paolo, I could ever forget you? You have always been in my thoughts since we parted. My happiest moments have been my dreams, for then we have been together."

The Italian's dark brilliant eyes grew yet more lustrous with passionate love as he gazed down upon her.

"And you—you—Lord Breamore's daughter—can feel thus for one in my position!" he murmured; "a poor teacher of his own tongue!"

"It is the man I love, Paolo, not the position," she murmured. "If my rank is to separate us, then do I despise it. Hush!"

She rose erect, listening.

"It is no one," she added with relief. "But you must not remain here, Paolo; you may be discovered, and at present"—her cheek colored—"not even Pauline knows my secret."

"What," he remarked regretfully, "is our interview to be so short, and I have so much to say? It may be so long before we meet again."

"No, no," she answered, "you must not go, but we may not remain here. Come—help me!"

Turning, she entered a small path leading through the shrubbery.

The Italian followed, and in a few minutes they reached a picturesque boat-house on the bank of a stream shaded by willows and other trees, that extended their leafy branches so far that they made a sylvan arch over the water.

Ethel, directing her companion, unmoored the little fairy skiff, entered it, and by one or two sweeps of the oars sent it under the willows on the opposite bank.

Here they landed, the leafy bushes hiding them from any chance observer in the Grey Towers grounds.

Ethel had not spoken during the transit across, but now, looking at her companion, she said:

"Paolo, what do you mean? Why is it to be long before we meet again?"

"Has it not been long since we have met?"

"Yes, but you are here."

"For a brief space only," he rejoined, a sadness in his tones. "I could not go, Ethel, my queen, without seeing you to say fare well."

"Farewell! Paolo, where are you going?"

"To Italy, Ethel mia. I am needed there."

"By whom?—your family?"

"No," and he drew himself erect; "my country."

A pallor spread over Ethel's face.

She remembered the rumors which had even reached her at Grey Towers.

Clasping her companion's arm, she exclaimed:

"Oh, Paolo, surely—surely not to fight!"

"No less, cara mia. My country needs my arm. Ethel, I could not refuse it. Already I ought to have been far on my way to join Garibaldi, but I could not until I had seen you once."

"Paolo, Paolo," she gasped, "you must not go; you must not leave me! If they were to kill you! Think—think of me! No, no, you will remain!

And she threw herself on his breast.

"Ethel, he rejoined gently, "you are too noble, too brave, when you reflect, to turn me from my duty. I have friends; they wait for me. What will they say if I do not come?"

"Go, Paolo—go!" she broke in passionately; "but take me with you! I am wretched—I am miserable. I have borne it, knowing we should meet. How can I bear it now?"

"You miserable, dearest?"

"Very. The pension, even before I knew you, was happiness to my present existence, where I dwell alone, unloved."

"Unloved? Oh, cara mia, you have a father!"

"But hardly a father's love. He was indifferent to me from my birth because I was not a boy—an heir. When my mother died, I vardly believe he was glad, for speedily he wedded again a young handsome woman, to whom, since she has borne him a son, he is devoted. Her will is law, and it is her will that I should remain in solitude at Grey Towers, she not finding it agreeable to chaperon a daughter not eight years her junior."

"My poor, poor love!"

Looking into the girl's face he read there all its sweetness, innocence, weakness. He saw more than she—her cold unloved home, and beyond it—worse, for he knew the world.

The stepmother would one day be forced to show society her lovely stepdaughter, but she would speedily rid herself of the encumbrance, of which she probably might be jealous, by arranging a "suitable and early" marriage.

Other thoughts passed through his mind besides these, and suddenly taking her hands, and bending over her he said in his soft Tuscan tones:

"Dearest, there is one way by which death can alone separate us."

"Ah," she shuddered, "death!"

"That comes to all, cara mia. Be mine, Ethel, then no man may put us asunder."

"Be yours?" she murmured.

"Be my wife," he whispered, "then whatever comes I can claim you."

"Your wife?" her voice trembled.

"Do you fear, cara mia?"

"Fear? No, no," and she leaned upon his breast. "If—if I am your wife, you will take me from here, Paolo—to the beautiful Italy you have told me about so frequently."

"When the time comes, sweet love, I will claim you before all the world as mine—my own."

At that moment Pauline's voice was heard on the opposite bank.

"Mdlle. Ethel!"

The girl sprang in alarm from her lover's side.

"I must go," she whispered, "I dare not stay."

"When, dearest, may I see you again? I must see you."

"This evening in the shrubbery at ten. No, no, do not come, you will be seen."

"Stay one instant," said the Italian. "Ethel, you will need a confidante."

"There is Pauline. I have no other."

"Does she know anything?"

"Nothing as yet."

"Mademoiselle, Madame Butler has a letter from her ladyship," called Pauline, who had descried the boat.

"Answer, dearest."

"I am coming, Pauline."

"Can you trust this girl, cara mia?"

"Yes; I am fond of her, she loves me."

"Then go. Make an excuse to send her back here, then leave her to me."

"You will see her, Paolo?"

"Yes, love; it will be best. Go."

He held her a second to his heart, released her, and Ethel hurried to the skiff, which she was soon sending to the other side of the small stream.

Hardly had she sprang on the bank than she exclaimed:

"Pauline, I am sorry, but I have left my handkerchief on the grass at the other side. Pray fetch it."

"Yes, mademoiselle."

The lady's-maid, by no means loth, entered the skiff and rowed over. Ethel's heart beat loud enough to be heard as the maid, landing, disappeared among the trees.

She felt she could trust her attendant, yet she trembled as one near a volcano.

Five minutes, which seemed as twenty, elapsed before Pauline reappeared, and entering the boat returned. Ethel nervously drew into the shrubbery, waiting.

In a few seconds the lady's-maid followed, surprise on her dark pretty features.

"Oh, Pauline," gasped Ethel almost pleadingly, "you will not betray me?"

"Ciel, mademoiselle! but never was I so astonished. This was why you wished to return to Paris?"

"Yes, Pauline. You will keep my secret, will you not. You are the only friend I have in the world."

"Tiens, mademoiselle. And Signor Mareschi?"

"He is more than a friend. But you do not answer me. You have my secret, will you betray it?"

"Never, mademoiselle. You honored me by calling me your friend, and I'll be a true one."

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

In spring the want of a restorative to tone up the general health is a common experience, especially among those constitutions impaired by age or disease. Prolonged cold weather, want of out-door life and sunshine, lower the vitality, diminish the red globules of the blood and interrupt the nutrition of the tissues. By promoting digestion and assimilation of food and securing increase of nerve force and muscular energy, the use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA will bring up constitutional vigor to its normal plane. 11-13t

THE BATTLE OF ABRAHAM'S PLAINS.

Wolfe faltered not in purpose,
But steadfastly did view
The rugged steeps before him,
Tho' sentinels he knew
Stood ready with their challenge
His progress to arrest,
While up the winding pathway
Scarce two could climb abreast

No marching orders needed,
Each man his duty knew,
The rocks were steep and rugged,
But Britton's hearts were true.
In silence and in darkness
Eight thousand toiled away,
And gained the Plains of Abram
Before the rising day.

There, waiting for the signal,
Out on the Plains were spread,
Eight thousand British soldiers,
Who were prepared to shed
Their blood for Britain's honor,
To win her sons a land
Whereon the angels' anthem
Might sound from strand to strand.

Calmly they stood and moved but
To fill a comrade's place,
Until between the foemen
Lacked forty yards of space
Then from their fire so deadly
The nearing columns reeled,
And their impetuous charge swept on
Over the bloody field.

They plant the British banner,
The victory is won;
They wave it now in triumph
And shout, "They run! They run!"
But, oh! the cup of gladness
Is mingled with the tear,
For now their fallen leader
They carry to the rear.

His ear grows dull of hearing,
For life is ebbing fast,
But, lo! the dying hero
Has caught the cry, and asks,
"Who runs?" and then the tidings
That cheer his near release
He hears, and whispers faintly,
"Praise God! I die in peace."

No sovereign now can raise him,
And place upon his breast
The star, that brilliant token,
Of service and of rest.
The crown of laurels faileth,
As doth the victor's brow,
His deed of valor liveth,
And claims our tribute now.

A column in Westminster
Among the honored dead,
Now tells to other nations
The homage England paid
To him who won for Britain
This land so fair, so free:
Our beautiful Dominion,
This land of liberty.

Peterborough, Ont. MRS. E. BROWN.

The Condition of the Country.

Montreal Times.

No doubt Sir Leonard Tilly "put his best foot forward" in his Budget speech to show that the country is not in such a bad condition as it might be. It would be satisfactory if even that small assurance could be relied on. But Sir Leonard begs the question. What the people have to consider, is whether Canada is in as good a position financially as she ought to be? Have the promises of the high taxation party been fulfilled? Has commercial depression been averted? Is there employment for everybody at good wages? Is the credit of the country better than it was six years ago? Are the farmers getting good prices for everything they raise? Has our export trade increased? If high taxation was a success, all these questions should be answered in the affirmative, but to be in accordance with fact, every one of them must be met with a direct negative.

In no single instance has taxation produced any beneficial results. All the Government's pet industries are crippled. The sugar refiners are carrying on business at a loss. The men who were induced to invest their money in Cotton Mills, are now without dividends and are looking around for some means of relief, while the Finance Minister laughs at their misfortunes and declares that if they have to sacrifice their cottons it is a good thing for the consumers. This is good free trade doctrine of course, but Sir Leonard is free trader or protectionist just as suits his purposes. In 1879 he was not at all solicitous about the interests of the consumers of cotton or any other commodity. Then he was the champion of the manufacturers. It made no matter how high the prices of manufactured goods were so long as our own people got the money. Now he claims credit from the consumers because he has brought the cotton manufacturers to grief, and flooded the country with cheap cottons.

Sir Leonard has produced a little slaughter market of his own, but instead of "slaughtering" foreign products, he sacrifices the produce of Canadian labor and capital. He has no word of hope or comfort for those who were induced to invest money in his pet industries, and holds out no hope to the thousands of operatives who have been thrown out of employment, by the collapse of his policy. The only iron factory that Sir Leonard undertook to assist by legislation is now in liquidation. The flour mills of the country are, it is said, comparatively idle, and the millers have appealed to Ottawa in vain for assistance. Mr. W. W. Ogilvie recently told Sir John Macdonald that he had spent many sleepless nights brood*ing over* the grievances of the millers, and implored the Premier to do something for them.

Sir John, however, seems to have no further use for Mr. Ogilive and his associates in business. Probably he feels that those millers who are Conservatives will stick to him anyhow, and the others he can do without. At all events the Premier, having propounded the doctrine that every industry must look to Ottawa for relief in times of distress, cannot now plead that he is a mere "fly on the wheel," who can do nothing for those who appeal to him. The lumber trade is deeply depressed, the West India trade is crippled, the public debt is swelling at a prodigious rate, the rate of taxation has just been increased, the receipts of every railway in the country are falling off, the Pacific Railway Company are again coming to the Government in forma pauperis, praying for further relief and our financial Mark Tapley consoles the people with the remark that matters might be worse.

Sir Leonard Tilley tells us that in some of the down-trodden European countries where millions are spent yearly on standing armies, the taxation, expenditure and public debt, are higher per head of population than in Canada. The budget speech was from beginning to end a piece of shallow special pleading. Sir Richard Cartwright, fully appreciating the grave character of the situation, was very moderate in his reply, and with a patriotic spirit that does him credit—but for which the Tories will probably not thank him—refrained from discussing many points and much evidence showing how the credit of the country has suffered from the recklessness and incompetency of the party in power.

The Finance Minister has not given any satisfactory explanation as to how he purposes arranging for the payment of the twenty-five million dollars of public debt that is now due and payable. He has thirteen millions of floating debt now, that he cannot pay, the Canadian Pacific Company are crying for more, and he purposes raising money by forcing Dominion notes into circulation. In view of the small gold reserve now held by the Government, this is a serious proposition and as Sir Richard Cartwright pointed out on Wednesday, is calculated to create a something like a panic. The expenditure has swollen to thirty-three millions a year.

To satisfy his colleagues' power of disbursement, Sir Leonard is driven to the necessity of putting on more taxes on cigars, carpets and other articles, and appropriates all the receipts from Dominion lands as ordinary revenue, while he borrows money to pay for surveying and administering such lands. An increase of a hundred million dollars in the public debt in six years is certainly a pretty good showing. The amount of money shipped out of the country every year to pay interest on the public debt will soon be double what it was when the present Government came into power. The taxpayers of Canada know too well that Sir Leonard's general statement as to the condition of the country is merely an effort to suppress the truth.

VARIETIES.

No Matter.

No matter where pain, lameness, or soreness exists, Hagyard's Yellow Oil taken or applied will give immediate relief, and a positive cure quickly follows its use. 12-2t.

Misfortunes are moral bitters which frequently restore the healthy tone of the mind after it has been cloyed and sickened by prosperity.

An assassination society, the members of which have "removed" three men, has been broken up at Dallas, Texas, by the arrest of 23 members.

A Hearty Recommendation.

Jacob A. Empey, of Cannamore, states that he has taken Burdock Blood Bitters with great benefit in a lingering complaint, and adds that he would gladly recommend it to all. 12-2t

Housemaid, boasting of her industrious habits, said she rose at four, mad a fire, put on the kettle, prepared the breakfast, and made all the beds before any one in the house was up.

Mr. Perpetus Boileau, Ottawa, says: "I was radically cured of piles, from which I had been suffering for over two months, by the use of Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I used it both internally and externally, taking it in small doses before meal sand on retiring to bed. In one week I was cured, and have had no trouble since. I believed it saved my life."

"No, indeed," exclaimed Mrs. Podsman, energetically, "I don't believe in the extension of woman's suffrage at all. She suffers enough now."

Have you a cough? Sleepless nights need no longer trouble you. The use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral before retiring, will soothe the cough to quiet, allay the inflammation, and allow the needed repose. It will, moreover, speedily heal the pulmonary organs, and give you health.

The principal instrument of music in China is the tom-tom. It produces better music than a piano and is much cheaper. Any one can readily make a tom-tom by tying two cats by the tails and hanging them across a clothes line.

THE THIN CANNOT GAIN IN WEIGHT if they are troubled with dyspepsia, because the food is not converted into the due proportion of nourishing blood which alone can furnish the elements of flesh. But there is no reason, when this wearing, attenuating disease is conquered by Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, why there should not be an appreciable gain in weight, which, indeed, is usually the case. It is a peerless remedy also for Constipation, Liver Complaint, Kidney troubles, and roots out all impurities from the blood.

"Why do you put all the smallest apples at the bottom of the barrel?" asked Deacon Doogood of Farmer Furrow. "Merely to illustrate an old adage," grinned the granger. "And what is that?" "There's plenty of room at the top."

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES,

is a most valuable remedy for Consumption, Scrofula, Wasting Diseases, of children, colds and chronic coughs, and in all conditions where there is a loss of flesh, a lack of nerve power and a general debility of the system.

A DANGEROUS DAMSEL.

A Brussels girl followed the Japanese Charge d'Affaires in that city to Rotterdam and shot and killed him. She then attempted suicide by stabbing herself with a dagger, but only inflicted a slight wound. He had promised to marry the girl, who learned he was already married and that his wife was coming to Brussels.

Rheumatism

Cannot remain long with any one who uses NORMAN'S ELECTRIC BELTS, and Neuralgia is driven away like smoke before the wind. Give one a trial. Every Belt guaranteed genuine. Circular and consultation free. A. Norman, 1 Queen street East, Toronto. J. D. Tully, agent Peterborough. 12-4t

LITTLE BY LITTLE.

Like flakes of snow that fall unperceived upon the earth, the seemingly important events of life succeed one another. As the snow gathers together so are our habits formed. No single flake that is added to the pile produces a sensible change; no single action creates, however it may exhibit, a man's character.

Everybody Ho! Ho!

Read this carefully. If you or any friend are suffering from any kind of pain, internal, local, or external, try Polson's NERVILINE, the sure pop pain cure. Nerviline is one of the most elegant combinations ever offered to the public for the relief of pain. Pleasant to take, powerful in effect, sure in results, and cheap because the strongest, purest, and most certain pain remedy in the world. You can test this remedy by going to a drug store and buying a 10 cent sample bottle. Try it at once.

A Decided Hit.

Hagyard's Yellow Oil touches the right spot every time when applied for rheumatism, neuralgia, pain, soreness or lameness, and internally for colds, sore throat, etc., it is equally infallible. 12-2t.

What Would the World do without women? asks the essayist who starts out to say something new on the oft-treated subject. Of course, the human element of the world would not exist without women, so the question is gratuitous. It would have been far more sensible to ask: What would the world do without the salvation of women, without a panacea for her physical ills and a cure for her peculiar diseases. In a word, what would the world do without Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," the great remedy for female weaknesses? It is indispensable for the ills of woman kind.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.

The Rev. Mr Marshall, of Georgia, named his daughter "Eufaula," regarding it as "one of those beautiful Indian names," and he was for a time proud of possessing a daughter with a name at once musical and truly American. But he is now a wiser and a sadder man, for he has learned that "Eufaula" means "Wet Dog," and that he has unwittingly given to a Christian maiden the name of "Wet Dog Marshall."

The Wheel of Fortune

Moves incessantly—the most buoyant to-day may be loaded down by adversity to-morrow. One peculiarity of that famous alleviator of human suffering—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, is the fact that in spite of hundreds of imitations and substitutes it has retained its place in the very front rank as a remedy for corns. This must ever be the case as every person who has used it testifies that it is prompt, painless and certain—three grand essentials which, when combined, as is the case with Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, insures a sure pop corn cure. Sold everywhere.

NOT BECAUSE OF LONESOMENESS.

"So you went to the party with Mrs. Elberton, did you?" asked a wife of her husband. "Yes, as you were away I thought it would do no harm, as Elberton asked me to, being detained at home, and not wanting his wife to be disappointed." "Well, I don't believe in lending my husband to anybody." "Why not, pray?" "Because it is not good, according to the Bible, for a man to be a loan."

The Question of the Day.

"What is good for a cold?" is a question often asked, but seldom satisfactorily answered. We can answer to the satisfaction of all, if they will follow our advice and try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, a safe, pleasant and certain throat and lung healer. Sold by all druggists. 12-2t

DROP IN WAGES.

Bradstreets, one of the best informed commercial publications of the day, published very elaborate tables showing the decrease in wages and in employment in the United States during the past year. Those tables show that the decrease, both in the number of employees and in wages, is most marked in the most highly protected lines of manufactures. This is a strange comment on the effect of protection.

A Valuable Patent.

The most valuable discovery patented in modern times is that of the best blood purifier and liver and kidney regulator known. We refer to Burdock Blood Bitters, which is making so many wonderful cures and bringing the blessed boon of health to so many people. 12-2t

A CLEAR RECORD.

The county of Dufferin occupies an enviable position just now. At the opening of the Spring Assizes it was stated that there were no criminal cases for trial, and that the jail had been tenantless for some time past. On the civil docket there was only one case. Congratulations to the residents of the model county; condolence to the briefless barristers.

A Card.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. An Important Purchase.

Messrs. J. Muncy, I. Lightfoot and W. T. Donaldson have purchased from Messrs. Graham & Fair, the celebrated shire stallion, "Parole." This beautiful animal in style and action is hard to beat, and we hope that the new proprietors may so arrange it that farmers and horse fanciers in this vicinity, will have the benefit of the services of "Parole." In stock raising, the best is the cheapest in the long run.

Complimentary.

The Educational Weekly of March 19th has the following complimentary remarks in reference to Mr. Karle, in connection with an announcement as below :—"We hope next week to commence a series of questions upon Scott's "Lady of the Lake," by Mr. Barton Karle, of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. From Mr. Karle's well-known deep-seated love for English literature, and the deep and wide knowledge of this grand subject which his high and original talents have enabled him to attain, this will be pleasing information to our readers.

Prayer for Our Soldiers.

The following prayer is said regularly at St. Luke's Church on behalf of the British soldiers now in the Soudan. It is published by request :—"O Almighty and most merciful God, the Protector of all that trust in Thee, accept, we beseech Thee, our humble intercessions for our brethren, Thy servants, now fighting the battles of our country in Egypt. Protect and defend them with Thine Almighty power. Give them true courage in danger, and mercifulness in victory. Be pleased, O Lord, to succour and relieve the sick and wounded, and to bless the means used for their recovery. Grant that all they who fall in battle may depart this life in the true faith of Christ. Minister abundantly the consolations of Thy Holy Spirit to the fatherless children and widows, and to all who are in sorrow or anxiety; and in Thine own good time restore to all the nations of the world the blessings of peace. Grant this, O Heavenly Father, for the sake of Thy dear Son, the Prince of peace, our Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen."

A Peterborough Singer in Toronto

Robert De Bruce Camp, No. 2, Sons of Scotland, Toronto, gave a concert in Toronto on Friday evening last. With the exception of a few comic songs sung in character by Mr. Fax, Toronto, Miss Scott, and Mrs. Young Mr. Watson, of Toronto, and Mr. D. D. Galletly of this town, confined themselves exclusively to Scottish song. Mr. Galletly sung "Afton Water," "Hail to the Chief," "Scotland Yet," and "Take Yer Auld Cloak Aboot Ye," and took part with Mr. Young in the duet "Huntingtower," the latter peice considered by many as the gem of the evening, both artists receiving great praise for the high order of histrionic art displayed in the natural delineation of the characters portrayed in the song. The Occident Hall was crowded to excess, some hundreds having to stand the whole time of the concert. This is the second time Mr. Galletly's services have been in request by the Sons, the first time being last Hallowe'en nicht. On each occasion his rendering of Scottish song was enthusiastically received, every song eliciting an encore.

Y.M.C.A. Lecture Course.

The lecture to have been given this evening by Dr. Pigeon in the Y.M.C.A. Hall has been withdrawn for unavoidable reasons. The last lecture of the course is to be given by the Rev. T. Manning, B.A., on Thursday, 2nd April, the subject being "The Crusades."

The Roller Rink.

The expected supply of new skates has arrived and there are now skates for all. There was a big crowd at the Rink on Tuesday night, when the Fire Brigade Band was in attendance. Preparations for the grand masquerade carnival are going forward briskly, and something novel and splendid in this line may be looked for.

The Driving Park.

Driving Park stock is quite up to par, if not a point or two beyond. The management have already arranged for inaugurating the season on May 24th, when a running race will take place between McIntyre's "Nancy Lee" and a Port Hope racer, "Lady Macdonald. It is probable there will be other races and that the new lacrosse ground will be christened with a match between the home team and the Ottawa "Mets."

Old Folks' Concert.

The Old Folks' Concert, to be given in Bradburn's Opera House to-night (Thursday), promises to be a magnificent success. All the preparations are complete. The choir and singers had an excellent practice in costume on Tuesday night, and everything is promising. Those who have not engaged seats should come early, as at an early hour standing room is sure to be at a premium. Admission, 25 and 50 cents.

New Tea Store.

We call the reader's attention to the advertisement of Messrs. Hawley Bros. new tea store—"The People's Tea Store." In making a specialty of teas and coffees this firm is able to offer consumers the best grades of these articles at very low rates, much lower than if they dealt only incidentally in them. Pay their shop on Hunter street a visit and sample their goods.

Evangelical Services.

The Peterborough Laymen's Evangelical Association held their monthly meeting on March 21st, in the lecture room of the Y. M. C. A. Good reports were given of the work in Douro, Nassau, North Monaghan, Auburn and the county gaol. The above Association is formed for the purpose of holding religious services in the surrounding districts in which there are no other regular religious services held.

The Boot Black Orator.

The public are particularly reminded of the lecture on "To and Fro in London," on Friday evening next in Bradburn's Opera House. Mr. Clark comes with a brilliant reputation. Apart from the intrinsic interest this subject possesses, his eloquence and humour add striking elements of attraction. Hear what the press says of him :

The daily British Whig, of Kingston, says :—"His first effort two weeks ago was enjoyed by 800 people, but when he returned he was introduced to a perfect sea of faces. Throughout the evening the audience were kept in a perfect roar of laughter." The Kingston News says : "A wonder and delight, an oratorical marvel." G. D. Platt, B.A., Inspector of Schools, Picton, says : "Our audience was perfectly delighted with Mr. Clark, and unanimously voted him one of the greatest successes ever brought to Picton." The Oshawa Vindicator says :—"His brilliancy, eloquence and wit have never been excelled in Oshawa." Rev. J. Shorey, Oshawa, says : "Humorous, earnest, moral; I think the best I have heard." J. C. Carmichael, J.P., Esq., says :—"It moved me as none but Gough has ever done." The Port Hope Guide says :—"There has been no one in Port Hope who charmed an audience equal to the Boot Black Orator not even J. B. Gough, himself."

A gentleman in Port Perry who had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Clarke on Monday evening, writes :—"He fairly captivated our people. Last night the hall (aisles and all) was packed so that there was scarcely standing room, and at the conclusion the whole audience rose to their feet asking him to return. His "To and Fro in London" is one of the finest things I ever heard. His name here in the future will guarantee a jammed house every time." We hope to see a large attendance on Friday night. The opportunity should not be missed.

The Examiner Bindery.

The work done in THE EXAMINER book-bindery is giving universal satisfaction, and we are daily receiving personal as well as public testimony to the excellence of the work turned out and the satisfaction it gives. The Bobcaygeon Independent thus kindly recognizes us :

"We have to express our complete satisfaction with the excellent and artistic manner in which the Peterboro' EXAMINER bindery turned out two volumes of Picturesque Canada for this office. The workmanship is in every respect first class, of a lasting and wearing character, and handsome design. The EXAMINER well deserves a big run of this particular line of work."

A further proof that our work is of the very best quality is shown by the manner in which orders to be filled continue to pour in. The following letter explains itself :

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 19th, 1885.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Regular Meeting.

The council met on Monday evening, March 23rd, with the following members present :—Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNaughton, Kelly, Green, McClelland, Yelland, Douglass, Rutherford, Menzies, Kendry and Hartley.

In the absence of the Mayor, Mr. Menzies was voted to the chair.

After routine

COMMUNICATIONS

were received

From John Sawers, submitting tender for market tolls, $1,000.—Received.

From Wm. Ross, offering $1,200 for market tolls.—Received.

From Hugh Stevenson, offering horses for town team at $630.—Committee on Appointments.

From Crevier & Phalen, asking council to pay half the cost of electric light to be placed on the Opera House landing. Fire, Water and Light Committee.

From N. T. Laplante, in reference to a petition presented some time since, respecting a butcher's stand on Hunter street.—License Committee.

The Mayor entered andtook the chair.

A number of accounts were presented and dealt with.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Mr. Menzies, chairman, presented the report of the Committee on Appointments, recommending that Terrence Smith be appointed town teamster, at the same salary as last year, viz., $699.

The committee could not recommend that the police force be provided with clothing for 1885. The committee further recommended the appointment of a Board of Health, to consist of Messrs. W. H. Moore, Peter Hamilton, John Garvey, Dr. Fife, Jas. Kendry, A. Rutherford, Robt. Green, J. McNaughton and the Mayor, Geo. A. Cox, Esq. That Dr. Clarke be appointed as Medical Health officer at the same salary as last year, ($200), and that J. G. McDonald be appointed secretary at $25 per year.

On motion to adopt the report, Mr. McNaughton objected to the appointment of Dr. Clarke as medical health officer not on personal grounds, but because the office was unnecessary. He pointed out that the Health Act was enforced in the outside wards, while No. 2 ward was allowed to be unmolested in its uncleanliness. He moved that the report be amended by striking out the name of Dr. Clarke and substituting that of Mr. Beavis.

Mr. Hartley pointed out that Dr. Clarke had done his duty well, had done a great deal of work that the public were not aware of. In reference to the appointment of a town teamster, he thought the report should be referred back to the committee to consider the application of Hugh Stevenson, which was $60 lower than the sum proposed to be given to Mr. Smith.

Mr. Menzies was of the same opinion, and he moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the portion of the report referring to the appointment of town teamster be referred back to the committee. The amendment was lost and the report was adopted on the following division :

YEAS—Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, Kelly, McClelland, Douglass, Rutherford and Kendry.

NAYS—Messrs. McNaughton, Green, Yelland, Menzies and Hartley.

CHARITY COMMITTEE.

Mr. Green, chairman, presented the report of the Charity Committee, recommending that the taxes of Charles Hanlon be remitted, and that the treasurer be instructed to pay for the maintenance of Charles Portamouth, this amount to be paid during the pleasure of the council. Report adopted.

LICENSE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Rutherford, chairman, presented the report of the License Committee, which stated that in reference to the petition of H. Rush and others asking for extension of the time for separating groceries and liquors, the committee had referred the matter to the town solicitor, whose opinion was presented.

The committee recommended that the fee to be paid for billiard tables each be the sum of $75 per annum, and that the by-law be amended to that effect.

LICENSE AMENDMENT.

On the report of the License Committee coming up for adoption, a letter was read from Mr. E. B. Edwards, respecting the power of the Council to repeal the by-law separating the sale of groceries and liquors, stating that in his opinion the Council had the power to repeal such by-law.

Mr. Rutherford moved that the communication be referred to the License Committee to report on at a meeting of the Council next Monday night.

Mr. Davidson moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Menzies, the first reading of the repeal by-law.

Mr. Cahill urged the consideration of the by-law. He pointed out that these grocers would take out Dominion licenses, and as the Ontario Government will not receive fees for such licenses the town would lose a large amount of revenue, while the grocers would continue to sell as at present.

Mr. Douglass advised that the matter be settled to-night, and Mr. McClelland thought it would simplify matters if the solicitor's letter were referred to the committee, with instructions to prepare a by-law in accordance with its terms.

Mr. Yelland thought the dealers had had plenty of notice and there was no plea for repealing the by-law; it should take its course.

Mr. McNaughton would go for enforcing the by-law if he was sure the Scott Act would not pass.

The amendment was lost and the original motion passed.

On the motion to adopt the remainder of the report, Mr. Menzies moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that this portion of the report be referred back to the committee with instructions to make the tee for billiard tables $50.

Mr. Cahill moved in amendment to the amendment, that the report be referred back to the committee with instructions to prepare a by-law fixing the amount for each billiard table at $60.

Mr. Menzies withdrew his amendment and the amendment was lost and the report was adopted.

THE MARKET CLERK MATTER.

Mr McClelland said, in reference to the appointment of a market clerk, that the committee had decided to re-appoint Mr. Doherty, after giving due weight to Mr. Ross' application. The committee was unanimous in giving the position to Mr. Doherty.

Mr. Kendry said the subsequent offer of Mr. Ross was only a "bluff." The committee had acted advisedly.

Mr. Douglass thought the committee was too precipitate in settling the matter. They gave no opportunity of receiving other tenders.

Mr. Hartley said it was a matter of $350, as between the figure the committee had decided on and Mr. Ross' offer of to-night.

The Mayor explained that the committee had taken the action they had done because Mr. Doherty had conducted the business satisfactorily to the people of the town and to the farming community. His predecessor had a great deal of trouble with the farmers, and his conduct tended to injure the town by driving farmers, especially from adjoining counties, to other towns. The committee had an impression that Mr. Doherty was paying all that could afford to be paid. Under the circumstances they thought they were doing the best for the interests of the town.

Mr. John Sawers stated that the offer he had made was not one of "bluff," as Brother Kendry stated. He was surprised that Brother Kendry should make an assertion for he (Mr. Sawers) had told Brother Kendry distinctly that he was willing to pay $1,000 for the market tolls. He (Mr. Sawers) was prepared to pay $1,000 cash for the market. There was no "bluff" about hard cash.

Mr. Kelly explained that these tenders had been made, he thought, in forgetfulness of the fact that there had been a change in the law that affected the revenue.

Mr. Yelland thought the Committee had done wrong in settling the matter hastily.

Mr. Ross said he made his tender intelligently, after giving due consideration to the matter. He had told several members of the Council, including the Mayor, that if his tender of $930 was not accepted he was prepared to offer $1,200.

Mr. Cox stated that the manner in which Mr. Ross had made these offers did not tend to beget confidence in the minds of the committee. He pointed out that the awarding of the contract was not a mere matter of money, the best man should be chosen for the position. The object was to secure the most efficient man for the work, and one that would, in the discharge of his duties, make the visits of farmers to our market pleasant and agreeable.

On motion the Council adjourned till

Tuesday Evening,

When Mr. Davidson introduced the by-law to amend the license by-law as far as it relates to the license fee for billiard tables. The by-law was read a first time, and the council went into committee of the whole, on the second reading Mr., McNaughton in the chair.

Mr. Cahill moved, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that the fee be placed at $60.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Douglass, that the figure be $75.

Mr. Cox moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland that the figure be $100.

After considerable discussion, Mr. Cox withdrew his amendment, and Mr. Cahill his motion, and Mr. Rutherford's motion was agreed to.

The by-law was read a third time and finally passed, fixing the license fee for each billiard table at $75.

SEPARATION BY-LAW.

Mr. Rutherford said the committee had not prepared a by-law to repeal the by-law separating the sale of groceries and liquors.

Mr. Kelly said the matter was deferred last night on the understanding that the by-law should be ready for to-night, and he moved that the clerk be instructed to prepare a by-law forthwith.

After considerable talk, and the repetition of arguments by several members, which we have before published, the matter was referred back to the License Committee on the understanding that the committee was to have a repeal by-law prepared to be submitted to the council at a meeting to held next Monday night.

A Flourishing Court.

Court Peterborough No. 29, Canadian Order of Foresters is in a flourishing condition, numerically, financially and socially. Its members have now one of the finest meeting places in the order. The new Hall, elegant as it was on its recent opening, has been handsomely adorned with pictures. A new pipe organ has been placed in the hall. With judicious guidance and a faithful pursuit of the objects of the order, this court has a prosperous career before it.

"The Little Sentinel."

This is the striking title of a most entertaining comedietta, which forms the closing number on the programme of a grand concert to be held in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, on Thursday, April the 9th. The several parts will be taken by skillful amateurs, not unknown in Peterborough and vicinity, and, as many well-known and favorite vocalists will also appear and some new tableaux will form part of the evening's entertainment, a good bill of fare has been provided. Proceeds for St. Luke's Sunday School. Admission, twenty-five cents.

The Last Tribute of Respect.

On Sunday last the funeral of the late Mrs. Geo. Addison (Bella Cumming) took place from her father's residence, Edinburgh street. How well she was beloved by those who knew her best was shown by the splendid floral mementoes placed on her casket, which was literally buried in cut flowers, before being consigned to its last resting place. How highly she stood in the public esteem was shown by the immense cortege that followed her remains to Little Lake Cemetery. The deceased young lady was worthy of this respect. In all the relations of associate, friend, grand-daughter, daughterland wife, her unvarying cheerfulness and fidelity to the duties those relations imposed, developed a love and appreciation that will make her loss keenly felt make her place in their hearts and homes a void that cannot be filled.

ROOM PAPER!

Keeping a complete stock of Wall Paper at the present time is not what it was a few years ago. Then, it meant a few hundred dollars; now, it means several thousand dollars; then, it consisted of low priced papers and borders; now, the decorations required frequently cost double what the papers do. In order to have a complete stock, we have invested no less a sum than $6,000.00 CASH!

This is why we have done so large a business in the past; our stock is so large, and the range of patterns so varied in each price, that we can suit those who can only afford to buy the cheapest, as well as the rich who will pay any price.

A Port Hope Editor Assaulted.

On Monday morning last Mr. Thomas H. Ambrose, of Ambrose & Winslow's brewery, assaulted Mr. Geo. Wilson, editor of the Guide, on the street in Port Hope. No serious injury was inflicted. The Guide attributes the attack to its support of the Scott Act, which, naturally conflicts with its assailant's interests. Mr. Ambrose is to answer for his assault before a legal tribunal.

Roller Rink Carnival.

A gallery for spectators, from which they may witness and enjoy the coming fancy dress carnival, is in course of construction at the Water street rink. The carnival will take place in about a fortnight. Those wishing to appear at the carnival should practice beforehand, as only those able to skate will be furnished with skates on the occasion. The management have made arrangements to afford competent assistance to those learning, either in the forenoon, afternoon or evening.

New Furniture Warerooms.

The public will be interested in being informed that Mr. W. McKee has opened a retail branch of his wholesale furniture business. The warerooms are situated on Water street, in the shop under the Roller Skating Rink, and will contain a superb stock of every kind of furniture usually to be found in such an establishment. By extending their patronage to the Roller Rink Furniture Shop the public will be rewarded by securing first-class goods at very low prices. Ordered work will receive special attention. The fame of McKee's wholesale furniture business reaches from Brandon to the Bay of Fundy, and we are sure that every corner of the county will speedily discover the advantages of his retail department. 12-3t

The Riel Rebellion.

The Dominion Government Wholly to Blame.

Sir John's Blunders in 1871 and 1885—Pardoning and Pensioning Riel the Red-Handed—Banking the Fires of Revolt and letting them Break out Fifteen Years Later Government Indifference an Invitation to Revolt—Winking at the Situation—Treating Parliament with Disrespect.

The half-breeds in the North-west are in open revolt, and have already taken the lives of some score of Canadians, and the situation is an exceedingly grave one. For six or eight months the storm has been brewing, yet the government took no action, and even up to the very last moment information of the gravity of the situation was discourteously withheld from Parliament. After the fact that a rebellion had broken out, had been received from other sources, that is on Monday, Hon. Mr. Blake, leader of the Opposition, asked for information in regard to the rebellion, and got a reply which was most remarkable for its emptiness. The rebel was said to be principally annoyed because some one said he was not a British subject. He had stirred up the half-breeds, but they would be quieted by the settlement of their claims which were then under consideration. A day later and the Premier was asked if he had heard anything further anent the uprising. The reply was again brief and unsatisfactory. On Thursday the formality of questioning the government upon the subject was gone through with, and as Sir John was clearly evasive, and tried to avoid debate, Mr. Blake entered his protest, and in a manner rightly calculated to arouse the first minister and give him fluency of speech.

CONCEALING INFORMATION FROM THE HOUSE.

Hon. Mr. Blake said in reference to the Northwest disturbances:

"I observe that the Government organs, while they give this account of what is going on, yet complain most grievously of the accounts published by the Opposition newspapers. I therefore preferred to draw my information from these unimpeachable organs which sustain these hon. gentlemen opposite, and which would of course be actuated by the highest dictates of patriotism, prudence and scrupulous accuracy. You will observe that it is stated in these organs that the half-breeds have that their patents have not been issued, and that influential persons have influenced officials and obtained the lands belonging to the settlers, that the half-breeds have good grounds of complaint, and that the Government at this convenient season has issued a commission upon the subject. It is very plain from what the hon. gentleman told us that serious action was decided upon by the administration in the way of putting the military force of the country into action on 23rd insant. the period at which the hon. gentleman did not think fit to inform the House, then in session, of the circumstance, although the House had invited him to give information. It seems to me that the Government has not done that which it ought to have done. It is a very serious thing that the militie force of this country should have been obliged to be called out. I am not by any means blaming the administration for calling them out. But it is a serious and grave occurrence.

* * * It is obvious that it is regarded as a reasonably serious thing that the militia should be called out, and that when such an emergency occurs, Parliament, the great council of the nation, should be called together. In this case the great council was already sitting and the government decided to call out the troops in order to quell this disturbance. But hon. gentlemen did not think fit to inform us. On the contrary, being invited to give information, they stated that they thought it prudent last year to place a hundred mounted policemen in Fort Carlton, but they did not tell the House they had ordered out a battalion and battery of artillery."

FIXING THE BLAME.

Mr. Blake did not stop with a protest against the great disrespect with which Parliament had been treated. He showed that the half-breeds, "who have been on the lands for years, had been unable to procure patents, and the speculators and others, giving fees to persons who have influence, had obtained deeds, and in many cases taken the lands over the heads of the first settlers, who had improved them for some 15 or 18 years;" that as long ago as July there were indications of trouble; that the violent action of those led by Riel was taken because they "despaired of getting justice by ordinary means:" and that (vide Mail) some of these complaints and grievances were well founded and

OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN REDRESSED.

If the Government did not know the actual condition of affairs the greater the reflection upon them and the "hordes of officials" representing federal interests in the North-West. Let it be remembered that Mr. Blake did not oppose the calling out of the troops in such an emergency. The Government is doing its duty in suppressing a rebellion, "but," as the leader of the Opposition remarked, "force is not a remedy." Long and studied neglect has had its effects. Those who deserved consideration, the settlers, have been allowed to continue in suffering while the Government pandered to their "favorites and the speculators." The North-West timber limits and land, said Mr. Blake, constitute the carcase about which "the eagles, flocking in the wake of the Government, gathered, and the effort to arrange complications to suit and please everybody, and his son-in-law, and his daughter, or friend, or ally, so that each might have location or privileges of some kind, was enough to exhaust the enterprise of the Ministry. In eight years they could not give attention to these claims." Hon. Mr. Blake closed his speech by moving: "That it is the duty of the Government forthwith to lay before the House the fullest information on the subject of the claims and alleged grievances of the inhabitants of Prince Albert and the neighbourhood, and of the action of the Government and the officers thereof, and of their action with reference to the movement of last summer, and with reference to the present disturbance.

THE PREMIER'S SHAMELESS HYPOCRISY.

Sir John, in the course of his reply, solemnly asserted that in 1871 he paid Riel, through Archbishop Tache, $1,000 to remove himself from the American frontier, so that he might not continue to create disturbance in the Canadian Northwest. The Premier also asserted that there never was a more sincere prayer uttered than his statement at Peterborough in 1872, that he "wished to God he could catch Riel." Sir Richard Cartwright quoted the sworn evidence of Archbishop Tache before the Select Parliamentary Committee in 1874, in which he testified that in the autumn of 1871 Sir John Macdonald had paid Riel $1,000 to get out of the country. The money was paid over to Riel nearly a year before Sir John made his famous speech at Peterborough, in which he said he "wished to God he could catch him." Mr. Casey also read from the evidence given by Archbishop Tache, proving that Sir John's object in paying $3,000 to get Riel out of the country was not to promote peace in the Northwest, but to keep Riel quiet until the elections of 1872 were over in Ontario. Sir John's statements to-night squarely contradicts the sworn testimony of Archbishop Tache, and the dates and other circumstances corroborate the statements of the Archbishop and show that those made by Sir John are wholly incorrect and that he was deliberately and of malice aforethought endeavoring to mislead and deceive the House and the country as to his responsibility in the matter of giving Riel means to escape from the just punishment for one of the foulest murders of a loyal subject on record. To show what part Sir John took in condoning Riel's murder of Thomas Scott, Right Rev. Archbishop Tache's evidence, taken before a Committee of the House in 1874, may be submitted. After testifying that Sir George Cartier and Sir John Macdonald had promised an absolute amnesty to Rial, he testified as follows:—

I had several conversations with both of them, but one especially I remember with Sir John. It was on the 7th of December, 1871, about noon, in his office. I do not remember who began, but he insisted that I should

for a while, and added these words, so far as I can recollect them, 'If you can succeed in keeping him out of the way for a while I will make his case mine, and I will carry the point.' * * I made to Sir John the same observations which I had already made to Sir George about the necessity of giving some money, to Riel if he were asked to leave the country. It was agreed by Sir John that they would do something about that matter—that he would consult with Sir George Cartier and give me an answer afterwards. I got an answer dated 27th Dec., 1871, from Sir John, which I produce under direction of the Committee, as follows:—

"SIR JOHN MACDONALD TO ARCHBISHOP TACHE.

"[Private and strictly confidential.]

"OTTAWA, 27th Dec., 1871.

"MY DEAR LORD ARCHBISHOP,—I have been able to make the arrangement for the individual that we have talked about. I now send you a draft on the Bank of Montreal for $1,000: I need not press upon Your Grace the importance of the money being paid to him periodically—say monthly or quarterly, and not in a lump, otherwise the money would be wasted, and our embarrassment begin again. Believe me, Your Grace's

"Very obedient servant,

(Signed) "JOHN A. MACDONALD.

"His Grace, the Archbishop of St. Boniface, Montreal."

The Archbishop went on:—I understood the words in Sir John's letter "and our embarrassment begins again," to refer to the possibility of Riel's coming back again before the Ontario elections and the embarassment caused thereby to the Government."

Using this $1,000, to which the Government subsequently added $1,600, in all $2,600, Reil was persuaded to leave Canada and go to the States in February 1872.

THE PREMIER'S PIOUS PRAYER.

It was several months (July 9th, 1872) after that when Riel and Lepine were living in the United States, upon money furnished by Sir John Macdonald, that the latter worthy made his hypocritical lament at Peterborough, "God knows how I wish we could catch him!"

If Sir John had at that time carried out the present policy suggested by the Montreal Gazette, a good Tory Government organ, namely, to "string up Riel to the first convenient tree," instead of using the people's money to assist a red-handed murderer and rebel to escape from justice for fear his presence in Canada would affect the elections, there would have been, as there is now, no rebellion in the Northwest, and no slaughter, as there is now, of our fellow citizens.

THE BLAME FOR THE PRESENT TERRIBLE TROUBLE

must rest on the Dominion Government. They have long known that trouble was brewing in the Northwest. Last July their attention was called to the fact, and in Parliament Sir John admitted that the half-breeds had substantial grievances, but no action had been taken. Here is what Reil's secretary says as to their grievances:—"We have plenty to complain of, the most being the delay on the part of the Dominion Government in recognizing the rights of the pioneer settlers and half-breeds to their lands taken up before the survey was made;

THE OVERRUNNING THE COUNTRY

with incapable officials, most of them unnecessary; the recognition by government of the right of the half-breed population, who did not participate in the Manitoba land grant, to the same claim as the native population of Red River; the right of our district, when formed into a Province, to its own public lands and to put a stop in the meantime to the giving away of the lands to speculative government politicians. Also our right as free-born British subjects to representation in the councils of the nation, as taxation without representation is contrary to the constitution. We also demand an equal rule for the granting of permits, not to be all one-sided as at present. This last causes more discontent than anyone is aware of. Such are the principal heads of our demands."

These people it will be seen have reason to complain, and if the Dominion Government had shown the least disposition to do them the simple justice they demanded, and which would do no injustice to anybody else, the present terrible outbreak in which many lives have been sacrificed, and which will cost more blood, and thousands of money to subdue, would never have taken place.

A despatch from Ottawa states that public feeling on the subject of the rising is exceedingly strong, and it is expected that Sir John Macdonald will endeavour to "throw a tub to the whale," by dismissing Lieut.-Governor Dewdney, Sir David Macpherson, or some other official upon whom can be fathered. Mr. Dewdney's incapacity and dishonesty in his dealings with the half-breeds and Indians are regarded as among the primary causes of the rebellion. The conduct of the Government in sending up a host of political hacks and imported dudes to administer the affairs in the North-West instead of entrusting some natives, is also severely condemned even by Conservative members of Parliament, many of whom, while considering it unfair to charge the whole party with responsibility for the outbreak, admit that it is the result of gross mismanagement on the part of the Government and their officials.

Mr. Royal, who succeeded Riel as the member for Provencher, left Winnipeg for Ottawa on Monday to offer the government his services as intermediary. He says the department of the interior at Ottawa is to blame for the trouble, and that it was warned the half-breeds would rise unless their demands received recognition from the government.

The North West War

REIL RAISES A REBELLION.

The Dogs of War let Loose—Several Encounters take Place—Many Men Killed—Vigorous Measures to Quell the Rising—Troops Hurrying to the Scene The Call to Arms—Ready Response—The Indians Join the Half-Breeds—A Troublous Time Anticipated.

On Monday last the Globe published a long despatch stating that rebellion had broken out in the Northwest, but the whole of the Tory press contradicted it. But it turns out that the information was only too correct and as was stated in our last issue an attack was mas made on the Mounted Police and there was no doubt that the rebellion was in progress. Troops were hurried forward as rapidly as possible, but the Mounted Police which were nearest at hand had the first encounter with the rebels with the result as stated in the following despatch:

WINNIPEG, March 27.—The city is in a dreadful state of excitement over the receipt of a report late this afternoon from the seat of war. Condensed dispatches indicate that a collision occurred between the police under Major Crozier and the rebels yesterday afternoon. Eight Mounted Police are reported killed, in addition to fifteen whites on the rebel side. A large number are said to be wounded.

Another report says two policemen and six civilians, under Capt. Moore, of the mounted police, are killed.

The special war correspondent of the Sun telegraphs late this evening from Fort Qu'Appelle that James Scott, station man at Duck Lake, has telegraphed that a fight occurred at Duck Lake to-day. Two policemen were killed and ten wounded. The loss of the enemy is unknown, but believed to be large. This is believed to be at the first, according to report, occurred yesterday.

A telegram received from Brandon this morning stated that the mounted police had secured Louis Gouvianne, emissary of Riel who has been sent with letters to Indian, and half-breeds of Broadview, Oak Lake and Baie St. Paul. He was captured at Broadview. To their disappointment the papers were not found on him. The prisoner says he left Riel six days ago, and that he had then and that he was being joined by the American Indians. Major Crozier and his men, he says, have been made prisoners. General Middleton was informed of the case, and ordered the man to brought here by special train. He arrived this afternoon and was locked up in jail for examination. He stoutly denies any connection with Riel.

SIX AMERICAN CANNONS AND FIFTEEN HUNDRED MEN

SUPPLIES

The Hudson Bay Company has 240 teams and wagons at Qu'Appelle to transport troops to Prince Albert. A large special train just left here for the West, with the balance of the troops and General Middleton on board in command. A heavy train with provisions and fodder for horses left at noon. Sufficient supplies for two weeks were taken.

Major Crozier, at Fort Carleton, sent word to Battleford recently that an attack upon the fort by rebels was imminent.

Big Bear who was reported to have gone to Carleton, is still at Fort Pitt. Musket chief of the Stonies, fifteen miles south of Battleford, offered 100 men to aid the police. Crosier has 120 to 200 Indians under arms. He has also three pieces of artillery. It is announced that Messrs. Goulet, Forget, Street and Lauder have been appointed a commission to adjudicate the claims.

THE INDIANS.

Great uneasiness is felt here over the report that American Indians are going to join the rebels. All the Indians in the Canadian territory are known to be uneasy, and some are threatening to rise.

Two-thirds of the citizens were present at the station this evening to witness the departure of troops, and great excitement exists. The telegraph and newspaper offices are besieged for news. Reports were coming in from various districts and towns throughout the country of farmers and citizens organising companies and drilling for defence. The C. P. R. expects to be able to bring troops from Eastern Canada over their entire line in a trifle over four days.

THE NEWS CONFIRMED.

WINNIPEG, March 27.—Official confirmation has just been received by the Government of a battle at Fort Carleton. Following is the list of killed and wounded. It was brought from Fort Carleton to Battleford by courier, and telegraphed from there:

Killed—Constables Gibson and Arnold, Mounted Police.

Wounded—Capt. John Martin, W. Napier James Bakely, Wm. S. Elliott, Chas. Hewit, Robt. Middelton, James Anderson, D. McKenzie, D. McPhail, and Alex. Fisher, of volunteer corps. raised in Prince Albert; Insscotor Howe, Corporal Gilchrist and Constables Garret, S. T. Gordon, Smith, Wood and Millar, of Mounted Police; Capt Moore, A. McNab, W. R. Markley, and Alex. Stewart, of volunteer, corps; Moore had his leg broken.

IN THE HOUSE.

At Ottawa after Sir John had read the telegram giving the above information Mr. Blake inquired what provisions the Government had made for quelling the disturbance. He said it was proposed to send, in addition to those who had gone forward from Winnipeg, troops by the Canadian Pacific Railway and arrangements had been made several days ago by Mr. Harry Abbott, conductor on the railway, to carry men over the gap of 70 miles. Owing to the fact that sleighing was good it would be easier, in fact, to send them that way than any other. Sir John then called upon the Minister of Militia to state what troops had been ordered out.

Mr. Caron explained that as soon as the news was received, and, in fact, previously, he had made arrangements for the subsistence and transport of 500 men. This afternoon both A and B Batteries were ordered to start as soon as possible. A battery will probably leave Quebec to-night or to-morrow morning, and would be joined on the way by B Battery from Kingston. In addition to the troops previously mentioned, orders have been given for 685 men—250 were to be taken from the Queen's Own, 250 from the Tenth Royals and 85 from C School of Infantry, Toronto, were to be put under command of Col. Otter, commandant of C Infantry School, and would leave at once for the scene of action. In addition to these forces, it is the intention to organize a mounted corps of 150 or 250 men that would furnish their own horses and accoutrements, to be put under the command of Capt. Stewart, formerly of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, now a resident of the Northwest.

OTTAWA, March 27.—A large quantity of Government stores and ammunition was shipped from Ottawa to-night, and will be sent round by the American lines to Winnipeg.

TORONTO, March 27.—A and B Batteries Canadian artillery, and the Queen's Own Rifles and Tenth Royal Grenadiers have just been ordered to parade at 10 to-morrow, to proceed to the Northwest and quell the rebellion. The fighting spirit of both regiments is thoroughly aroused, and many express their pleasure at being able to take part in quelling the rebellion. The adjutants of both regiments have been busy all night picking out 250 from each regiment.

PROMPT ACTION.

QUEBEC, March 57.—Peremptory orders were received by Col. Cotton from Ottawa to-night, ordering the immediate dispatch of 100 men of A Battery to the scene of disturbance in the Northwest. The orders were immediately acted upon, and a special train will leave Palais station at 1 a. m. with 100 men. They have all necessary ambulance and ammunition with them, besides nine horses and two nine-pounder field guns. The men are in the best of spirits, and seem ready for a little active service.

READY FOR RIEL.

Major Bennett, of Toronto, has still the rope that bound Thomas Scott, and he is ready to start for Winnipeg to present it to Louis Riel as an Easter necktie.

The following more definite information of the fight on Thursday is given:—A parley was in progress between Major Crozier and Riel under a flag of truce; the half-breeds fired on the police; the latter answered. Twelve of Crozier's party were killed, while 47 of the rebels were either killed or wounded. Crozier retired to Fort Carlton, a few miles westward and joined Col Irvine. Next day, Friday, Col. Irvine destroyed the fort and the stores in it and with Crozier repaired to Prince Albert, the main settlement in the locality, where he is now posted. The only means of communication with him is by courier westward to Battleford and then by wire to Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 30.—The situation is becomming more and more alarming. In this city there is no ceasing to the wild rumors that are abroad. Business is entirely forgotten and the streets are never deserted for a moment. Even in the stillness of the night there is barely any lull in the incessant stir and bustle. People are beginning to ask themselves what the upshot will be and praying that England and Russia may arrive at a satisfactory seltlement so that some regulars may be released for active service here. While insurgents are supplied with all the latest and most modern arms the volunteers are badly equipped in this respect, the Enfields being long out of date. Still there is the bravest spirit abroad, fanned, of course, by an intense feeling of indignation. News of Col. Irvine is very anxiously expected, it being feared that the long silence, in spite of the difficulties of communication, forebodes no good.

There is tremendous excitement in Calgary and Regina over the reported uprising of the Blackfeet. But no surprise is expressed as the Indians during the winter have experienced unparalleled privations. Deaths from starvation have been by no means uncommon and men, women and children show by their emaciated appearance the terrible trials they have endured. Food, however in large quanities is being sent to them, and hopes are yet entertained that the number induced to join the half-breeds will be comparatively small. Many have already offered their services to the government, so that at the worst there will probably be as many on one side as the other.

A number of letters and telegrams have been received from friends in the east expressing fear for the safety of relatives and acquaintances at Winnipeg, Brandon and Portage la Prairie, but nothing need be apprehended, as they are fully 600 miles from the scene of trouble although a report has reached here of a threatened Fenian descent on Emerson.

BATTLEFORD IS CAPTURED.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 30.—A Battleford despatch received at 10 o'clock to-night said between 80 and 100 well-armed and evil disposed Cree Indians came into town this evening. A Hudson Bay official parleyed with them and endeavored to pacify them, but they plainly intended to be hostile. Later on more of the band arrived, and joining forces with the first comers took possession of the town and every house in it. The inhabitants escaped to the police barracks, where at latest advices they were expecting an attack from the Indians, who are gathered on the south side of the Battle river. Telegraph communication is expected to cease at any moment.

CONCENTRATION AT PRINCE ALBERT.

WINNIPEG, March 30.—It is understood that there will be a general concentration of local forces at Port Albert, thus abandoning Battleford, Duck Lake and Carlton. Poundmaker, Little Pine and several bands of Indians have donned war paint near Battleford, and fears are entertained of a general Indian uprising. Despatches from Calgary also say the Indians are becoming restless and are holding frequent pow-wows. Thirty-five cow-boys from the ranches are scouring the plains and continually bringing in reports.

Rumors of Fenians dropping into the country in small knots are in circulation, but despatches from the frontier do not confirm them,

ACTIVITY AT OTTAWA

OTTAWA, March 30.—All day yesterday and to-day the wildest excitement has prevailed. The militia department is the scene of the greatest activity, the officials being busily engaged carrying out the minister's instructions. The number of telegrams received and sent away is extraordinary. Mr. Caron is constantly on hand, personally superintanding everything. The store branch of the department has been busy since Thursin issuing supplies of different kinds of accoutrements, etc., and yesterday it was open all day. The cabinet was in session the greater part of the day, but no news was officially supplied to the public.

DEPARTURE OF THE TORONTO EXPEDITION.

Toronto never before witnessed such a sight as it did yesterday. The departure of volunteers to repel the Fenian invasion nineteen years ago was not a patch to it. That the people were stirred to their heart's core was amply demonstrated by the immense throngs which crowded the streets, the wild enthusiasm which greeted the bold militia boys wherever they appeared, and the tender scenes of parting witnessed on every side.

Tens of thousands of people witnessed the embarkation at Union station. When the volunteers halted on the esplanade there were some deeply affecting scenes. Frequently a mother broke the ranks in the effort to reach her son, a sister her brother, and a sweetheart her lover, and the intensity of affection expressed in the farewell kiss was sufficient to bring tears to the eyes of many of the spectators.

AT THE END OF THE C. AND Q. DIVISION.

SMITH'S FALLS Ont., March 30.—The last of the troops from Toronto left here at 10.23 this evening, They are in the best of spirits. At Peterboro' and other places along the road large crowds turned out to greet them and cheered lustily as the trains steamed out. After leaving here the men will doubtless settle down to get what sleep they can in order to be in the best possible trim for the hardships to come.

OVER THE FIRST PORTAGE.

A and B batteries left Carlton Place on Saturday and Monday they had got safely over the first long break in the journey. The portage is about forty miles at Dog lake and is the most serious that has to be traversed. The men with with all their equipments got across in good shape.

CARLETON PLACE, March 30.—The advance train has just made this point at 10:45, quite as good time as was expected to be made. An event of a most unexpected and exceedingly pleasing nature occurred after the officers of the party had alighted. A number of members of the House of Commons came out to Carleton Junction to meet the volunteers passing through. They took advantage of the occasion to ask Mrs. Edward Blake, who had also come out to see some of her family, members of the Queen's Own, to make a presentation to Col. Otter of

with the Canadian arms. Mr. Malock introduced the subject by saying that the members, irrespective of party, were anxious to show that they were a unit in their earnest desire for the success of this expedition, and wish to show it in some fitting way. He requested Mrs. Blake to make the presentation. Mrs. Blake came forward, and addressing Col. Otter, said:—"A number of my friends in the House of Commons, desirous of expressing their sympathy and good wishes for the men under your command and the expedition on which they have now started, have desired me to PRESENT YOU WITH THIS FLAG.

I do so with great pleasure, and at the same time would like to add my own heartfelt prayer for your speedy success and safe return." Col. Otter replied in a few feeling words, and said they were very much touched by this evidence of the sympathy of the members of the House of Commons, and would endeavour to show themselves worthy of having this flag committed to their care. (Cheers.) A company of local volunteers headed by a band, were in attendance to greet the passing regiments and filled every part of the platform. The reception was an exceedingly warm one. The train bearing the Grenadiers, having in the meantime come up, were treated at the restaurant to an excellant repast. This occasioned a considerable delay and it was after twelve before the trains again got under way.

MORE SERIOUS STILL.

WINNIPEG, March 31.—Too despatches this morning leave no doubt that the Indian risings at File Hills and Battleford are of the most serious character. The report of the murder of Indian Agent Nicholls at File Hills is contradicted, but there is no doubt that Farm Instructors Payne and Applegarth, of Battleford, have been murdered and other outrages perpetrated. Supt. Herchmer, with seventy men and one gun, is en route to Battleford by way of Swift Current, and unless he is met by a superior force he can relieve Battleford in six days. Additional calls for troops have been made. The 7th (Londons), the 9th (Quebec), and a portion of the Halifax militia have been ordered out.

A GLEAM OF SUNSHINE.

There is good news to-day, however, as well as bad. Sir John has assurances that the great Blackfeet nation will remain at home. It is to be hoped that Chief Crowfoot's influences will also be powerful enough to restrain not only the Blackfeet tribe, but the other branches of the nation, including the Bloods, Piegans, and Sarcees. The Bloods, especially, are to be dreaded. It is not to be expected, however, that any of these restless Indians will remain quiet for long while fighting is going on near them. If the Governor of the North-West were a man whom they could trust—as Mr. Dewdney is not—there would be a very great probability that their energies could be enlisted in the task of repressing their neighbours and hereditary enemies, the Crees and Stoneys, who, under Poundmaker, are threatening Battleford.

The left wing of the 90th arrived at Fort Qu'Appelle yesterday afternoon. The men were immediately set to pitching camp, and the campaign is now considered as having opened. They do not expect, however, to make a forward movement for four or five days.

Business is about entirely suspended, not only here, but throughout the North-west. It is certain that the present trouble will not only have a serious affect in checking emigration, but will also materially interfere with agricultural progress. Until everything is perfectly quiet again none of the settlers or farmers will attempt to do anything. It is, therefore, certain that the effects of the rising will be far reaching and will be followed by very considerable distress.

George Fisher, a half-breed storekeeper at Clarke's Crossing, arrived at Fort Qu'Appelle. He was invited to take part in the rebellion, but refused, and his stock was seized and he made prisoner. When the rebels left Batoche, previous to the engagement at Duck Lake, he got away. He confirms Buoyle's statement that Reil has a thousand men with him. Some are Indians, he says, but they are well armed, and mean fight. Riel is virtually king of the whole country north of the South Saskatchewan. His followers have swept up all the supplies and have unearthed the government caches, that is secret stores. Poundmaker's rebellion is serious.

A COMPLIMENT.

The Government had occasion to forward from Kingston and Toronto a quantity of ammunition for the North-west by the Grand Trunk Railway to Chicago. Mr. Cable, President of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Company, on learning the facts, immediately placed, without charge, two cars, and made a special train for the speedy delivery at St. Paul of the war supplies. An act of kindness like this is not at all likely to be forgotten.

Chancery Spring Sittings.

A Light Docket.

On Monday the spring sittings of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice opened in the Court House, Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot on the bench.

The bar was represented by Messrs. Geo. Edmison, A. P. Poussette, James Henry, D. W. Dumble, H. B. Weller, Millbrook, G. M. Roger, S. Masson, G. T. Blackstock, Toronto, Charles Moss, Q. C., Toronto, W. H. Biggar, Belleville.

The first case was

BRADBURN vs TAYLOR.—An action brought to recover value of a mare and foal in possession of defendant, which plaintiff claims as his.—Action dismissed with costs.—Geo. Edmison for plaintiff, Poussette & Roger for defendant.

WHYTE vs BEEMER.—An action brought to recover balance of an account claimed by J. Whyte & Co., to be due from H. J. Beemer, contractor.—Action dismissed. C. W. Sawers for plaintiffs, Geo. Edmison for defendant.

HAZLITT vs MIDLAND R. R.—Action to confirm an injunction restraining the Midland Railway from placing bents in the river in repairing the railway bridge above Hazlitt's saw mills

Amenities Between Warriors.

A pleasant case of captainly courtesy took place on Tuesday evening, between Capt. Howard and Capt. Burke, both fighting editors. Capt. Burke, when the call for a company was made, was anxious for service; was willing to drop the captaincy for the nonce, and serve in any position. When Capt. Langford, by the medical examiner's decision, was relieved of the command of the company, Capt. Howard, of Hastings, was, as senior captain, placed in his position. The latter recognizing Capt. Burke's desire for active service, and thinking him younger and better able to stand the fatigue, very gracefully gave way to Capt. Burke, at the same time presenting his sword and a handsome six chamber, silver mounted revolver to Capt. Burke. The latter was deeply affected by his brother officer's generosity, which to the officers of the battalion, has a greater significance than to the public, "How sweet and pleasant, etc."

ANTIQUITY AND ANTHEMS.

Antique Airs—Secular Songs—Old Time Tollestos—Old Heads on Young Shoulders at the Opera House—The Old Folks' Concert a Great Success.

There was a genuine jam at the Old Folks' Concert in the Opera House on Thursday night. The promoters must certainly have been perfectly satisfied with the success that their efforts to present a moral and interesting concert, resulted in. The arrangements were of the most complete character and everything was well carried out. There was a flavour of the mustiness of antiquity in the very air. The entering auditor was taken in charge by an usher dressed in the costume of the past century, and at the hour for beginning the "meane and wimmen syngers" marched in full costume, to the number of 60, through the auditorium and grouped themselves in a picturesque position on the stage. All were dressed in the costumes of at least a century ago, though many in their style of dress suggested an age much earlier. The programme of music was also flavored with the remote past. Mr. F. W. Millar, leader of the George-street Methodist Choir, wielded the baton, and great credit is due to him and his singers that the choral selections rendered were so excellently done. The time and harmony, as well as expression were worthy of all praise. If there were any old-time Methodists present their hearts must have been warmed strangely at having reproduced with such spirit the tunes that stirred their hearts in other days, such as "Sweet is the Day of Sacred Rest," Pope's Ode ("Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame"), "Jerusalem, my Glorious Home," "Greenwich," "Montague," "Lord, What a Thoughtless Wretch was I," "Lord, Dismiss Us," etc. In duet Miss Fanning and Mr. D. D. Galletley appeared to good advantage in "I've Been Dreaming," and in response to an encore gave the old time dual ditty, "Rachael and Reuben," in captivating style. To excellent singing they added sufficient of the histrionic element to honestly earn hearty applause. "Dame Harryesome" and "Dame Broadburne" sang with fine effect an old time ballad, "What Fairy-like Music." The solos were equally successful. Miss Ida Huston sang "Dearest Spot on Earth" in so excellent a manner as to call for an encore, to which she responded with the "Tax on Tea," and the applause which greeted it was a tribute to the singer's personal popularity, for the unpatriotic nature of the selection could not of itself be pleasing to a Canadian audience. Miss Huston also sang with good effect the solo in the anthem, "Strike the Cymbal," and "Dame Studwell Logan" sang with great confidence and spirit the solo in "Cousin Jedidedah." Miss Fanning's rendering of "The Last Rose of Summer" did her great credit, and Miss Galletly (becomingly yclept Aramantha Rosebud) secured a hearty encore to her pleasant presentation of "Grandma's Advice." Miss Johnson's solo to the "Old Folks at Home" was a very creditable performance and worthy of more than passing praise. Mr. Pratt gave in character, and did it well, the ditty, "When George the Third was King." In the "spoke" pieces, Mr. H. Kay Coleman gave an excellent recitation, and Mr. A. Clegg's character and dialect recitation, Tennyson's "Northern Farmer," was in every way well done. Two well-received piano solos were supplied by Mr. Schneider and Mr. Heathfield. The accompaniments were played by an excellent orchestra, composed of Mr. Heathfield, piano, Mr. Schneider, organ, Mr. Cooper, violin, Mr. Butcher, flute, and Mr. Millar (J.), cornet; and they supplied such excellent music that it is perhaps to be regretted that they were not assigned a more prominent place in the programme. It must not be omitted that the realism of the stage scene was added to immensely by two excellently "made up" parties on each side of the proscenium. One consisted of a group of old ladies carding and spinning flax, and the grand-mother placidly knitting. On the other side a group of old-time gossips surrounded a tea table. The entertainment was well conceived, well carried out, and was in all respects a gratifying success.

TELEPHONE SERVICE.

The following letter addressed to the editor of the Mail was published in that journal:

SIR,—In view of the new telephone companies that propose to establish business in Toronto and other places, it would be well to now study the matter and decide as to the reception to be given to them.

To me it seems that to telephone users there are four courses open, viz.:—1. To stick to and sustain the Bell Telephone Company against all comers, and in an unmistakable manner give all other companies to understand that they will not be patronized. 2. To subscribe to the Bell Company and to all new companies that commence business. 3. To desert the Bell Company and patronize one—the best—of the new companies, and thus swamp the Bell Company. 4. To abandon the use of telephones altogether, excepting, perhaps, private lines.

I would emphatically recommend the adoption of the first course, and chiefly that the other courses may be avoided. At the same time, as a user of the Bell Company system since its commencement here, I have to testify that the management has remedied grievances and defects with attention and promptitude. Their charges cannot be proved to be exorbitant, and pressure can be brought to bear upon the company to reduce charges as their subscribers' list is increased. No new company can possibly afford equal facilities to those given by the Bell Company, nor give better service than the Bell Company is giving and can give; therefore, all things being considered, to adopt the third course would be not only a *gross injustice but also a folly. The adop*tion of the second course will involve extra expense to which a limit cannot be set; and yet, if

OLD PATHS.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR CHRISTIANS.

What Orthodoxy Has Accomplished for Mankind.

The Miserable Substitutes Offered by So-Called Advanced Thinkers.

Ask for the Old Path, Where is the Good Way, and Walk Therein.

"Ask for the old paths, where is the good way and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." Jeremiah, vi., 16. Following is the sermon:

A great London fog has settled down upon some of the churches and ministers in the shape of what is called "advanced thought." Without a single exception all such deny the full inspiration of the Scriptures. The book of Genesis is to them an allegory, and much of the Bible as a myth, and they philosophize and reason and guess and evolute until they have landed in a great contention of mud from which through all eternity I fear they will not be able to wade out. The Bible is no more certainly inspired than it has been divinely protected in its present shape. It would be easier now to take "Hamlet" from the writings of Shakespere and substitute instead thereof the modern drama called "Festus," without having the change discovered, than it would have been possible during the last eight hundred years to have made any important change in the Bible. If any part of it had contained the elements of decay or disintegration or deception, it would have gone to pieces long ago. If there had been one loose brick or cracked casement in this castellated truth, the bombardment of the last eight centuries would have discovered and broken through that imperfection. The fact that the Bible, notwithstanding all the infuriate assault on all sides, stands in tact and shows me that it is a miracle, and

A MIRACLE IS OF GOD

Some one might say: "We accept the Bible, but do not believe that until now it is understood." My reply is that if the Bible is a letter from God, our Father, to man, His child, is it not strange that God would write a letter which could not be understood until at least seventy generations had been born and had died? A very bright father that would be who should write a letter of instruction and guidance to his chidren not understandable until a thousand years after the children were dead, buried and forgotten. As the years pass new beauties and excellences will be unrolled from the Bible. But that the Bible is such a failure that all the generations of Christians' scholars for the last eighteen centuries have been utterly deceived in regard to vast reaches of its meaning is such a demaud upon my credulity that, if I found myself at all disposed to yield to it, I would to-morrow morning apply for admission at Bloomingdale Insane Asylum, as being unfit to go alone.

Who make up this precious group of advanced thinkers of our time to whom the Lord has made especial revelation of what He tried to say thousands of years ago but failed to make intelligible? Are they so distinguished for unworldliness and piety and scholarship that they may be expected to have been selected by the Lord to fix up the defective work of Moses and Isaiah and Paul and Christ? On that mountain were these modern exegetes transfigured? Which one of the stars pointed down to their birthplace? Was it the North Star, or Capricorn, or the Great Dipper? When they descended upon our world did Mars blush or Saturn loose one of its rings? This attempt to reconstruct a Divine book and interline it with their own wisdom, and suggest prophetic and apostolic errata excites in me a disgust insufferable. "Advanced thought" which proposes to tell the Lord what he really meant to say and would have said had He been as wise as the NINETEENTH CENTURY CRITICS!

That is what comes of living away back in the eternities instead of in 1885!

"Now," says some one, "do you really think that all of the Bible was inspired?" Yes, either as history or of guidance. Josephus and Prescott and Gibbon recorded many things they did not approve, and so do the Bible writers. Because George Bancroft on his brilliant page may record an Indian massacre, does he sanction it? But may there not have been mistakes made by the copyists as they transferred the inspired words from one manuscrip to another? Yes, no doubt; but such mistakes are like a misspelled word or an ungrammatical sentence in a man's last will and testament, in nowise affecting the meaning of the document. All the mistakes made by Scriptural copyists would no more change the authority of the Bible than if one should spell the word "forty" forty and in another place fourty. The Bible, which is the last will and testament of God to the world, begunthes everything in the right way, although here and there a human hand may have changed the orthography or the grammer, or made an unjustifiable interpolation. Orthodoxy takes the Bible as it is, a common sense book for common-sense people, and not a gymnasium in which to allow critics a soft place to stand on their heads, and swing dumb-bells to develop intellectual muscularity. All those men who pride themselves on "advanced thought" in Scriptural interpretation will

END IN BLANK ATHEISM

if they live long enough.

Now, I favor largest liberty of thought and discussion. I would have as much liberty for heterodoxy as orthodoxy. If I should change my views on this subject I would preach them out and out. Not in this building, for that would be dishonest. This church was built by evangelical Christians, and I would have no more right to use this pulpit and this house for the promulgation of different sentiment from that for which it was built than I would have a right to come into your house and malign your family. When we enter the ministery of any of the greatest denominations of Christians we take vows to preach those doctrines. If we change our views, and we want to preach something different, there is an outside world of many thousand miles in circumferences, and many halls and many academies of music where we could ventilate our sentiments. There are in time of political agitation both Republican headquarters and Democratic headquarters. Suppose I should go to either of these head quarters, pretending to be one of them, but employ my time in electioneering for the opposite party, I should soon find the centrifugal force mightier than the centripetal. And if a man shall stand in any denomination, having taken solemn vows to support that denomination, and then go to preach something else, he has broken his oath, and is an out-and-out perjurer. But largest liberty of sentiments I advocate. The attempt to build a monument to Thomas Paine in New York I would have no more intertered with than the attempt to build a monument to George Washington on Wall street.

PLENTY OF ROOM FOR ALL sentiments and discussions! Liberty for body, mind and soul!

But I want to show you the splendors of orthodoxy. Some have attempted to bemean the word, as though all its disciples were men of flat skulls and no reading, and benighted, and victims of gullibility. The word stands for the greatest splendor outside of Heaven. Look at its achievements. All the missionaries of the Gospel to-day, the world around, are orthodox. They believe in the whole Bible. As soon as one of them gets in doubt about whether there was a Garden of Eden or whether there is to be any such thing as future punishment, he comes right home from Beyrout and Madras and goes into insurance business. All the foreign missionary societies have in official position orthodox men, and are supported by orthodox people. While orthodoxy, beginning with the Sandwich Islands, has conquered vast region of barbarism for civilization, heteordoxy has yet to conquer the first square inch. Blatant for many years in Great Britain and the United States, and strutting the earth with braggadocio, it has not civilized a continent, or a State, or an island, or an acre, or as much land as is covered by the small end of a sharp pin. It has done nothing but talk, talk, talk. Orthodoxy has built ninety-nine out of every hundred Protestant Churches in America. I can not now think of a single widely influential church that was not built by people who believed in the entire Bible. The pulpit may now declare some other goepel, but it is a heterdox gun on an orthodox carriage. The foundation stone of nearly all the churches was laid by men who believed in the Bible from lid to lid, and if I can not take the book in its entirety,

I WILL TAKE NONE OF IT.

Just as if I should receive a letter pretending to come from a valuable friend, and I should find that part of it was his and part some one else's, and it was an uncertain mixture and a literary mongrellism, I would throw the garbled sheet into my waste basket, and say to my friend: "The next time you write me a letter, put it in an envelope all by itself." Behold the splendors of Orthodoxy in its stupendous effort by thousands of hands and thousands of hearts and thousands of pulpits and thousands of churches and thousands of missionary organizations to save the world!

Look at the splendors of characters which orthodoxy builds! Who had the mightiest human intellect the world ever saw? Paul. Little in physical stature, but head and shoulders above all the intellectual giants of the ages. Orthodox from scalp to heel! Who was the mightiest poet the world has ever seen? John Milton, who saw more without eyes than anybody ever saw with eyes. Orthodox from scalp to heel! Who was the greatest reformer the world ever saw? Martin Luther, so acknowledged by infidel and atheist, as well as the Christian. Orthodox from scalp to heel! In Music Hall, Boston, the talented Theodore Parker stood for many years battling orthodoxy, and giving it, as many supposed, its death-blow. On the same street, and not far from being opposite, stood Park-street Congregational Church, commonly called by its enemies "hell-fire-corner.' Theodore Parker died and his church died with him. It was attempted to keep up the organization, but, if still in existence, it is so small that it is hardly visible to the naked eye. But Park-street Church, or "hell-fire-corner," stands still, its pulpit thundering the magnificent truths of orthodoxy just as though Theodore Parker had never lived. You have noticed that the most of those who finish their ministry in a public hall, and when they are done their audiences are disbanded. All that Boston, or Brooklyn, or New York or the earth ever received that is worth having came through the wide aqueduct of orthodoxy, from the throne of God.

Behold the certitudes of orthodoxy! Where do you come from believer in the Bible? Answer: "I was descended from the perfect parentage of Paradise, into whose nostrils Jehovah breathed the breath of life. I am a son of God." Half-and-half Bible man, where do you come from? Answer: "It is all uncertain. In my ancestral line there was an ape-swinging still further back; there was a pollywog, and still further back, there was a tadpole, and it took millions of years for me to be evoluted." Half-and-half Bible man, where are you going when you leave this world? "Well, that is all uncertain. I suppose I shall pass into the great To Be, and through the great Somewhere, and gradually on to the great Anywhere, arriving finally in the great Nowhere." I thought that was where you probably would fetch up.

Behold the splendors of orthodoxy in its announcement of two destinies. A palace with gates on all sides through which all may enter and live on eternal luxuries just for the knocking and asking. A palace grander than if all the Alhambras and the St. Mark's and the Windsor palaces and Versailles and Winter Gardens and all Imperial abodes of the earth had been heaved up into one architectural splendor. At the other end of the universe a penitentiary where men who prefer their sins may have them forever. Why, if you and I have our choice of Christ and the palace, should they be denied the choice of sin and eternal gradation? Palace and penitentiary! The first worth nothing unless you have the second! Better place would Brooklyn and New York be to live in with Raymond-street Jail and the Tombs and the Sing Sing and all the police stations and smallpox hospitals let loose upon us than heaven if there were no hell. Palace and penitentiary, and everyone a free choice! If a man fills a great bowl with sin and he is thirsty for it, and his whole being craves it, and he has put the bowl to his lip and with both hands he is pressing the bowl tight between his teeth and the draught has begun to pour its sweetness down his throat, why should I from him and jerk him up toward the heavenly palace, and he, though struggling to stay out, should be compelled to go in and sing psalms forever? No! So completely free has God made you and me that we need not go to heaven unless we prefer it; no more free to soar than free to sink. The most of the heterdox of this day set forth the theory that without respect to faith or character we are all to get out at the shining place. There they are in glory—Tom Paine and George Whitfield, Nero and Richard Baxter, Charles Guiteau and James A. Garfield, John Wilkes Booth and Abraham Lincoln, the innocent men and women and children who were massacred and their murderers. If there be only one final destiny, then they, of course, are all together. Against that great caldron of piety and blasphemy, philantrophy and assassination, self-sacrifice and beastliness. I lift the two destanies of the Bible, forever and forever and forever apart.

Behold also the fact that all the triumphant death-beds of the ages were those who were styled orthodox Christians. I challenge the world to show me an exception, and I will allow you to range all Christendom to find that exception. Those who have rejected the Bible, or any part of it, have either gone out of the world in darkness or silence portentous. Gather up all the biographies since the art of printing was invented and show me which last hours had visions of glory and shouts of triumph. Here I make a grand avenue. On one side I put the death-beds of Christians, on the other the death-beds of those who rejected all or part of the Scriptures. Take my arm and let us go through that divided avenue. Hark to the death-beds on the right hand side: "Victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!" "Glory! glory!" "Free grace!" "Hallelujah!" "The chariots are coming!" "I am sweeping through the gates, washed in the blood of the Lamb!" "I mount; I fly!" "Wings! wing!" "They have come for me!" "Meet me in heaven; all is well!" Alfred Cookman's death-bed, John Wesley's death-bed, Richard Cecil's death-bed, Commodore Foote's death-bed, Daniel Webster's death-bed! Your father's death-bed. Your mother's death-bed. Your sister's death-bed. Your child's death-bed. Ten thousand death-beds, all radiant, all songful, all triumphant! Turn round now and march back on that dividing avenue, and see the death-beds of those who rejected part of the Bible or all of it. Listen and look! Not one smile of hope, not one song of joy, not one hand lifted as if to take a scepter, not one face supernaturally illumined! Silence all along the line, or sadness unbroken, or despair overwhelming. Half-and-half Bible believers never die well. They beckon for no angels. They hear the coming of no celestial escort. They go out of this world while the list of those who have believed an go entire Bible, and been almost impatient to and meet their God, is so long a list it seems interminable. Oh, is not that style of religion a splendor which makes what otherwise would be the most dreadful hour of life, namely, the last hour, positively Paradisaical.

BECAUSE THEY ARE PUSHED OUT,

Young men and old men and middle-aged men, prepare to take sides in this issue between orthodoxy and heterodoxy. Follow this crusade against any part of the Bible, and first you will give up Genesis, which is just as true as Matthew, and after a while you will give up all the historical portions, and further on you will give up the miracles, and gradually it will be convenient for you to give up the ten commandments, and you will some day wake up to find yourself in the midst of a treeless, rockless, fountainless desert of skepticism swept by an everlasting sirocco. Take sides for an entire Bible, just as God has kept it together these centuries. Laughed at, remember that if you save your soul and win heaven you can afford to be laughed at. Don't jump overboard from the staunch Great Eastern of old-fashioned orthodoxy, till you see something stronger to take you up than the fantastic yawl which has painted on he sides "Advanced thought," but leaks at the prow and leaks at the stern, and has nothing stronger than a quill pen for an oar and dips from side to side until it is uncertain whether her passengers will land on the breakers of despair or the sinking sands of infidelity and atheism.

With all the advancement of the world I am in full sympathy. But the world will never advance one inch beyond the old Bible. God knew just as much when He dictated that Bible as He knows now, and was just as competent to reveal all He had to say to the insured men of the past as to the prophets and apostles in this last quarter of the nineteenth century. As to myself, I will stick to the old path. Although and fond of new things rather than old, I have confidently hitherto, for entire fabrics now, believed I ate what I digested instantly knew truth into When they begin to chop up the foundations with the meat-axe of human guesswork, and when I see them floundering about in the deep waters, ever struggling, now under, now on top, now calling on geology, now on astronomy, now on metaphysics, now on scholarships, now calling on the church and now on the world to help them, I grasp for myself and ring the thick warm folds of the old religion, old as God; the robe that has kept so many warm throughout all the cold of this earthly pilgrimage and the chill of death, rather than the thin mountain gauze offered by those wiseacres who believe the Bible in spots.

On July 27, 1814, aged seventy-two years, died Isabella Graham. She had been the most useful woman of her day among the sick and poor, at the head of orphan asylums and Magdalen societies, an angel of mercy in hospitals and reformatories; great head, great heart, great social position. Dr. John Mason, the most powerful preacher of his day, said at her obsequies, that intellectually and spiritually she was the most wonderfully endowed woman he had ever met. She was the impersonation of the most orthodox orthodoxy. Her last word was "Peace!" An extract from her last will and testament I make the sublime peroration of this sermon, showing how a woman who believed in an entire Bible and serving God in all styles of usefulness can make final exit:

"My children and my grandchildren I leave to my covenant God; the God who hath fed me all my life with the bread that perisheth and the bread that never perisheth; who has been a father to my fatherless children and a husband to their widowed mother thus far. And now, receiving my Redeemer's testimony, I set to my seal that God is true; and believing the record in John's epistle, that God hath given to me eternal life, and this life is in His Son, who, through the eternal spirit, offered Himself without spot unto God, and being consecrated a priest forever, hath, with His own blood, entered into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for me! I also believe that He will perfect what concerns me, support and carry me safely through death and present me to His Father, complete in His own righteousness, without spot or wrinkle. Into the hands of this redeeming God—Father, Son and Holy Ghost—I commit my redeemed spirit."

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost; as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end!

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

Consumption Cured.

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the ... had caught a severe ... during the voyage. ... the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failing to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the ... forms of blood disease.

We beg Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

SATURDAY, MARCH 21st.

In the House to-day, Hon. Mr. Mowat moved the second reading of the bill for the amendment of the law relating to the administration and devolution of the estates of deceased persons. He stated that this bill proposed to remove the difference between real and personal estates in regard to devolution of such estates. It passed a second reading.

Hon Mr. Mowat moved the second reading of the bill to give the Inspector of Asylums power to take, or recover, possession of a lease or mortgage, to sell and convey any property of any insane person before he was removed to the asylum. No such lease, mortgage, sale, or conveyance to take place without the concurrence of the Attorney-General. The bill passed a second reading.

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd.

The Legislature to-day was delayed in beginning its deliberations by the fact that the Opposition had not concluded their caucus when the clock designated the hour of 3 o'clock. Considerable merriment was evinced as the truant members wended their melancholy way into the Chamber amidst the applause of the government members.

When the proceedings commenced, Hon. Mr. Ross' (Huron) bill for the protection of sheep was referred back to the Committee. Mr. Fraser's bill relating to new parliament buildings was read a third time. Mr. Hardy's bill to correct errors in the consolidated juror's act, 1883, was read a third time.

The House then went into Committee on bill respecting Education Department. The Attorney-General's bill respecting saw mills on the Ottawa river evoked considerable discussion, and was read the second time. Mr. Ross' (Huron) bill to make further provision re public health was considered in detail, as was the Attorney-General's bill for further improving the administration of law.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24.

A large amount of business was disposed of during the afternoon session of the House. A discussion arose on the subject of sending copies of the Ontario Gazette to the Mechanics' Institutes of the Province, which was objected to by the Government on the ground of economy.

Several bills were read the third time.

The Redistribution Bill having been referred back to Committee of the whole, Hon. A. S. Hardy moved several changes, the most important of which is the proposition to take the township of Logan from North Perth and add it to South Perth. The population now stands—South Perth, 20,778; North Perth, 32,915. The township of Logan has a population of 3,355. This would make the ridings South Perth, 24,133; North Perth, 29,560.

The amendment was carried and the Bill reported.

In the evening session Mr. Hardy moved the second reading of the bill concerning Mr. Dowling, member for South Renfrew. He briefly outlined the principles of the bill and laid it before the House.

Mr. Mowat claimed that the bill was conceived in the best interests of Dr. Dowling's constituents, and was no deviation from the correct and natural course that ought to be taken.

The bill was then read the second time.

Mr. Fraser moved the second reading of his bill extending the franchise. He outlined the changes and improvements of the new franchise, comparing it with the one now in operation. The franchise is extended (1), to the owner of property worth $200 in cities and $100 in villages; (2), to parties assessed for not less than $300 income (income franchise); (3), to parties earning $300 per year (wage franchise); all electors to be over 21 years of age. He claimed the originality of the bill, and stated that no action of the Opposition stimulated its introduction.

Mr. Meredith moved an amendment to the effect that the franchise should be extended to every male citizen over 21 years of age.

Mr. Fraser replied, pointing out the difficulties apparent in working the amendment.

A division was taken on the amendment resulting: yeas 31, nays 42. The second reading was passed.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25th.

After routine this morning Mr. Mowat introduced his bill for the preservation of the scenery around Niagara Falls. He announced himself as heartily in favor of the proposal to dedicate the land in the vicinity as an international park. He did not believe the Railway Bill, as amended, would interfere with this, but the Bill he introduced would make it certain that nothing in the railway company's charter would be permitted to interfere with the accomplishment of the park design.

Mr. Meredith warmly approved of the Bill. Touching on the railway question he said that he fully acquitted the gentleman in the company who were members of the House of interested motives.

The Bill then passed its second reading.

The House was going into Committee of Supply when Creighton, the financial Moses of the Opposition wayfarers, rose to make his long-promised attack on the Government's method of spending Colonization Road monies. The applause which greeted him was weak, but not half as watery as the speech that followed. All that he could find to complain about was that the Government did not buy their supplies on the ground, that in one or two cases the names of the members of one family figured on the pay sheets. These general rumors, backed by no data, led him to move a vote of censure on the Government's method of expending these monies.

Hon. T. B. Pardee followed, and left the Opposition without even the fragile support of their general rumors. He defied Mr. Creighton to instance one well defined case of abuse in the administration of the department. While the Government retained power they would continue large expenditures for colonization roads, as these outlays brought in the very best returns to the Provinces. For the last fourteen years over 2,000 miles of new road had been built, and 200 bridges. This work had resulted in bringing 80,000 people in the new district, and this was proof that the expenditure had been most remunerative.

Mr. Carnegie also spoke in support of the amendment, and hurled charges of various nature and dimensions against the Provincial Treasurer for covering up illegal payments in public accounts and refusing to bring down returns and vouchers asked for, and of mutilating reports before they were brought down in the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr. Hardy administered a severe castigation to the honorable member for West Peterborough for attacking defenceless men. He advised him to clear his skirts of the corruption and political filth which hung around them from the contiguity in which he travelled to those parties who had visited Muskoka and other constituencies distributing money and whiskey for the purpose of debauching electors.

The House divided upon the amendment, which was lost by 42 nays to 30 yeas, and the House went into Committee of Supply, and passed the remainder of the estimates.

Upon the House resuming, the resolutions of supply were concurred in. Several bills received a second reading, and the House adjourned.

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th.

At this morning's session of the Legislature the speech of the Premier and Electoral Commissioner in the ... case was adopted after most protests from Mr. Meredith and his lieutenants.

Before the High School Amendment Bill was read a third time in the House Mr. Meredith spoke briefly. He raked up the old argument that changes in the allotment of grants to High Schools in the Province should be made only with the assent of the House.

Hon. G. W. Ross explained that the grants were apportioned according to a scale fixed by the Department. The questions affecting the distribution were the number of teachers employed, the attendance and efficiency of the schools aided. This reduced the matter to a simple arithmetical calculation of the amount to which each school was entitled. If the Minister of Education could not be trusted with the compilation of such figures he did not see any special use for responsible government.

The discussion was continued by Messrs. Creighton, Hardy, Fraser and Mowat.

The House, by 41 to 28, negatived Mr. Meredith's amendment, Mr. Less (Conservative) of Lanark, voting with the Government.

The Franchise Reform Bill was considered in Committe. Amid prolonged Ministerial applause Hon. Mr. Fraser announced the reduction of the annual income, entitling a wage earner to vote, from $300 to $250. The Bill was reported and the House took recess.

The afternoon session was taken up in passing private bills, second and third readings.

In the evening, however, the greatest excitement prevailed, the occasion being a number of amendments, which practically amounted to want of confidence.

Mr. Waters moved for the discharge of order for third reading of bill to give widows and unmarried women the right to vote. The treasurer moved the house into Committee of Supply.

Mr. Merrick moved in amendment that the resolution appropriating $120,550 for legislation be referred back to committee with instructions to reduce it by $5,000. Mr. Fraser and Mr. Ross (Huron), opposed the amendment, pointing out that the Opposition were responsible for the increase in expenditure on account of their incessant calling for unnecessary returns. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 38 to 28.

Mr. Brodie then moved in amendment that the appropriation for immigration be reduced by $10,000. Mr. Awrey moved an amendment that the government should promote the immigration of tenant farmers, which was carried on a division.

Mr. Creighton then moved that while the House concurs in the resolution appropriating $22,802 to refund account, it regrets that the Lieutenant-Governor had not been advised to recommend payment to municipalities. Mr. Fraser moved an amendment to the effect that the House expresses its confidence that at the earliest practical moment the government will pay to municipalities all moneys due. This was carried—yeas, 40; nays, 32.

Mr. Wood moved that this house regrets the large over-expenditure in 1884, and considers $90,000 is ample to cover all unforeseen and unprovided expenditure. Mr. Badgerow moved in amendment that the House expresses its satisfaction that the government has endeavored to keep the annual expenditure within the limits consistent with the efficient administration of the public service, which was carried by 43 to 32.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

(Correspondence of THE EXAMINER.)

MONDAY, MARCH 23rd.

Mr. Blake asked whether it was true that the halfbreeds under Riel had risen in rebellion at Prince Albert, had imprisoned officials, that the Government knew of this action, that assistance had been asked by the settlers, and that the Winnipeg Battery had been ordered out.

Sir John Macdonald said it was true the halfbreeds had cut the wires between Qu'Appelle and the South Saskatchewan river and had imprisoned the telegraph operators. This action was said to be because of a letter stating that Riel was not a British subject. The Government knew nothing of such a letter. The Winnipeg Field Battery had not been ordered out. Capt. Crozier was close by at Carleton with a hundred men of the Mounted Police, and ninety men had been ordered there and would reach Carlton on Tuesday night or Wednesday morning. The Government thought this number would be sufficient to quell any disturbance.

Replying to Mr. Sharpe, Sir Leonard Tilley said it was the intention of the Government to increase the duty on rice.

Replying to Mr. Blake, the Premier said that a communication which had been received from the Canadian Pacific Railway on Thursday last relating to a proposed change of the existing arrangements, had been considered on Saturday, but not accepted. The papers would not be brought down, as another proposition might be made.

Sir Richard Cartwright moved for the papers of money paid to Judge Clarke for extra services during the past five years. He thought the practice of employing judges in arbitration and other services was a pernicious one.

Sir John Macdonald said there was a junior judge in Northumberland, so that the legal business of the county did not suffer.

Mr. Blake said the other two judges were wanted in that county, in which case Judge Clarke should not be taken from his regular duties, or else they were not wanted and the Government should not have recently appointed a junior judge.

The debate was adjourned on the motion of Sir John.

The House adjourned at 10.30.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24th.

Sir Hector Langevin, after the formal opening proceedings of the House this afternoon, presented the report of the Committee on Railways and Canals.

Mr. Jamieson inquired of the Government whether a day would be set for the second reading of the Bill introduced by him at the instigation of the Dominion Alliance, to make the Scott Act more effective.

Sir John said he had no objection, and first named to-morrow, which caused great laughter, as it was known that to-morrow the House would not meet, it being a Catholic holiday. Sir John then said the Bill could be considered a week from to-morrow.

Mr. Blake said that the measure was a very important one, and a special arrangement should be made for its consideration. The Factory Bill was the first on the list of public Bills and it might first be taken up, and then the Bill to amend the Canada Temperance Act be proceeded with. In reply to demands made by several members that the other Bills which aimed to relax the Scott Act should should also be placed at the head of the order paper, Mr. Blake said he could see no objection to allowing them to be also considered as soon as possible.

Mr. Fisher pointed out that the Bill had been delayed by the Government, which had held back for two weeks, its answer to the request of the deputation to introduce the measure, and that it was only fair that its prospect for consideration should not be injured owing to the Government's inaction.

Wednesday, 25th, being a holiday the House adjourned till Thursday.

THURSDAY, MARCH 26th.

Mr. Mulock introduced a Bill to amend the consolidated Railway Act. It provides that labor, stores and supplies to the road shall form a first charge on the earnings of the road, and that rates of freight shall be approved by the Governor in Council before going into effect.

After some informal discussion respecting the intention of the Government to increase the duty on flour, the present condition of affairs in the Northwest and the removal of the C.P.R., Mr. Blake resumed the position of opposition.

After recess, Mr. Blake rose to call attention to the outbreak in the Northwest. He read a number of extracts from papers as to the state of affairs there. He thought the calling out of the militia indicated grave trouble, and this step should have been immediately communicated to the House. The difficulties which caused trouble had been in existence for years, and the Government should have taken steps long since to remedy these grievances. There was no remedy. The cause of disaffection should have been removed, the Government's inaction called for the condemnation of Parliament. Allowing matters to continue until this grave action was necessary was likely to cause serious damage to the prospects of the Northwest. If Riel was now asking for money, it was only because of the lesson learned from his previous experience of Sir John, who had on a previous occasion given him $1,000 to leave the country. Why was not a commission issued last summer? Why was it left until the outbreak had occurred before this peaceful manner of solving the difficulty was put in force? He finished by moving that in the opinion of the House it was the duty of the Government to lay before it all the information it possessed on this subject forthwith.

The motion was voted down by a majority of 65.

HANLAN'S VICTORY.

Particulars of the Hanlan-Clifford boat race at Sydney, New South Wales, Feb. 7th, for $5,000, state that Clifford was the first to grip the water, rowing 34 to the minute, Hanlan 36. Clifford's work at the start attracted all the attention, and seemed to promise something prodigious, but Hanlan gradually drew up. Clifford made a splendid race for half a mile, Hanlan keeping near enough to watch him without trouble. Hanlan then dropped his stroke to 33, and the old smile indicative of victory settled on his face. After gauging the remaining distance Hanlan drew quickly ahead. Clifford spurted, but Hanlan put another length between them. As they passed Sydney Rowing Club Hanlan was nine lengths ahead. He then slackened and finished a winner by 7 lengths. Hanlan was loudly cheered.

Rickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup is a combination of several medicinal herbs which exert a most wonderful influence in curing pulmonary consumption and all other diseases of the lungs, chest and throat. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, and gives ease even to the greatest sufferer. Coughs, colds, shortness of breath, and affections of the chest, attended with weakness of the digestive organs, or with general debility, seem to vanish under its use. No other remedy acts so readily in allaying inflammation or breaking up a severe cold, even the most obstinate cough is overcome by its penetrating and healing properties. When children are affected with colds coughs, inflammation of the lungs, croup, quinsey, and sore throat, this Syrup is of vast importance. The number of deaths among children from these diseases is truly alarming. It is so palatable that a child will not refuse it, and is put at such a price that will not exclude the poor from its benefits.

ZENANA MISSION MOVEMENT.

At a missionary meeting in Edinburgh a few days ago the Rev. John Fordyce, of Simla, India, gave a most encouraging account of the zenana in that country. The experiment was first made by two or three families in Calcutta some thirty years ago. At the commencement it was felt to be a great innovation, and there was much prejudice against it. Gradually, however, it recommended itself, and now in Calcutta alone there were not fewer than two thousand zenanas open to the missionaries and the example set by Calcutta was being imitated all over India.

PETERBOROUGH, APRIL 2, 1885.

The Northwest Outbreak.

In our last issue we informed our readers of a serious outbreak in the Northwest, but it was not expected that it would assume the alarming proportions it has now done. Despatches published elsewhere go to show that a terrible state of actual hostilities exists in the Northwest. The blood of Canadians has been spilt by Canadians, who have wickedly revolted against lawful authority. The first duty is to crush the insurgents by force of arms. This fact the country is thoroughly alive to, and on every side are eager preparations for the fray. There must be no temporizing, there must be no delay. No expense must be spared. If the whole resources of the country in men and money are required we are sure, from the gallant spirit already shown, that they will be willingly placed at the disposal of the authorities. The soldiers, our fellow citizens, who take their lives in their hands to preserve law and order in the Dominion, must be supplied with the best arms and equipments that money can buy. While the public are willing to give the government full power they will hold them, as Hon. Mr. Blake said in the House on Monday, "personally and politically responsible if, at whatever expense it may cause, the forces that go up to the Northwest are not supplied with the very best arms it is possible to procure." At the best there will be hard work, and many a gallant volunteer, who goes up in health and hope, will never return alive. In many a home there will be vacant places, some till the "war" is over, and some forever. Those left at home to weep will naturally inquire who is to blame for the present trouble. Primarily, of course, Louis Riel is responsible, as he was fifteen years ago. But his present wickedness is due to the permission of one man, and that man is Sir John Macdonald. When Riel raised a rebellion in 1870 and committed most atrocious murder, Sir John not only spared his evil life, but actually paid him a large sum of the people's money to permit him to escape from justice. Documents under Sir John's own hand now in the archives of Parliament prove this beyond a doubt. If Riel had at that time, as he richly deserved, been hanged or otherwise effectually disposed of, he would not have been in the position he is to-day, the head of an insurrection in which Canadian blood is reddening the vernal snows of the Northwest. Besides the fatal blunder made at that time, the Ottawa Government has since been criminally negligent. Six or eight months ago the Government was aware that Riel was in the Saskatchewan district stirring up trouble, yet not the most simple effective caution was taken to ward off the strife. The Government's indifference to the grievances of the halfbreeds—their refusal to even inquire into these grievances, not to speak of redressing them if they existed, which they did in the minds of these simple men, made Riel's task an easy one, and, now, the halfbreeds, and with them the Indians, are in arms and shedding the blood of Canadians. A very little concession or a very little prudence would have prevented what seems to be destined to be a long and arduous fight. Now, possibly, millions of money will be spent, scores of lives lost, the settlement of the Northwest retarded for years, simply because the Government has failed to use the most ordinary precautions to prevent a horde of Northwest half-breeds from taking the law into their own hands. But the country must face the position and not flinch one iota in putting an end to the insurrection.

Nothing could afford a more vivid evidence of the class of men by whom the frontiers of our North-West are peopled, and of the intense feelings which the rebellion there must arouse throughout Canada, than the list of the killed and wounded in the recent treacherous slaughter. There were struck down out of that small company a son of Sir Charles Napier, a name great in English history; a son Judge Elliott, and nephew of the Honorable Edward Blake; a nephew of the Honorable Joseph Howe, a nephew of Sir Francis Hincks, all names great in Canadian history. Many of these men had been officers in various services, and had been leaders in their own communities before they went forth to conquer a new country. A country, says the Montreal Witness, whose first settlers are of such a class may well look forward to a great future.

Send for Goodwin.

When the recent deputation went to Ottawa and had an interview with the acting Minister of Railways and Canals, that official, after hearing its representations with respect to pushing on and completing the works at Burleigh, assured those gentlemen that he would "send for Goodwin" and find out why the work was suspended, and would see that the matter was at once attended to. Several weeks have now elapsed and Goodwin has not been sent for; the Minister has broken faith with the deputation and the people of this district. This shows that neither the Minister in charge of the Department of Railways and Canals nor the Government takes the least interest in the work in question. We should like to inquire why this delay is taking place? Now is the time to come to terms with the contractor and arrange for his resumption of the contract, so that active operations can be begun again on the opening of spring. In calling the Minister's attention to his promise made to the deputation in reference to the prosecution of the work, we may express the wish (we can hardly say hope) that he will not need again to be reminded of his promise, which is simply a contribution to the completion of an enterprise to which the Government is fairly and squarely pledged. The time for temporizing and shirking is past; the hour for action has come.

Dominion Finances.

The bungling management by Sir Leonard Tilley of the Dominion finances conjoined with the unthinking extravagance of the government in every department, is placing our country, in money matters, in a most serious position. Our finances are in a by no means, good shape. Sir Leonard, in his capacity of Finance Minister, will soon enter the money market as a borrower. He will need between the present time and July 1st, the sum of twenty-five millions to retire a loan for that amount, which matures on the above date in England. He has already, within the past few months, borrowed thirteen millions of dollars from Canadian and British banks, which will have to be paid immediately. Nor is this all; he will require eleven millions to pay the insatiable C. P. R., on account of the "loan" made last session, and to meet other outstanding liabilities. Add to this the probability that there will be deficit of one and a half million at the end of the fiscal year, June 30th next, which will also have to be provided for, and the outlook is not cheering. Sir Leonard's incompetency in financial matters is causing him no end of trouble. For some days past he has been attempting to negotiate a four per cent. loan of five million dollars, and it is stated with a certain success. He has been feeling the pulse of the New York money market with a view of placing debentures of the Dominion on it, but has received little encouragement. The loans contemplated in the above recital will make it necessary for Sir Leonard Tilley to appear on the money market seeking for loans to the amount of some fifty million dollars. This is not only an alarmingly serious condition of affairs, but one absolutely humiliating, and one that will tend to depreciate the credit and good name of Canada. It will be a humiliating reflection to have outsiders note that a young and vigorous country like Canada, with unlimited resources, is, through the reckless extravagance and incompetence of its rulers, forced to be rushing about in every quarter borrowing funds to keep the machinery going. One would think that with taxes put up to the highest notch, with the people's pockets bled to to their full capacity, the public service could with the most ordinary economy and the most ordinary good management, be carried on without having to organize borrowing expeditions to the money markets every few months. So long as the people of Canada consent to have themselves tricked into reposing confidence in an administration which abuses that confidence, in so reckless and ruinous a manner as does the present Tory administration at Ottawa, so long will the country drift swiftly on towards the rocks of national financial disaster.

Loyal, but Not Silent.

The promptitude with which the Canadians have offered their services to assist in crushing the rebellion in the Northwest shows how deeply the Canadian national spirit and patriotism has become developed. At such a time it is pleasant to note that all classes vie with each other in obtaining the coveted places in the different corps already formed or in course of formation. At such a crisis in our affairs it is extremely bad taste, not to speak of morality, for any party organ to attempt, as one contemporary has done, to impute improper motives to any journal of any party. A local contemporary untruthfully and mischievously asserts that attempts "have been made in certain quarters to make political capital out of these unfortunate occurrences." Now, we have yet failed to notice in any single journal, or in the utterances of any public man, the slightest foundation for any such slanderous aspersion. Since the rebellion in the Northwest has actually broken out there is only one sentiment expressed on all sides, and that is, that the rising must be crushed as speedily as possible. The patriotic spirit of the people is shown in the universal demand of all classes that no expense be spared to vindicate the outrage upon constituted authority. The Government will receive every assistance in its attempts to suppress the rising and to punish the ringleaders. At the same time it is not amiss to consider the causes that led up to the revolt and to condemn the course of action that permitted a state of things that if remedied in time, as could easily have been done, would have rendered the revolt impossible. If, through the carelessness and indifference of one person, his neighbor's house is set on fire, other neighbors will heartily unite their efforts to extinguish the flames. The occasion does not forbid other neighbors whose services may not be needed from discussing the circumstances and condemning the action of the party whose careless indifference directly contributed to the outbreak of the flames. The Dominion Government were aware for months that the fires of insurrection were smouldering among the Halfbreeds of the Nor'-West, yet they took not the first step to conciliate the malcontents by redressing their grievances and thus averting the terrible consequences of a civil war. It will not lessen the evil consequences because the blame can be definitely and pointedly fixed. The people of Canada will not the less heartily and willingly give all possible help in the emergency, because the Government has blundered. The situation must and will be boldly and unflinchingly faced.

Editorial Notes.

The Ottawa Free Press of Saturday appeared in mourning in memory of the Canadian citizens murdered by the Nor'west insurrectionists. It is supremely sad that Government indifference should lead to so much bloodshed, and bring sorrow and destitution to so many homes.

The question arises whether the retention of the present party in power at Ottawa, is so great a boon to the country as to justify their pursuit of a policy to strengthen their hold on office at the expense of the lives of scores of Canadians, and the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of money.

The Riel rebellion turns out to be a real rebellion—Louis Riel is a revengeful creature. He has reason to feel that he has been very unjustly dealt with. He knows he should have been hanged fifteen years ago. He has not received justice, and now he seeks to have his revenge.

The way the Ottawa government waste the public money by extravagant expenditure may be shown by a comparison of the cost of civil government in 1877-78 and 1884-85. The expenditure under this head is so much greater now than seven years ago, that the increase is $328,928. And in every other one of the thirteen departments, there is a proportionate increase.

The country has been surfeited with Tory songs of praise of Sir John's statesmanship. Let us see what his great statesmanship has led to—rebellion (red with loyal blood) in the Northwest in 1870 and 1885. The country taxed to death to build the C. P. R., and yet the road is not built when most wanted. Nova Scotia discussing withdrawal from the confederation. These are some of the fruits of Sir John's statesmanship—more fitly called the results of his scheming to keep in power.

The second session of the Fifth Parliament of Ontario was prorogued by the Lieutenant-Governor on Monday with the usual ceremonies. The Royal Assent was given to one hundred of the Bills passed during the session and withheld from one entitled an Act to correct certain clerical errors in the Consolidated Jurors' Act, the purpose of this Bill having been provided for by the Act for further improving the administration of the law. The Lieutenant-Governor also delivered the usual speech, reviewing and approving the work of the session.

All the Tory organs have not gone crazy on the question of the Northwest troubles. The Montreal Herald, a pronounced Tory organ supporting the Government, which is controlled by Hon. Peter Mitchell, an ex-colleague of Sir John Macdonald, refuses to believe that the Dominion Government can be held guiltless. It soundly berates the Dominion authorities for their dilatoriness in dealing with the grievances of the half-breeds, and points out "that there has been not only a denial of justice, but some very high-handed proceedings on the part of Dominion officials. In fact, the Government appears to have taken special pains to prepare the minds of these people to receive favorably Reil's advice."

It takes over a week to move troops from Ontario to the scene of the insurrection in the Northwest. If the government had insisted on the Canadian Pcific Railway company devoting its energies and means to building the main line instead of buying up other lines to strengthen their monopoly, the Lake Superior section would have been finished throughout, and troops could have reached the scene of insurrection several days sooner. And if the Government had not protected the company's monopoly in the matter of branch lines in the Northwest, at this moment the Saskatchewan district might have had a railway connecting with the main line, and troops could be run by rail right to the battle ground. Blunders of themselves are bad enough, but blunders that lead to bloodshed are criminal.

"A word," says the Globe in its Assembly notes, "about Mr. Carnegie." He has been burrowing into the public accounts ever since the first meeting of the Committee. He has failed to discover a single impropriety. He has not found evidence to support a single charge. His friends have refused to help him. They are known to be generally out of sympathy with his petty snarlings. Mr. Meredith has not asked a single question in the Public Accounts Committee this session. He has not attended except on one or two occasions. Mr. Carnegie has been frequently the only Tory member of the Committee present. Occasionally, however, Mr. Merrick, Mr. Creighton, or Mr. Mulholland accompany him. They almost seem to have been detailed for this duty, and do not appear to do it too unwillingly. The fact is the Tory members shun the Public Accounts Committee from their leader down, and prefer, seemingly, to insinuate charges rather than investigate their grounds of suspicion through the proper channels.

LOCAL CHEESE INDUSTRY.

Preparing for the Coming Season.

The representatives of the cheese industry of the county of Peterborough held their first meeting in the Morgan House, Peterborough, on the 18th March. The following factories were represented:—Keene, Warminster, Lakefield, Otonabee' Union, South Dummer, Cherry Grove, South Douro, Lily Lake, Lakehurst and Normanhurst. The President, Mr. James Drummond, occupied the chair, and the Secretary, Mr. Warren Taylor, was in his proper place. In his opening remarks the chairman gave an account of a visit, made in the interests of the dairymen of this section, to the county of Oxford, the cradle of the industry in this Province, which was interesting to all present. The Secretary gave his financial report, which was adopted, after which he gave an account of his trip to Morrisburg to attend the Eastern Dairymen's Association, which contained much that was instructive. The rules and regulations for the guidance of the Cheese Board for the ensuing season were remodeled, after which the following officers were elected for the ensuing season: Mr. James Drummond, re-elected President; Mr. G. J. Galvin, Vice-President; Mr. Stewart, Treasurer; and Mr. W. Taylor, re-elected Secretary. The meeting adjourned to meet again on the 28th instant.—Com.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

March is departing in peace.

Last Wednesday evening, 25th ult., Mr. Jas. Lang, jr., and Miss Annie McFarlane, both of this township, were united in marriage by the Rev. Francis Andrews, at the house of the bride's father, Mr. Wm. McFarlane, Keene. A large company were present, both old and young, and the bride received many valuable and useful presents. The dancing was kept up till morning.

We understand that Donald McFarlane, Esq., of Mather's Corners, also took to himself a wife on the same day, (25th March), all the way from the county of Elgin,—Miss Emma Taylor, of Fingal. Long life, good health, and prosperity attend them all, and may the 25th be ever a thanksgiving day to them.

The patriotic fever is upon us. Our quota of volunteers has gone to swell the list of brave fellows of the 57th who are "Ready, aye ready!" We hope to see them all return with honor,

Last Friday evening Miss Bowes addressed a large and most attentive audience on the Scott Act question. The Presbyterian church was crowded, and most of the audience were seated by seven o'clock, but the lady did not commence her lecture till eight owing to the train on which she came being somewhat behind time. The period intervening was filled up by Dr. Massie, who explained his views, in a measure, regarding the Scott Act, and entertained the audience until the lady arrived, when Rev. Mr. Tozeland formally opened the meeting with the hymn "Rescue the perishing," followed by prayer, and Dr. Massie introduced Miss Bowes to the audience, who were emphatic in their welcome. She entered upon the subject at once, after a few words of explanation regarding her late arrival, and for an hour and a half was listened to with unbroken attention and excellent order, by a most appreciative audience. The collection was about ten dollars, and spoke well for Keene and its surroundings. Next morning, Miss Bowes met a number of ladies who are interested in the good work, in the Town Hall, and organized a Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with Mrs. Dr. Harrison, President. A most worthy and judicious choice, as that lady is ever at the head and front of any good cause that comes within reach of her willing hand, and is a most indefatigable Christian worker.

On Monday evening, 30th ult., the "Old Folkes' Concert" took place in the Town Hall, and was certainly one of the most unique and charming entertainments of the sort we ever witnessed. The singing was most excellent, some of the selections being rapturously encored. Also the recitations were rendered in a pleasant and entertaining style. And the costumes! We are not capable of doing justice to the charms of those fearfully and wonderfully made garments. Suffice is to say that they were all that they should be in antiquity of design and beauty of representation, and their wearers seemed to have stepped out of some quaint old picture so perfect was the general effect. The crowd was not so dense as we would like to have seen, owing to the storm of the afternoon, but the "ancient company" may expect a packed house, if ever they honour us with their presence again.

CAVAN.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment on Friday, 20th March, 1885. Members all present; the Reeve in the chair. After routine, Councillor Sanderson presented a petition from W. A. Fallis and others, praying the Council to grant a sum of money for the relief of John Bowman, an old resident of Cavan, who was in a very indigent condition.

Councillor Sanderson reported having, in conjunction with a committee of the North Monaghan Council, let a job of putting in a new pier at the south end of Douglass' bridge, east boundary, to Alex. Brown, for the sum of fifty-five dollars.—Approved.

Councillor Donaldson reported that Mr. Ferguson, Deputy-Reeve, and himself had, together with a committee of the South Monaghan Council, let a job of raising (about two feet) the bridge over the creek, on the east boundary, opposite the 6th concession of Cavan. Approved.

Mr. Ferguson, Deputy-Reeve, reported that one James Wright had been cutting and taking timber off the allowance for west quarter line of road, 14th concession, and he would suggest that the Council take some action in the matter

The Reeve said that he had several reports to make. He had, at the request of a number of persons paid one-half price of a railroad ticket to Suspension Bridge for an elderly and indigent woman named Goodridge; that a change had been made in the Treasurer's bondsmen, Mr. Thomas Graham having disposed of his property, a new bond was drawn up with the name of John McNeil substituted for that of Thomas Graham, and properly executed; that he had received from the Ontario & Quebec R. R. Co. the sum of twenty-five dollars for the Council's expenses connected with the diverted road between the 7th and 8th concessions.—Received and adopted.

The Auditor's report on the Treasurer's accounts with the corporation of Cavan was laid before the Council.

Councillor Donaldson brought in a by-law for appointing fence-viewers, pound-keepers and overseers of highways, which, after passing through its several stages, was signed and sealed.

On motion of Mr. Ferguson, seconded by Mr. McNeil, the Clerk was instructed to write to James Wright and forbid him to cut or take any more timber off the allowance of road, west quarter line, 14th concession.

Moved by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Ferguson, that the Clerk write to the corporation of Millbrook and give them notice that unless the channel of the creek, immediately in rear of the Town Hall, be kept free from obstructions, so as to allow the water a free passage, this Council will not hold itself responsible for any damage to the Town Hall property resulting from the overflowing of the said creek. Carried.

Moved by Mr. McNeil, seconded by Mr. Donaldson, that the petition of W. A. Fallis and others be received, and that the sum of seven dollars be allowed David Patton for board and maintenance of John Bowman up to the 1st of April next, and a further sum of eight dollars per month thereafter for the same purpose.—Carried.

On motion, Mr. C. Twamley, collector of rates, was heard by the Council. Mr. Twamley asked the Council to allow an abatement of one dollar and fifty cents paid to him by Maria Morrow, for statute labor, as she could ill-afford to pay it.—The abatement was allowed.

Moved by Mr. Ferguson, seconded by Mr. McNeil, that the collector of rates be allowed the sum of five dollars over and above his salary, for extras. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Donaldson, that the Treasurer's accounts with the corporation of Cavan for the year 1884, as submitted and reported on by the Auditors, be allowed and passed and that the Clerk be instructed to have the abstract and a detailed statement printed and published in the usual form.—Carried.

On motion the Reeve was allowed an abatement of the amount paid by him for the benefit of Mrs. Goodridge, indigent.

On motion of Mr. Donaldson, seconded by Mr. Sanderson, Councillor McNeil was instructed to purchase twenty pieces of cedar timber for building culverts in the township.

On motion the Reeve was appointed a committee to go to Bethany for the purpose of having a settlement of all accounts between the municipalities of Manvers and Cavan which remain unsettled.

Moved by Mr. Donaldson, seconded by Mr. McNeil, that the Clerk be instructed to notify John Liggott to remove his fence from off the 2nd concession line of road forthwith.—Carried.

On motion, the Clerk was also instructed to write to the Clerk of the township of Emily and ascertain the number of days of statute labor performed by the residents of Emily on the north boundary line of road; also to write to the Ontario & Quebec R. R. Co. and inform them that the crossing over the 9th concession line is in a very dangerous condition and must be repaired at once, either by widening the approaches thereto so that vehicles can go square across the rails, or by putting in planks close to the rails to prevent sleighs and other vehicles from getting caught on the irons.

On motion, twenty orders were issued on the Treasurer.

On motion the Council adjourned until Friday, the 17th day of April next.

Villiers.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—On Tuesday 24th, inst., a public meeting was held in Villiers school house for the purpose of discussion of the Scott Actquestion. Owing to the stormy nature of the weather the attendance was not so large as would otherwise have been; notwithstanding there was a fair turn out, which showed a deep interest in the question on hand. Mr. James McNeil, of Keene, was called on to occupy the chair. In stating the object for which it had been called together, he urged the need of concentrated action against the liquor traffic.

Dr. Massie, of Keene, in a very able and elaborate speech commended the act as being worthy of the support of every elector. He first read the Act and explained it, and expressed the hope that the people of Villiers and the surrounding district would approve and vote for it. He set forth the benefits of it both morally, physically and socially. It was good to the sober; the sober man had the benefit of his sobriety both temporally and spiritually, both here and hereafter. The meeting was then asked if they would like another meeting, and those present unanimously agreed to call another meeting for Tuesday the 31st inst., at 6:30 P. M.

ROBERT BORLAND.

Pale, Poor, Puny, & Pallid.

Considering all the ills that attack little children, it is a wonder that any of the poor little youngsters live to grow up.

There are children who are truly objects of pity. They seem almost bloodless. Their cheeks are thin and pinched; their eyes are hollow; and their skin is tightly drawn over their foreheads. There is nothing hearty about them. They do not enjoy their lives. They are suffering from the debility that leads to marasmus. Poor things!

Do a good deed for the pale, poor, puny, pallid child. Hand its mother a bottle of The Shaker Blood Syrup. Here is life even for the most delicate, the most debilitated; for the child almost given up for dead. Pure blood is what the child needs, to bring it up. The little digestive apparatus will recover. The pale cheeks will fill out. The weary groan of the child will be exchanged for the merry prattle of infantile gladness. Your druggist will tell you what wonders The Shaker Blood Syrup has done for very sick children.

THE NORTH-WEST REBELLION

Particulars of the Duck Lake Fight.

Grave Fears that the Indians are Joining the Rebels.

WINNIPEG, March 27.—A despatch from Carleton says Major Crozier, with one hundred men, comprising Mounted Police and volunteers from Prince Albert, left Fort Carleton Wednesday for the purpose of proceeding to Duck Lake, some ten miles distant, to regain possession of some supplies which had been stored there, and which the rebels had seized at the first outbreak. They were crossing the reserve of a Cree chief named Beardy, when they found the half-breeds had taken up a strong position to bar their way. The rebels were said to number over two hundred. When Crozier's force advanced the rebels attempted to surround them, probably with the intention of taking them prisoners Not succeeding in this which was replied to by Crozier's men. The firing lasted some little time, when Crozier, finding his men far outnumbered, retreated in good order to Fort Carleton. The loss on his side was TWELVE KILLED AND ELEVEN WOUNDED.

THEY FIRED A VOLLEY,

The killed were Constables Gibson and Arnold of the Police, and civilians Captain John Morton, W. Napier, James Blakeley, Robert Middleton, D. McKenzie, D. McPhail, Charles Hewitt, Joseph Anderson, Alex. Fisher.

The wounded are Police Inspector Howe, Corporal Gilchrist, Constable Garriett, Constable F. Gordon, Constable Smith, Constable J. J. Wood, Constable Miller. Civilians Alex. Stewart, A. McNabb, W. Markley, Capt. Moore. The latter was the leader of the volunteers and had his leg broken by a rifle ball.

WINNIPEG, March 29.—The reports of the burning of Fort Carlton and its evacuation by the Mounted Police are confirmed by a despatch received by Commissioner Wrigley, of the Hudson Bay Company, from their chief factor, Clarke. Col. Irvine, with 200 police and volunteers, left the post on Thursday last, after burning the stores and other supplies likely to fall into the hands of the rebels. Its evacuation was rendered necessary from lack of provisions to supply the increased force and the exposed character of the post in the event of an attack by rebels from the surrounding hills. The forces have gone to Prince Albert, it being easier to defend, and the larger settlement requiring protection. The only means of news now from Prince Albert will be by courier to Battleford, a distance of 120 miles, and then by telegraphing to Winnipeg. The following additional particulars have been received of the fight at Duck Lake. The firing was begun by the rebels while Major Crozier was with Riel under a flag of truce. The engagement then was brisk, the police and volunteers having responded with a vigorous fire. The rebels are reported to have lost 47 killed and wounded. The cannon of the Mounted Police rendered effective service in covering the retreat to Fort Carlton, and but for them inevitable disaster would have followed. All the Hudson Bay supplies and Government stores being freighted to the North-West from Qu'Appelle have been seized by the rebels at Batoche crossing. A special train with the second detachment of troops from Winnipeg reached Qu'Appelle yesterday.

It is said that the half-breeds in the Wood Mountain region, just north of the American boundary, have been preparing for months for a rising. There are not over 800 of them in that locality, but they could easily recruit from the half-breed settlements in the North Missouri country. There are probably 80,000 half-breeds along the frontier between the Rocky mountains and the Red river. The Indians at Wood Mountain are also said to be disaffected. Again it is reported that Riel's tobacco men have been seen and that some of the bands have smoked. A white settler from Big Muddy creek, just east of Wood Mountain, says the half-breeds are coming in large numbers from the American side, and that when they have perfected their organization they intend to move north upon Regina, tear up the Canadian Pacific track, and harass General Middleton from the rear, while Riel keeps him employed in front. The news has created general alarm, and settlers are hurrying in from all parts to organize for defence. A number of young Englishmen living in this locality are forming a scouting corps. They know the country between Qu'Appelle and Prince Albert pretty well, and being good horsemen may give valuable aid to General Middleton.

WINNIPEG, March 31.—The city is greatly excited over the outlook in the North-West on account of a general uprising of Indians reported to be imminent. A despatch from Qu'Appelle reports an outbreak of Indians in the File Hills reserve, thirty miles north-west of Fort Qu'Appelle. General Middleton having ascertained that 300 Indians had joined the Riel movement there and killed Indian agent Nichols, sent forward to that point three companies of the Winnipeg rifles and one gun and a portion of the field battery. General Middleton will not, however, move his main force until the arrival of volunteers from the East, as the present force is not equal to the emergency should the Indians join Riel.

The removal of women and children from Battleford to Swift Current station, 180 miles, is no doubt to take due precaution. The telegraph line is still down beyond Battleford, and this is attributed to emissaries of Riel rather than Indians. There is no news from Colonel Irvine since he left Carleton with the Mounted Police and civilians of that post. He has doubtless ere this reached Prince Albert. A courier may be despatched by him via Carrot River settlement to the telegraph station at Humboldt.

The citizens of Calgary are excited to-day over rumored signs of an outbreak among the Blackfeet. This lacks confirmation, but should the Indians generally take to the warpath private Indians indicate that it would be on account of their being on the verge of starvation the last three months. The people east seem anxious about friends in Winnipeg, Portage la Prairie, and Brandon, but no trouble is apprehended at those places, they being fully 200 miles from the seat of trouble. Battalions are being raised throughout the province and recruits are volunteering freely. Large orders are given in Chicago by the Hudson Bay Company for provisions.

Young and middle-aged men, suffering from nervous debility and kindred affections, as loss of memory and hypochondria, should inclose three letter stamps for large illustrated pamphlet suggesting sure means of cure. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y.

NEWS NOTES.

Winnipeg students are ready for either home or foreign service.

The race on Saturday between Oxford and Cambridge Universities was won by Oxford by three boat lengths.

A Montreal despatch states that the Canadian Pacific have come to terms with the Government, and that $15,000,000 has been granted to them.

A successful trip in a balloon was made from Philadelphia to Rahway, New Jersey, on Friday, for the purpose of obtaining observations for the United States Signal Service.

A petition is being circulated in Sandwich and Windsor asking the Dominion Government to aid the Canadian Pacific railway in building a branch from Ingersoll westward to Detroit river.

The city of Montreal is in danger of heavy floods, the thaw having caused the unusually large accumulation of snow to disappear at a lively rate. Precautions have been taken to avert the threatened danger as far as possible.

Mrs. Lynam, whose detention in Longue Pointe lunatic asylum for so long a period after her sanity had been proved, has commenced proceedings in the Superior Court at Montreal to secure a separation from her husband.

The two orders given in America for canned meat by the English Government amount to nearly 9,500,000 pounds. This is sufficient to supply 50,000 men each with eight ounces of cooked meat daily for a year, or 100,000 for six months—with a margin for possible canned sand. The expense involved in the purchase of such a monster supply of food is very large, and an indication that England is serious in her preparation for war.

RUSSIA IRRITATED

At Britain's War Preparations in India.

LONDON, March 30.—A St. Petersburg correspondent says:—"Russia's reply was ready on the 26th. Both governments desire to keep the contents secret. England proposed another frontier line. It is not known whether Russia accepts, but official circles rely upon a peaceful compromise." Great irritation is caused by the preparations in India, which far exceed Russia's preparations.

CALCUTTA, March 30.—The Duke of Connaught will not take command of a division of the army, but will soon return to England. It is proposed to form a volunteer reserve force of Europeans and men of other nationalities, and it is believed 70,000 men will join.

THE SOUDAN WAR.

General Graham Ready to Advance on Tamai.

General Graham telegraphs that he has sufficient water and stores to enable the army to advance on Tamai. He has ordered all available men from war ships anchored off Suakim to garrison the town so that the whole regular force can be used.

General Graham and the British army arrived at McNeil's zareba. The advance includes all the troops except 50 men from each regiment, who were left to garrison Suakim. The violence of storm delayed movements considerably. Osman Digna's losses during the engagements of the week are estimated at 4,000 men.

The building of the Berber railway has been suspended outside of Suakim, owing to the inability of the army to afford protection along the line beyond the camp. The force for such protection cannot be spared until after the battle at Tamai, which is expected to be decisive.

A kamsin began to blow at Dongola on Wednesday. The heat is excessive, but the health of the men with General Wolseley remains good. The Arabs are daily becoming more hostile to the British.

HANLAN AND BEACH.

The Canadian Champion Defeated by Six Lengths.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 28.—The race between Hanlan and Beach was rowed over the champion's course on the Paramatta river, in the presence of an enormous attendance. The weather was favorable, the water smooth, and both oarsmen in excellent condition. Hanlan and Beach, after the start, kept well together for some distance, and the race was close and exciting. The scullers approached the winning post almost bow and bow, and the excitement among the spectators was great. When pulling with all their strength for the winning post, Beach overhauled Hanlan and increased his advantage to the very finish, amid the wildest excitement, winning the race by six lengths.

Table of Distances.

Our readers will find the following table of distances useful at the present juncture. The distances from Winnipeg to the main points of interest are given, and also those from Qu'Appelle, where the railway is left, along the trails to the scene of present operations. The telegraph line runs from Qu'Appelle, through Touchwood and Humboldt, to Clarke's Crossing, and thence on to Battleford and Edmonton. From Clarke's Crossing a branch line runs to Prince Albert.

PERSONAL.

We clip the following from the Cannington Gleaner:—Mr. Chas. Kitney removed with his family to Peterborough on Monday last, to engage with Mr. Ross, formerly of this place, in the manufacture of bricks. Mr. and Mrs. Kitney during their residence here have been useful members of the Methodist church, and are just the class of citizens that are a benefit to any town. It is a pity they could not have been retained here.

John Hayes, Credit P.O., says: "His shoulder was so lame for nine months that he could not raise his hand to his head, but by the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil the pain and lameness disappeared, and although three months have elapsed, he has not had an attack of it since."

Ashburnham Public School.

Memoranda of Merit.

The following is a report of the Ashburnham Public School for the quarter ending 31st March. The names of the three best only, in each class, are given, their names being in order of merit:—

MR. ROONEY'S ROOM.

Senior Fourth Class.—Jas. Cumming, Jno. Anderson, Ellis Faint.

Junior Fourth Class.—Archie Wood, Stanley W. Matthews, David Rogers.

Senior Third Class.—Edward Cook, Geo. McWilliams, Geo. Adams.

Junior Third Class.—Willie Crossley, Ella Throop, Willie Heap.

No. on roll, 60; average for the quarter, 47.

MISS JENNIE SMITH'S ROOM.

Senior Second Class.—Nellie Wood, Bella Cumming, Mark Burnham.

Junior Second Class.—Harold Burnham, Lewis Dobbin, Edna Throop.

First Class, Part II.—Mossie Irwin, Innis Griffin, Bella Sigsworth.

Senior First Class, Part I.—Kate Butcher, Alex. Long, Willie Milliken.

Junior First Class, Part I.—Geo. Cook, Minnie Mitchell, Jas. H. Sigsworth.

No. on roll, 59; average for the quarter, 44.

MISS ANNIE SMITH'S ROOM.

Senior Second Class.—James Tighe, Louisa Butcher, Rollie Glover.

Junior Second Class.—Willie Adams, Thos. Cathcart, Sam. Adams.

First Class, Part II.—Maud Adams, Maud Dorner, Willena Throop.

Senior First Class, Part I.—Annie Pakenham, Eddie Mowry, Willie Cathcart.

Junior First Class, Part I.—Eloise Glover, Mary Bogan, Alfred Weigester.

No. on roll, 57; average for the quarter, 44.

A Serious Wound.

The first citizen soldier belonging to Peterborough to be wounded is Sergeant Snider, of the Durham Field Battery. He was on Wednesday morning assisting to fire a salute in honor of the departing volunteers. In ramming home a cartridge, a portion of the casing of the previous cartridge remained in the gun on fire, and before the next cartridge was rammed home it exploded. The shoulder of the ram-rod carried off the last bone and the little finger of the left hand, while splinters entered his face and cut the flesh, but not seriously. Dr. Kincaid, assisted by Dr. Halliday and Dr. Fife, amputated the shredded finger and attended to the other wounds. It is a shame that the Government foist old, out-of-date, muzzle-loading guns on the volunteers. In this case the sponge was so worthless that the gun could not be properly swabbed, and the consequence was that the piece of burning cartridge casing left in the gun, nearly cost Sergeant Snider his life. Our volunteers are brave and willing, but in these days of scientific warfare it is a sort of murder to send them forth provided with inferior arms and equipments.

Mr. Peter Vernett, Hochelaga, P.Q., writes: "Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured me of Rheumatism after I tried many medicines to no purpose. It is a good medicine." Just think of it—you can relieve the twinges of rheumatism, or the most painful attack of neuralgia—you can check a cough, and heal bruised or broken skin, with a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, costing only 25 cents.

PLASTER CAYUGA WHITE, in bags, one hundred and fifty lbs. in each. Buy the best Plaster. The following speaks for itself:—

Ontario School of Chemistry, Toronto, March 16th, 1881.

W. H. MERRIT, ESQ.—

My Dear Sir,—In accordance to your request, I have obtained Average Mercantile Samples of Land Plaster from dealers in Toronto, and beg to report as follows:

	Cayuga White.	Oswego Grey (Pt. Hope.)	Paris Grey.
Calcium Sulphate (Fertilizer)	77.18	52.00	84.00
Carb. Lime and Magnesia (Useless)	trace	15.27	15.01
Iron and Alumina "	trace	1.50	1.60
Insoluble Matter "	1.27	8.75	15.60
Water and Organic Matter "	21.55	22.48	13.60
	100.00	100.00	100.00

The insoluble matter consists of clay and sand, being the residue left after boiling with hydrochloric acid. Yours obediently, THOMAS HEYS, Analytical Chemist.

The above analysis adds theoretical proof to the practically known fact that Cayuga White is 25 per cent purer than any other Land Plaster on our market.

OILCAKE This popular Feed I offer at a LOW Price. Special figures given to purchasers wanting quantities. Will be glad to quote prices to Secretaries of the different Grange Societies. FLAX SEED and FLAX SEED MEAL.

CHAPTER II.

BITTER NEWS.

One morning, eight months prior to the events recorded in the last chapter, an Italian entered the Madeleine in Paris during service. Why he did so he could hardly have told himself.

Possibly it was fate.

The Italian's white forehead was knit; trouble of some kind betrayed itself on his handsome features.

Seated far back he had fallen into a reverie, forgetful of where he was, when happening to raise his eyes they fell upon a face, one of the sweetest, loveliest, he told himself, he had ever seen.

It fascinated him. He could not take his gaze from it.

Whether the girl became conscious, as people do, that she was being looked upon, or there was some mesmeric influence in the Italian's eyes, she abruptly turned and their glances met.

But for a moment. He at once, almost apologetically, lowered his. She averted hers, but with a rising color.

Each felt that the exchange of glances had more in it than the usual ones that may take place in a church, when people have nothing to do but look about them.

When the service was concluded the Italian took up a position at the entrance.

Who was this lovely being he had seen, who had for a space made him even forget the trouble weighing upon him?

The stream of people flowed past. At last she came, and he saw that his supposition was correct.

She was a pupil at a high-class pension, and he drew a long breath of satisfaction.

He gazed on her enraptured, but this time she did not see him; she passed on, whispering to her companion.

The Italian turned and followed almost unconsciously.

It was the magnet to the lodestone.

Before he proceeded far, however, he was arrested by a voice exclaiming:

"Ah, cielo! Can it be?—Signor Mareschi, in Paris?"

Turning, he saw a stout man of middle height, his countryman.

"What, Giuseppe, is it you?" he exclaimed. "Tell me, for in such matter you know everything. You see that school—where do they live?"

"Ah, that is Madame Valmy's. It is private—high—very high, for the demoiselles English. I have the honor to be the singing-master there."

"Giuseppe, I never envied you until now."

"And why now, amico mio?"

"I am in love?"

"In love! Santa Maria! Yet is that curious?"

"Not considering the object. I wish Madame Valmy wanted a master for Italian."

"You have hit it, my dear friend, she does. Only to-day she asked my recommendation, for the pure Tuscan is indispensable."

"Giuseppe, if that be so, earn my lifelong gratitude. Recommend me."

"You—you a master of Italian?" and the other broke into an amused laugh. "You—Signor Paolo Mareschi, the——"

"Hush!" interrupted the other quickly, his handsome face darkening once more; "all that is changed. I have much to tell you, Giuseppe. Come to the Champs-Elysees. We can talk."

It was a long conversation, not chiefly upon Madame Valmy's boarding-school. Nevertheless, Paolo Mareschi gave his first lesson in Italian there before the week was over.

The result, the meeting at Grey Towers has revealed.

"Pauline," said Ethel Breamore as they proceeded towards the house, "you shall never find me ungrateful—never. Now, do you know what was in her ladyship's letter?"

"Tiens mademoiselle! as if Madame Butler would tell me. But she seemed, for her, all in a commotion, and I heard her say something to the housekeeper about a journey."

Ethel turned pale.

"Oh, Pauline, if it should be that we are to go to London?"

"I've thought of that, mademoiselle; but don't think it likely. If so, don't fear; I'll find a means of letting Signor Mareschi know. But here we are, and you will soon learn the truth."

To Ethel's relief, though at another time she might have felt pained, Lady Breamore only desired her son to be brought for a few days to London and wished that Mrs. Butler herself should take care of the precious charge.

As Ethel listened, her heart beat wildly. The only obstacle to her meeting Paolo was Mrs. Butler, and as she started within three hours, this would be removed.

That evening Ethel, attended by her maid, quitting the house, hastened to the shrubbery, where Paolo Mareschi was waiting.

The third morning following, Pauline informed the small staff of servants which were left at Grey Towers during the London season, that her young lady intended to drive to Heathley Downs on a sketching excursion.

Such trips were not uncommon, hence created no surprise.

On reaching the village, where they left the pony-carriage, Ethel, attended by Pauline carrying her sketch-book, started across the downs.

Soon, however, diverging, they proceeded along a lane to the small railway-station.

They had hit the time well. Hardly were their tickets taken than the train arrived.

Excited, nervous, Ethel got in; the whistle sounded, the train sped on, and the girl knew her fate was sealed.

In less than an hour they rushed into the terminus of a populous thriving town.

Hardly had it stopped than Paolo Mareschi appeared at the window, his handsome countenance aglow with love.

"Oh, Paolo, I fear——" murmured the trembling girl.

"Fear nothing, cara mia," he whispered tenderly; "henceforth my love shall be your shield. Come."

An hour later, Ethel, kneeling, her hand in the Italian's, was uttering the words which made her a wife.

Paolo Mareschi had ordered luncheon at a pretty picturesque inn on the outskirts of the town.

It had to be brief, for Ethel dared not remain long.

Then came the bitter moment of parting.

"Paolo—husband!" exclaimed the girl, throwing herself in his arms, "I am your wife; you will not leave me now?"

He soothed her as best he could, kissing away her tears.

"My darling, I will return—return to you, my wife."

"They ill kill you in Italy. You will never return," murmured Ethel, as she clung to him, her husband of an hour. "Oh, Paolo, have you no pity?" she added, hardly audibly, as, consciousness leaving her, she lay insensible in his arms.

Mareschi gazed on her passionately.

"Ciel, signor!" said Pauline, "have you the heart to go?"

"Pauline, you are a Frenchwoman. You will understand my country needs me," he answered.

"You are right, signor. Go. Leave madame to me, I will take care of her."

"Heaven reward you," said the young husband with emotion. "Tell her when she recovers that I will return. Something tells me that I shall. Also, when she is calmer give her this packet. I have proved her pure, her disinterested love, and in this she will find consolation and have no cause to blame me."

"Yes, signor."

And Pauline slipped the packet in her pocket.

"Tell my darling I will write to her under cover to you, though I must deny myself the joy of hearing from her until I know my own address. It will be soon, for this evening I depart for Italy. She is recovering. I had best not stay."

"Go, no, signor. No need of a second parting. Remember, madame must keep her secret."

"True. Farewell, my wife—my queen!" said Paolo. Stopping he pressed his lips to his young bride's, hastened to the door, turned to take one last passionate look, exclaimed, "Pauline, I confide her to your care," and was gone.

"I wonder if he will ever return," thought Pauline with a shudder. "I half wish I'd never consented to this secret marriage."

Coming events were to make her wholly wish so.

When Ethel returned to Grey Towers the dusk was falling, so that none of the servants perceived the pallor of her cheek as she hurried to her room.

Once there, Pauline gave out that her young lady had, she feared, caught a chill on the downs, so would not leave her apartments that evening.

As she was returning to Ethel, she recollected the packet confided to her by Mareschi.

"Why should I not give it her at once?" she reflected.

"Did he not say it would bring my mistress consolation?"

She put her hand in her pocket, and came to a halt upon the landing, alarmed perplexity on her features.

The packet was no longer there!

She had lost it where?

That was difficult—nay, impossible to say. It might have been at the inn, or in the cab which had taken them to the railway-station, or in the railway-carriage—indeed, in any part of the way.

The question stood, how to recover it?

Pauline told herself it was impossible, for how could she return to-morrow to Heathley Downs without telling her mistress the reason?

Sitting on the dusky stairs she pondered whether she ought to tell her or not.

Finally she determined, yes! Then Ethel, when she wrote, could inform Paolo Mareschi, and he could send again what he had to say.

So resolved, she rose and began to search the stairs and the hall, even proceeding to the stables and examining the carriage-rugs.

All was in vain.

Wherever she had dropped the packet it was not this side Heathley Downs.

"Oh, Pauline, how could you have lost it?" ejaculated Ethel, on learning what had occurred.

"I can't tell, mademoiselle, and I'm as sorry as can be," replied the lady's-maid, distressed. "Still it is but delayed. I know there was nothing but paper. Nothing, I fancy, in it. So directly you write to Signor Mareschi, you can tell him it's lost, and he'll let you know all about it."

It was vexatious, but could not be helped, and Ethel had many other thoughts to occupy her.

That morning she had been Ethel Breamore. Now she was Paolo Mareschi's wedded wife.

Over a week elapsed before a letter came from Mareschi.

It was full of loving tenderness, but hurried. He had reached head-quarters, but was under immediate marching orders, so advised Ethel not to write unless there was anything of importance to communicate.

Ethel thought there was, and wrote to communicate the loss of the packet.

For safety she gave no address, and signed only with the initial E.

When Paolo wrote again it was evident hat he had not received her letter.

He had been in the thick of the fight, and come forth unharmed.

"It was your love, my queen, which protected me," he said. "See, believe it, I shall return when our great cause has proved victorious."

Pauline now always procured a daily paper, wherein Ethel traced the progress and engagements of the brave Garibaldian Army, growing more and more sympathetic with the cause, though shuddering as she read of the encounters.

One morning, after reading a fight disastrous to the Garibaldians, she exclaimed:

"Pauline, they give neither the names of the wounded—or—or—dead. How do I know but that Paolo was—was there?"

"It's the chances of war, mademoiselle; but no doubt you will hear from Signor Mareschi to-morrow."

"It is a long while since we have."

The next day passed, however, and no letter came.

The day after that Pauline, seated in an ante-room at work, was startled by a piercing scream in the adjoining apartment.

Alarmed she rushed in.

Poor Ethel stood erect, her wild dilated eyes fixed on the paper which she held at arms's length.

"Mon Dieu, mademoiselle! what is the matter?"

"My husband—Paolo!" ejaculated the unhappy wife. "He is dead—dead

And with a wild sobbing cry she fell in hysterics on the floor.

Awed, terror-stricken, Pauline advancing raised the paper.

It was the Times.

She hurriedly scanned the page, and her eyes fell on the obituary notices.

It must be there, for her mistress had read the Italian news an hour ago.

Yes, here it was.

"On the—— (the date of the battle), Paolo Mareschi, of a gunshot, received while fighting in the Garibaldian ranks.—R. I. P."

CHAPTER III.

A SELECTED HUSBAND.

"Mademoiselle, the dress is superb; never have you looked so handsome. Ah, but Mdlle. Florence will bite her tongue in spite!"

"My dear Pauline, you never give praise to me, but you level a dart at my cousin."

"Cousin by marriage, mademoiselle, nothing more. Tiens! everyone who praises you, levels a dart at her. She is as jealous as she is spiteful. Do I not know it?"

"Jealous of what, Pauline? Ah me! if she did but know——" And a sigh escaped Ethel's lips.

"Jealous of what?" exclaimed the lady's-maid, purposely overlooking the last remark. "Why, she is jealous of your wealth, your position; but most, mademoiselle, of your chances, and—your beauty!"

Saying which, the speaker drew a little back to take a better view of Ethel's tall and graceful figure, attired in a diaphanous ball-dress, a combination of silks, laces, and flowers, from which the soft white arms and throat gleamed with transparent radiance.

Ethel was drawing on her gloves, as she stood before the lace-festooned cheval-glass.

"My chances, Pauline!" she reported. "What chances?"

"That of becoming Lady Tremayne, mademoiselle; or, if you choose, the Countess of Westring."

"Pauline! Pray do not talk thus to me!" ejaculated Ethel gravely. "I shall never marry."

The attendant shrugged her shoulders, but answered:

"True, mademoiselle, but Mdlle. Florence does not know that. She sees the great milords at your feet, and worse, Lord Tremayne, for whom all are dying."

"Hush, hush, Pauline! Such talk pains me. Ah, you cannot tell how I long to be back at Grey Towers, for peace and rest."

"And this is mademoiselle's first season."

"The first season of a wife, a widow, also a mother." And Ethel drooped her sweet face on her hands.

"Ah, how gladly would I renounce this gay existence, these chances, as you call them, for a few days with my boy—my Paul."

"Tiens, mademoiselle! it is best as it is," said Pauline. "Pray do not give way. Milord will notice it, and it is near eleven."

"True. Papa will be waiting. My bouquet, Pauline! Thanks. How grateful I am this is the last ball of the season!"

The lady's-maid gave a touch or so to the lace flounces, then opened the door for her mistress.

When she had gone she reflected, as she rearranged the toilet-table:

"Never marry again! Why not? Mademoiselle isn't twenty-one yet. It's the secret marriage in the way. Tiens! why? Who need be the wiser?

"I do believe, at times, mademoiselle regrets following my advice of now keeping it secret for ever.

"To acknowledge a live husband is one thing, but to acknowledge a dead one, who can't protect you, is another."

Pauline paused a space, then added:

"Poor mademoiselle! I fancy there's trouble yet to come, for if milord does not mean her to wed either Milord Tremayne or the old earl, I'm mistaken."

Two years had gone by—two years that had brought sorrow and anxiety to more than Ethel since the announcement of Paolo Mareschi's death.

Ten months after that event a terrible blow had come to Lord Breamore. While abroad his wife had caught malarial fever and had died of it. His grief for a man of his nature, cold, phlegmatic, had been intense.

Hastening back to Grey Towers, he had summoned Ethel, who by her own earnest request had been on a visit to an old school-friend at Evrent, to join him there, and had shut himself up with his sorrow, rarely coming from his private apartments or seeing any one, even Ethel, his chief companion being his infant heir, who apparently engrossed his every thought and affection.

The violence of a grief generally is gauged by its duration. After two months' retirement Lord Breamore again appeared in society. His house was set in order, and his wife's aunt, Mrs. Devime, was invited to take charge of it and act as chaperon to Ethel, to whom her daughter Florence would be a suitable companion.

How the girls' friendship might have progressed it is difficult to say, had not the jealousy which Pauline had quickly divined arisen.

Florence Devime, tall, handsome, a brunette, with eyes as brilliant as a snake's, had been ready to patronise Ethel, the unsophisticated girl; for Florence had seen her two seasons. The sensation, however, which the young girl had made at her presentation, and in the season which followed, had turned the milk-and-water of Florence Devime's human kindness into venom, no less deadly because hidden.

When Ethel descended to the drawing-room she found her father alone. He was an aristocratic-looking man, tall, square-shouldered, with an impassible reticent expression, a white, high forehead, and clear grey eyes, which at times were cold and hard as steel.

"I hoped you would be ready first, Ethel," he said, rising to stand on the hearthrug, motioning her to be seated. "I wish to speak to you."

"Yes, papa." Ethel from a child had had a fear of her father.

"This afternoon I have had two proposals for your hand."

Ethel started. The color faded from her cheeks.

"I scarcely think I need say they came from Lord Tremayne and the Earl of Westring."

"Oh, papa!" murmured Ethel piteously.

"Yes. I regret I could not give you long warning of the affection in one case, the honor of the other awaiting you, but, as you meet both suitors to-night, it was impossible."

"But, papa," murmured Ethel tremulously, "you did not—have not——"

"Accepted either?" put in Lord Breamore, noting her confusion. "No; I thought, Ethel, that under the circumstances you had a right to decide between the two yourself. Lord Tremayne offers you a good position, youth, and a handsome person. The earl, the devotion of an old man, great wealth, and a countess's coronet."

"Oh, papa," her hands clasped pleadingly, "I—I do not care for marriage. I do not wish to marry!"

Lord Breamore turned half round on the heels of his dress-boots, and looked with chilling surprise down at his daughter.

"I hope I did not hear you aright, Ethel?" he remarked in icy tones. "Remember you are my daughter, and as such must take a proper place in society. When a girl at your age says she does not wish to marry, it often signifies that she has given her heart—or believes she has—to some unworthy fellow whom she fears to mention."

A wave of crimson swept over Ethel's face and neck. She bent her head to hide it, but ineffectually.

"Is this so?" he demanded sharply. "Have you fallen in love with the gardener, the footman, or groom?"

Ethel raised her head proudly; the harshness did her good.

"No, papa. I beg your pardon, but are not you forgetting I am your daughter? I love no living man save you. I—I do not wish to marry either Lord Tremayne nor the earl, because I don't care for either of them."

Lord Breamore gave a short scornful laugh.

"Ethel, you talk like a milkmaid. Leave love to your inferiors. You, Ethel, have a position. I confess I would rather you selected the coronet, but I give you your choice. Take Tremayne if you prefer it. But decide which this evening, as I intend to invite the one you favor to join us at Grey Towers. You understand me, and remember I will be obeyed. I must learn your decision on your return."

Before Ethel could reply, had she had words or power, the door opened, and Mrs. Devime, followed by Florence, entered the room.

"I trust, Arthur, we have not kept you waiting?" cried the elder lady.

"Not at all, though the carriage has been announced," he rejoined, giving his arm.

"Come, Ethel, my love," said Mrs. Devime. "Why, child, how pale you are! Are you ill?"

"Not in the least," answered the girl, rising, her cheek flushing.

"Something has happened," reflected the lady, and glanced at her daughter, who possessed that brilliance of beauty only seen in brunettes.

As they passed downstairs, Florence Devime's dark eyes looked furtively at her pale companion as if they would have read her very soul.

The ball to which they were bound was at Prince's Gate, and the vast rooms were almost full when they were announced.

Scarcely had they entered when two gentlemen, who had evidently been on the watch, advanced.

One was a man certainly near seventy, for, though made by a skilful valet to look only sixty, the undecided tread, the want of lustre in the eye, the lack of firmness on the lip, betrayed the truth.

The other was not yet thirty, handsome, with large, earnest hazel eyes, well-cut features, and silky moustache drooping at each side the round chin.

Forty years divided the two, yet were rivals for a young girl's love.

Florence Devime's eyes were riveted upon the latter; her bosom fluttered. For one whole season Lord Tremayne had been almost at her feet, and now——

In the fashionable world, rank, if not age, takes precedence, and it was the earl who first greeted Ethel—not only greeted, but offered his arm to escort her through the rooms.

Lord Tremayne could but bow, utter a compliment, then, biting his lip, drop behind, by Florence, whose every nerve beat and throbbed with rapture as he moved on by her side.

The earl did not let a long time elapse before he made an opportunity—metaphorically—to place himself at Ethel's feet.

The freshness and purity of the young girl's beauty warmed the chilling blood about his heart, and he was eloquent in the confession of his passion.

His words recalled those of Paolo Mareschi when he had told his love. But how different were the speakers!

Such words on the earl's lips seemed to the girl revolting.

Even a coronet might be too dearly purchased, and Ethel did not hesitate to refuse the honor he intended her.

The earl received her answer like a high-born gentleman, expressed his sorrow, and led her back to where her father stood.

"You have refused the earl, I see," whispered Lord Breamore.

"Yes," she answered faintly.

"Then you decide upon Lord Tremayne? In one way he is more suitable; but I regret the coronet. Here comes Tremayne; no doubt to ask you for this dance. Can you give it him?"

"Not this one," murmured Ethel pleadingly; "I do not think I could dance yet."

Poor Ethel! by her words she had defeated herself. When Lord Tremayne preferred his request Lord Breamore remarked:

"My daughter, I think, is rather overcome by the warmth of the room. She has not yet seen the duke's orchids. Perhaps, Tremayne, you would show them her. The conservatories would be cooler."

"I shall be delighted," replied Lord Tremayne, his glance confirming his words.

Ethel cast a piteous supplicating look at her father. She found there no pity, and rising mechanically, allowed herself to be led away, her fate to be decided.

Not a syllable of Lord Tremayne's whispered utterances reached her ear. She was recalling her marriage, her parting with Paolo, the only man she had ever—she could ever love, and a certain pretty cottage on the outskirts of Derby, wherein was carefully nursed and tended a lovely dark-eyed boy, her son.

Oh, Heaven, if now it ever got to be known, if her father, so cold and pitiless, discovered the truth, what would become of her? Yet how dared she wed another without the secret being revealed?

The terror, the fearful consequences, rushed upon her. She turned dizzy, her slender figure swayed. For the moment she had forgotten where she was.

She was recalled by feeling Lord Tremayne's arm round her, his voice sounding in her ears. Raising her eyes she saw they were alone in the conservatory, that her companion's eager face was bending over her.

"Dearest Miss Breamore," he was exclaiming, "have I been abrupt? Have I taken you by surprise? I had hoped Lord Breamore had prepared you—had let you know——"

"Yes," whispered Ethel almost inaudibly. "Please let me sit down."

He led her to a seat, then taking her fan, began to fan her. She was so pale, he feared she was about to faint.

For a moment Ethel could not speak. She lay back, the moving air shaking the golden rings of hair about her forehead, and the delicate laces over her bosom. Then she roused herself by an effort, saying:

"Thanks, I am better."

"I am delighted," he whispered, paused, then continued: "Dear Miss Breamore, may I trust that the knowledge of the passion I feel, that my words, perhaps, too hastily uttered, were not the cause of your indisposition? I believed from Lord Breamore's manner that he had acquainted you——"

"Yes, yes," interrupted Ethel, "he did so. I feel much flattered, Lord Tremayne——"

"Nay, all indebtedness is mine, if—if I may but hope," he broke in passionately. "I love you, Miss Breamore, my future happiness rests with you. I entreat you speak, let me know my fate."

He was leaning over her. She had met his eyes once, full of pleading. She had noted his face, eloquent with his passion.

Lord Tremayne was one whom any woman would be proud to love were her heart not already given.

His tones awoke pity, sympathy, in Ethel. She could not regard him as she had the old earl.

Still, how dared she say yes? Yet, recalling her father's look, how dared she refuse?

"My lord," she said faintly, "I was unaware that you had given me your love until to-day. We seem to know so little of each other——"

"That you would ask time to decide?" he put in. "How can I blame you, Miss Breamore? Still, have I permission to hope to be a suitor?"

"Yes," murmured Ethel, then trembling at the thought of how Lord Breamore would regard so cold a response, she added: "Lord Tremayne, I will never give my hand to any but you."

He uttered an exclamation of delight as he raised her hand to his lips, then one of concern, as Ethel fell back insensible.

At that moment a face, handsome, with brilliant eyes, flashing hate, despair, and venom, appeared at the other side of the screen, looking at the two.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

In spring the want of a restorative to tone up the general health is a common experience, especially among those constitutions impaired by age or disease. Prolonged cold weather, want of out-door life and sunshine, lower the vitality, diminish the red globules of the blood and interrupt the nutrition of the tissues. By promoting digestion and assimilation of food and securing increase of nerve force and muscular energy, the use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA will bring up constitutional vigor to its normal plane. 11-13

EASTER TIDE.

PASCHE HYMNUS.

Melos—"Apud Cruces."

Nolis palpitet aer,
Abait mœror tristis!
Ut bibernam frigus ver,
Mortem vicit Christus;
Ridet terra, blandus sol
Cœli templa purgat;
Resurgente Domino.
Quicunque vult, resurgat!

Ayes, suaves nenori
Carolent hosannas,
Hunc laudantes, quem mori
Tradidit Satanas;
Audin' uden! nonne sic
Voces spargit chorus;
Resurrexit, non est hic.
En! relictus torus!

Jam sat me mœrentis
Tristia contrivi;
Jesus cessus pridie
Hodie revivit;
Mox dolorem gaudio
Juvat mutavisse,
Obtestante tumulo;
Christum surrexisse!

Translation.

EASTER CAROL.

Air—"Near the Cross."

Let the merry church bells sing,
Hence with tears and sighing!
Frost and cold have fled from spring,
Life hath conquered dying;
Flowers are smiling, fields are gay,
Sunny is the weather;
With our risen Lord to-day
All things rise together.

Let the birds sing out again
From their leafy chapel,
Praising Him, with whom in vain
Satan sought to grapple;
Sounds of joy came fast and thick
As the breezes flutter.
Resurrexit, non est hic,
Is the strain they utter.

Let the past of grief be past,
This our comfort giveth,
He was slain on Friday last,
But to-day he liveth.
Mourning heart must needs be gay,
Nor let sorrow vex it,
Since the very grave can say,
Christus resurrexit!
